

THE Ā-ĪN-I AKBARĪ
VOL.

By
ABU L-FAZL ALLAMI

Translated into English by
H. BLOCHMANN, M.A.
Calcutta, Madrasa

Edited by
Lieut-Colonel D C PHILLOTT, M.A., Ph.D., F.A.S.B

LOW PRICE PUBLICATIONS
DELHI - 110052

First Published 1927 1949

Reprinted 1989

ISBN 81 85395 19 5 (Set)

ISBN 81 85395-20 9 (Vol 1)

ISBN 81 85395 21 7 (Vol 2)

ISBN 81 85395 22 5 (Vol 3)

Published by

LOW PRICE PUBLICATIONS

425, Nirmali, Ashok Vihar,

Phase IV

Delhi-110052

Printed at

D.K. Fine Art Press

Delhi

PRINTED IN INDIA

PREFACE

(First Edition)

The Ā'in-i Akbarī is the third volume of the Akbar-nāma, by Shaykh Abū 'l-Faẓl, and is by far the greatest work in the whole series of Muhammadan histories of India. The first volume of this gigantic work contains the history of Timūr's family as far as it is of interest for the Indian reader, and the reigns of Bābar, the Sūr kings, and Humāyūn whilst the second volume is devoted to the detailed history of nearly forty-six years of the reign of the Great Emperor. The concluding volume, the Ā'in-i-Akbarī, contains that information regarding Akbar's reign, which, though not strictly historical, is yet essential to a correct understanding of the times, and embodies, therefore, those facts for which, in modern times, we would turn to Administration Reports, Statistical compilations, or Gazetteers. It contains the ā'in (i.e. mode of governing) of Akbar, and is, in fact, the Administration Report and Statistical Return of his government as it was about A.D. 1590. The contents, therefore, of the Ā'in are naturally varied and detailed. The first of its five books treats of Akbar's household and court, and of the emperor himself, the soul of every department, who looks upon the performance of his duties as an act of divine worship, and who enters into the details of government in order to create a harmonious whole. Vouchsafed as king with a peculiar light from on high, his person is prominently put forward as the guide of the people in all matters temporal and spiritual; in whose character and temper the governed find that rest and peace which no constitution can give, and in whom, as the author of a new and advanced creed, the dust of intolerance is for ever allayed.

The second book treats of the servants of the throne, the military and civil services, and the attendants at court whose literary genius or musical skill receives a lustre from the encouragement of the emperor, and who in their turn reflect a brilliant light on the government

The third book is entirely devoted to regulations for the judicial and executive departments, the establishment of a new and more practical era, the survey of the land, the tribal divisions, and the rent-roll of the great Finance minister whose name has become proverbial in India

The fourth book treats of the social condition and literary activity, especially in philosophy and law, of the Hindus, who form the bulk of the population, and in whose political advancement the emperor saw the guarantee of the stability of his realm There are also a few chapters on the foreign invaders of India, on distinguished travellers, and on Muhammadan saints and the sects to which they respectively belong

The fifth book contains the moral sentences and epigrammatical sayings, observations, and rules of wisdom of the emperor, which Abū 'l-Fazl has gathered as the disciple gathers the sayings of the master

In the A'in, therefore, we have a picture of Akbar's government in its several departments, and of its relations to the different ranks and mixed races of his subjects Whilst in most Muhammadan histories we hear of the endless turmoil of war and dynastical changes, and are only reminded of the existence of a people when authors make a passing allusion to famines and similar calamities, we have in the A'in the governed classes brought to the foreground men live and move before us, and the great questions of the time, axioms then believed in, and principles then followed, phantoms then chased after, ideas then prevailing, and successes then obtained, are placed before our eyes in truthful, and therefore vivid, colours

It is for this reason that the A'in stands so unique among Muhammadan histories of India, and we need not wonder that long before curious eyes turned to other native sources of history and systematically examined their contents, the Aⁱⁿ was laid under contribution. Le Pere Tieffentaller, in 1776, published in his Description Geographique de l'Indostan long extracts from the rent roll given in the Third Book, Chief Sarishtadar Grant used it largely for his Report on Indian Finances, and, as early as 1783, Francis Gladwin, a thorough Oriental scholar, dedicated to Warren Hastings his "Ayeen Akberi", of which in 1800 he issued a printed edition in London. In his translation, Gladwin has given the greater part of the First Book, more than one-half of the Second and Third Books, and about one fourth of the Fourth Book, and although in modern times inaccuracies have been discovered in the portions translated by him—chiefly due, no doubt, to the fact that he translated from MSS in every way a difficult undertaking—his translation has always occupied a deservedly high place, and it may confidently be asserted that no similar work has for the last seventy years been so extensively quoted as his. The magnitude of the task of translating the Aⁱⁿ from uncollated MSS will especially become apparent, when we remember that, even in the opinion of native writers, its style is "not intelligible to the generality of readers without great difficulty."

But it is not merely the varied information of the Aⁱⁿ that renders the book so valuable, but also the trustworthiness of the author himself. Abu 'l-Fazl's high official position gave him access to any document he wished to consult, and his long career and training in various departments of the State, and his marvellous powers of expression, fitted him eminently for the composition of a work like the Albarnāmah and the Aⁱⁿ. His love of truth and his correctness of information are apparent on every page of the book, which he wished to leave to future ages as a memorial of the Great Emperor and as a guide for inquiring minds, and his wishes for the stability of the throne and the welfare of the people, his principles of toleration, his noble sentiments on the rights of man, the total absence

court whose literary genius or musical skill receives a lustre from the encouragement of the emperor, and who in their turn reflect a brilliant light on the government

The third book is entirely devoted to regulations for the judicial and executive departments, the establishment of a new and more practical era, the survey of the land, the tribal divisions, and the rent-roll of the great Finance minister whose name has become proverbial in India

The fourth book treats of the social condition and literary activity, especially in philosophy and law, of the Hindus, who form the bulk of the population, and in whose political advancement the emperor saw the guarantee of the stability of his realm. There are also a few chapters on the foreign invaders of India, on distinguished travellers, and on Muhammadan saints and the sects to which they respectively belong

The fifth book contains the moral sentences and epigrammatical sayings, observations, and rules of wisdom of the emperor, which Abū 'l-Fazl has gathered as the disciple gathers the sayings of the master

In the A'in, therefore, we have a picture of Akbar's government in its several departments, and of its relations to the different ranks and mixed races of his subjects. Whilst in most Muhammadan histories we hear of the endless turmoil of war and dynastical changes, and are only reminded of the existence of a people when authors make a passing allusion to famines and similar calamities, we have in the A'in the governed classes brought to the foreground—men live and move before us, and the great questions of the time, axioms then believed in, and principles then followed, phantoms then chased after, ideas then prevailing, and successes then obtained, are placed before our eyes in truthful, and therefore vivid, colours

It is for this reason that the A'in stands so unique among Muhammadan histories of India, and we need not wonder that long before curious eyes turned to other native sources of history and systematically examined their contents, the A'in was laid under contribution. Le Père Tiffentaller, in 1776, published in his Description Geographique de l'Indostan long extracts from the rent-roll given in the Third Book, Chief Sarishtadar Grant used it largely for his Report on Indian Finances, and, as early as 1783, Francis Gladwin, a thorough Oriental scholar, dedicated to Warren Hastings his "Ayeen Akberi", of which in 1800 he issued a printed edition in London. In his translation, Gladwin has given the greater part of the First Book, more than one-half of the Second and Third Books, and about one-fourth of the Fourth Book, and although in modern times inaccuracies have been discovered in the portions translated by him—chiefly due, no doubt, to the fact that he translated from MSS in every way a difficult undertaking—his translation has always occupied a deservedly high place, and it may confidently be asserted that no similar work has for the last seventy years been so extensively quoted as his. The magnitude of the task of translating the A'in from uncollated MSS will especially become apparent, when we remember that, even in the opinion of native writers, its style is "not intelligible to the generality of readers without great difficulty."

But it is not merely the varied information of the A'in that renders the book so valuable, but also the trustworthiness of the author himself. Abu'l-Fazl's high official position gave him access to any document he wished to consult, and his long career and training in various departments of the State, and his marvellous powers of expression, fitted him eminently for the composition of a work like the Albarnamah and the A'in. His love of truth and his correctness of information are apparent on every page of the book, which he wished to leave to future ages as a memorial of the Great Emperor and as a guide for inquiring minds, and his wishes for the stability of the throne and the welfare of the people, his principles of toleration, his noble sentiments on the rights of man, the total absence of personal grievances and of expressions of ill will towards encompassing enemies, show that the expanse of his large heart stretched to the clear offing of sterling wisdom. Abu 'l-Fazl has far too often been accused by European writers of flattery and even of wilful concealment of facts damaging to the reputation of his master. A study, though perhaps not a hasty perusal, of the Albarnāmah will show that the charge is absolutely unfounded, and if we compare his works with other historical productions of the East we shall find that, while he praises, he does so infinitely less and with much more grace and dignity than any other Indian historian or poet. No native writer has ever accused him of flattery, and if we bear in mind that all Eastern works on Ethics recommend unconditional assent to the opinion of the king, whether correct or absurd, as the duty of man, and that the whole poetry of the East is a rank mass of flattery at the side of which modern encomiums look like withered leaves—we may pardon Abū 'l-Fazl when he praises because he finds a true hero.

The issue of the several fasciculi of this translation has extended over a longer time than I at first expected. The simultaneous publication of my edition of the Persian Text, from which the translation is made, the geographical difficulties of the Third Book, the unsatisfactory state of the MSS, the notes added to the translation from various Muhammadan historians and works on the history of literature, have rendered the progress of the work unavoidably slow.

I am deeply indebted to the Council of the Philological Committee of the Asiatic Society of Bengal for placing at my disposal a full critical apparatus of the A'in, and entrusting me with the edition of the text, for which the Indian Government had most liberally sanctioned the sum of five thousand Rupees. My grateful acknowledgments are also due to Dr. Thomas Oldham, Superintendent of the Geological Survey of India and late President of the Asiatic Society, for valuable advice and ever ready assistance in the execution of the work ; and to Col. H. Yule, C.B., and to H. Roberts, Esq., of the Docton College, for useful hints and corrections.

I have thought it advisable to issue the first volume with a few additional notes, and two indexes, one of persons and things and the other of geographical names, without waiting for the completion of the whole work. I have thus had an opportunity of correcting some of the errors and inconsistencies in the spelling of names and supplying other deficiencies. That defects will still be found, notwithstanding my endeavours to remove them, none of my readers and critics can be more sensible than I myself am.

CALCUTTA MADRASAH
23rd September, 1873

H. BLOCHMANN.

PREFACE

SECOND EDITION OF BLOCHMANN'S TRANSLATION

OF THE

A*IN I AKBARI

Some explanation is needed of the present edition. Blochmann's original translation has for some time been out of print. The Asiatic Society of Bengal has asked me to undertake the preparation of a reprint, and I lightly accepted the task, not realizing the amount of labour involved. Blochmann's translation and notes form a work of infinite detail and thorough scholarship, and though it has seldom been necessary to correct, it has often been necessary to investigate. This present edition is, however, in the main a mere reprint. This of itself is no small testimony to Blochmann's thoroughness. The transliteration, however, has been brought into line with a more modern system, and a few additional notes [in square brackets] have been added, those with a suffixed B are Blochmann's own MS notes from a printed copy in my possession, I have not incorporated all of them, as many I was unable to decipher. Notes to which a P is suffixed are my own.

D C P

CONTENTS

	PAGE
BIOGRAPHY OF ABU L-FAZL BY THE TRANSLATOR	xxv lix
ABU L FAZL'S PREFACE	1-10

BOOK FIRST

A in 1	THE HOUSEHOLD	11
2	THE IMPERIAL TREASURIES	12
3	THE TREASURY FOR PRECIOUS STONES	15
4	THE IMPERIAL MINT	16
5	THE WORKMEN OF THE MINT	18
6	BANWARI	19
7	THE METHOD OF REFINING GOLD	21
	The method of refining silver	23
	The process of Kukra	24
	The process of Bugrawafi	25
	THE METHOD OF SEPARATING THE SILVER FROM THE GOLD	26
9	THE METHOD OF EXTRACTING THE SILVER FROM THESE ASHES	27
10	THE COINS OF THIS GLORIOUS EMPIRE	28
	Gold coins	28
	Silver coins	32
	Copper coins	32
11	THE DIRHAM AND THE DINAR	30
12	THE PROFIT OF THE DEALERS IN GOLD AND SILVER	38
13	THE ORIGIN OF METALS	40
14	ON SPECIFIC GRAVITY	42
15	THE IMPERIAL HAREM	44
16	THE ENCAMPMENT ON JOURNEYS	47
17	THE ENCAMPMENT OF THE ARMY	49
18	ON ILLUMINATIONS	51
19	THE ENSIGNS OF ROYALTY	5

	PAGE
Ā'in 20 THE ROYAL SEALS	54
21 THE FARRĀSH KHĀNA	55
, 22 THE ADDĀR KHĀNA	57
Carpets	57
23 THE IMPERIAL KITCHEN	59
, 24 RECIPES FOR DISHES	61
, 25 OF BREAD	64
, 26 THE DAYS OF ABSTINENCE	64
, 27 STATISTICS OF THE PRICES OF CERTAIN ARTICLES	65
The spring harvest	65
The autumnal harvest	65
Vegetables	66
Living animals and meats	66
Butter, sugar, etc	67
Spices	67
Pickles	67
, 28 THE FRUITERY	68
Tūrānī fruits	69
The sweet fruits of Hindūstān	70
Dried fruits	70
Vegetables	71
Sour fruits	71
Sour fruits somewhat acid	71
, 29 ON FLAVOURS	78
30 ON PERFUMES	78
A list of Perfumes and their prices	81
A list of fine smelling Flowers	81
A list of Flowers notable for their beauty	82
On the preparation of some Perfumes	83
31 THE WARDROBE AND THE STORES FOR MATTRESSES	93
32 ON SHAWLS, STUFFS ETC	97
Gold stuffs	98
Silks, etc, plain	99
Cotton cloths	100
Woollen stuffs	101
33 ON THE NATURE OF COLOURS	102
, 34 THE ARTS OF WRITING AND PAINTING	102

	PAGE
	113
The Art of Painting
35 THE ARSENAL	115
36 ON GUNS	119
37 ON MATCHLOCKS ETC	120
38 THE MANNER OF CLEANING GUNS	122
39 THE RANKS OF THE GUNS	122
40 ON THE PAY OF THE MATCHLOCK BEARER	123
41 THE IMPERIAL ELEPHANT STABLES	123
42 THE CLASSIFICATION OF THE IMPERIAL ELEPHANT	131
43 THE FOOD ALLOWED TO THE ELEPHANTS	131
44 THE SERVANTS OF THE ELEPHANT STABLES	132
The Faujdar	133
45 THE HARNESS OF ELEPHANTS	134
46 THE ELEPHANTS FOR HIS MAJESTY'S USE	137
47 THE MANNER OF RIDING KHASA ELEPHANTS	138
48 ON FINES	139
49 THE IMPERIAL HORSE STABLES	140
50 THE RANK OF THE HORSES	141
51 THE LODGER ALLOWED IN THE IMPERIAL STABLES	142
52 ON HARNESS ETC	143
53 THE OFFICERS AND SERVANTS ATTACHED TO THE IMPERIAL STABLES	145
54 THE BARGIR	147
55 REGULATIONS FOR BRANDING HORSES	147
56 REGULATIONS FOR KEEPING UP THE FULL COMPLIMENT OF HORSES	148
57 ON FINES	148
58 ON HORSES KEPT IN READINESS	149
59 ON DONATIONS	150
60 REGULATIONS FOR THE JILAWANA	150
61 THE CAMEL STABLES	151
62 THE FOOD OF CAMELS	151
63 THE HARNESS OF CAMELS	151
64 REGULATIONS FOR OILING CAMELS AND INFECTING OIL INTO THE RESPIRATORY	151

	PAGE
Ā ⁱⁿ 60 THE RANKS OF THE CAMELS AND THEIR SERVANTS	155
Raibari	155
66 THE GAOKHANA OF COV STABLES	15
67 THE DAILY ALLOWANCE OF FOOD	158
68 THE SERVANTS EMPLOYED IN THE COW STABLES	159
69 THE MULE STABLES	160
70 THE DAILY ALLOWANCE OF FOOD FOR MULES	161
71 THE FURNITURE OF MULES	161
72 THE MANNER IN WHICH HIS MAJESTY SPENDS HIS TIME	167
73 REGULATIONS FOR ADMISSION TO COURT	160
74 REGULATIONS REGARDING THE KORNISH AND THE TASLIM	166
75 ON ETIQUETTE	168
76 THE MUST'R OF MEN	169
77 HIS MAJESTY AS THE SPIRITUAL GUIDE OF THE PEOPLE	170
Ordinances of the Divine Faith	175
NOTES BY THE TRANSLATOR ON THE RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE EMPEROR AKBAR	176
78 THE MUST'P OF ELEPHANTS	223
79 THE MUST'P OF HORSES	224
80 THE MUSTER OF CAMELS	225
81 THE MUSTER OF CATTLE	226
82 THE MUSTER OF MULES	226
83 THE PAGOSHT REGULATION	226
84 ON ANIMAL FIGHTS REGULATIONS FOR BETTING	228
Deer's fights	228
85 ON BUILDINGS	37
86 THE PRICES OF BUILDING MATERIAL ETC	237
87 ON THE WAGES OF LABOURERS	237
88 ON ESTIMATES OF HOUSE BUILDING	236
89 RULES FOR ESTIMATING THE LOSS IN WOOD CHIPS	237
90 THE WEIGHT OF DIFFERENT KINDS OF WOOD	237

BOOK SECOND

	PAGE
Ā ⁱⁿ 1. THE DIVISIONS OF THE ARMY	241
„ 2. ON THE ANIMALS OF THE ARMY	243
„ 3. THE MANṢABDĀRS	247
NOTE BY THE TRANSLATOR OF THE MANṢABS	249
„ 4. THE AHADĪS	259
„ 5. OTHER KINDS OF TROOPERS	260
„ 6. THE INFANTRY	261
The Bandūq-chīs , or Matchlock-bearers	261
The Darbāns , or Porters	261
The Khidmatīyyas	261
The Mewras	262
The Shamsherbāz , or Gladiators	262
The Pahluwāns , or Wrestlers	263
The Chelās , or Slaves	263
The Kuhārs , or Pālki bearers	264
Dākhlī troops	264
„ 7. REGULATIONS REGARDING THE BRANDING OF ANIMALS	265
„ 8. ON THE REPETITION OF THE MARK	266
„ 9. RULES ABOUT MOUNTING GUARD	267
„ 10. REGULATIONS REGARDING THE WĀQĪʿA-NAWĪS	268
„ 11. ON SANADS	269
The Farmān-i ṣabṭī	270
„ 12. THE ORDER OF THE SEALS	273
„ 13. THE FARMĀN-Y BAYĀZĪ	274
„ 14. ON THE MANNER IN WHICH SALARIES ARE PAID	275
„ 15. MUSĀʿADAT, OR LOANS TO OFFICERS	275
„ 16. ON DONATIONS	276
„ 17. ON ALMS	276
„ 18. THE CEREMONY OF WEIGHING HIS MAJESTY	276
„ 19. ON SAYŪRGHĀLS	278
NOTE BY THE TRANSLATOR ON THE ṢADRS OF AKBAR'S REIGN	280
„ 20. ON THE CARRIAGES, ETC., INVENTED BY HIS MAJESTY	285

	PAGE
21 THE TEN SER TAX (Dahseri)	285
22 ON FEASTS	286
23 THE Khushroz OR DAY OF FANCY BAZARS	286
24 REGULATIONS REGARDING MARRIAGES	287
25 REGULATIONS REGARDING EDUCATION	288
26 THE ADMIRALTY	289
27 ON HUNTING	292
Tiger Hunting	293
Elephant-catching	295
Leopard Hunting	296
28 THE FOOD ALLOWED TO LEOPARDS THE WAGES OF THE KEEPERS	297
Skull exhibited by hunting leopards	299
The Siyah-gosh	301
Dogs	301
Hunting Deer with Deer ¹	301
Buffalo Hunts	304
On Hunting with Hawks	304
Allowance of Food	305
Prices of Falcons	306
Waterfowl	307
Frogs	308
29 ON AMUSEMENTS	308
The game of Chaugan (hockey)	309
‘Ishqba’i (pigeon flying)	310
The Colors of Khava Pigeon	313
The game of Chaupar	315
The game of Chandai Mandal	316
Cards	318
30 THE GRANDEES OF THE EMPIRE (with biographical notes by the Translator)	320
Note on the meaning of the title of Tarhlan	393
Note on the title of Asaf Khan	398
Note on the battle of Takaroi or Mughulmarai in Orissa	406
Note on the Sayyids of Barha (Sadat-i Barha)	425
Note on the Nuqtawiyya Sect	502
Note on the Death of ‘Usmun Lohani	586

	PAGE
CONCLUDING NOTE BY THE TRANSLATOR ON AKBAR'S MANŞABDĀRS	596
Ā'in 30 (continued). THE LEARNED MEN OF THE TIME . . .	606
THE POETS OF THE AGE . . .	617
THE IMPERIAL MUSICIANS . . .	680
ADDITIONAL NOTES	683
ERRATA	690
INDEX OF PERSONS AND THINGS	691
GEOGRAPHICAL INDEX	731
GENEALOGICAL TABLE OF THE HOUSE OF TIMŪR (at the end).

NOTE

Lieut-Col Phillott, who most generously had undertaken to prepare a revised reprint of Blochmann's translation of the first volume of the Ā'in-i Akbari, had progressed to the end of the text when illness precluded him from finishing his labours. What remained to be done was the revision of the index, the correction of the additional notes as already revised by him on the copy, and the entering of the modifications necessary in the proofs of pages xvii to xxxii and xlix to lix of the preliminary matter, as also of pages 1 to 10 of the work itself.

For a long time lingering illness prevented the taking of immediate steps to terminate the volume, but in September, 1930 the regretted death of the learned Editor necessitated consideration of the problem of bringing the reprint to a close. The fact that the volume was being printed in England and that no details as to the method of the revision were at the disposal of the office of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal caused considerable delay, but ultimately arrangements were made to complete the work in the office of the Society.

Mr D K Das was charged with the revision of the index, involving the changing of all page numbers, and the drawing up of a list of errata found in the body of the reprint during the course of his work. Mr Das has performed his work with great care and has rendered valuable service in doing so. The new errata are to be found on page 690 of this volume. The plan adopted for the reprint has been explained by the Editor on page xi.

The circumstances explained above are responsible for the date of the Editor's Preface, as well as for the fact that the date of issue on the title page is given as 1927, whilst the actual publication was not possible till 1939.

The Council of the Society wishes to record its great indebtedness to the late Lieut Col Phillott for his self sacrificing labour on the present volume, and to pay its grateful homage to the memory of its late Member and Fellow, a devoted friend, a valued helper, and a distinguished scholar.

B S GUHA,
General Secretary

LIST OF PLATES

IN THE
FIRST VOLUME

OF THE

A'IN I AKBARI

PLATES I TO III THE WORKMEN OF THE MINT, p 18

- 1 2 Preparation of acids—3 Washing of ashes—4 9 10 1^o melting and refining.—
5 Weighing—6 8 Making of plates
- 7 Work of the zarrah p 22—11 Engraving—12 The Sikkah p 22

PLATE IV THE IMPERIAL CAMP (p 50)

a b c d f g roads and *bāzār*s The principal bāzār is laid out into the form of a wide street running through the whole extent of the army now on the right now on the left of the Diwān i khāsh —Bernier

- 1 The Imperial Harem (shāhshērān i sūqdār) At the right hand side is the Do-āshiyāna Maani vide p 56
- 2 Open space with a canopy (shāmyāna)
- 3 Private Audience Hall (Diwān i khāsh) p 48
- 4 The great camp light (ākhshar-diyā) p 52

The āquacy āsh resembles a lofty mast of a ship but is very slender and takes down in three pieces It is fixed towards the king's quarters near the tent called Nāgar Lane and during the night a lighted lantern is suspended from the top This light is very useful for it may be seen when every object is enveloped in impenetrable darkness To this spot persons who lose their way resort either to pass the night secure from all danger of robbers or to resume their search after their own lodgings The name āquacy āsh may be translated Light of Heaven the lantern when at a distance appearing like a star —Bernier

- 5 The Āqādyāna khāna pp 49 50

AB or distance from the Harem to the camp Light = 1 530 yards
AC = 360 yards p 49

- 6 The house where the saddles were kept (= khāna)
- 7 The Imperial stables (= abar)
- 8 Tents of the superintendents and overseers of the stables
- 9 Tents of the clerk of the elephant stables
- 10 The Imperial Office (daftār)
- 11 Tent for palaks and carts
- 12 Artillery tent (top khāna)
- 13 Tent where the hunting leopards were kept (chāsh khāna)
- 14 The Tents of Maryam Makani (Akbar's mother) Gulbadan Begum (Humayun's sister p 49) and Prince Danyal p 49
- 15 The tents of Salṭān Salim (Jahangir) to the right of the Imperial Harem
- 16 " " " " " " " " p 50
- 17 " " " " " " " " " "
- 18 " " " " " " " " " "
- 19 " " " " " " " " " "
- 20 Tent for storing mattress (toṣhal khāna)

NOTE

Lieut Col Phillott, who most generously had undertaken to prepare a revised reprint of Blochmann's translation of the first volume of the Ā'in-i Akbarī, had progressed to the end of the text when illness precluded him from finishing his labours. What remained to be done was the revision of the index, the correction of the additional notes as already revised by him on the copy, and the entering of the modifications necessary in the proofs of pages xvii to xxxii, and xlix to lxx of the preliminary matter, as also of pages 1 to 10 of the work itself.

For a long time lingering illness prevented the taking of immediate steps to terminate the volume, but in September, 1930, the regretted death of the learned Editor necessitated consideration of the problem of bringing the reprint to a close. The fact that the volume was being printed in England and that no details as to the method of the revision were at the disposal of the office of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal caused considerable delay, but ultimately arrangements were made to complete the work in the office of the Society.

Mr D K Das was charged with the revision of the index, involving the changing of all page numbers, and the drawing up of a list of errata found in the body of the reprint during the course of his work. Mr Das has performed his work with great care and has rendered valuable service in doing so. The new errata are to be found on page 690 of this volume. The plan adopted for the reprint has been explained by the Editor on page xi.

The circumstances explained above are responsible for the date of the Editor's Preface, as well as for the fact that the date of issue on the title page is given as 1927, whilst the actual publication was not possible till 1939.

The Council of the Society wishes to record its great indebtedness to the late Lieut Col Phillott for his self sacrificing labour on the present volume, and to pay its grateful homage to the memory of its late Member and Fellow, a devoted friend, a valued helper, and a distinguished scholar.

B S GUHA,
General Secretary

LIST OF PLATES

IN THE
FIRST VOLUME

OF THE
Ā*ĪN-I-AKBARĪ

PLATES I TO III THE WORKMEN OF THE MINT, p 18

- 1, 2 Preparation of acids — 3 Washing of ashes — 4 9, 10, 12, melting and refining —
5 Weighing — 6 8 Making of plates
7 Work of the zarrah, p 22 — 11 Engraving — 12 The Sikkakāf, p 22

PLATE IV THE IMPERIAL CAMP (p 50)

a b c, d, f, g roads and bāzārs. * The principal bāzār is laid out into "the form of a wide street, running through the whole extent of the army, now on the right, now on the left of the Dīwan i kāsh; — Bernier

- 1 The Imperial Harem (shahistan-i iqbal) At the right hand side is the Doshahyāna Makani vide p 58
2 Open space with a canopy (shāmyāna)
3 Private Audience Hall (Dīwan-i kāsh) p 48
4 The great camp light (ākas-dīya) p 52

The aqacy-die resembles a lofty mast of a ship, but is very slender, and takes down in three pieces It is fixed towards the king's quarters near the tent called Vaqar khāne and during the night a lighted lantern is suspended from the top This light is very useful for it may be seen when every object is enveloped in impenetrable darkness To this spot persons who lose their way resort, either to pass the night secure from all danger of robbers, or to resume their search after their own lodgings. The name 'Aqacy-die may be translated 'Light of Heaven' the lantern when at a distance appearing like a star — Bernier

- 5 The Naqqāra khāna pp 49 50
AB or distance from the Harem to the camp Light = 1 530 yards,
AC = 360 yards p 49
6 The house where the saddles were kept (i khāna)
7 The Imperial stables (i abal)
8 Tents of the superintendents and overseers of the stables
9 Tents of the clerk of the elephant stables
10 The Imperial Office (daftar)
11 Tent for palkis and carts
12 Artillery tent (top khāna)
13 Tent where the hunting leopards were kept (chāna khāna)
14 The Tents of Maryam Makani (Akbar's mother) Gulbadan Begum (Humāyun's sister p 49) and Prince Danyal, p 49
15 The tents of Sultān Salim (Jahangir) to the right of the Imperial Harem.
16 " " " " " " " " " " p 50
17 " " " " " " " " " " " 18 " " " " " " " " " " " 19 " " " " " " " " " " " 20 " " " " " " " " " " "

- 21 Tent for the tailors, etc
- 22 Wardrobe (kurkyardg khāna), p 93
- 23 Tent for the lamps, candles, oil, etc (chirāgh khāna)
- 24 Tents for keeping fresh Ganges water (ab-dār khāna), p 57
- 25 Tent for making sharbat and other drinks
- 26 Tent for storing pān leaves
- 27 Tent for storing fruit (mewa khāna)
- 28 Tent for the Imperial plate (rikāb khāna)
- 29 The Imperial kitchen (ma bākhā)
- 30 The Imperial bakery (nānōd khāna)
- 31 Store room for spices (hawey khāna)
- 32 The Imperial guard
- 33 The Arsenal (qur khāna)
- 34 Women's apartments
- 35 to 41 Guard houses

Round about the whole the nobles and Manṣabdars with their contingents pitched their tents

"The king's private tents are surrounded by small kanāts (ganāts, standing screens), of the height of a man, some lined with Masulpatam chintz worked over with flowers of a hundred different kinds and others with figured satin decorated with deep silken fringes'—Bernier Bernier's description of the Imperial camp (second letter, dated Lāhor, 25th February, 1665) agrees with minute detail with the above

PLATE V CANDLESTICKS, p 50

- 1 Double candlestick (dushākhā)—2 Fancy candlestick with pigeons—3 Single candlestick (yakhākhā)
4. The Aksh-diya, or Camp-light, vide pl iv, no 4

PLATE VI THE EMPEROR AKBAR WORSHIPS FIRE, p 50

In front of Akbar twelve candles are placed and the singer of sweet melodies sings to the praise of God, as mentioned on p 51, l. 6 ff
The faces of the emperor and the singer are left blank, in accordance with the Muhammadan dislike to paint likenesses of beings on, below or above the earth
The emperor sits in the position called dūdānu

PLATE VII THRONES, p. 52

- 1, 2 Different kinds of thrones (aurang) with pillows (masnāf) to lean against, the royal umbrella (chātr), and the footstool (sandālī)

PLATE VIII THE NAQQĀRA KHĀNA, p 52

- 1 Cymbals (ṣaṅg)—2 The large drum (ḥuṣwāg or damāma)—3, 4, 5 The Karānā—6 The Surnā—7 The Hindi Surnā—8 The Nafīr—9 The Singh, or horn—10 The Nappīras

PLATE IX THE ENSIGNS OR ROYALTY, p 52

- 1 The Jhanda, or Indian flag "The Royal standard of the great Mogul is a Couchant Lion shadowing part of the body of a sun —Terry
2. The Kawlabā
- 3 Sayabā or Astābqir
- 4 The Tumzīlōg (from the Turkish toḡ or toḡā, a flag, and fuman or fumān, a division of ten thousand)
5. The Chātr, or (red) royal umbrella.
- 6 A standard or Calam.

- 7 The Chatrtog As Abū l Faḡl says that this standard is smaller than the preceding it is possible that the word should be pronounced chufurtoq, from the Turkish chufur, or chufūr, short The flag is adorned with bunches of hair (qutās) taken from the tails and the sides of the Tibetan Yak

PLATES X and XI THE IMPERIAL TENTS, p 54

Plate X.—The three tents on the top, commencing with the left are (1) the Shamyana, (2) A yakdarī Kharpāh, or tent of one door, (3) the Dudari, or tent of two doors, p 57, 8 Rolled up over the door is the chūgh, p 238, ¹A in 88

Below these three tents, is the Sara parda and Guld-bār, pp 47, 57 At the foot of the plate is the Nam-gwa (pr dew catcher), with carpet and pillow (masnad), p 48

Plais XI.—On the top, the barghāh, p 55 Below it, on the left, is the Do āshiyāna Manzil, or two storied house, vide Pl IV, No 1 At the window of the upper story, the emperor showed himself, vide Index, darsan, and jharōka To the right of this two storied tent, is the Chābin Rawah (as the word ought to be spelt, from chōbin, wooden, and rawah, a square tent) p 56 Below it, the common conical tent, tied to pegs stuck in the ground, hence it is called zamīndōz, with one tent pole (yak surughā, from the Turkish surugh, or surūgh, a tent pole)

Below is a Zamīndōz with two poles (dururughā) At the bottom of the plate, to the left is the Mandal, p 56, and to the right, the ²*Ajā'ib*, p 56

³LATE XII WEAPONS, p 116

The numbers in brackets refer to the numbers on pp 117 to 119

- 1 The sword shamsher (1)
- 2 The straight sword, khāḡa (2)
- 3, 3a The gupti ⁴*apā* (3)
- 4 The broad dagger jamdhar (4)
- 5 The bent dagger khanyar (5)
- 6 The jam khak, or curved dagger (7)
- 7 The bent knife bāk (8)
- 8 The ghanbwa or hiltless dagger (9)
- 9 The katara, a long and narrow dagger (10)
- 10 The narsink moth (narsing moth ?) a short and narrow dagger (11)
- 11 The bow, kaman (12)
- 12 13 The small bow and arrow, taḡhāh kaman and fir (13)
- 14a. Arrow
- 14b The paibānlash, or arrow drawer (19)
- 15 The quiver, tarkash (16)
- 16 The lance neza (20)
- 17 " "
- " "
- " "
- " "
- 22 The axe tabar
- 23 The club, gurz (25) On p 117, No 29 the word piyāzi has been translated by 'club', and this seems to be the correct meaning, but the plates in some MSS call 'piyāzi' a long knife, with straight back ending in a point
- 24 The pointed axe, ziḡhānol ¹ i e crow bill (30)
- 25 The chakar (wheel) and basols (31)
- 26 The double axe tabar ziḡhānol (32)

[¹ Zaḡh a name largely applied to a chaugh, crow, jackdaw and magpie — P]

- 27 The tarangūla (33)
28 The knife kārd (34)

PLATE XIII WEAPONS (continued), p 118

- 29 The gupta kārd or knife concealed in a stick (35)
30 The whip, gamchi kārd (36)
31 The clasp knife chāqā (37)
32. A bow, unstrung
33 The bow for clay bullets kamīha or Kamān ; guroha (38)
34 The tube or pea shooter tufak ; *dalān*¹ (40)
35 The pushikāhār (41)
36 A lance called giriā kusāh i.e. a knot unraveller (43)
37 The kāhār ; māhī i.e. fish spine (44)
38 The sling robbān (45)
39 The gajbāg or ānkus for guiding elephants (46)
40 The shield ayār (47)
41 Another kind of shield, dāh (48)
42 The plain cane shield pāhri, or pāhri (50)
43 The helmet, ūdhāiqāha (52)
44 The ghurghurā a mail coat for head and body, in one piece (55)
45. The helmet with protection for the neck, zirāh kulāh (54)
46 The mailed coat zirāh (57)
47 The mailed coat, with breast plate bagtar (58)
48 An armour for chest and body, ghāhān (59)
49 The breast and back plates, chār-d²ina (60)

PLATE XIV WEAPONS AND ARMOURS (continued), p 118

- 50 The coat with plates and helmet kojh (61)
51 An armour of the kind called ghādiq (62)
52 A long coat worn over the armour angirāha (63)
53 An iron mask, chātrāziziriā ; dāhān (65)
54 A doublet worn over the armour, chāhāiqad (67)
55 The long glove dastūdhān (68)
56 The small one is the moza y ; āhānī or iron stocking (71) and the large one the rāk (69)
57 The kajem or kejām a mailed covering for the back of the horse (72)
58 59 The ariāk ; Lajem the quilt over which the preceding is put (73)
60 The gashā or head protection for the horse (74)
61 The Kanīha sobhā (70)
62 The rocket dān (77)

PLATE XV AKBAR'S MACHINE FOR CLEANING GUNS, p 118 vide p 122,
Ā²in 38, or the 1st Book

PLATE XVI HARNESS FOR HORSES p 144 , Ā²in 52 p 143

PLATE XVII GAMES p 314

The upper figure shows the board for Chāupar p 310 and the lower figure is the board for the Chandal Mandal game. Both boards were made of all sizes some were made of inlaid stones on the ground in an open court yard as in Fatpūr Sikrī and slave girls were used instead of pieces. The players at Chandal Mandal sat on the ground round the circumference one player at the end of each of the sixteen radii

[¹ Tufak ; dalan, blow pe — P]

BIOGRAPHY

OF

SHAYKH ABŪ 'L-FAZL-I 'ALLĀMĪ

SHAYKH ABŪ 'L-FAZL, Akbar's minister and friend, was born at Āgra on the 6th Muharram, 958,¹ during the reign of Islam Shāh

The family to which he belonged traced its descent from Shaykh Mūsā, Abū 'l Faḍl's fifth ancestor, who lived in the ninth century of the Hijra in Siwistān (Sindh), at a place called Rel (رِل). In "this pleasant village", Shaykh Mūsā's children and grandchildren remained till the beginning of the tenth century, when Shaykh Khizr, the then head of the family, following the yearnings of a heart imbued with mystic lore, emigrated to Hindūstān. There he travelled about visiting those who, attracted by God, are known to the world for not knowing it, and after passing a short time in Hijāz with the Arabian tribe, to which the family had originally belonged, he returned to India, and settled at Nāgor, north west of Ajmir, where he lived in the company of the pious, enjoying the friendship of Mir Sayyid Yahyā of Bukhārī.

The title of Shaykh, which all the members of the family bore, was to keep up among them the remembrance of the home of the ancestors.

Not long afterwards, in 911, Shaykh Mubarak, Abū 'l Faḍl's father, was born. Mubārak was not Shaykh Khizr's eldest child, several children had been born before and had died, and Khizr rejoicing at the birth of another son, called him Mubārak, i.e. the blessed, in allusion, no doubt, to the hope which Islām holds out to the believers that children gone before bless those born after them, and pray to God for the continuance of their earthly life.

Shaykh Mubārak, at the early age of four, gave abundant proofs of intellectual strength, and fashioned his character and leanings in the company of one Shaykh 'Atan (اَتَان), who was of Turkish extraction and had come during the reign of Sikandar Lodi to Nāgor, where he lived in the service of Shaykh Salar, and died, it is said, at the advanced age of one hundred and twenty years. Shaykh Khizr had now resolved to settle at Nāgor permanently, and with the view of bringing a few relations to his adopted home, he returned once more to Siwistān. His sudden death during the journey left the family at Nāgor in great

¹ 14th January, 1551

27. The larangdla (33)
 28. The knife, kārd (34)

PLATE XIII WEAPONS (continued), p 118

29. The guptā kārd, or knife concealed in a stick (35)
 30. The whip, gamchī kārd (36)
 31. The clasp knife, chāqā (37)
 32. A bow, unstrung
 33. The bow for clay bullets, kamjā, or Kamān ; gurohā (38)
 34. The tube, or pea-shooter, tufak ; *dālān*¹ (40)
 35. The pushikhār (41).
 36. A lance called gīrā kuelā, i e a knot unraveller (43)
 37. The khār ; māhī, i e fish spine (44)
 38. The sling, gobhān (45)
 39. The gajbāq, or ānkus, for guiding elephants (46)
 40. The shield, siyar (47)
 41. Another kind of shield, āhā (48)
 42. The plain cane shield, paārī, or phārī (du)
 43. The helmet, dubalqā (52)
 44. The ghāghuwa, a mail coat for head and body, in one piece (53)
 45. The helmet, with protection for the neck, zirā kuldā (54)
 46. The mailed coat, zirā (57)
 47. The mailed coat, with breast plate, bagtar (53)
 48. An armour for chest and body, jōshān (59)
 49. The breast and back plates, chār-dāna (60)

PLATE XIV WEAPONS AND ARMOURS (continued), p 118

50. The coat with plates and helmet, koāfī (61)
 51. An armour of the kind called sādiqī (62)
 52. A long coat worn over the armour, angirkhā (63)
 53. An iron mask, chārahzīrā ; dānī (65)
 54. A doublet worn over the armour, chāhīqad (67)
 55. The long glove, dastudāna (68)
 56. The small one is the mōza gī dānī, or iron stocking (71) and the large one the rāk (69)
 57. The lajem, or kejām, a mailed covering for the back of the horse (72)
 58, 59. The artak ; Lajem, the quilt over which the preceding is put (73)
 60. The qashāqā, or head protection for the horse (74)
 61. The Kanāhā sōhā (70)
 62. The rocket, bān (77)

PLATE XV AKBAR'S MACHINE FOR CLEANING GUNS, p 118, vide p 122,
 Ā¹ in 38, or the 1st Book

PLATE XVI HARNESS FOR HORSES, p 144, Ā¹ in 52, p 143

PLATE XVII GAMES, p 314

The upper figure shows the board for Chāupār, p 315 and the lower figure is the board for the Chandal Mandal game. Both boards were made of all sizes some were made of inlaid stones on the ground in an open court yard, as in Fathpūr Sīkri and slave girls were used instead of pieces. The players at Chandal Mandal sat on the ground round the circumference, one player at the end of each of the sixteen radii.

[¹ Tufak ; dālān, blowpipe.—P.]

BIOGRAPHY

OF

SHAYKH ABŪ 'L-FAZL-I 'ALLĀMĪ

SHAYKH ABŪ 'L-FAZL, Akbar's minister and friend, was born at Āgra on the 6th Muharram, 958,¹ during the reign of Islam Shāh

The family to which he belonged traced its descent from Shaykh Musā, Abū 'l Fazl's fifth ancestor, who lived in the ninth century of the Hijra in Sīwistān (Sindh), at a place called Rel (رل) In "this pleasant village", Shaykh Mūsā's children and grandchildren remained till the beginning of the tenth century, when Shaykh Khizr, the then head of the family, following the yearnings of a heart imbued with mystic lore, emigrated to Hindūstān There he travelled about visiting those who, attracted by God, are known to the world for not knowing it; and after passing a short time in Hijāz with the Arabian tribe, to which the family had originally belonged, he returned to India, and settled at Nagor, north west of Ajmīr, where he lived in the company of the pious, enjoying the friendship of Mīr Sayyid Yabyā of Bukhārā

The title of Shaykh, which all the members of the family bore, was to keep up among them the remembrance of the home of the ancestors

Not long afterwards, in 911, Shaykh Mubarak, Abū 'l Fazl's father, was born Mubārak was not Shaykh Khizr's eldest child, several children had been born before and had died, and Khizr rejoicing at the birth of another son, called him Mubārak, i e the blessed, in allusion, no doubt, to the hope which Islam holds out to the believers that children gone before bless those born after them, and pray to God for the continuance of their earthly life

Shaykh Mubārak, at the early age of four, gave abundant proofs of intellectual strength, and fashioned his character and leanings in the company of one Shaykh 'Atan (اطن), who was of Turkish extraction and had come during the reign of Sikandar Lodi to Nāgor, where he lived in the service of Shaykh Salar, and died, it is said, at the advanced age of one hundred and twenty years Shaykh Khizr had now resolved to settle at Nagor permanently, and with the view of bringing a few relations to his adopted home, he returned once more to Sīwistān His sudden death during the journey left the family at Nāgor in great

¹ 14th January 1551

distress, and a famine which broke out at the same time stretched numbers of the inhabitants on the barren sands of the surrounding desert, and of all the members of the family at Nāgor only Mubārak and his mother survived

Mubārak grew up progressing in knowledge and laying the foundation of those encyclopedial attainments for which he afterwards became so famous. He soon felt the wish and the necessity to complete his education and visit the great teachers of other parts, but love to his mother kept him in his native town, where he continued his studies, guided by the teachings of the great saint Khwāja Ahrār,¹ to which his attention had been directed. However, when his mother died, and when about the same time the Māldeo disturbances broke out, Mubārak carried out his wish, and went to Ahmadābād in Gujarāt, either attracted by the fame of the town itself, or by that of the shrine of his countryman, Ahmad of Khattū.² In Ahmadābād he found a second father in the learned Shaykh Abū 'l-Fazl, a khatīb, or preacher, from Kazarun, in Persia, and made the acquaintance of several men of reputation, as Shaykh 'Umar of Tattah and Shaykh Yūsuf. After a stay of several years, he returned to Hindūstān, and settled, on the 6th Muharram, 950, on the left bank of the Jamuna, opposite Āgra, near the Chārbagh Villa,³ which Bābar had built, and in the neighbourhood of the suntly Mir Rafi⁴ 'd Dīn Safawī of Injū (Shirāz) among whose disciples Mubārak took a distinguished place. It was here that Mubarak's two eldest sons, Shaykh Abū 'l-Fayz⁴ and, four years later, Shaykh Abu 'l-Fazl, were born. Mubarak had now reached the age of fifty, and resolved to remain at Āgra, the capital of the empire, nor did the years of extraordinary drought which preceded the first year of Akbar's reign, and the dreadful plague, which in 963 broke out in Āgra and caused a great dispersion among the population incline him to settle elsewhere.

The universality of learning which distinguished Mubārak attracted a large number of disciples, and displayed itself in the education he gave his sons, and the filial piety with which Abū 'l-Fazl in numerous passages of his works speaks of his father, and the testimony of hostile writers as Badā'onī, leave no doubt that it was Mubārak's comprehensive-

¹ Died at Samarqand 20th Rabi' I 895 or 20th February, 1490

² Vide p 570 note. Ahmad of Khattū is buried at Sarkhich near Ahmadabad. He died in 849 (A D 1445)

³ Later called Haht Bibisht, or the Nurafshan Gardens. It is now called the Rām Bagh.

⁴ Born A H 954, or A D 1547. Vide p 319

of the age" In the opinion of this party, he was born at Burrāman rāā (near Bāghdād) on the 23rd Ramāzān, 258, and in 265 he came to his Sardāba (prop "a cool place", "a summer villa"), and disappeared whilst in his residence. In the book entitled Shawāhid, it is said that when he was born, he had on his right arm the words written, "Say, the truth has come and error has vanished, surely error is vanishing" (Qūr'ān, xvii, 83). It is also related that when he was born into the world, he came on his knees, pointed with his fingers to heaven, sneezed, and said, "Praise be to God, the Lord of the world." Some one also has left an account of a visit to Imām Hasan 'Askarī (the eleventh Imām) whom he asked, "O son of the Prophet, who will be Khalifa and Imām after thee?" 'Askarī thereupon went into his room, and after some time came back with a child on his shoulders, that had a face like the full moon and might have been three years old, and said to the man, "If thou hadst not found favour in the eyes of God, He would not have shown you this child, his name is that of the Prophet, and so is his patronymic." The sect who believe Mahdī to be alive at present say that he rules over cities in the far west, and he is even said to have children. God alone knows the truth!

The alleged prophecies of the Founder regarding the advent of the Restorer of the Faith, assumed a peculiar importance when Islam entered on the century preceding the first millennium, and the learned everywhere agitated the question till at last the Mahdī movement assumed in India a definite form through the teaching of Mir Sayyid Muhammad, son of Mir Sayyid Khān of Jaunpūr. This man was a descendant of the Prophet and bore his name, the fall of Jaunpūr was to him a sign that the latter days had come, extraordinary events which looked like miracles, marked his career, and a voice from heaven had whispered to him the words, "Anta Mahdī," "thou art Mahdī." Some people indeed say that Mir Sayyid Muhammad did not mean to declare that he was the promised Mahdī, but there is no doubt that he insisted on his mission as the Lord of the Age. He gained many adherents, chiefly allured by trade or selling to give up meditating on God" Religious meetings, the object of which was to prepare people for the advent of the promised Mahdī, were daily held after the five prayers, which the brethren said together, and wherever they went they appeared armed to the teeth. They soon felt strong enough to interfere with municipal matters, and inspected the bīzars and removed by force all articles forbidden in the law, defying the magistrates, if opposed to them, or assisting them, if of their opinion. Their ranks increased daily, and matters in Biānah had come to such a pass, that fathers separated themselves from their children and husbands from their wives. Shaykh ʿAlā,ī's former position and the thoroughness of his conversion had given him the rank of second leader, in fact, he soon outdid Miyan ʿAbd'ullāh in earnestness and successful conversions, and the latter at last tried to rid himself of his rival by sending him with six or seven hundred armed men towards Makkah. ʿAlā,ī marched with his band over Basāwar to Khawaspūr, converting and preaching on the way, but on account of some obstacles they all returned to Biānah.

Shaykh ʿAlā,ī's fame at last reached the ear of Islam Shāh, who summoned him to Āgra, and although the king was resolved to put him to death as a dangerous demagogue, and was even offended at the rude way in which ʿAlā,ī behaved in his presence, he was so charmed by an impromptu address which ʿAlā,ī delivered on the vanities of the world and the pharisaism of the learned, that he sent cooked provisions to ʿAlā,ī's men. To the amusement of the Afghan nobles and generals at court ʿAlā,ī on another occasion defeated the learned on questions connected with the advent of Mahdī, and Islam Shāh was day after day informed that another of his nobles had gone to ʿAlā,ī's meetings and had joined the new sect.

It was at this time that Shaykh Mubarak also became a 'disciple', and professed Mahdawi ideas. It is not clear whether he joined the sect from religious or from political motives, inasmuch as one of the objects of the brethren was to break up the party of the learned at Court, at whose head Maḥdūm'ī Mulk stood, but whatever may have been his reason, the result was, that Maḥdūm became his inveterate enemy, deprived him of grants of land, made him flee for his life, and persecuted him for more than twenty years, till Mubārak's sons turned the tables on him and procured his banishment.¹

¹ "Maḥdūm'ī Mulk" was the title of ʿAbd'ullāh of Sultānpūr, regarding whom the reader may consult the index for references. The following biographical notice from the

The learned at Court, however, were not to be baffled by 'Alā'i's success, and Makhdūm's influence was so great, that he at last prevailed on the king to banish the Shaykh 'Alā'i and his followers readily obeyed the command, and set out for the Dakhīn. Whilst at Handiāh on the Narbadā, the frontier of Islām Shāh's empire, they succeeded in converting Bahār Khān A'zam Humāyūn and half his army, and the king on hearing of this last success cancelled his orders and recalled Shaykh 'Alā'i.

About the same time (955) Islām Shāh left Āgra, in order to 'put down disturbances in the Panjāb caused by certain Niyāzī Afghāns, and when he arrived in the neighbourhood of Biānah Makhdūm's Mulk drew the king's attention to Miyān 'Abd'ullāh Niyāzī, who after Shaykh 'Alā'i's departure for the Dakhīn roamed about the hills of the Biānah district with three or four hundred armed men, and was known to possess great influence over men of his own clan, and consequently over the Niyāzī rebels in the Panjāb. Islām Shāh ordered the governor of Biānah, who had become a Mahdawī, to bring Miyān 'Abd'ullāh to him. The governor advised his religious leader to conceal himself, but Miyān 'Abd'ullāh boldly appeared before the king, and so displeased him by his neglect of etiquette, that Islām Shāh gave orders to beat him to death. The king watched on horseback for an hour the execution of the punishment, and only left when Miyān 'Abd'ullāh lay apparently lifeless on the ground. But he was with much care brought back to life. He concealed himself for a long time, renounced all Mahdawī principles and got as late as 993 (A. D. 1585) from Akbar a freehold, because he,

Khazīnat'ul Asfiyā (Lāhor, pp. 443, 464) shows the opinion of good Sunnis regarding Makhdūm.

Mawlana 'Abd'ullāh Anṣārī of Sultānpūr belongs to the most distinguished learned men and saints of India. He was a Chishtī in his religious opinions. From the time of Sber Shāh till the reign of Akbar he had the title of 'Makhdūm' i Mulk (prop. served

His son Hajī 'Abd' i Karīm went after the death of his father to Lāhor, where

allured by trade or selling to give up meditating on God. Religious meetings the object of which was to prepare people for the advent of the promised Mahdī were daily held after the five prayers which the brethren said together and wherever they went they appeared armed to the teeth. They soon felt strong enough to interfere with municipal matters and inspected the bazars and removed by force all articles forbidden in the law defying the magistrates if opposed to them or assisting them if of their opinion. Their ranks increased daily and matters in Bianah had come to such a pass that fathers separated themselves from their children and husbands from their wives. Shaykh ʿAlaʿī's former position and the thoroughness of his conversion had given him the rank of second leader in fact he soon outdid Miyan ʿAbdūllah in earnestness and successful conversions and the latter at last tried to rid himself of his rival by sending him with six or seven hundred armed men towards Makkah. ʿAlaʿī marched with his band over Basawar to Khawaspur converting and preaching on the way but on account of some obstacles they all returned to Bianah.

Shaykh ʿAlaʿī's fame at last reached the ear of Islam Shah who summoned him to Agra and although the king was resolved to put him to death as a dangerous demagogue and was even offended at the rude way in which ʿAlaʿī behaved in his presence he was so charmed by an impromptu address which ʿAlaʿī delivered on the vanities of the world and the pharisaism of the learned that he sent cooked provisions to ʿAlaʿī's men. To the amusement of the Afghan nobles and generals at court ʿAlaʿī on another occasion defeated the learned on questions connected with the advent of Mahdī and Islam Shah was day after day informed that another of his nobles had gone to ʿAlaʿī's meetings and had joined the new sect.

It was at this time that Shaykh Mubarak also became a disciple and professed Mahdawi ideas. It is not clear whether he joined the sect from religious or from political motives inasmuch as one of the objects of the brethren was to break up the party of the learned at Court at whose head Makhdūm ʿI Muik stood but whatever may have been his reason the result was that Makhdūm became his inveterate enemy deprived him of grants of land made him flee for his life and persecuted him for more than twenty years till Mubarak's sons turned the tables on him and procured his banishment.¹

¹ Makhdūm ʿI Muik was the title of ʿAbdūllah of Sulampur regarding whom the reader may consult the index for references. The following biographical notice from the

The learned at Court, however, were not to be baffled by ʿAlāʾī's success, and Makhdūm's influence was so great, that he at last prevailed on the king to banish the Shaykh ʿAlāʾī and his followers readily obeyed the command, and set out for the Dakḥīn. Whilst at Handiāh on the Narbadā, the frontier of Islām Shāh's empire, they succeeded in converting Bahār Khān Aʿzam Humāyūn and half his army, and the king on hearing of this last success cancelled his orders and recalled Shaykh ʿAlāʾī.

About the same time (955) Islām Shāh left Āgra, in order to put down disturbances in the Panjāb caused by certain Niyāzī Afghāns, and when he arrived in the neighbourhood of Biānah Makhdūm ul Mulk drew the king's attention to Miyyān ʿAbdullāh Niyāzī, who after Shaykh ʿAlāʾī's departure for the Dakḥīn roamed about the hills of the Biānah district with three or four hundred armed men, and was known to possess great influence over men of his own clan, and consequently over the Niyāzī rebels in the Panjāb. Islām Shāh ordered the governor of Biānah, who had become a Mahdawī, to bring Miyyān ʿAbdullāh to him. The governor advised his religious leader to conceal himself, but Miyyān ʿAbdullāh boldly appeared before the king, and so displeased him by his neglect of etiquette, that Islām Shāh gave orders to beat him to death. The king watched on horseback for an hour the execution of the punishment, and only left when Miyyān ʿAbdullāh lay apparently lifeless on the ground. But he was with much care brought back to life. He concealed himself for a long time, renounced all Mahdawī principles and got as late as 993 (A. D. 1585) from Akbar a freehold, because he, too, had been one of Makhdūm^ul Mulk's victims. He died more than 90 years old, in 1000, at Sarhind¹.

Khazīnat-ʾl Asfiyā (Lahor, pp 443, 464) shows the opinion of good Sunnis regarding Makhdūm

Islam Shāh, after quelling the Niyāzī disturbances, returned to Āgra, but almost immediately afterwards his presence was again required in the Panjab, and it was there that Shaykh ʿAlā,ī joined the royal camp. When Islām Shāh saw the Shaykh he said to him in a low voice, "Whisper into my ear that you recant, and I will not trouble you." But Shaykh ʿAlā,ī would not do so, and Islām Shāh, to keep up the appearance of authority ordered a menial to give him by way of punishment a few cuts with the whip in his presence. Shaykh ʿAlā,ī had then scarcely recovered from an attack of the plague, which for several years had been raging in India, and had a few badly healed wounds on his neck. Whilst he got the cuts, one of the wounds broke open, and ʿAlā,ī fainted and died. His body was now thrown under the feet of an elephant, and orders were given that no one should bury him, when all at once, to the terror of the whole camp and the king who believed that the last day had dawned, a most destructive cyclone broke forth. When the storm abated, ʿAlā,ī's body was found literally buried among roses and other flowers, and an order was now forthcoming to have the corpse interred. This happened in 957 (A. D. 1550). People prophesied the quick end of Islam Shāh and the downfall of his house.²

Makhdūm^ul Mulk was never popular after that.

The features common to all Mahdawī movements, are (1) that the preachers of the latter days were men of education and of great oratorical powers, which gave them full sway over the multitudes, and (2) that the Mahdawīs assumed a hostile position to the learned men who held office at Court. Islām has no state clergy, but we find a counterpart to our hierarchical bodies in the ʿUlamās about Court, from whom the Ṣadrs of the provinces, the Mir ʿAdls, Muftīs, and Qāzis were appointed. At Dīhlī and Āgra, the body of the learned had always consisted of staunch Sunnīs, who believed it their duty to keep the kings straight

¹ Badā,oni visited him in Sarhind and it was from ʿAbd^ulīlah that he heard of Mir Sayyid Muḥammad's repentance before death. Among other things, ʿAbd^ulīlah also told him that after the Mir's death in Farāh a well known man of that town seized on lands belonging to Balochis and proclaimed himself Christ, and he added that he had known no less than thirteen men of respectable parentage who had likewise claimed to be Christ.

² The circumstances connected with ʿAlā,ī's death resemble the end of Sidi Muḥāḍ during the reign of Jalāl^u d din Firuz Shāh.

The place in the Panjab, where the scene took place, is called Ban (Bad J, 408).

The fact that Badā,oni spent his youth at Bāswār near Bikaner in the very centre of the Mahdawī movement, accounts perhaps for his adherence, throughout his life, to Mahdawī principles.

How great their influence was, may be seen from the fact that of all Muhammadan emperors only Akbar, and perhaps 'Alā'ud-Dīn Khiljī, succeeded in putting down this haughty set

The death of Shaykh 'Ala,ī was a great triumph for the Court 'Ulamās, and a vigorous persecution of all Mahdawī disciples was the immediate result. The persecutions lasted far into Akbar's reign. They abated only for a short time when the return of Humāyūn and the downfall of the Afghān power brought about a violent political crisis, during which the learned first thought of their own safety, well knowing that Humāyūn was strongly in favour of Shi'ism, but when Akbar was firmly established and the court at Āgra, after the fall of Bayram Khān, who was a Shi'a again termed with Hindūstānī Sunnīs, the persecutions commenced. The hatred of the court party against Shaykh Mubārak especially, rose to such a height that Shaykh 'Abd'u'n Nabī and Makhdūm'u'l Mulk represented to the emperor that inasmuch as Mubārak also belonged to the Mahdawīs and was, therefore, not only himself damned, but led also others into damnation, he deserved to be killed. They even obtained an order to bring him before the emperor. Mubārak wisely fled from Āgra, only leaving behind him some furniture for his enemies to wreak their revenge on. Concealing himself for a time, he applied to Shaykh Salīm Chishtī of Fathpūr Sikrī for intercession, but being advised by him to withdraw to Gujarat, he implored the good offices of Akbar's foster brother, the generous Khān i A'szam Mirzā Koka, who succeeded in allaying all doubts in the mind of the emperor by dwelling on the poverty of the Shaykh and on the fact that, different from his covetous accusers, he had not cost the state anything by way of freeholds, and thus obtained at least security for him and his family. Mubārak some time afterwards applied indeed for a grant of land for his son 'Abū 'l Fayz, who had already acquired literary fame, though he was only 20 years old and waited personally with his son on Shaykh 'Abd'u'n Nabī. But the latter, in his theological pride, turned them out of his office as men suspected of Mahdawī leanings and Shi'a tendencies. Even in the 12th year of Akbar's reign, when Fayzī's poems¹ had been noticed at Court—Akbar then lay before Chitor—and a summons had been sent to the young poet to present himself before his sovereign, the enemies at Āgra saw in the invitation a sign of approaching doom, and prevailed on the governor to secure the victim this time. The governor thereupon sent a detachment of Mughul soldiers to surround Mubarak's house. Fayzī was accidentally away from home, and the soldiers suspecting a conspiracy, subjected Mubārak to various sorts of ill treatment, and when Fayzi at last came, he was carried off by force to Chitor¹. Nor did his fears for his father and his own life banish, till his favourable reception at court convinced him both of Akbar's good will and the blindness of his personal enemies.

¹ 'Abd' l Fayz wrote under the nom de plume of Fayzī.

Abū 'l Fazl had in the meantime grown up zealously studying under the care of his father. The persecutions which Shāykh Mubarak had to suffer for his Mahdawi leanings at the hands of the learned at Court, did not fail to make a lasting impression on his young mind. There is no doubt that it was in this school of misfortune that Abū 'l Fazl learned the lesson of toleration, the practice of which in later years formed the basis of Akbar's friendship for him, while, on the other hand, the same pressure of circumstances stimulated him to unusual exertions in studying, which subsequently enabled him during the religious discussions at Court to lead the opposition and overthrow by superior learning and broader sentiments the clique of the 'Ulamās whom Akbar hated so much.

At the age of fifteen, he showed the mental precocity so often observed in Indian boys, he had read works on all branches of those sciences which go by the name of hikamī and naqlī, or maṣqūl and *manqūl*². Following the footsteps of his father, he commenced to teach long before he had reached the age of twenty. An incident is related to show how extensive even at that time his reading was. A manuscript of the rare work of Isfahani happened to fall into his hands. Unfortunately however, one half of each page, vertically downwards from top to bottom, was rendered illegible, or was altogether destroyed, by fire. Abū 'l Fazl determined to restore so rare a book, cut away the burnt portions, pasted new paper to each page and then commenced to restore the missing halves of each line, in which attempt after repeated thoughtful perusals he succeeded. Some time afterwards, a complete copy of the same work turned up and on comparison, it was found that in many places there were indeed different words, and in a few passages new proofs even had been adduced, but on the whole the restored portion presented so many points of extraordinary coincidence that his friends were not a little astonished at the thoroughness with which Abū 'l Fazl had worked himself into the style and mode of thinking of a difficult author.

¹ 20th Rabi' I 975 or 24th September 1567. The ode which Fayzi presented will be found in the Ikbarnāma.

² Page 609 note.

Abu'l Fazl was so completely taken up with study that he preferred the life of a recluse to the unstable patronage of the great, and to the bondage which attendance at court in those days rendered inevitable. But from the time Fayzī had been asked by Akbar to attend the Court hopes of a brighter future dawned, and Abū'l Fazl, who had then completed his seventeenth year, saw in the encouragement held out by the emperor, in spite of Mubārak's numerous enemies at court, a guarantee that patient toil on his part, too, would not remain without fruit. The skill with which Fayzī in the meantime acquired and retained Akbar's friendship, prepared the way for Abū'l Fazl, and when the latter, in the very end of 981 (beginning of A D 1574) was presented to Akbar as Fayzī's brother, the reception was so favourable that he gave up all thoughts of leading a life among manuscripts. "As fortune did not at first assist me," says Abū'l Fazl in the Akbarnāma, "I almost became selfish and conceited, and resolved to tread the path of proud retirement. The number of pupils that I had gathered around me, served but to increase my pedantry. In fact, the pride of learning had made my brain drunk with the idea of seclusion. Happily for myself, when I passed the nights in lonely spots with true seekers after truth, and enjoyed the society of such as are empty handed, but rich in mind and heart, my eyes were opened and I saw the selfishness and covetousness of the so called learned. The advice of my father with difficulty kept me back from outbreaks of folly, my mind had no rest, and my heart felt itself drawn to the sages of Mongolia, or to the hermits of Lebanon, I longed for interviews with the lamas of Tibet or with the padris of Portugal, and I would gladly sit with the priests of the Parsis and the learned of the Zendavesta. I was sick of the learned of my own land. My brother and other relatives then advised me to attend the Court, hoping that I would find in the emperor a leader to the sublime world of thought. In vain did I at first resist their admonitions. Happy, indeed am I now that I have found in my sovereign a guide to the world of action and a comforter in lonely retirement, in him meet my longing after faith and my desire to do my appointed work in the world, he is the orient where the light of form and ideal dawns, and it is he who has taught me that the work of the world, multifarious as it is may yet harmonize with the spiritual unity of truth. I was thus presented at Court. As I had no worldly treasures to lay at the feet of his Majesty, I wrote a commentary to the *Ayat*¹ 'l Kursī,¹ and presented it when the emperor was at Āgra

¹ Name of the 256th verse of the second chapter of the Qur'an

I was favourably received, and his Majesty graciously accepted my offering '.

Akbar was at that time busily engaged with his preparations for the conquest of Bihār and Bengal. Fayzī accompanied the expedition, but Abū'l Fazl naturally stayed in Āgra. But as Fayzī wrote to his brother that Akbar had inquired after him, Abū'l Fazl attended Court immediately on the emperor's return to Faṭhpūr Sikrī, where Akbar happened to notice him first in the Jamī' Mosque. Abū'l Fazl, as before, presented a commentary written by him on the opening of a chapter in the Qur'ā entitled "Sūratu 'l Fath", "the Chapter of Victory" ¹.

The party of the learned and bigoted Sunnis at Court, headed by Maḥdūm^u 'l Mulk and Shaykh 'Abd^u 'n Nabī, had every cause to feel sorry at Fayzī's and Abū'l Fazl's successes ², for it was now, after Akbar's return from Bihār, that the memorable Thursday evening discussions commenced, of which the historian Badā'onī has left us so vivid an account. Akbar at first was merely annoyed at the "Pharaoh like pride" of the learned at court, stories of the endless squabbles of these pious casuists had reached his ear, religious persecutions and a few sentences of death passed by his Chief Justice on Shi'as and "others heretics" affected him most deeply, and he now for the first time realized the idea that the scribes and the pharisees formed a power of their own in his kingdom, at the construction of which he had for twenty years been working. Impressed with a favourable idea of the value of his Hindū subjects he had resolved when pensively sitting in the mornings on the solitary stone at Faṭhpūr Sikrī, to rule with even hand men of all creeds in his dominions, but as the extreme views of the learned and the lawyers continually urged him to persecute instead of to heal, he instituted the discussions because, believing himself to be in error, he thought it his duty as ruler to "inquire". It is not necessary to repeat here the course which these discussions took ³. The unity that had existed among the learned disappeared in the very beginning, abuse took the place of argument, and the plainest rules of etiquette were, even in the presence of the emperor, forgotten. Akbar's doubts instead of being cleared up only increased, certain points of the Hanafi law, to which most Sunnis cling, were found to be better established by the dicta of lawyers belong

¹ The details of Abū'l Fazl's introduction at Court given in Badā'onī differ slightly from Abū'l Fazl's own account.

² Badā'onī ascribes to Maḥdūm^u 'l Mulk an almost prophetic insight into Abū'l Fazl's character. For the first time he saw Abū'l Fazl, he said to his disciples, "What religious mischief is there of which that man is not capable?" Bad., III 72.

³ Vide pp. 179 ff.

ing to the other three sects, and the moral character of the Prophet was next scrutinized and was found wanting. Makhdūm^u I Mulk wrote a spiteful pamphlet against Shaykh ‘Abd^u ‘n Nabī the Ṣadr of the empire and the latter retorted by calling Makhdūm a fool and cursing him. Abū I Fazl upon whom Akbar from the beginning had fixed as the leader of his party, fanned the quarrels by skilfully shifting the disputes from one point to another and at last persuaded the emperor that a subject ought to look upon the king not only as the temporal but also as the only spiritual guide. The promulgation of this new doctrine was the making of Abū I Fazl's fortune. Both he and Akbar held to it to the end of their lives. But the new idea was in opposition to Islām, the law of which stands above every king rendering what we call a constitution impossible, and though headstrong kings as ‘Ala^u ‘d dīn Khuljī had before tried to raise the law of expediency (مصلحت و وقت, maslahat waqt) above the law of the Qur^{ān} they never fairly succeeded in separating religion from law or in rendering the administration of the empire, independent of the Mulla. Hence when Abū I Fazl four years later in 986 brought up the question at the Thursday evening meetings, he raised a perfect storm, and while the disputations bitter as they were had hitherto dwelt on single points connected with the life of the Prophet, or with sectarian differences, they henceforth turned on the very principles of Islam. It was only now that the Sunnis at Court saw how wide during the last four years the breach had become, that “the strong embankment of the clearest law and the most excellent faith had been broken through”, and that Akbar believed that there were sensible men in all religions and abstemious thinkers and men endowed with miraculous power among all nations. Islām, therefore, possessed in his opinion no superiority over other forms of worship¹. The learned party, seeing their official position endangered, now showed signs of readiness to yield, but it was too late. They even signed the remarkable document which Shaykh Mubarak in conjunction with his sons had drafted a document which I believe stands unique in the whole Church History of Islam. Badaonī has happily preserved a complete copy of it². The emperor was certified to be a just ruler and was as such assigned the rank of a “Mujtahid”, i.e. an infallible authority in all matters relating to Islam. The “intellect of the just king” thus became the only source of legislation and the whole body of the learned and the lawyers bound themselves to abide by Akbar's decrees in religious matters. Shaykh ‘Abd^u ‘n Nabī and Makhdūm^u I Mulk signed indeed the document against their will, but sign they did, whilst Shaykh Mubārak added to his signature the words that he had most willingly subscribed his name, and that for several years he had been anxiously looking forward to the realization of the progressive movement "The document," says 'Abū 'l-Faẓl in the Albarnāma, "brought about excellent results—(1) The Court became a gathering place of the sages and learned of all creeds, the good doctrines of all religious systems were recognized, and their defects were not allowed to obscure their good features, (2) perfect toleration (sulh i kul or "peace with all") was established, and (3) the perverse and evil minded were covered with shame on seeing the disinterested motives of his Majesty, and thus stood in the pillory of disgrace" The copy of the draft which was handed to the emperor, was in Shaykh Mubārak's own handwriting and was dated Rajab, 987 (September, 1579)

¹ Pages 187-189² Vide p. 100

A few weeks afterwards, Shaykh 'Abdū 'n Nabī and Makhdūm 'l Mulk were sent to Makkah and Shaykh Mubārak and his two sons triumphed over their enemies. How magnanimous Abū 'l-Faẓl was, may be seen from the manner in which he chronicles in the Albarnāma the banishment of these men. Not a sentence, not a word is added indicative of his personal grievances against either of them, though they had persecuted and all but killed his father and ruined his family, the narrative proceeds as calm and statesmanlike as in every other part of his great work and justifies the high praise which historians have bestowed upon his character that "neither abuse nor harsh words were ever found in his household."

The disputations had now come to an end (A D 1579) and Fayẓī and Abū 'l-Faẓl had gained the lasting friendship of the emperor. Of the confidence which Akbar placed in Fayẓī, no better proof can be cited than his appointment, in the same year, as tutor to Prince Murād, and as both brothers had entered the military, then the only service and had received mansabs, or commissions, their employment in various departments gave them repeated opportunities to gain fresh distinctions. Enjoying Akbar's personal friendship both remained at court in Fathpūr Sikrī, or accompanied the emperor on his expeditions. Two years later, Fayẓī was appointed Sadr of Āgra, Kālpi, and Kalinjār, in which capacity he had to inquire into the possibility of resuming free tenures (sayurghal), which in consequence of fraudulent practices on the part of government officers and the rapaciousness of the holders themselves had so much increased as seriously to lessen the land revenue, and Abū 'l-Faẓl in the very beginning of 1585¹ was promoted to the mansab

f Hazārī, or the post of a commander of one thousand horse, and was in the following year appointed Dīwān of the Province of Dīhlī. Fayzī's rank was much lower, he was only a commander of Four Hundred. But he did not care for further promotion. Devoted to the muse, he found in the appointment as Poet Laureate, with which Akbar honoured him in the end of 1588, that satisfaction which no political office, however high, would have given him. Though the emperor did not pay much attention to poetry, his appreciation of Fayzī's genius was but just, for after Amīr Khusraw of Dīhlī, Muhammadan India has seen no greater poet than Fayzī.¹

In the end of 1589, Abū'l Fazl lost his mother, to whose memory he has devoted a page in the Albarnāma. The emperor, in order to console him, paid him a visit, and said to him, "If the people of this world lived for ever and not only once die, kind friends would not be required to direct their hearts to trust in God and resignation to His will, but no one lives long in the caravanserai of the world, and hence the afflicted do well to accept consolation."²

Religious matters had in the meantime rapidly advanced. Akbar had founded a new religion, the Dīn-i Ilahī, or "the Divine Faith", the chief feature of which in accordance with Shaykh Mubārak's document mentioned above, consisted in belief in one God and in Akbar as His viceregent (khālifa) on earth. The Islamic prayers were abolished at court, and the worship of the "elect" was based on that of the Pārsis and partly on the ceremonial of the Hindūs. The new era (tārīkh ilāhī), which was introduced in all government records, as also the feasts observed by the emperor, were entirely Pārsī. The Muhammadan grandees at court showed but little resistance, they looked with more anxiety on the elevation of Hindu courtiers than on Akbar's religious innovations, which after all, affected but a few. But their feeling against Abū'l Fazl was very marked, and they often advised the emperor to send him to the Dakhn hoping that some mismanagement in war or in administration would lessen his influence at court. Prince Salīm (Jahangīr) also belonged to the dissatisfied, and his dislike to Abū'l Fazl as we shall see below, became gradually so deep rooted, that he looked upon him as the chief obstacle to the execution of his wild plans. An unexpected visit to Abū'l Fazl gave him an excellent opportunity to charge him with

¹ For his works, vide p. 161

² تاریخ جهان سلطانی طراز ماسدگی دایره و حرکات و سحر که راه سببی سرتیبه دوسان شامه دل را از رنما و مسلم گزیر بود
 هرداه نرس کاروان سزا هیچکس درنماند کوهش نامکیامی را کما انداره توان گرسب آ

duplicity. On entering the house he found forty writers busy in copying commentaries to the Qur^{an}. Ordering them to follow him at once he took them to the emperor and showing him the copies he said: 'What Abū l Faḡl teaches me is very different from what he practices in his house.' The incident is said to have produced a temporary estrangement between Akbar and Abū l Faḡl. A similar but less credible story is told by the author of the Zakhiyat l Ḥi na'in. He says that Abū l Faḡl repented of his apostasy from Islām and used at night to visit incognito the houses of dervishes and giving them gold muhurs requested them to pray for the stability of Abū l Faḡl's faith, aghung at the same time and striking his knees and exclaiming: 'What shall I do?' And just as writers on the history of literature have tried to save Fayzi from apostasy and consequent damnation by representing that before his death he had praised the Prophet, so have other authors succeeded in finding for Abū l Faḡl a place in Paradise, for it is related in several books that Shih Al-ū l Maḡali Qadiri of Lahor, a man of saintly renown, once expressed his disapproval of Abū l Faḡl's words and deeds. But at night, so runs the story, he saw in his dream that Abū l Faḡl came to a meeting held by the Prophet in Paradise, and when the Prophet saw him enter he asked him to sit down and said: 'This is in did for some time during his life evil deeds, but one of his deeds commences with the words: 'O God, reward the good for the sake of their righteousness, and help the wicked for the sake of thy love,' and these words have saved him.' The last two stories flatter in all probability the consciences of pious Sunnis, but the first if true detracts in no way from that consistency of opinion and uniform philosophic conviction which pervades Abū l Faḡl's works, and though his heart found in pure deism and religious philosophy more comfort and more elements of harmony than in the casuistry of the Mullas, his mind from early youth had been so accustomed to hard literary work that it was perfectly natural for him even after his rejection of Islām to continue his studies of the Qur^{an}, because the highest dialectic lore and the deepest philological research of Muhammadan literature have for centuries been concentrated on the explanation of the holy book.

To this period also belong the literary undertakings which were commenced under the auspices of the Emperor himself. Abū l Faḡl Fayzi and scholars as Balāoni Naqib Khān Shaykh Sultān Hujjī Hrahim Shaykh Munawwar and others were engaged in historical and scientific compilations and in translations from the Sanskrit or Hindi into Persian.¹ Fayzī took the Lilāwatī, a well known book on mathematics and Abū 'l Fazl translated the Kalīlā Damna under the title of Ayūr Dānīsh* from Arabic into Persian. He also took a part in the translation of the Mahābhārat, and in the composition of the Tārīkh-i Alfī, the "History of the Millennium." The last mentioned work, curious to say, has an intimate connexion with the Mahdawī movement, of which particulars have been given above. Although from the time of Shaykh 'Alā's death, the disciples of the millennium had to suffer persecution, and movement to all appearances had died out, the idea of a restorer of the millennium was revived during the discussions in Fathpūr Sikrī and by the teachings of men of Sharīf-i Āmulī's stamp,² with this important modification, that Akbar himself was pointed to as the "Lord of the Age", through whom faded Islām was to come to an end. This new feature had Akbar's full approval, and exercised the greatest influence on the progress of his religious opinions. The Tārīkh-i Alfī, therefore, was to represent Islām as a thing of the past, it had existed a thousand (alf) years, and had done its work. The early history, to the vexation of the Sunnis, was related from a Shi'ah point of view, and worse still, the chronology had been changed, inasmuch as the death of the Prophet had been made the starting point, not the hijra, or flight, of the Prophet from Makka to Madīna.

Towards the middle of A H 1000 (beginning of A D 1592), Akbar promoted Abū 'l Fazl to the post of Dūhazārī, or commander of two thousand horse. Abū 'l Fazl now belonged to the great Amīrs (umarā-yi kibār) at court. As before, he remained in immediate attendance on the emperor. In the same year, Fayzī was sent to the Dakḥin as Akbar's ambassador to Burhān³ 'l Mulk, and to Rāja 'Alī Khān of Khandesh, who had sent his daughter to Prince Salīm. Fayzī returned after an absence of more than sixteen months.

Shaykh Mubārak, who after the publication of his famous document had all but retired from the world, died in the following year at Lāhor (Sunday, 17th Zī Qasda, 1001, or 4th September, 1593). He had reached the age of 90, and had occupied himself in the last years of his life with the compilation in four volumes of a gigantic commentary to the Qur^{ān}, to which he had given the title of Mambā^ṣ' Nafā^{is}' l' Uyūn. He completed it, in spite of failing eyesight, a short time before his death.

¹ Vide pp. 119, 111.

² Page 509. We hear that . . .

The historian Badā^{onī} speaks of him as follows —

Shaykh Mubārak belonged to the most distinguished men of learning of the present age. In practical wisdom, piety, and trust in God he stood high among the people of his time. In early life he practised rigorous asceticism, in fact, he was so strict in his views regarding what is lawful and unlawful, that if any one for example, came to a prayer meeting with a gold ring on his finger, or dressed in silk, or with red stockings on his feet, or red or yellow coloured clothes on him, he would order the offending articles to be removed. In legal decisions, he was so severe as to maintain that for every hurt exceeding a simple kick, death was the proper punishment. If he accidentally heard music while walking on the street, he ran away, but in course of time he became from divine zeal, so enamoured of music, that he could not exist without listening to some voice or melody. In short, he passed through rather opposite modes of thought and ways of life. At the time of the Afghān rule, he frequented Shaykh Ala^{is} fraternity, in the beginning of His Majesty's reign, when the Naqshbandis had the upper hand, he settled matters with that sect, afterwards he was attached to the Hamadan school, and lastly, when the Shi^{ahs} monopolized the court, he talked according to their fashion. "Men speak according to the measure of their understanding"—to change was his way, and the rest you know. But withal he was constantly engaged in teaching the religious sciences. Prosody also, the art of composing riddles, and other branches, he understood well, and in mystic philosophy he was, unlike the learned of Hindūstān a perfect master. He knew Shatibi¹ by heart, explained him properly and also knew how to read the Qur^{ān} in the ten different modes. He did not go to the palaces of the kings, but he was a most agreeable companion and full of anecdote. Towards the end of his life, when his eyesight was impaired he gave up reading and lived in seclusion. The commentary to the Qur^{ān} which he composed, resembles the Tafsīr i Kubīr (the Great Commentary), and consists of four thick volumes and is entitled Mambā^ṣ' Nafā^{is}' l' Uyūn. It is rather extraordinary that there is a passage in the preface in which he seems to point to himself

¹ Shatibi = Tajwid the art of reading the Qur^{ān} correctly

the renovator of the new century¹ We know what this "renovating" means About the time he finished his work he wisely committed the riẓī Ode (in t) which consists of seven hundred verses, and the Ode irḍā, the Ode by Kaṣb ibn Zubayr, and other Odes to memory, and recited them as daily homilies till on the 17th / 1 Qaṣḍā 1001, he left this world at Lahor for the judgment seat of God

I have known no man of more comprehensive learning, but alas! under the mantle of a dervish there was such a wicked love of worldly preferment that he left no tittle of our religion in peace When I was young, I studied at Āgra for several years in his company He is indeed a man of merit, but he committed worldly and irreligious deeds plunged to lust of possession and rank, was timeserving, practised deceit and falsehood and went so far in twisting religious truth, that nothing of his former merit remains "Say, either I am in the correct path or in a clear error, or you" (Qurʾān, xxxiv, 23) Further, it is a common saying that the son brings the curse on the head of his father, hence people have gone beyond Yazīd and say, "Curse on Yazīd² and on his father, too"

Two years after Shaykh Mubarak's death Abū 'l Fazl also lost his brother Fayzī who died at the age of 50, after an illness of six months on the 10th Safar, 1004 (5th October, 1595) When in his last moments, Akbar visited him at midnight, and seeing that he could no longer speak, he gently raised his head and said to him, "Shaykh Jio, I have brought Hakim Ṣāliḥ with me, will you not speak to me?" But getting no reply, the emperor in his grief threw his turban to the ground, and wept loud, and after trying to console Abū 'l Fazl he went away³ How deeply Abu 'l Fazl loved his elder brother, is evident from the numerous passages in the Akbarnāma and the Āṣṭin in which he speaks of him and nothing is more touching than the lines with which he prefaces the selections in the Āṣṭin made by him from his brother's poems "The gems of thought in his poems will never be forgotten Should leisure permit and my heart turn to worldly occupations I would collect some

¹ Bada'oni says in Ḥis Ṣayfīn fī ṣayyidat that Jalāl al-Dīn Ṣuyūṭī in his time the most universal scholar of all Arabia pointed likewise to himself as the renovator of the tenth century

² Husayn in whose remembrance the Mularram lamentations are chanted was murdered by Yazīd

ac
b ..
v ..

فرحندہ سے آندہ خوش بہانے ۛ نا نو حکایت کم ارہرناے

Serene is the night and pleasant is the moonlight I wish to talk to thee on many a subject

and promoted him for his excellent management to a command of four thousand. The imperial army now marched on Āsir and commenced the siege. One day Abu l Fazl inspected some of his trenches when one of the besieged who had deserted to Akbar's camp offered to show him a way by which the Imperialists might get over the wall of the Malai Fort an important fortification below Āsirgarh itself. Half way up the mountain to the west and slightly to the north were two renowned outworks called the Malai and Antar Malai which had to be conquered before Āsir itself could be reached and between the north west and north there was another bastion called Chuva Malai. A portion of its wall was not finished. From east to south west there were hills and in the south was a high mountain called Korhia. A hill in the south west called Sapan was occupied by the Imperialists. Abu l Fazl determined on availing himself of the information given by the deserter and selected a detachment to follow him. Giving orders to the officer commanding the trench to listen for the sound of the trumpets and bugles when he was to hasten to his assistance with ladders he went in the dark of night whilst it was raining with his selected men on Mount Sapan and sent a few of his men under Qara Beg along the road that had been pointed out to him. They advanced broke open a gate of Malai Fort and sounded the bugle. The besieged rose up to oppose them and Abu l Fazl hastened to his men and joined them at break of day when the besieged withdrew in confusion to Āsir. On the same day, other detachments of the army occupied Chūna Mālai and Mount Korha, and Bahādur Khān, unable to resist longer, sued for pardon (1009) Prince Dānyāl, who had in the meantime conquered Ahmad nagar,¹ now joined his father at Āsir

About this time disturbances broke out in the Dakhin, caused by Rajū Mannā, and a party set up the son of 'Alī Shāh as king. As the latter found numerous adherents, the Khān Khānān was ordered to march against him and Abū 'l Fazl was sent to Nāsik, but a short time afterwards, he was told to join the Khān Khānān. Akbar returned, in the 46th year, to Āgra, leaving Prince Dānyāl in Burhānpūr. Abū 'l Fazl had no easy life in the Dakhin. The Khān Khānān stood idle at Ahmadnagar, because he was disinclined to fight, and left the operations to Abū 'l Fazl, who looked upon him as a traitor. Abū 'l Fazl vigorously pushed on operations, ably assisted by his son 'Abdu 'r Rahmān. After coming to terms with the son of 'Alī Shah he attacked Rājū Mannā, recovered Jālnāpūr and the surrounding district, and inflicted several defeats on him. Mannā found a temporary asylum in Dawlatābād, and in a subsequent engagement he was nearly captured.

As early as during the siege of Āsir, Prince Salim, who had been sent against the Rānā of Udaipūr, had rebelled against his father, and had moved to Ilahābad, where he had assumed the title of king. Though on Akbar's return from Burhānpūr a reconciliation had been effected, the prince, in the forty seventh year, showed again signs of rebellion, and as many of Akbar's best officers appeared to favour Salim, the emperor recalled Abū 'l Fazl, the only trustworthy servant he had. As his presence at Court was urgently required, Akbar sent him orders to leave the troops of his contingent in the Dakhin. Putting his son 'Abdu 'r Rahmān in charge of his corps, Abū 'l Fazl set out for Āgra, accompanied by a few men only. Salim, who looked upon him with little concealed hatred, thought Abū 'l Fazl's journey unprotected, as he was, an excellent opportunity to get rid of him. He, therefore, persuaded Raja Bir Singh, a Bundela chief of Urcha (Udchhā),² through whose territory Abū 'l Fazl was likely to pass, to lie in wait for him and kill him. Bir Singh, who was in disgrace at Court, eagerly seized the opportunity of pleasing the Prince, who no doubt would substantially reward him on his accession, and posted a large body of horse and foot near Narwar. When arrived at Ujjain, Abū 'l Fazl was warned of Salim's

¹ Among the plunder taken at Ahmadnagar was a splendid library. Fayzi's library, having on his death lapsed to the state, had been incorporated with the Imperial Library.

² Vide p. 546

intention and his mer tried to persuade him to go via Ghaṭī Chāndā , but Abū 'l Faḏl said that thieves and robbers had no power to stop him on his way to Court He, therefore, continued his journey towards Narwar On Friday, the 4th Rabī' I, 1011 (12th August, 1602), at a distance of about half a kos from Sarīy Bīr, which lies six kos from Narwar Bīr Singh's men came in sight The few men that Abū 'l Faḏl had with him strongly advised him to avoid a fight, and an old servant, Gadā 'l Khān Afghān told him quickly to retreat to Antrī, which was three kos distant as Rāy Rāvan and Suraj Singh were stationed there with three thousand Imperial horse, he might first join them, and then punish Bīr Singh But Abū 'l Faḏl thought it a disgrace to fly He defended himself bravely, but in a short time he was surrounded and, pierced by the lance of a trooper, he fell dead to the ground Bīr Singh cut off Abū 'l Faḏl's head and sent it to Salīm in Ilāhabād, who, it is said, had it thrown " into an unworthy place ", where it lay for a long time

The Dutch traveller De Laet gives the following account of Abū 'l Faḏl's death —¹

Salīm returned to Halebassa (Ilāhbās, the old form of Ilāhābād), and began to coin gold and silver money in his own name, which he even sent to his father, to irritate him the more The king, enraged at this, wrote an account of all that had happened to Abū 'l Faḏl, who bade the king be of good courage, for he would come to him as quickly as possible, and added that his soul should be brought bound to him, either by fair means or by foul Accordingly, a little afterwards, having obtained leave of absence from Dāniel Xā (Dānyal Shah), he took to the road with about two or three hundred horsemen, leaving orders for his baggage to follow him Xā Salīm, to whom all these things were known recalling how hostile Faḏl had always been towards him, and hence justly fearing that his father would be more exasperated than ever against him, judged it best to intercept him on his journey So he begged Radzīa Bertzingh Bondela, who lived in his province of Osseen (Ujjain), to lie in wait for Faḏl near Soor (Narwar) and Gualer (Gwalhyar) and to send his head to him, promising that he would be mindful of so great a benefit, and would give him the command of five thousand cavalry The Radzīa consented, and waited with a thousand cavalry and three thousand infantry about three or four kos from Gualer, having sent out scouts into the neighbouring villages, to give him early warning of the approach of Fazl. Accordingly when the latter, ignorant of the ambuscade, had come as far as Collebaga (Kalābhīg), and was going towards Soor, Radziā Bertzingh and his followers fell upon him on all sides. Fazl and his horsemen fought bravely, but being overpowered by numbers, they were gradually worn out. Fazl himself having received twelve wounds in the fight, was pointed out by a captive slave under a neighbouring tree, and was taken and beheaded. His head was sent to the prince, who was greatly pleased."

¹ From Professor E. Lethbridge's Fragment of Indian History, Calcutta Review, 1873

The place near which Abu 'l Faḏl was killed is called in the MSS. ساردا عار Sarda' Ear De Laet's Soor appears to be a bad reading for Narwar

Prince Salim, with that selfish nonchalance and utter indifference that distinguished him throughout life, openly confesses in his "Memoirs" that he brought about Abū 'l Fazl's murder, because he was his enemy, and with a naïveté exclusively his own, represents himself as a dutiful son who through the wickedness of others had been deprived of his father's love. He says -

"On my accession I promoted Raja Bir Singh a Bundela Rājput, to a command of three thousand. He is one of my favourites, and he is certainly distinguished among his equals for his bravery, good character and straightforwardness. My reason for promoting him was this: Towards the end of my father's reign, Shaykh Abū 'l Fazl, a Hindūstānī Shaykh by birth, who was well known for his learning and wisdom, and who had externally ornamented himself with the jewel of loyalty, though he sold himself at a high price to my father, had been called from the Dakhin. He was no friend of mine and damaged openly and secretly my reputation. Now about that time evil minded and mischievous men had made my father very angry with me, and I knew that if Abū 'l Fazl were to come back to Court, I would have been deprived of every chance to effect a reconciliation. As he had to pass on his way through the territory of Bir Singh Bundelā, who at that time had rebelled against the emperor, I sent a message to the latter to say that, if he would waylay Abū 'l Fazl and kill him, I would richly reward him. Heaven favoured him, and when Abū 'l Fazl passed through his land, he stopped him on his way, dispersed after a short fight his men, and killed him, and sent his head to me at Ilāhābād. Although my father was at first much vexed, Abū 'l Fazl's death produced one good result. I could now without further annoyance go to my father, and his bad opinion of me gradually wore away."

At another place in his "Memoirs" when alluding to the murder, he says as if an afterthought had occurred to him, that he ordered Bir Singh to kill Abū 'l Fazl because "he had been the enemy of the Prophet."

When the news of Abū l Fazl's death reached court no one had the courage to break it to the emperor. According to an old custom observed by Timur's descendants the death of a prince was not in plain words mentioned to the reigning emperor but the prince's valil presented himself before the throne with a blue handkerchief round his wrist and as no one else would come forward to inform Akbar of the death of his friend Abū l Fazl's vakil presented himself with a blue handkerchief before the throne. Akbar bewailed Abū l Fazl's death more than that of his son for several days he would see no one and after inquiring into the circumstances he exclaimed "If Salim wished to be emperor he might have killed me and spared Abū l Fazl" and then recited the following verse

سبح ما ارشون بعد حوسى ما آمدد را شسان يك نوسى نى سرو با آمدد
 My Shaykh in his zeal hastened to meet me
 He wished to kiss my feet and give up his life

Akbar in order to punish Bir Singh sent a detachment under Patr Das and Raj Singh¹ to Uḍcha. They defeated the Bundela chief in several engagements drove him from Blinder and shut him up in a trench. When the siege had progressed and a breach was made in the wall Bir Singh escaped by one of Raj Singh's trenches and withdrew to the jungles closely pursued by Patr Das. As it seemed hopeless to catch him Akbar called Patr Das to Court but ordered the officers stationed about Uḍcha to kill the rebel wherever he showed himself. In the beginning of the last year of Akbar's reign Bir Singh was once surprised by Raja Raj Singh who cut down a good number of his followers. Bir Singh himself was wounded and had a narrow escape. Patr Das's death which not long afterwards took place relieved Bir Singh of his fears. He boldly presented himself at Jahangir's Court and received Uḍcha and a command of three thousand horse as his reward. It has often been asserted says "he author of the Ma'asir" "I maru that Abu l Fazl was an infidel and some go still further and call him worshipper or a free thinker and others pass a juster sentence, I say that he was a pantheist and that like other Sufis he claimed for himself a position above the law of the Prophet. There is no doubt that he was a man of lofty character² and desired to live in peace with all men. He never said anything improper Abuse, stoppages of wages, fines, absence on the part of his servants, did not exist in his household If he appointed a man, whom he afterwards found to be useless, he did not remove him, but kept him on as long as he could, for he used to say that, if he dismissed him, people would accuse him of want of penetration in having appointed an unsuitable agent On the day when the sun entered Aries, he inspected his whole household and took stock, keeping the inventory with himself, and burning last year's books He also gave his whole wardrobe to his servants, with the exception of his trousers, which were burnt in his presence

¹ pages 523 and 509

² I may remark here that Abū l Fazl never accepted a title

"He had an extraordinary appetite It is said, that exclusive of water and fuel, he consumed daily twenty two sers of food His son 'Abd^u r-Rahmān used to sit at table as *safarchī*¹ (head butler); the superintendent of the kitchen, who was a Muhammadan, was also in attendance and both watched to see whether Abū 'l Fazl would eat twice of one and the same dish If he did, the dish was sent up again the next day If anything appeared tasteless, Abū 'l Fazl gave it to his son to taste, and he to the superintendent, but no word was said about it When Abū 'l Fazl was in the Dakhīn, his table luxury exceeded all belief In an immense tent (chihilrāwafī) one thousand rich dishes were daily served up and distributed among the Amīrs, and near it another large tent was pitched for all comers to dine, whether rich or poor, and khuchrī was cooked all day and was served out to any one that applied for it"

"As a writer, Abū 'l Fazl stands unrivalled His style is grand and is free from the technicalities and flimsy prettiness of other Munshīs², and the force of his words, the structure of his sentences, the suitability of his compounds, and the elegance of his periods, are such that it would be difficult for any one to imitate them"

It is almost useless to add to this encomium bestowed on Abū 'l Fazl's style 'Abd^u 'llāh, King of Bukhārā, said that he was more afraid of Abū 'l Fazl's pen than of Akbar's arrow Everywhere in India he is known as "the great Munshī" His letters are studied in all Madrasas, and though a beginner may find them difficult and perplexing, they are perfect models But a great familiarity, not only with the Persian language, but also with Abū 'l Fazl's style, is required to make the reading of any of his works a pleasure His composition stands unique, and though everywhere studied, he cannot be, and has not been, imitated The writers

[¹ safra-chī—P]

² This is also the opinion of the author of the Hast Iqlīm

after him write in the style of the Pa-lish ih nam, the Alimara Sikandar or in the still more turgid manner of the ʿAlim nam, the Puqʿat Bedil and other standard works on Inshu.

A praiseworthy feature of Abu l Fazl's works lies in the purity of their contents. Those who are acquainted with Western literature will know what this means. I have come across no passage where woman is lightly spoken of or where immorality is passed over with indifference. Of his love of truth and the nobility of his sentiments I have spoken in the Preface.

Abu l Fazl's influence on his age was immense. It may be that he and Fayzi led Akbar's mind away from Islam and the Prophet—this charge is brought against them by every Muhammadar writer. But Abu l Fazl also led his sovereign to a true appreciation of his duties and from the moment that he entered Court the problem of toleration was the ruling over mixed races which Islam in but few other countries had to solve was carefully considered and the policy of toleration was the result. If Alfar felt the necessity of this new law Abu l Fazl enunciated it and fought for it with his pen and if the Khan Khanans gained the victory the new policy reconciled the people to the foreign rule and whilst Akbar's apostacy from Islam is all but forgotten no emperor of the Mughul dynasty has come nearer to the ideal of a father of the people than he. The reversion on the other hand in later times to the policy of religious intolerance whilst it has surrounded in the eyes of the Moslems the memory of Aurangzib with the halo of sanctity and still inclines the pious to utter a rahim Allah (May God have mercy on him) when his name is mentioned was also the beginning of the breaking up of the empire.

Having elsewhere given numerous extracts from Badaoni to show that Akbar's courtiers ascribed his apostacy from Islam to Fayzi and Abu l Fazl I need not quote other works and will merely allude to a couplet by *ʿUrfi*² from one of his Odes in which he praises the Prophet—

دست عسـمرا آسب احوال ده ساگان حسـمياں مرسـمـه نا ان سے كاد
 نادرست سول همرا دد براد سبک ناسـمـميك اسـايدن بربك چاد

O Prophet protect the Joseph of my soul (i.e. my soul) from the harm of the brothers for they are ungenerous and envious and deceive me like evil sprites and let me wolf like to the well (of unbelief)

¹ Let the reader consult Gladwin's rendering of Abu l Fazl's introduction to the fourth book of the ʿAlim nam (Lahore ʿAlim nam pp. 85-91). The passage is an Islamite ² F ʿUrfi vid. p. 639. The metre of the couplet is Long Ramal.

The commentators unanimously explain this passage as an allusion to the brothers Fayzī and Abū 'l Fazl. I may also cite the Tārīkh of Abū 'l Fazl's death, which the Khān Ṣāḡam Mirzā Koka is said to have made —

تجہ اسرار سے اللہ سر نامی برید

The wonderful sword of God's prophet cut off the head of the rebel.¹ But Abū 'l Fazl appeared to him in a dream and said, "The date of my death lies in the words دمد ابو المل, "The slave Abū 'l Fazl' — which likewise gives A H 1011

Abū 'l Fazl's works are the following —

(1) The Albarnāma with the Ā'in Ṣ Alkbarī, its third volume. The Ā'in Ṣ Alkbarī was completed in the 42nd year of Akbar's reign, only a slight addition to it was made in the 43rd year on account of the conquest of Barīr (A D 1596-7). The contents of the Albarnāma have been detailed in the Preface. The second volume contains an account of the first forty six years of Akbar's reign.² There exists a continuation up to the end of Akbar's reign by ṢInāyat 'llāh Muhibb ṢAlī. Thus at least the continuator is cited in two MSS that I have seen. Elphinstone says that the name of the continuator is Muhammad Salia, which seems to be a corruption of Muhammad Salih.

(2) The Maktūbāt Ṣ Ā'īnāmī, also called Inshā'iyi Abū 'l Fazl. This book contains letters written by Abū 'l Fazl to kings and chiefs. Among them are the interesting letters written to the Portuguese priests, and to ṢAlī dū 'llāh of Bukhara, in reply to his question whether Akbar had renounced Islam. Besides there are prefaces and reviews, a valuable essay on the progress of the art of writing portions of which are given in the Ā'in, etc. The collection was made after Abū 'l Fazl's death by ṢAbdū 's Ṣamad, son of Afzal Muhammad, who says that he was a son of Abū 'l Fazl's sister and also his son-in-law. The book, as above remarked, is frequently read in Madrasas, and there exist many lithographed editions. In all of them, the contents constitute three books, but Amīr Haydar Husaynī of Bilgram says in the preface to his Sawānīh Ṣ *Alkbarī*³ that he had a collection of four books, remarking at the same time that MSS of the fourth are very rare. It looks, indeed, as if Amr Haydar's copy was unique.

¹ The sword of God's prophet cut off the head of the rebel.

(3) The 'Ayār Dānīsh,'¹ which is mentioned on p. 112.

Besides, I have seen in different books that Abū 'l Fazl also wrote a Risālayi Munājāt, or "Treatise of Prayers", a Jāmi' 'l luḡhāt, a lexicographical work, and a Koshkol. The last word means a "beggar's cup", or rather the small basket or bowl in which beggars in the East collect rice, dates, etc., given as alms, and hence the term is often applied to collections of anecdotes or short stories. But I have seen no copies of these works. It was also mentioned above that Abū 'l Fazl presented, on his introduction at Court, two commentaries, of which no MSS seem to exist at present. Nor need I again refer to the part which he took in the translations from Sanskrit and the compilation of the Tārīkh-i Alfī.

The Durā' 'l Manshūr, a modern Tazkira by Muḥammad 'Askarī Husaynī of Bilgram, selects the following inscription written by Abū 'l Fazl for a temple in Kashmir² as a specimen both of Abū 'l Fazl's writing and of his religious belief. It is certainly very characteristic, and is easily recognized as Abū 'l Fazl's composition.

الهی مہر جانہ کہ می بگرم جناب تو اند و بہر بان کہ میں شعوم
گوئی تو

مگر اسلام در رخت دہان و جدہ لا شریک لہ گویاں
اگر مسجدت نام تو بعرۂ قدوس سرمد و اگر کلساست شوق تو
بادوس می حسابد

ی نہ شمت رادل عشاق نشانہ حلی سو مشعول و و عایب ارمانہ
کہ معکت دیرم و گہ ساکن مسجد یعنی کہ برا مظلم جانہ مجاہدہ
کہ معکت دیرم و گہ ساکن مسجد یعنی کہ برا می ظلم جانہ مجاہدہ
اگر جان برا کفر اسلام کارے مست اس ہر دو را در دہدہ اسلم تو ناری نہ
کفر کفر را و دی دیدار ادرہ و دی دل عطارا

¹ Last word a rare word in the vocabulary of Urdu. D. Ash.

این خانه بست ایلاف قلوب • و حداث هندوسان و حوسا • محمود برسان
عرصه کشمیر تعمیر یافه *

نفرمان حدیو تحت و اسر چراغ آفرینش شاه انگر
صام اعتدال هفت معدن کمال او • چراغ چار تعمیر
هر که نظر صدق رسد احنه این خانه را حرارت سازد ناید که محض
معدن خون را سداید چه اگر نظر بر دل است تا همه ساحسی است و اگر چشم بر آب و گل است همه بر انداحسی *
حدایدنا چیدان کار دادی • مدار کار بر ست سادی
توتی بر نارگاه ست آگاد • نه پیش شاه داری بست شاه

O God, in every temple I see people that seek Thee, and in every language I hear spoken people praise Thee!

Polytheism and Islām feel after Thee,
Each religion says "Thou art one, without equal"

If it be a mosque, people murmur the holy prayer, and if it be a Christian Church, people ring the bell from love to Thee Sometimes I frequent the Christian cloister, and sometimes the mosque,

But it is Thou whom I search from temple to temple

Thy elect have no dealings with either heresy or orthodoxy, for neither of them stands behind the screen of Thy truth

Heresy to the heretic, and religion to the orthodox,

But the dust of the rose petal¹ belongs to the heart of the perfume seller

This temple was erected for the purpose of binding together the hearts of the Unitarians in Hindustān and especially those of His worshippers that live in the province of Kashmir,

By order of the Lord of the throne and the crown, the lamp of creation, Shāh Akbar,

In whom the seven minerals find uniformity, in whom the four elements attain perfect mixture²

He who from insincere motives destroys this temple, should first destroy his own place of worship, for if we follow the dictates of the heart, we must bear up with all men, but if we look to the external, we find everything proper to be destroyed

¹ This line is Sūfatic. The longing of the heart after God is compared to the perfume which rises from the rose petals. The perfume seller i.e. the Unitarian is truly religious, and is equally removed from heresy and orthodoxy

² I.e. Akbar is the insān-i-kāmil or perfect man

O God, Thou art just and judgest an action by the motive,

Thou knowest whether a motive is sublime, and tellest the king what motives a king should have

I have a few notes on Abū 'l-Faẓl's family, which may form the conclusion of this biographical noticed. The A'in gives the following list of Shaykh Mubārak's sons

1 Shaykh Abū 'l-Fayz, better known under his poetical name of Fayzī. He was born in A H 954 (A D 1547) and seems to have died childless

2 Shaykh Abū l-Faẓl, born 14th January, 1551, murdered 12th August, 1602

3 Shaykh Abū 'l-Barakāt, born 17th Shawwāl, 960 (1552) "Though he has not reached a high degree of learning, he knows much, is a practical man, and well versed in fencing. He is good natured and fond of dervishes." He served under Abū 'l-Faẓl in Khandesh

4 Shaykh Abū 'l-Khayr, born 22nd Jumādī I, 967 "He is a well informed young man, of a regulated mind." He, too, must have entered the Imperial service, for he is mentioned in the Albarnāma as having been sent by the emperor to the Dakhin to fetch Prince Danvāl

5 Shaykh Abū 'l-Makārim, born 23rd Shawwāl, 976. He was wild at first, but guided by his father he learned a good deal. He also studied under Shah Abū 'l-Faṭh Shirāzī

The above five sons were all by the same mother, who, as remarked above, died in 998

6 Shaykh Abū Turāb, born 23rd Zil Hijjah, 988 "Though his mother is another one, he is admitted at Court, and is engaged in self improvement."

Besides the above, Abū 'l-Faẓl mentions two posthumous sons by gummā, or concubines, viz Shaykh Abū 'l-Hamid, born 3rd Rabī II, 1002, and Shaykh Abū Rashid, born 1st Jumādī I, 1002. "They resemble their father."

Of Mubārak's daughters, I find four mentioned in the histories —

1 One married to Khudawand Khan Dakhinī, vide p 490. Badāoni calls her husband a Rafizī, i.e. a Shiah, and says he died in Karī in Gujarāt

2 One married to Husam^u 'd Dīn, vide p 488

3 One married to a son of Rija 'Alī Khan of Khandesh. Their son *Safdar Khan*¹ was made, in the 45th year of Akbar's reign, a commander of one thousand

¹ The Lakhnau edition of the Albarnāma (III 830) calls him Sundar Khān

4 Lādī Begam, married to Islām Khān, vide p 552, note 1 Mr T W. Beale of Agra, the learned author of the Miftāh' t-tawārīkh, informs me that Lādī Begam died in 1017, or five years before the death of her husband Her mausoleum, called the "Rawzayī Lādī Begam" is about two miles to the east of Akbar's mausoleum at Sikandra, near Āgra The interior was built of marble, and the whole was surrounded by a wall of red Faṭhpūr sandstone It was completed in 1004 In 1813, Mr Beale saw in the Rawza several tombs without inscriptions, and a few years ago the place was sold by government to a wealthy Hindū The new owner dug up the marble stones, sold them, and destroyed the tombs, so that of the old Rawza nothing exists nowadays but the surrounding wall Mr Beale thinks that the bodies of Shaykh Mubārak, Fayzī, and Abū 'l Fazl were likewise buried there, because over the entrance the following inscription in Ṭughrā characters may still be seen —

بِسْمِ اللَّهِ الرَّحْمَنِ الرَّحِيمِ وَهُوَ نُفَعِي * هَذِهِ الرُّومَةُ لِلْعَالَمِ الرَّسَائِي وَالْعَارِفِ
 الصِّدْقَانِي حَامِعِ الْعِلْمِ شَيْخِ مَسَارِكِ اللَّهِ قَدَسَ سِرُّهُ قَدْ وَفَّقَ سَانَهُ سَيِّدِ الْعِلْمِ
 شَيْخِ أَبِوَالْعَتَلِ سَلَّمَ اللَّهُ تَعَالَى فِي ظِلِّ دَوْلَةِ الْمَلِكِ الْعَادِلِ يُطَلِّعُ الْمُسَجِّدِ وَ
 الْأَسَالِ وَالْكَرَمِ حَلَالِ الدُّنْيَا وَالْآخِرَةِ الْإِكْرَامِ الْإِسْلَامِ عَارِي حَلَدِ اللَّهِ تَعَالَى طَلِّعُ
 سَلْطَنَهُ بِأَهْمَامِ حَصْرَتِ أُنْبِي السَّرَكَاتِ فِي سَنَةِ أَرْبَعِ وَالْفِ ۱۱

In the name of God the merciful, the clement, in whom I trust ! This mausoleum was erected for the divine scholar, the sage of the eternal, the gatherer of knowledge Shaykh Mubarakullāh (may his secret be sanctified !), in filial piety by the ocean of sciences, Shaykh Abū 'l Fazl —may God Almighty preserve him !—in the shadow of the majesty of the just king, whom power, auspiciousness, and generosity follow, Jalaluddunvā waddīn Akbar, Padīshāh i Ghazī—may God Almighty perpetuate the foundations of his kingdom !—under the superintendence of Abū 'l Barakat, in 1004 (A D 1595-96)

Thus it will appear that the Rawza was built in the year in which Fayzī died. Shaykh Mubārak, as mentioned above, died in A D 1593 It seems, however, as if Shaykh Mubarak and Fayzī had been buried at a place opposite to Āgra, on the left bank of the Jamuna, where he first settled in 1551, for Abū 'l Faṭl says in his description of Āgra in the Aḥḥāḥ "On the other side of the river is the Chā- Bāgh Villa, built by Firdaws Makan (the emperor Babar) There the author was born, and there are resting places of his father and his elder brother Shaykh 'Alī¹ 'd Dīn Majzūb and Mir Rafī' d dīn Safawī and other worthies are also buried there " We have no information regarding a removal of the bodies to the other side of the Jamuna, though Abū 'l Fazl's inscription no doubt shows that such a removal was intended It is a pity, however, that the Rawza was sold and destroyed

¹ My text edition p 441 Vide also p 639 Keene's Agra Guide p 47 and regarding Lādī Begam p 45 Lādī means in Hindustani 'a pet

Abū 'l Fazl's son is the well known

SHAYKH 'ABD' R RAHMĀN AFZAL KHAN

He was born on the 12th Sha'bān, 979, and received from his grandfather the Sunnī name of 'Abd' r Rahmān In the 35th year of Akbar's reign, when twenty years of age, Akbar married him to the daughter of Sa'ādat Yār Koka's brother By her 'Abd' r Rahmān had a son, to whom Akbar gave the name of Bīshotan¹

When Abū 'l Fazl was a command of the army in the Dakhīn, 'Abd' r Rahmān was, what the Persians call, the tir i rū yi tarlash i ā, "the arrow at hand at the top of the quiver", ever ready to perform duties from which others shrank, and wisely and courageously settling matters of importance He especially distinguished himself in Talingāna When Mubk 'Ambar, in the 46th year, had caught 'Alī Mardā Bahadur (p 556) and had taken possession of the country, Abū 'l Fazl dispatched 'Abd' r Rahman and Sher Khwaja (p 510) to oppose the enemy They crossed the Gogawarī near Nander, and defeated 'Ambar at the Mānjarā

Jahāngir did not transfer to the son the hatred which he had felt for the father, made him a commander of two thousand horse, gave him the title of Afzal Khān, and appointed him in the third year of his reign, governor of Bihar, vice Islam Khān (the husband of Abū 'l Fazl's sister) who was sent to Bengal 'Abd' r Rahman also received Gorākhpūr as jāgīr As governor of Bihār, he had his headquarters at Patna Once during his absence from Patna a dervish of the name of Qutb' d dīn appeared in the district of Bhojpūr, which belonged to the then very troublesome Ujjainiya Rajas (p 577, note) and gave out that he was Prince Khusrā, whom his unsuccessful rebellion and imprisonment by Jahāngir had made the favourite of the people Collecting a large number of men, he marched on Patna occupied the fort which Shaykh Banārasī and Ghīyas 'Abd' r Rahman's officers, cowardly gave up, and plundered Afzal Khān's property and the Imperial treasury 'Abd' r Rahmān returned from Gorākhpur as soon as he heard of the rebellion. The pretender fortified Patnā and drew up his army at the Pun Pun River. ʿAbdū 'r Rahman charged at once, and after a short fight dispersed the enemy. Qutb now retreated to the fort, followed by ʿAbdū 'r Rahmān, who succeeded in capturing him. He executed the man at once, and sent his head to Court, together with the two cowardly officers. Jahāngir, who was always minute in his punishments, had their heads shaved and women's veils put over the faces, they were then tied to donkeys, with their heads to the tails, and paraded through the towns (tashhīr) as a warning to others.

¹ Which name was borne by the brother of Isfandiyār who is so often mentioned in Firdawsī's Shāhnāma

Not long after this affair, ʿAbdū 'r Rahmān fell ill and went to Court, where he was well received. He lingered for a time, and died of an abscess, in the 8th year of Jahāngir's reign (A. H. 1022) or eleven years after his father's murder.

BISHOTAN, SON OF ʿABDŪ 'R RAHMĀN SON OF SHAYKH ABŪ 'L-FAZL

He was born on the 3rd Zi Qaʿda, 999. In the 14th year of Jahāngir's reign, he was a commander of seven hundred, with three hundred horse. In the 10th year of Shah Jahān's reign, he is mentioned as a commander of five hundred horse, which rank he held when he died in the 11th year of the same reign.

BOOK FIRST.

THE IMPERIAL HOUSEHOLD.

*A*in 1*

THE HOUSEHOLD

He is a man of high understanding and noble aspirations who, without the help of others recognizes a ray of the Divine power in the smallest things of the world, who shapes his inward and outward character accordingly, and shows due respect to himself and to others. He who does not possess these qualifications, ought not to engage in the struggle of the world, but observe a peaceable conduct. If the former be given to retirement, he will cultivate noble virtues, and if his position be a dependent one, he will put his whole heart in the management of his affairs, and lead a life free from distressing cares.

True greatness, in spiritual and in worldly matters, does not shrink from the minutiae of business, but regards their performance as an act of Divine worship¹

If he cannot perform everything himself, he ought to select, guided by insight and practical wisdom, one or two men of sagacity and understanding of liberal views in religious matters, possessing diligence and a knowledge of the human heart, and be guided by their advice.

The wise esteem him not a king who confines his attention to great matters only, although some impartial judges excuse a king that does so, because avaricious sycophants who endeavour by cunning to obtain the position of the virtuous, often remind him of the difference of ranks, and succeed in lulling asleep such kings as are fond of external greatness, their only object being to make a trade of the revenues of the country, and to promote their own interests. But good princes make no difference between great and small matters, they take, with the assistance of God, the burden of this world and the responsibility of the world to come, on the shoulder of resolution, and are yet free and independent, as is the case with the king of our time. In his wisdom, he makes himself acquainted with the successful working of every department, which, although former monarchs

¹ A phrase which Akbar often used.

BOOK FIRST
THE IMPERIAL HOUSEHOLD

ABŪ 'L-FAZL'S PREFACE

ALLAH^u AKBAR

O Lord whose secrets are for ever veiled
And whose perfection knows not a beginning
End and beginning both are lost in Thee
No trace of them is found in Thy eternal realm
My words are lame, my tongue a stony tract,
Slow wings my foot and wide is the expanse
Confused are my thoughts, but this is Thy best praise
In ecstasy alone I see Thee face to face!

It is proper for a man of true knowledge to praise God not only in words, but also in deeds and to endeavour to obtain everlasting happiness, by putting the window of his heart opposite the slit of his pen, and describing some of the wondrous works of the Creator. Perhaps the lustre of royalty may shine upon him, and its light enable him to gather a few drops from the ocean, and a few atoms from the endless field of God's works. He will thus obtain everlasting felicity and render fertile the dreary expanse of words and deeds.

I, Abū 'l Fazl, son of Mubāarak, return thanksgiving to God by singing the praises of royalty, and by stringing its kingly pearls upon the thread of description, but it is not my intention to make mankind, for the first time, acquainted with the glorious deeds and excellent virtues of that remarkable man,¹ who clothes our wonderful world in new colours, and is an ornament to God's noble creation. It would be absurd on my part to speak about that which is known, I should make myself the butt of the learned. It is only my personal knowledge of him, a priceless jewel, which I send to the market place of the world, and my heart feels proud of being engaged in such an undertaking. But it could not have been from self laudation that I have taken upon myself to carry out so great a task—a work which even heavenly beings would find beset with difficulties, for such a motive would expose my inability and shortsightedness. My sole object in writing this work was, first, to impart to all that take an interest in this auspicious century, a knowledge of the wisdom, magnanimity, and energy of him who understands the minutest indications of all things, created and divine, striding as he does over the field of knowledge, and, secondly to leave future generations a noble legacy. The payment of a debt of gratitude is an ornament of life and a provision for man's last journey. There may be some in this world of ambitious strife, where natures are so different, desires so numerous, equity so rare, and guidance so scarce, who, by making use of this source of wisdom, will escape from the perplexities of the endless chaos of knowledge and deeds. It is with this aim that I describe some of the regulations of the great King, thus leaving for far and near, a standard work of wisdom. In doing so, I have, of course, to speak of the exalted position of a king, and also to describe the condition of those who are assistants in this great office.

No dignity is higher in the eyes of God than royalty, and those who are wise, drink from its auspicious fountain. A sufficient proof of this, for those who require one, is the fact that royalty is a remedy for the spirit of rebellion, and the reason why subjects obey. Even the meaning of the word Pādishāh shows this, for pād signifies stability and possession, and shāh means origin, lord. A king is, therefore, the origin of stability and possession. If royalty did not exist, the storm of strife would never subside, nor selfish ambition disappear. Mankind, being under the burden of lawlessness and lust, would sink into the pit of destruction, the world, this great market place, would lose its prosperity, and the whole earth become a barren waste. But by the light of imperial justice, some follow with cheerfulness the road of obedience whilst others abstain from violence through fear of punishment, and out of necessity make choice of the path of rectitude. Shāh is also a name given to one who surpasses his fellows, as you may see from words like shāh suwār, shāh rah, it is also a term applied to a bridegroom—the world as the bride, betrothes herself to the King and becomes his worshipper.

Silly and shortsighted men cannot distinguish a true king from a selfish ruler. Nor is this remarkable, as both have in common a large treasury, a numerous army, clever servants, obedient subjects, an abundance of wise men, a multitude of skilful workmen and a superfluous of means of enjoyment. But men of deeper insight remark a difference. In the case of the former, the things just now enumerated are lasting, but in that of the latter, of short duration. The former does not attach himself to these things, as his object is to remove oppression and provide for everything which is good. Security, health, chastity, justice, polite manners, faithfulness, truth, an increase of sincerity, etc., are the result. The latter is kept in bonds by the external forms of royal power, by vanity, the slavishness of men, and the desire of enjoyment, hence, everywhere there is insecurity, unsettledness, strife, oppression, faithlessness, robbery

Royalty is a light emanating from God, and a ray from the sun, the illuminator of the universe,¹ the argument of the book of perfection, the receptacle of all virtues. Modern language calls this light farr ʿazīmī (the divine light), and the tongue of antiquity called it kayān khura (the sublime halo). It is communicated by God to kings without the intermediate assistance of any one, and men, in the presence of it, bend the forehead of praise towards the ground of submission. Again, many excellent qualities flow from the possession of this light. 1 A paternal love towards the subjects. Thousands find rest in the love of the King, and sectarian differences do not raise the dust of strife. In his wisdom, the King will understand the spirit of the age, and shape his plans accordingly. 2 A large heart. The sight of anything disagreeable does not unsettle him, nor is want of discrimination for him a source of disappointment. His courage steps in. His divine firmness gives him the power of requital, nor does the high position of an offender interfere with it. The wishes of great and small are attended to, and their claims meet with no delay at his hands. 3 A daily increasing trust in God. When he performs an action, he considers God as the real doer of it (and himself as the medium), so that a conflict of motives can produce no disturbance. 4 Prayer and devotion. The success of his plans will not lead him to neglect, nor will adversity cause him to forget God, and madly trust in man. He puts the reins of desire into the hands of reason, in the wide field of his desires he does not permit himself to be trodden down by restlessness, nor will he waste his precious time in seeking after that which is improper. He makes wrath, the tyrant, pay homage to wisdom, so that blind rage may not get the upper hand, and inconsiderateness overstep the proper limits. He sits on the eminence of propriety, so that those who have gone astray have a way left to return without exposing their bad deeds to the public gaze. When he sits in judgment, the petitioner seems to be the judge, and he himself, on account of his mildness, the sutor for justice. He does not permit petitioners to be delayed on the path of hope, he endeavours to promote the happiness of the creatures in obedience to the will of the Creator, and never seeks to please the people in contradiction to reason. He is for ever searching after those who speak the truth, and is not displeas'd with words that seem bitter, but are in reality sweet. He considers the nature of the words and the rank of the speaker. He is not content with not committing violence, but he must see that no injustice is done within his realm.

¹ Akbar worshipped the sun as the visible representative of God and the immediate source of life. Regarding his form of worship vide below.

He is continually attentive to the health of the body politic, and applies remedies to the several diseases thereof. And in the same manner that the equilibrium of the animal constitution depends upon an equal mixture of the elements,¹ so also does the political constitution become well tempered by a proper division of ranks, and by means of the warmth of the ray of unanimity and concord, a multitude of people become fused into one body.

The people of the world may be divided into four classes²—
 1 Warriors, who in the political body have the nature of fire. Their flames, directed by understanding, consume the straw and rubbish of rebellion and strife, but kindle also the lamp of rest in this world of disturbances. 2 Artificers and merchants, who hold the place of air. From their labours and travels, God's gifts become universal, and the breeze of contentment nourishes the rose tree of life. 3 The learned, such as the philosopher, the physician, the arithmetician, the geometrician, the astronomer, who resemble water. From their pen and their wisdom, a river rises in the drought of the world, and the garden of the creation receives from their irrigating powers a peculiar freshness. 4 Husbandmen and labourers, who may be compared to earth. By their exertions, the staple of life is brought to perfection and strength and happiness flow from their work.

It is therefore obligatory for a king to put each of these in its proper place, and by uniting personal ability with due respect for others, to cause the world to flourish.

And as the grand political body maintains its equilibrium by the above four ranks of men, so does royalty receive its final tint from a similar fourfold division.

1 The nobles of the state, who in reliance on their position lead every thing to a happy issue. Illuminating the battle field with the halo of devotedness, they make no account of their lives. These fortunate

¹ Thus according to the medical theories of the middle ages.

² This passage resembles one in Firdausi's Shahnama in the chapter entitled dar dāstān-i Jamahid vide also Vuller's Persian Dictionary ii 756 s. kāfān. It is also found in the Akhlāq-i Muhsinī, chapter xv dar adl in the Akhlāq-i Jalālī and the Akhlāq-i Nāsrī, the oldest of the three *Akhlāq*s mentioned.

courtiers resemble fire, being ardent in devotion, and consuming in dealing with foes. At the head of this class is the Vakil, who from his having attained by his wisdom the four degrees of perfection,¹ is the emperor's lieutenant in all matters connected with the realm and the household. He graces the Council by his wisdom, and settles with penetration the great affairs of the realm. Promotion and degradation, appointment and dismissal, depend on his insight. It requires therefore an experienced man who possesses wisdom, nobility of mind, affability, firmness, magnanimity, a man able to be at peace with any one, who is frank, single minded towards relations and strangers, impartial to friends and enemies, who weighs his words, is skilful in business, well bred, esteemed, known to be trustworthy, sharp and farsighted, acquainted with the ceremonies of the court, cognizant of the State secrets, prompt in transacting business, unaffected by the multiplicity of his duties. He should consider it his duty to promote the wishes of others, and base his actions on a due regard to the different ranks of men, treating even his inferiors with respect, from the desire of attaching to himself the hearts of all. He takes care not to commit improprieties in conversation, and guards himself from bad actions. Although the financial offices are not under his immediate superintendence, yet he received the returns from the heads of all financial offices, and wisely keeps abstracts of their returns.

The Mir māl,² the Keeper of the seal, the Mir bakhshī,³ the Bār begī,⁴ the Qurbegī,⁵ the Mir tozak,⁶ the Mir bahri,⁷ the Mir barr,⁸ the Mir Manzil,⁹ the Khwānsālār,¹⁰ the Munshī,¹¹ the Qūsh begī,¹² the Akhṭa begī,¹³ belong to this class. Every one of them ought to be sufficiently acquainted with the work of the others.

¹ Akbar said that perfect devotedness consisted in the way

² aymānālār of the Court
³ An officer who presents people at Court, their petitions, etc. He is also called Mir Sār

⁴

⁵ Akbar's court was frequently travelling pigeons) [Head of the Mewa.—P]

2 The assistants of victory, the collectors and those entrusted with income and expenditure, who in the administration resemble wind, at times a heart-rejoicing breeze, at other times a hot, pestilential blast. The head of this division is the Vizier, also called Diwān. He is the lieutenant of the Emperor in financial matters, superintends the imperial treasuries, and checks all accounts. He is the banker of the cash of the revenue, the cultivator of the wilderness of the world. He must be a member of the Divine Faith, a skilful arithmetician, free from avarice, circumspect, warm hearted, abstinent, active in business, pleasing in his style, clear in his writings, truthful, a man of integrity, condescending, zealous in his work. He is in reality a book keeper. He explains all matters which appear too intricate for the *Mustawfi*¹, and whatever is beyond his own ability he refers to the Vakil. The Mustawfi, the Sāhib 1 Tawj,² the Awārja Nawis,³ the Mir Samān,⁴ the Nāzir 1 Buyūtāt,⁵ the Diwān 1 Buyūtāt,⁶ the Mushrif,⁷ of the Treasury, the Waqi'a Nawis,⁸ the *'Āmil*⁹ of the domains, are under his orders, and act by the force of his wisdom.

Some princes consider the office of the Vizier as a part of that of the Vakil, and are anxious to find in their realm a man who possesses the excellent qualities of these two pillars of the edifice of the State. But as they are not always able to find a person qualified for the office of a Vakil, they make choice of a man who has some of his qualities, and appoint him as Mushrif-1 Diwān, which office is higher in rank than that of the Diwān, but lower than that of the Vakil.

3 The companions of the king, who are the ornaments of the court by the light of their wisdom, the ray of their sharp-sightedness, their knowledge of the times, their intimate acquaintance with human nature, their frankness and polite address. Through the excellence of their religious faith and good will, thousands open in the market place of the world the stores of virtue. Wisely fettering ambition on the battle-field of the world, they extinguish the sparks of wrath by the rain of their

¹ Deputy Diwān

² The Accountant of the Army

³ The Accountant of the daily expenditure at Court

⁴ The officer in charge of the Court furniture stores etc

⁵ Superintendent of the Imperial workshops

⁶ The Accountant of the Imperial workshops

⁷ Clerk.

⁸ The Recorder

⁹ Collector

wisdom, whence they resemble water in the affairs of the body political. When they are of a mild temperament, they remove the dust of affliction from the hearts of men, and bestow freshness upon the meadow of the nation, but if they depart from moderation, they inundate the world with a deluge of calamity, so that numbers are driven by the flood of misfortunes into the current of utter extinction.

At the head of this class stands the philosopher, who with the assistance of his wisdom and example purifies the morals of the nation, and girds himself with the noble aim of putting the welfare of mankind upon a sound basis. The Şadr,¹ the Mir 'Adl, the Qazi,² the physician, the astronomer, the poet, the soothsayer belong to this class.

4 The servants who at court perform the duties about the king. They occupy in the system of the State the position of earth. As such, they lie on the high road of submission, and in dust before the majesty of the king. If free from chaff and dross, they are like an elixir for the body, otherwise they are dust and dirt upon the face of success. The table servant, the armour bearer, the servants in charge of the sharbat and the water, the servant in charge of the mattresses and the wardrobe, belong to this class.

If the king be waited on by servants to whom good fortune has given excellent qualities there arises sometimes a harmony, which is like a nosegay from the flower bed of auspiciousness.

Just as the welfare of the whole world depends upon the successful working of the above mentioned four classes, as settled by kings, so does the body politic depend upon the proper formation of the latter four divisions.

The sages of antiquity mention the following four persons as the chief supports of the State — 1 An upright collector, who protects the husbandman, watches over the subjects, develops the country, and improves the revenues. 2 A conscientious commander of the army, active and strict. 3 A chief justice, free from avarice and selfishness, who sits on the eminence of circumspection and insight, and obtains his ends by putting various questions without exclusively relying on witnesses and oaths. 4 An intelligencer, who transmits the events of the time without addition or diminution, always keeping to the thread of truth and penetration.

¹ Also called Sadr i Jahān the Chief Justice and Administrator General of the empire

² The Qāzī hears the case the Mir 'Adl passes the sentence

It is moreover incumbent on a just king to make himself acquainted with the characters of the following five kinds¹ of men of whom the world is composed, and act accordingly 1 The most commendable person is the sagacious man who prudently does that which is proper and absolutely necessary The fountain of his virtues does not only run along his channel, but renders verdant the fields of other men Such a one is the fittest person for a king to consult in State affairs After him comes, secondly, the man of good intentions The river of his virtues does not flow over its bed, and does not therefore become an irrigating source for others Although it may be proper to show him kindness and respect, yet he does not merit so high a degree of confidence Inferior to him is, thirdly, the simple man, who does not wear the badge of excellence upon the sleeve of his action, yet keeps the hem of his garment free from the dust of wicked deeds He does not deserve any distinction, but ought to be allowed to live at his ease Worse than he is, fourthly, the inconsiderate man, who fills his house with furniture for his own mischief, without, however, doing harm to others Him the king should keep in the hot place of disappointment, and bring him into the road of virtue by good advice and severe reprehension The last of all is the vicious man, whose black deeds alarm others and throw, on account of their viciousness, a whole world into grief If the remedies employed in the case of men of the preceding class, do not amend him, the king should consider him as a leper, and confine him separate from mankind, and provided this harsh treatment does not awaken him from his sleep of error, he should feel the torture of grief, and be banished from his dwelling, and if this remedy produce no effect either, he should be driven out of the kingdom to wander in the wilderness of disappointment, and if even this should not improve his vicious nature, he should be deprived of the instruments of his wickedness, and lose his sight, or his hand, or his foot But the king ought not to go so far as to cut the thread of his existence, for inquiring sages consider the human form as an edifice made by God and do not permit its destruction

It is therefore necessary for just kings, to make themselves first acquainted with the rank and character of men, by the light of insight and penetration, and then to regulate business accordingly And hence it is that the sages of ancient times have said that princes who wear the

¹ The following is a free paraphrase of a passage in the Atkhar : Mukharif, Chapter XXXII, entitled dar aivudat

jewel of wisdom do not appoint every low man to their service, that they do not consider every one who has been appointed, to be deserving of daily admittance, that those who are thus favoured, are not therefore deemed worthy to sit with them on the carpet of intercourse, that those who are worthy of this station are not necessarily admitted to the pavilion of familiar address that those who have this privilege, are not therefore allowed to sit in the august assembly, that those upon whom this ray of good fortune falls, are not therefore let into their secrets, and that those who enjoy the happiness of this station, are not therefore fit for admission into the Cabinet Council

Praise be to God, the Giver of every good gift¹ The exalted monarch of our time is so endowed with these laudable dispositions, that it is no exaggeration to call him their exordium From the light of his wisdom, he discerns the worth of men and kindles the lamp of their energy, whilst ever clear to himself, and without an effort, he adorns his wisdom with the beauty of practice Who can measure, by the rules of speech, his power as a spiritual leader, and his works in the wide field of holiness², and even if it were possible to give a description of it, who would be able to hear and comprehend it? The best thing I can do is to abstain from such an attempt, and to confine myself to the description of such of his wonderful doings as illustrate the worldly side of his nature, and his greatness as a king I shall speak —

First, of his regulations concerning the household, secondly, of the regulations concerning the army, thirdly, of the regulations concerning the empire, as these three contain the whole duty of a king In doing so, I shall leave practical inquirers a present, which may seem difficult to understand but which is easy, or rather, which may seem easy, but is in reality difficult

Experienced men who are acquainted with the art of governing, and versed in the history of the past, cannot comprehend how monarchs have hitherto governed, without these wise regulations and how the garden of royalty could have been fresh and verdant, without being irrigated by this fountain of wisdom

This sublime volume then, is arranged under three heads, it enables me, in some measure, to express my feelings of gratitude for favours received

¹ Akbar as the spiritual leader of the members belonging to the Divine Faith wrought many miracles, of which some are related in the seventy seventh A'ifa of this book.

Remark by the Author.—As I had wanted men to use Hindi words, I have carefully described the consonants and vowels. Inquiries will therefore have had a tendency to reading; but I have not taken notice from mistakes in copying. Letters like aa, oo, oo, and a few more, are occasionally used from their names. Some letters I have distinguished as monophthongs, and letters aa, oo, oo, oo, &c. as diphthongs. Letters which are purely foreign, have been distinguished as such; thus the p in paal, the ch in charan, the ph in phar, the sh in shah. Names now I have added to the names of these letters, the phrase having these initials. Letters peculiar to the Hindi language I have distinguished as Hindi. The letter ya as in ya I have called ayana, and the ra, as in ra, ra, ra. The ya which I have mostly called ya will be ya, ya, the letters aa, oo, oo, and oo, when clearly monophthongs, have been merely denominated as aa, oo, &c. The nasal aa I have called aa, oo, or oo, oo, oo. The aa and oo, as in fa, oo, I have called aa, oo, oo, oo, but not pronounced. The oo and oo when monophthongs I have called oo, oo. Acronyms like oo, oo, oo, oo, have the vowels. It was not necessary to specify these vowels.

BOOK FIRST.

THE IMPERIAL HOUSEHOLD

*A*in 1*

THE HOUSEHOLD

He is a man of high understanding and noble aspirations who, without the help of others recognizes a ray of the Divine power in the smallest things of the world, who shapes his inward and outward character accordingly, and shows due respect to himself and to others. He who does not possess these qualifications ought not to engage in the struggle of the world, but observe a peaceable conduct. If the former be given to retirement, he will cultivate noble virtues, and if his position be a dependent one, he will put his whole heart in the management of his affairs, and lead a life free from distressing cares.

True greatness, in spiritual and in worldly matters, does not shrink from the minutiae of business, but regards their performance as an act of Divine worship¹

If he cannot perform everything himself, he ought to select, guided by insight, and practical wisdom one or two men of sagacity and understanding, of liberal views in religious matters, possessing diligence and a knowledge of the human heart, and be guided by their advice.

The wise esteem him not a king who confines his attention to great matters only, although some impartial judges excuse a king that does so, because avaricious sycophants who endeavour by cunning to obtain the position of the virtuous, often remind him of the difference of ranks, and succeed in lulling asleep such kings as are fond of external greatness, their only object being to make a trade of the revenues of the country, and to promote their own interests. But good princes make no difference between great and small matters, they take, with the assistance of God, the burden of this world and the responsibility of the world to come, on the shoulder of resolution, and are yet free and independent, as is the case with the king of our time. In his wisdom, he makes himself acquainted with the successful working of every department, which, although former monarchs have thought it derogatory to their greatness, is yet the first step towards the establishment of a good government. For every branch he has made proper regulations, and he sees in the performance of his duty a means of obtaining God's favour.

¹ A phrase which Akbar oft-n used.

The success of this vast undertaking depends upon two things: first, wisdom and insight, to call into existence suitable regulations; secondly, a watchful eye, to see them carried out by men of integrity and diligence.

Although many servants of the household receive their salaries on the list of the army, there was paid for the household in the thirty ninth year of the Divine era, the sum of 309,186,793 *dāms*¹. The expenses of this account, as also the revenues, are daily increasing. There are more than one hundred offices and workshops each resembling a city or rather a little kingdom, and by the unremitting attention of his Majesty, they are all conducted with regularity, and are constantly increasing their improvement being accompanied by additional care and supervision on the part of his Majesty.

Some of the regulations I shall transmit as a present, to future enquirers, and thus kindle in others the lamp of wisdom and energy.

As regards those regulations which are of a general nature and which from their subject matter belong to each of the three divisions of the work, I have put them among the regulations of the Household.

A'in 2

THE IMPERIAL TREASURIES

Every man of sense and understanding knows that the best way of worshipping God, consists in allaying the distress of the times, and in improving the condition of man. This depends, however, on the advancement of agriculture, on the order kept in the king's household, on the readiness of the champions of the empire, and the discipline of the army. All this is again connected with the exercise of proper care on the part of the monarch, his love for the people, and with an intelligent management of the revenues and the public expenditure. It is only when cared for, that the inhabitants of the towns and those of the rural districts, are able to satisfy their wants, and to enjoy prosperity. Hence it is incumbent on just kings, to care for the former, and to protect the latter class of men. If some say that to collect wealth, and to ask for more than is absolutely necessary, is looked upon as contemptible by people given to retirement and seclusion, whilst the opposite is the case with the inhabitants of the towns, who live in a dependent position, I would answer that it is after all only shortsighted men who make this assertion, for in reality both classes of men try to obtain that which they think necessary. Poor, but abstemious people take a sufficient quantity of food and raiment, so as to keep up the strength necessary for the pursuit of their enquiries, and to protect them against the influence of the weather, whilst the other class think to have just sufficient, when they fill their treasuries, gather armies, and reflect on other means of increasing their power.

¹ Or 7 729 699½ Rupees. One rupee (of Akbar) = 40 dāms. The Divine era, or Tirikh-i-Hakī is Akbar's solar era, the commencement of which falls on the 19th February, 1556, hence the thirty ninth year corresponds to A D 1595.

It was from such views, when lifting the veil and beginning to pay attention to these weighty concerns, that his Majesty entrusted his inmost secrets to the Khuāja sarā Istimād Khān,¹ a name which his Majesty had bestowed upon him as a fitting title. On account of the experience of the Khuāja, the reflections of his Majesty took a practical turn, widened by degrees, and shone at last forth in excellent regulations. An enquiry regarding the income of the different kinds of land was set on foot, and successfully concluded by the wisdom of upright and experienced men. With a comprehensiveness which knew no difference between friends and strangers, the lands which paid rents into the imperial exchequer were separated from the Jāgīr lands, and zealous and upright men were put in charge of the revenues, each over one karor of dāms. Incorruptible *bitakchīs*² were selected to assist them, and intelligent treasurers were appointed, one for each. And from kindness and care for the agricultural classes, it was commanded that the collectors should not insist upon the husbandman paying coin in full weight, but to give him a receipt for whatever species of money he might bring. Thus laudable regulation removed the rust of uncertainty from the minds of the collectors, and

¹ Istimād means trustworthiness. Khuāja sarā is the title of the . . .

real n upon death into in Istimād
title

relieved the subjects from a variety of oppressions, whilst the income became larger, and the state flourished. The fountain of the revenues having thus been purified, a zealous and honest man was selected for the general treasurership, and a dārogha and a clerk were appointed to assist him. Vigilance was established, and a standard laid down for this department.

Whenever a (provincial) treasurer had collected the sum of two lakhs of dāms, he had to send it to the Treasurer General at the Court, together with a memorandum specifying the quality of the sum.

A separate treasurer was appointed for the *peshlāsh*¹ receipts, another for receiving heirless property, another for naṣr receipts,² and another for the moneys expended in weighing the royal person,³ and for charitable donations. Proper regulations were also made for the disbursements, and honest superintendents, dāroghas and clerks were appointed. The sums required for the annual expenditure, are paid at the General Treasury to each cashkeeper of the disbursements, and correct receipts granted for them. A proper system of accounts having thus been inaugurated, the empire began to flourish. In a short time the treasuries were full, the army was augmented, and refractory rebels led to the path of obedience.

In Irān and Tūrān, where only one treasurer is appointed, the accounts are in a confused state, but here in India, the amount of the revenues is so great, and the business so multifarious that twelve treasurers are necessary for storing the money, nine for the different kinds of cash payments, and three for precious stones, gold, and inlaid jewellery. The extent of the treasuries is too great to admit of my giving a proper description with other matters before me. From his knowledge of the work, and as a reward for labour, his Majesty very often expresses his satisfaction, or conveys reprimands, hence everything is in a flourishing condition.

Separate treasurers were also appointed for each of the Imperial workshops the number of which is nearly one hundred. Daily, monthly, quarterly, and yearly accounts are kept of the receipts and disbursements, so that in this branch also the market place of the world is in a flourishing condition.

Again by the order of his Majesty a person of known integrity keeps in the public audience hall, some gold and silver for the needy, who have their wants relieved without delay. Moreover, a karori of dāms is kept in readiness within the palace, every thousand of which is kept in bags made of a coarse material. Such a bag is called in Hindi sahsah,⁴

¹ Tributes

² Vide the eighteenth Aḥḥā of the second book

³ Presents vows etc

[⁴ Sahāwa 8—P]

and many of them, when put up in a heap, ganj Besides, his Majesty entrusts to one of the nobility a large sum of money, part of which is carried in a *purse*¹ This is the reason, why such disbursements are called in the language of the country khari & bahlah

All these benefits flow from the wonderful liberality of his Majesty, and from his unremitting care for the subjects of the empire Would to God that he might live a thousand years !

A*in 3

THE TREASURY FOR PRECIOUS STONES

If I were to speak about the quantity and quality of the stones it would take me an age I shall therefore give a few particulars, " gathering an ear from every sheaf "

His Majesty appointed for this office an intelligent, trustworthy, clever treasurer, and as his assistants, an experienced clerk, a zealous dārogha, and also skilful jewellers The foundation therefore of this important department rests upon those four pillars They classified the jewels, and thus removed the rust of confusion

Rubies — 1st class rubies, not less than 1000 muhrs in value, 2nd class from 999 to 500 muhrs, 3rd class, from 499 to 300, 4th class, from 299 to 200, 5th class, from 199 to 100, 6th class, from 99 to 60, 7th class, from 59 to 40, 8th class, from 39 to 30, 9th class, from 29 to 10, 10th class, from $9\frac{3}{4}$ to 5, 11th class, from $4\frac{3}{4}$ to 1 muhr, 12th class, from $\frac{3}{4}$ muhr to $\frac{1}{4}$ rupee They made no account of rubies of less value

Diamonds, emeralds, and the red and blue yāqūts, were classified as follows 1st class, from 30 muhrs upwards, 2nd class, from $29\frac{3}{4}$ to 15 muhrs, 3rd class, from $14\frac{3}{4}$ to 12, 4th class, from $11\frac{3}{4}$ to 10, 5th class, from $9\frac{3}{4}$ to 7, 6th class, from $6\frac{3}{4}$ to 5, 7th class, from $4\frac{3}{4}$ to 3, 8th class, from $2\frac{3}{4}$ to 2, 9th class, from $1\frac{3}{4}$ to 1 muhr, 10th class, from $8\frac{1}{2}$ rupees to 5 rupees, 11th class, from $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 rupees, 12th class, from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ rupee

The Pearls were divided into 16 classes, and strung by scores The first string contained twenty pearls, each of a value of 30 muhrs and upwards, 2nd class pearls varied from $29\frac{3}{4}$ to 15 muhrs; 3rd class, from $14\frac{3}{4}$ to 12, 4th class, from $11\frac{3}{4}$ to 10, 5th class, from $9\frac{3}{4}$ to 7, 6th class, from $6\frac{3}{4}$ to 5, 7th class, from $4\frac{3}{4}$ to 3, 8th class, from $2\frac{3}{4}$ to 2, 9th class, from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 1, 10th class, less than a muhr, down to 5 rupees, 11th class, less than 5, to 2 rupees, 12th class, less than 2 rupees, to $1\frac{1}{4}$ rupees, 13th class, less than $1\frac{1}{4}$ rupees, to 30 dāms, 14th class, less than 30 dāms, to 20 dāms, 15th class, less than 20 dāms, to 10 dāms, 16th class, less than 10 dāms, to 5 dāms. The pearls are strung upon a number of strings indicating their class, so that those of the 16th class are strung upon 16 strings. At the end of each bundle of strings the imperial seal is affixed, to avoid losses arising from unsorting, whilst a description is attached to each pearl, to prevent disorder.

¹ A purse in Hindi is called baḥla [Baḥla, P a purse a falconer's glove — P]

The following are the charges for bearing pearls, independent of the daily and monthly wages of the workmen. For a pearl of the 1st class, $\frac{1}{2}$ rupee, 2nd class, $\frac{1}{8}$, 3rd class, $\frac{1}{16}$ rupee, 4th class, 3 dāms, 5th class, 1 *sūkī*¹, 6th class, 1 dām, 7th class, $\frac{3}{4}$ dām, 8th class, $\frac{1}{2}$ dām, 9th class, $\frac{1}{4}$ dām, 10th class, $\frac{1}{8}$ dām, 11th class, $\frac{1}{16}$ dām, 12th class, $\frac{1}{32}$ dām, 13th class, $\frac{1}{64}$ dām, 14th class, $\frac{1}{128}$ dām, 15th class, $\frac{1}{256}$ dām, 16th class, $\frac{1}{512}$ dām, and less.

The value of jewels is so well known that it is useless to say anything about it, but those which are at present in the treasury of his Majesty may be detailed as follows —

Rubies weighing 11 tānks,² 20 surkhs,³ and diamonds of $5\frac{1}{2}$ tānks,⁴ 4 surkhs, each one lakh of rupees, emeralds weighing $17\frac{3}{4}$ tānks, 3 surkhs, 52 000 rupees, yaqūts of 4 tānks, $7\frac{3}{4}$ surkhs, and pearls of 5 tānks, each 50,000 rupees.

A*in 4

THE IMPERIAL MINT

As the successful working of the mint increases the treasure, and is the source of despatch for every department, I shall mention a few details.

The inhabitants of the towns and the country perform their transactions by means of money. Every man uses it according to the extent of his necessities, the man whose heart is free from worldly desires

[¹ Sūkī s m and sūkī f H, a four anna bit]

[² Tūk H = 4 masha — P]

Abru often rats
1 ser tent
7 ser
4

sustains by it his life, and the worldly man considers it the final stage of his objects—the wants of all are satisfied by it. The wise man looks upon it as the foundation from which the fulfilment of his worldly and religious wishes flows. It is absolutely necessary for the continuance of the human race, as men obtain by money their food and clothing. You may indeed gain the two things by undergoing some labour, as sowing rearing reaping, clearing, knowing, cooking, twisting spinning, weaving etc. but these actions cannot well be performed without several helpers, for the strength of a single man is not sufficient and to do so day after day would be difficult, if not impossible. Again man requires a dwelling for keeping his provisions. Thus he calls his home, whether it be a tent, or a cave. Man's existence, and the continuance of his life, depend on five things—a father, a mother, children servants, food, the last of which is required by all. Moreover, money is required, as our furniture and utensils break, they last in no case very long. But money does last long, on account of the strength and compactness of its material, and even a little of it may produce much. It also enables men to travel. How difficult would it be to carry provisions for several days, let alone for several months or years!

By the help of God's goodness this excellent precious metal (gold) has come to the shore of existence, and filled the store of life without much labour on the part of man. By means of gold, man carries out noble plans, and even performs Divine worship in a proper manner. Gold has many valuable qualities—it possesses softness, a good taste, and smell. Its component parts are nearly equal in weight, and the marks of the four elements are visible in its properties. Its colour reminds us of fire, its purity of air, its softness of water, its heaviness of earth, hence gold possesses many life giving rays. Nor can any of the four elements injure it; for it does not burn in the fire, it remains unaffected by air, retains for ages its appearance although kept in water, and does not get altered when buried in the ground, whereby gold is distinguished from the other metals. It is for this reason that in old books on philosophy in which man's intellect is termed the greater principle, gold is called the lesser principle,¹ as the things required for human life depend upon it. Among its epithets I may mention "the guardian of justice", "the universal adjuster"—and, indeed, the adjustment of things depends on gold, and the basis of justice rests upon it. To render it service, God has allowed silver and brass to come into use, thus creating additional means for the welfare of man. Hence just kings and energetic rulers have paid much attention to these metals, and erected mints, where their properties may be thoroughly studied. The success of this department lies in the appointment of intelligent, zealous, and upright workmen, and the edifice of the world is built upon their attention and carefulness.

¹ According to the chemists of the middle ages, gold consists of quicksilver and sulphur taken in equal proportions, the latter must, however, possess colouring properties. See the thirteenth A²(a)

² "Were it not for piety, I would bow down to gold and say 'Hallowed be thy name!'" —Hariri

Ā'īn 5

THE WORKMEN OF THE MINT

1 The Dārogha. He must be a circumspect and intelligent man of broad principles, who takes the cumbrous burden of his colleagues upon the shoulder of despatch. He must keep every one to his work, and show zeal and integrity.

2 The Sayrafī.¹ The success of this important department depends upon his experience, as he determines the degrees of purity of the coin. On account of the prosperity of the present age, there are now numbers of skilful sarrāfs,² and by the attention of his Majesty, gold and silver are refined to the highest degree of purity. The highest degree of purity is called in Persia dahdahī, but they do not know above 10 degrees of fineness, whilst in India it is called bārahbānī, as they have twelve degrees. Formerly the old huvn, which is a gold coin current in the Deccan, was thought to be pure, and reckoned at ten degrees, but his Majesty has now fixed it at 8½, and the round small gold dīnār of *Alī³ d Dīn,² which was considered to be 12 degrees, now turns out to be 10½.

Those who are experienced in this business have related wonderful stories of the purity of gold at the present time, and referred it to witchcraft and alchemy, for they maintain, that gold ore does not come up to this fineness. But by the attention of his Majesty, it has come up to this degree, hence the astonishment of people acquainted with this branch. It is, however, certain, that gold cannot be made finer, and of a higher degree. Honest describers and truthful travellers have indeed never mentioned this degree, but when gold is put into fusion, small particles separate from it, and mix with the ashes, which ignorant men look upon as useless dross, whilst the skilful recover the metal from it. Although malleable gold ore be calcined and reduced to ashes, yet by a certain operation, it is brought back to its original state, but a part of it is lost Through the wisdom of h's Majesty, the real circumstances connected with this loss, were brought to light, and the fraudulent practices of the workmen thus put to the test

¹ The same as Sayraf or Farrāf, hence a shroff a money lender
 [۱ - سارافی دسارگرد خورد عالی]

Ā'in 6

BANWĀRI¹

An abbreviation for bānīcārī Although in this country clever sayrafis are able from experience to tell the degree of fineness by the colour and the brightness of the metal, the following admirable rule has been introduced for the satisfaction of others

To the ends of a few long needles, made of brass or such like metal, small pieces of gold are affixed, having their degree of fineness written on them When the workmen wish to assay a new piece of gold, they first draw with it a few lines on a touchstone, and some other lines with the needles By comparing both sets of lines, they discover the degree of fineness of the gold It is, however, necessary that the lines be drawn in the same manner, and with the same force, so as to avoid deception

To apply this rule, it is necessary to have gold of various degrees of fineness This is obtained as follows They melt together one māsha of pure silver with the same quantity of best copper, and let it get solid This mixture they again melt with 6 māshas of pure gold of $10\frac{1}{2}$ degrees of fineness Of this composition one *māsha*² is taken, and divided into sixteen parts of half a surkh each If now $7\frac{1}{2}$ surkhs of pure gold (of $10\frac{1}{2}$ degrees) are mixed with one of the sixteen parts of the composition, the touch of the new mixture will only be $10\frac{1}{4}$ *bān*³ Similarly, 7 surkhs pure gold and two parts of the composition melted together, will give gold of 10 bān, $6\frac{1}{2}$ s pure gold and three parts composition, $9\frac{1}{2}$ bān, 6 s gold and four parts composition, $9\frac{1}{4}$ bān, $5\frac{1}{2}$ s gold and five parts composition, $9\frac{1}{8}$ bān, 5 s gold and six parts composition, 9 bān, $4\frac{1}{2}$ s gold and seven parts composition, $8\frac{1}{2}$ bān, 4 s gold and eight parts composition, $8\frac{1}{4}$ bān, $3\frac{1}{2}$ s gold and nine parts composition, $8\frac{1}{8}$ bān, 3 s gold and ten parts composition, 8 bān, $2\frac{1}{2}$ s gold and eleven parts composition, $7\frac{1}{2}$ bān, 2 s gold and twelve parts composition, $7\frac{1}{4}$ bān, $1\frac{1}{2}$ s gold and thirteen parts composition, $7\frac{1}{8}$ bān, 1 s gold and fourteen parts composition, 7 bān, and

¹ This Hind word which is not given in the dictionaries, means the testing of gold

² This māsha contains 6 parts gold, 1 part silver, and 1 part copper, i. e. $\frac{1}{2}$ gold and $\frac{1}{2}$ alloy

³ The Hind term bān means 'temper, degree'

lastly, $\frac{1}{2}$ s gold and fifteen parts composition, $6\frac{1}{2}$ bān. Or generally, every additional half surkh (or one part) of the composition diminishes the fineness of the gold by a quarter bān, the touch of the composition itself being $6\frac{1}{2}$ bān.

If it be required to have a degree less than $6\frac{1}{2}$ bān, they mix together $\frac{1}{2}$ surkh of the first mixture which consisted, as I said, of silver and copper, with $7\frac{1}{2}$ surkhs of the second composition (consisting of gold, copper, and silver), which, when melted together, gives gold of $6\frac{1}{2}$ bān and if 1 surkh of the first mixture be melted together with 7 surkhs of the second composition, the result will be 6 bān, and if they require still baser compositions, they increase the mixtures by half surkhs. But in the Danicari, they reckon to 6 bāns only, rejecting all baser compositions.

All this is performed by a man who understands the tests.

3 The Amīn. He must possess impartiality and integrity, so that friends and enemies can be sure of him. Should there be any differences, he assists the darogha and the other workmen, maintains that which is right, and prevents quarrels.

4 The Mushrif. He writes down the daily expenditure in an upright and practical manner, and keeps a systematic day book.

5 The Merchant. He buys up gold, silver, and copper, by which he gains a profit for himself, assists the department, and benefits the revenues of the State. Trade will flourish, when justice is every where to be had, and when rulers are not avaricious.

6 The Treasurer. He watches over the profits, and is upright in all his dealings.

The salaries of the first four and the sixth officers differ from each other, the lowest of them holding the rank of an *Ahadī*¹.

7 The Weighman. He weighs the coins. For weighing 100 jalālī gold muhrs he gets $1\frac{1}{4}$ dāms, for weighing 1000 rupees, $6\frac{1}{2}$ dāms, and for weighing 1000 copper dāms, $\frac{1}{2}$ of a dām, and, after this rate, according to the quantity.

8 The Melter of the Ore. He makes small and large trenches in a tablet of clay, which he besmears with grease, and pours into them the melted gold and silver, to cast them into ingots. In the case of copper, instead of using grease, it is sufficient to sprinkle ashes. For the above

¹ The Ahadis corresponds to our warrant officers. Most clerks of the Imperial offices
 this cor
 immedi returns
 everyth

mentioned quantity of gold, he gets $2\frac{2}{3}$ dāms, for the same quantity of silver, 5 dāms and $13\frac{1}{4}$ jetals,¹ for the same quantity of copper, 4 dāms and $21\frac{1}{2}$ jetals.

9 The Platemaker He makes the a luted gold into plates of six or seven mishas each, six fingers in length and breadth, these he carries to the assay master, who measures them in a mould made of copper, and stamps such as are suitable in order to prevent alterations and to show the work done. He receives as wages for the above mentioned quantity of gold 12 dāms.

THE MANNER OF REFINING GOLD

1st in 7

When the above mentioned plates have been stamped, the owner of the gold, for the weight of every 100 jalīlī gold muhrs, must furnish² four sers of saltpetre, and four sers of brickdust of raw bricks. The plates, after having been washed in clean water, are stratified with the above mixture (of the saltpetre and brickdust), and put one above the other, the whole being covered with cowdung which in Hindi is called upā. It is the dry dung of the Wild Cow. Then they set fire to it, and let it gently burn, till the dung is reduced to ashes, when they leave it to cool, then, these ashes being removed from the sides, are preserved. They are called in Persian Mal & Māls, and in Hindi salonī. By a process, to be mentioned hereafter, they recover silver from it. The plates, and the ashes below them, are left as they are. This process of setting fire to the dung, and removing the ashes at the sides, is twice repeated. When three fires have been applied, they call the plates sūtā.³ They are then again washed in clean water and stratified three times with the above mixture, the ashes of the sides being removed.

This operation must be repeated till six mixtures and eighteen fires have been applied, when the plates are again washed. Then the assay master breaks one of them, and if there comes out a soft and mild sound, it is a sign of its being sufficiently pure, but if the sound is harsh, the plates must undergo three more fires. Then from each of the plates one māsha is taken away, of which aggregate a plate is made. This is tried on the touchstone, if it is not sufficiently fine, the gold has again to pass through one or two fires. In most cases, however, the desired effect is obtained by three or four fires.

¹ Twenty five jetals make one dam } vide the 10th 1st in
² Use —P]
³ Satrā. This probably means jangla, i.e. 'not stilled or still fed' —P]

The following method of assaying is also used They take two tolās of pure gold, and two tolas of the gold which passed through the fire, and make twenty plates of each, of equal weight They then spread the above mixture, apply the fire, wash them, and weigh them with an exact balance If both kinds are found to be equal in weight, it is a proof of pureness

10 The Melter of the refined metal He melts the refined plates of gold, and casts them, as described above, into ingots His fee for 100 gold muhrs is three dāms

11 The Zarrāb He cuts off the gold, silver and copper ingots, as exactly as he can, round pieces of the size of coined money His fees are, for 100 gold muhrs, 21 dāms, 1½ jetals, for the weight of 1000 rupees, 53 dāms, 8¾ jetals, if he cuts rupees, and 28 dāms in addition if he cuts the same weight of silver into quarter rupees For 1000 copper dāms his fee is 20 dāms, for the same weight of half and quarter dāms, 25 dāms, and for half quarter dāms, which are called damrīs 69 dāms

In Irān and Tūrān they cannot cut these pieces without a proper anvil, but Hindustani workmen cut them without such an instrument, so exactly, that there is not the difference of a single hair, which is remarkable enough

12 The Engraver He engraves the dies of the coins on steel, and such like metal Coins are then stamped with these dies At this day, Mawla nā ‘Alī Ahmād of Delhi, who has not his equal in any country, cuts different kinds of letters in steel, in such a manner as to equal the copyslips of the most skilful calligraphers He holds the rank of a yūzbāshī,¹ and two of his men serve in the munt Both have a monthly salary of 600 dāms

13 The Sillachī He places the round pieces of metal between two dies, and by the strength of the hammerer (putk-chī) both sides are stamped His fees are for 100 gold muhrs, 1¾ dāms for 1000 rupees, 5 dāms, 9½ jetals, and for the weight of 1000 rupees of small silver pieces, 1 dām, 3 jetals in addition, for 1000 copper dāms, 3 dāms for 2000 half-dāms, and 4000 quarter-dāms, 3 dāms 18¾ jetals and for 8000 half quarter dāms, 10½ dāms Out of these fees the sillachi has to give one sixth to the hammerer, for whom there is no separate allowance

14 The Sabbāl makes the refined silver into round plates For every 1000 rupees weight, he receives 5½ dāms

¹ This Turkish word signifies a commander of one hundred men a captain Ahādīs of distinction were promoted to this military rank. The salary of a Yuzbāshī varied from five to seven hundred rupees per mensem, vide the third Āḥādīn of the second book.

The discovery of an alloy in silver Silver may be alloyed with lead, tin and copper. In Irān and Turān, they also call the highest degree of fineness of silver dahdahī, in Hindustan, the sayrafīs use for it the term bīst bisica. According to the quantity of the alloy, it descends in degree, but it is not made less than five, and no one would care for silver baser than ten degrees. Practical men can discover from the colour of the compound, which of the alloys is prevailing, whilst by filing and boring it, the quality of the inside is ascertained. They also try it by beating it when hot, and then throwing it into water, when blackness denotes lead, redness copper, a white greyish colour tin, and whiteness a large proportion of silver.

THE METHOD OF REFINING SILVER

They dig a hole, and having sprinkled into it a small quantity of wild¹ cow dung, they fill it with the ashes of *mughlīlān*² wood, then they moisten it, and work it up into the shape of a dish, into this they put the adulterated silver, together with a proportionate quantity of lead. First, they put a fourth part of the lead on the top of the silver, and having surrounded the whole with coals, blow the fire with a pair of bellows, till the metals are melted, which operation is generally repeated four times. The proofs of the metal being pure are a lightning like brightness, and its beginning to harden at the sides. As soon as it is hardened in the middle, they sprinkle it with water, when flames resembling in shape the horns of wild goats, issue from it. It then forms itself into a disc, and is perfectly refined. If this disc be melted again, half a surlh in every tola will burn away, i. e., 6 māshas and 2 surlhs in 100 tolas. The ashes of the disc, which are mixed with silver and lead, form a kind of litharge, called in Hindi kharal, and in Persian *kuhna*³, the use of which will be hereafter explained. Before this refined silver is given over to the Zarrāb, 5 māshas and 5 surlhs are taken away for the Imperial exchequer out of every hundred tolās of it, after which the assay master marks the mass with the usual stamp, that it may not be altered or exchanged.

In former times silver also was assayed by the banicārī system, now it is calculated as follows —if by refining 100 tolas, of shāhī silver, which is current in Irāq and Khurāsān, and of the līrī and miṣqālī, which are

[¹ See note 1 p. 21 —P]

² Called in Hind babul, a kind of acacia. Its bark is used in tanning. [The khar of the Panjab.—P]

³ Some MSS have katah

current in Tūrīn, there are lost three tolīs and one surūh, and of the same quantity of the European and Turkish narjīl and the mahmūdī and muraffarī of Gujrāt and Mālwa, 13 tolas and 6½ māshas are lost, they become then of Imperial standard

15 The Quī-kub having heated the refined silver hammers it till it has lost all smell of the lead His fee for the weight of 1000 rupees, is 4½ dāms

16 The Chāshnūgīr examines the refined gold and silver and fixes its purity as follows —Having made two tolas of the refined gold into eight plates, he applies layers of the mixture as above described and sets fire to it, keeping out however, all draught he then washes the plates, and melts them If they have not lost anything by this process the gold is pure The assay master then tries it upon the touchstone to satisfy himself and others For assaying that quantity, he gets 1½ dāms In the case of silver, he takes one tolā with a like quantity of lead, which he puts together into a bone crucible, and keeps it on the fire till the lead is all burnt Having then sprinkled the silver with water, he hammers it till it has lost all smell of the lead and having melted it in a new crucible he weighs it, and if it has lost in weight three ¹ birinj (rice grains) it is sufficiently pure, otherwise he melts it again, till it comes to that degree For assaying that quantity his fee is 3 dāms 4½ jetals

17 The Viyaurya collects the khāl & khālis and washes it taking two seers at the time whatever gold there may be amongst it will settle, from its weight, to the bottom The khāl, when thus washed, is called in Hindu lukrah,² and still contains some gold for the recovery of which, directions shall hereafter be given The above mentioned adulterated quicksilver per ser The quicksilver from its predilection affinity, draws the gold to itself, and forms an amalgam which is kept over the fire in a retort, till the gold is separated from the quicksilver For extracting the gold from this quantity of khāl, the Viyaurya receives 20 dāms, 2 jetals

The process of Kukrah

They mix with the lukrah an equal quantity of punhar, and form a paste of rasī (aqua fortis), and condung They then pound the first composition and mixing it with the paste, work it up into balls of two *ser*s weight which they dry on a cloth

¹ One MS has six
² Word not traced

Punhar is obtained as follows —

They make a hole in the earth and fill it with the ashes of Babul wood, at the rate of six fingers height of ashes for every maund of lead. The lead itself is put at the bottom of the hole, which has been smoothed, then they cover it with charcoals, and melt the lead. After that having removed the coals, they place over it two plates of clay, fixed by means of thorns, and close up the bellows hole but not the vent. Thus they keep covered with bricks till the ashes have thoroughly soaked up the lead. The bricks they frequently remove to learn the state of the lead. For the above mentioned quantity of lead there are 4 mashas of silver mixed up with the ashes. These ashes they cool in water when they are called punhar. Out of every man of lead two sers are burnt but the mass is increased by four sers of ashes, so that the weight of the whole mass will be one man and two sers.

Rasī is a kind of acid, made of *ashklār*¹ and saltpetre.

Having thus explained what punhar and rasī are I return to the description of the process of Kulrah. They make an oven like vessel, narrow at both ends, and wide in the middle one and a half yards in height with a hole at the bottom. Then having filled the vessel with coals within four fingers of the top they place it over a pit dug in the earth and blow the fire with two bellows. After that, the afore mentioned balls being broken into pieces they throw them into the fire and melt them, when the gold, silver, copper and lead fall through the hole in the bottom of the vessel into the pit below. Whatever remains in the vessel, is softened and washed and the lead separated from it. They likewise collect the ashes, from whence also by a certain process profit may be derived. The metal is then taken out of the pit and melted according to the punhar system. The lead will mix with the ashes, from which thirty sers will be recovered, and ten sers will be burnt. The gold, silver and copper remain together in a mass and thus they call bugrāwālī, or according to some, gubrāwālī.

The process of Bugrāwālī

They make a hole, and fill it with the ashes of babul wood half a ser for every 100 tolas of bugrāwālī. These ashes they then make up in form of a dish, and mix them up with the bugrāwālī adding one tola of copper, and twenty five tolas of lead. They now fill the dish with coals and cover it with bricks. When the whole has melted, they remove the coals and the bricks, and make a fire of babūl wood, till the lead and copper unite with the ashes, leaving the gold and silver together. These ashes are also called lharal, and the lead and copper can be recovered from them by a process, which will be hereafter explained.

¹ The margins of some of the MSS explain this word by the Hind सूडा, impure carbonate of soda.

Ā'in 8

THE METHOD OF SEPARATING THE SILVER FROM THE GOLD

They melt this composition six times, three times with copper, and three times with sulphur, called in Hind cl'hāchhiyā. For every tola of the alloy, they take a masha of copper, and two mashas two surkhs of sulphur. First they melt it with copper and then with sulphur. If the alloy be of 100 tolas weight, the 100 māshas of copper are employed as follows — they first melt fifty māshas with it, and then twice again twenty five māshas. The sulphur is used in similar proportions. After reducing the mixture of gold and silver to small bits, they mix with it fifty mashas of copper, and melt it in a crucible. They have near at hand a vessel full of cold water, on the surface of which is laid a broom like bundle of hay. Upon it they pour the melted metal, and prevent it, by stirring it with a stick, from forming into a mass. Then having again melted these bits, after mixing them with the remaining copper in a crucible, they set it to cool in the shade, and for every tola of this mixture two mashas and two surkhs of sulphur are used, i e, at the rate of one and one half quarter ser ($1\frac{1}{2}$ ser) per 100 tolas. When it has been three times melted in this manner, there appears on the surface a whitish kind of ash, which is silver. This is taken off, and kept separate, and its process shall hereafter be explained. When the mixture of gold and silver has thus been subjected to three fires for the copper, and three for the sulphur, the solid part left is the gold. In the language of the Panjāb, this gold is called lail, whilst about Delhi, it is termed pinjar. If the mixture contains much gold, it generally turns out to be of $6\frac{1}{2}$ bān, but it is often only five, and even four.

In order to refine this gold, one of the following methods must be used. Either they mix fifty tolas of this with 100 tolas of purer gold, and refine it by the Salonī process, or else they use the Alonī process. For the latter they make a mixture of two parts of wild cow dung and one part of saltpetre. Having then cast the aforesaid pinjar into ingots, they make it into pieces none of which ought to be lighter than $1\frac{1}{2}$ tolas, but a little heavier than those which they make in the salonī process. Then having besmeared them with sesame oil, they strew the above mixture over them, giving them for every strewing two gentle fires. This operation they repeat three or four times, and if they want the metal very pure, they repeat the process till it comes up to nine bān. The ashes are also collected, being a kind of Pharal.

A⁷ia 9

THE METHOD OF EXTRACTING THE SILVER FROM ASHES

Whatever ashes and dross have been collected, both before and after the process of alonī, they mix with double the quantity of pure lead, put them into a crucible, and keep them for one watch over the fire. When the metal is cold, they refine it as described under the article Sabbāk, p. 22. The ashes of it are also kharal. The salonī process is also performed in other ways well known to those conversant with the business.

18 The Panīuar having melted the kharal, separates the silver from the copper. His fee for every tola of silver is $1\frac{1}{2}$ dāms. As a return for the profit he makes, he pays monthly 300 dāms to the ḍiwān. Having reduced the kharal to small bits he adds to every man of it $1\frac{1}{2}$ sers of tangar (borax), and three sers of pounded natron,¹ and kneads them together. He then puts this mass, ser by ser, into the vessel above described and melts it, when lead mixed with silver collects in the pit. This is afterwards refined by the process of the sabbāk, and the lead which separates from this and mixes with the ashes, turns grinhar.

19 The Paikar buys the salonī and kharal from the goldsmiths of the city, and carries them to the mint to be melted, and makes a profit on the gold and silver. For every man of salonī he gives 17 dāms, and for the same quantity of kharal 14 dāms, to the exchequer.

20 The Nicho⁴: nala brings old copper coins, which are mixed with silver, to be melted, and from 100 tolas of silver, $3\frac{1}{2}$ rupees go to the ḍiwān, and when he wishes to coin the silver, he pays a fixed quantity for it as duty.

21 The Khāḥ shoy. When the owners of the metals get their gold and silver in the various ways which have now been described the Khāk shoy sweeps the mint, takes the sweepings to his own house, washes them, and gains a profit. Some of the sweepers carry on a very flourishing trade. The state receives from this man a monthly gift of $12\frac{1}{2}$ rupees.

And in like manner all the officers of the mint pay a monthly duty to the state, at the rate of three dāms for every 100 dāms.

[¹ In the Persian asākhār & kufta —P]

“ It is the Sun ¹ from which the seven oceans get their pearls,
The black rocks get their jewels from his lustre
The mines get their gold from his fostering glance,
And their gold is ennobled by Akbar's stamp ” and, Allāh akbar jallā jallāla h, “ God is great, may His glory shine forth ! ” in the middle And on the other side,

In sikla kī pīrāya yī ummīd buvad
Bā naqsh ī daiām u nām ī jāvid buvad
Simā yī sa²ādāt-ash hamīn bas kī bī dahr
Yak zarra nazar karda yī khurshīd buvad

“ This coin, which is an ornament of hope,
Carries an everlasting stamp, and an immortal name
As a sign of its auspiciousness, it is sufficient
That, once, for all ages the sun has cast a glimpse upon it ” and the date, according to the Divine era, in the middle

2 There is another gold coin, of the same name and shape, weighing 91 tolas and 8 māshas, in value equal to 100 round muhrs, at 11 māshas each It has the same impression as the preceding

3 The Rahas is the half of each of the two preceding coins It is sometimes made square On one side it has the same impression as the sahansa ² and on the other side the following Rubā³ by Fayzi —

In naqd ī ravān ī ganj ī shāhīnshāhī
Bā kawkab-ī iqbal kunad hamrahī
Khurshīd bī parvar-ash az ān rū kī bī-dahr
Yābad sharaf az sikla yī Akbarshāhī

“ This current coin of the Imperial treasure
Accompanies the star of good fortune,
O sun foster it, because for all ages
It is ennobled by Akbar's stamp ! ”

4 The Ātma is the fourth part of the sahansa round and square
Some have the same impression as the sahansa ⁴, and some have on one side the following Rubā⁵ by Fayzi ⁵ —

In sikla kī dast ī bakht rū zewar bād
Pīrāya yī nuh sipīr u haft akhtar bād

¹ According to the Natural Philosophers of the Middle Ages the influence of the sun calls the metals the pearls, and precious stones into existence vide the thirteenth A¹. The allusion to the sun is explained by the note to page III

² In the Persian سهمین — P]

³ Quatrains.—P]

⁴ Sad muhrs in the Persian text.—P]

⁵ Malik^o 'ah Shu^oara^o in the Persian text —P]

Zarrīn naqlīst l'ār az u chūn zar bād
 Dar dah ravān bi nām : shāh akbar bād

"This coin—May it adorn the hand of the fortunate,
 And may it be an ornament of the nine heavens and the seven stars—
 Is a gold coin,—May golden be its work !
 Let it be current for all ages to the glory of Shāh Akbar."
 And on the other side the preceding Kulāṣī

5 The Binsat, of the same two forms as the ātma, in value equal to one fifth of the first coin

There are also gold coins of the same shape and impression, in value equal to one eighth, one tenth, one twentieth, one twenty fifth, of the sahansa

6 The Chugul,¹ of a square form, is the fiftieth part of the sahansa, in value equal to two-muhrs²

7 The round Laṣlī Jalālī,³ in weight and value equal to two rouv muhrs, having on one side Allāh akbar, and on the other Yā muṣṭafī, "O helper"

8 The Āstātī is round, weighs 1 tolā, 2 māshas and 4½ surḥās, in value equal to 12 rupees. On one side, "Allāh akbar, jall Jalālu h", and on the other the date according to the Divine era, and the place where it is struck

9 The Ilāhī is round weighs 12 māshas, 1½ surḥā, bears the same stamp as the Āstātī, and has a value of 10 rupees

¹ Or Jugul Abu l Fazl's spelling in the text is ambiguous
² The MSS differ Most of them place the Chugul as the sixth coin after the Binsat and read —

The Chugul of a square form weighing 1 tolā 2 māshas 5½ surḥās its value is thirty rupees. Also of a round form, weighing 2 tolā 2 māshas, having a value of three round muhrs of 11 māshas each (i.e. 27 rupees). But the impression of both is the same. They are the fiftieth part of the sahansa. The last sentence does not agree with the value and weight of the sahansa for the two Chugul as given by Abū l Fazl would each be the hundred and thirtieth part of the two kinds of sahansa not the fiftieth part

Mr Thomas in his excellent edition of Prinsep's Lafal Tables pp 5 6 gives an extract from a MS of the Āṣṭī in his possession which appears to agree with the above reading but he only mentions the square form of the Chugul weighing 1 tolā 2 māshas 5½ surḥās worth 30 rupees and then passes on to the eighth coin the Āstātī

Two other MSS—among them Col Hamilton—read after the Binsat (i.e. after the twenty fifth line of p 24 of my text edition)—

6 The Chahārpoṣhā (or square) weighing 2 tolā 2 māshas 5½ surḥās worth 30 rupees
 7 The Gird (or round) weighing 2 tolā 2 māshas, in value equal to the 3 round muhrs of 11 māshas each

Both have the same impression
 8 The Chugul of a square form the fiftieth part of a sahansa, in value equal to two Laṣlī Jalālī muhrs
 This reading obviates all difficulties. But the real question is whether the Chahārpoṣhā, the Gird and the Chugul are three distinct coins
³ For the round Laṣlī Jalālī some MSS only read, The Gird, i.e. round, taking the words Laṣlī Jalālī to the preceding ḥād the tenth coin

10 The square Laṣl i Jalālī is of the same weight and value, on one side "Allāh akbar," and on the other "jall^a jalālu h^a"

11 The ʿAdl gutka is round, weighs 11 mashas, and has a value of nine rupees. On one side "Allāh akbar", and on the other, "Yā muṣīn"

12 The Round muhr, in weight and value equal to the ʿAdl-gutka, but of a different¹ stamp

13 *Mihrābī*² is in weight, value and stamp, the same as the round muhr

14 The Muṣīnī is both square and round. In weight and value it is equal to the Laṣl i jalālī, and the round muhr. It bears the stamp "yā muṣīn"

15 The Chahārgoṣha, in stamp and weight the same as the ʿAṣṭābī

16 The Gird is the half of the Ilāhī, and has the same stamp

17 The *Dhan*³ is half a *Laṣl i Jalālī*⁴

18 The Salīmī is the half of the ʿAdl gutka

19 The *Rabī*⁵ is a quarter of the Aṣṭābī

20 The Man, is a quarter of the Ilāhī, and Jalālī

21 The Half Salīmī is a quarter of the ʿAdl gutka

22 The Panḥ is the fifth part of the Ilāhī

23 The Pandau is the fifth part of the Laṣl i Jalālī, on one side is a lily,⁶ and on the other a wild rose

24 The Sumnī, or Aṣṭāsidd, is one eighth of the Ilāhī, on one side "Allāh akbar," and on the other "jall^a jalālu h^a."

25 The Kalā is the sixteenth part of the Ilāhī. It has on both sides a wild rose

26 The Zara is the thirty second part of an Ilāhī and has the same stamp as the kalā

As regards gold coins, the custom followed in the imperial mint is to coin Laṣl i jalālī, Dhans, and Mans, each coin for the space of a month. The gold coins are never stamped without special orders

¹ It has the Kalīma (Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Aḥṣān)

² The figure called mihrābī is

³ In Forbes's Dictionary dahan

⁴ Several MSS. read—'Half a quarter Ilāhī and Laṣl i Jalālī' Forbes gives six rupees (?)

⁵ Several MSS. have Rabī. Perhaps we should write Rabbi

⁶ Lāla in Persian text. This is the common red poppy in Afghanistan and the Panjāb and in Persia is also applied to the wild tulip.—P.]

B Silver Coins

1 The Rupiya is round and weighs eleven and one half mashas. It was first introduced in the time of Sher Khān. It was perfected during this reign and received a new stamp on one side Allah^u akbar jall^u jalalu h^u and on the other the date. Although the market price is some times more or less than forty dams yet this value is always set upon it in the payment of salaries.

2 The Jalala is of a square form which was introduced during the present reign. In value and stamp it is the same as No. 1.

3 The Darb is half a Jalala.

4 The Charn is a quarter Jalala.

5 The Pandau is a fifth of the Jalala.

6 The Asht is the eighth part of the Jalala.

7 The Dasā is one tenth of the Jalala.

8 The Kala is the sixteenth part of the Jalala.

9 The Suk^u is one twentieth of the Jalala.

The same fractional parts are adopted for the [round] Rupiya which are however different in form.

C Copper Coins

1 The Dam weighs 5 āks i e 1 tola 8 mashas and 7 surkhs it is the fortieth part of the rupiya. At first this coin was called Paisa and also Buhloli now it is known under this name (dam). On one side the place is given where it was struck and on the other the date.

For the purpose of calculation the dam is divided into twenty five parts each of which is called a *je'al*¹. This imaginary division is only used by accountants.

2 The Adhela is half of a dam.

3 The Pa^uola is a quarter dam.

4 The Damri is one eighth of a dam.

In the beginning of this reign gold was coined to the glory of his Majesty in many parts of the empire now gold coins are struck at four places only viz at the seat of the government Bengal Ahmadabad (Gujrat) and Kabul. Silver and copper are likewise coined in these four places and besides in the following ten places Bahabas Agra Ujain Surat Dibli Patna Kashmir Lahor Multan Tanda. In twenty eight towns copper coins only are struck viz Ajmur Avadh Atak Al ar Bada^uon Banaras Bhakkar Baharah Patan Jaunpur Jaland^uar Harliwar Hisar Firuza Kalpi Gwalhyar Gorakhpur Kalanur

¹ Often misspelt chetal. The text gives the correct spelling.

Lakhnau, Mandū, Nagor, Sarhind Siyālkot, Saronj, Sahāranpūr, Sarangpur, Sambal, Qanawj Rantanbhūr

Mercantile affairs in this country are mostly transacted in round muhrs, ruyyas, and dāms

Unprincipled men cause a great deal of mischief by rubbing down the coins or by employing similar methods, and, in consequence of the damage done to the nation at large his Majesty continually consults experienced men and from his knowledge of the spirit of the age, issues new regulations in order to prevent such detrimental practices

The currency underwent several changes First, when (in the 27th year) the reins of the government were in the hands of Rāja Todarmal,¹ four kinds of muhrs were allowed to be current, A There was a Laṣl Jalālī which had the name of his Majesty stamped on it, and weighed 1 tola, 1½ surkhs It was quite pure and had a value of 400 dāms Again, there existed from the beginning of this glorious reign, a muhr with the imperial stamp, of which three degrees passed as current, viz B This muhr, when perfectly pure and having the full weight of 11 māshas Its value was 360 dāms If from wear and tear it had lost in weight within three grains of rice it was still allowed to be of the same degree, and no difference was made C The same muhr when it had lost in weight from four to six rice grains, its value was 355 dāms D The same muhr, when it had lost in weight from six to nine rice grains, its value was 350 dāms

¹ Raja Todarmal, a Khatri by caste was born at Lahor He appears to have entered Akbar's service during the 18th year of the emperor's reign when he was employed to settle the affairs of Gujrat In the 19th year we find him in Bengal a com-

Abu " " and abla said he f canify a Akbar but the emperor not drive away an old ser trusted with his Bar who Divine Faith Once when the departure Todarmal's idols were lost and as he transacted no business before his daily worship he remained for several days without food and drink and was at last with difficulty cheered up by the emperor

Muhrs of less weight than this were considered as bullion

Of Rūpiyas three kinds were then current, viz A one of a square form, of pure silver, and weighing $11\frac{1}{2}$ māshas, it went under the name of Jalāla, and had a value of 40 dāms B The round, old Albarshāhī rūpiya, which, when of full weight, or even at a surkh less, was valued at 39 dāms C The same rupees, when in weight two surkhs less, at 38 dāms

Rupees of less weight than this were considered as bullion

Secondly, on the 18th Muhr of the 29th year of the Divine era, 'Azud' 'd Daulah Amīr Fath' 'llah¹ of Shiraz coming at the head of affairs, a royal order was issued that on the muhrs, as far as three grains, and on the rūpiyas, as far as six grains short weight, no account should be taken, but that they should be reckoned of full weight. If muhrs were still less, they should make a deduction for the deficiency, whatever their deficiency might be, but it was not ordered that only muhrs down to nine grains less should be regarded as muhrs. Again, according to the same regulation, the value of a muhr that was one surkh deficient was put down as 355 dāms and a fraction and hence they valued the price of one surkh of coined gold at the low rate of four dāms and a fraction. According to Todarmal's regulation, a deduction of five dāms was made for a deficiency of one surkh, and if the muhr had lost something more than the three grains, for which he had made no account, even if it were only $\frac{1}{2}$ surkh, full five

¹ Amīr Fath 'llah of Shiraz was the pupil of Khwaja Jamal' d Din Mahmud,

death

Next to Abu Fazl Fayzi and Bir Bar the Amīr was perhaps most loved by Akbar. Several of his mechanical inventions mentioned below, are ascribed by Abu 'l Fayzi to Akbar himself (7). The Amīr was however on the best terms with dāms were subtracted, and for a deficiency of $1\frac{1}{2}$ surkhs he deducted ten dāms, even if the deficiency should not be quite $1\frac{1}{2}$ surkhs. By the new law of 'Azud^a d Dawlah, the value of a muhr was lessened by six dāms and a fraction, as its gold was worth 353 dāms and a fraction only¹

'Azud^a 'd Dawlah abolished also the regulation according to which the value of a round rūpiya had been fixed at one dām less than the square one notwithstanding its perfection in weight and purity, and fixed the value of the round rūpiya, when of full weight or not less than one surkh, at forty dāms, and whilst formerly a deduction of two dāms was made for a deficiency of two surkhs they now deduct for the same deficiency only one dām and a fraction

Thirdly, when 'Azud^a 'd Dawlah went to Khāndesh the Rāja estimated the value of muhrs that had been expressed in Jalāl rupees in round rupees, and from his obstinate and wrangling disposition, fixed again the deficiencies on muhrs and rupees according to the old rates

Fourthly, when Quli Khan² received the charge of the government he adopted the Raja's manner of estimating the muhrs, but he deducted ten dāms for a deficiency in the weight of a muhr for which the Rāja had deducted five dāms, and twenty dāms for the former deduction of ten dāms, whilst he considered every muhr as bullion if the deficiency was $1\frac{1}{2}$ surkhs. Similarly, every rūpiya, the deficiency of which was one surkh, was considered as bullion

¹ For 'A ud^a d Dawlah having fixed the value of 1 surkh of coined gold at 4 dāms
= 11 × 8 surkhs)
1 Faal 353 dāms

he was made governor of the Fort of Surat which Akbar after a siege of forty seven days had conquered. In the 23rd year he was sent to Gujrat and after the death of Shāh Manšur he was two years later, appointed as Dixan. In the 25th year he accompanied the army during the conquest of Gujrat. In the 34th year he received the

Lastly, his Majesty, trusting to his advisers and being occupied by various important affairs paid at first but little attention to this subject, till after having received some intimation of the unsatisfactory state of this matter, he issued another regulation, which saved the nation further losses, and was approved of by every one, far and near. On the 26th of Bahman, of the year 36, according to the Divine era (A.D. 1592), he adopted the second [i.e. 'Azud' 'd Dawlah] method, with one exception namely, he did not approve of the provision that a muhr the deficiency of which did not exceed three, and a rūpiya, the deficiency of which did not exceed six, surkhs, should still be regarded as of full weight. And this regulation was the only effectual method for preventing the fraudulent practices of unprincipled men, for the former regulations contained no remedy in cases when the officers of the mint coined money of the above deficiency in weight, or when treasurers reduced full coins to the same deficiency. Besides, shameless thievish people made light grain weights, and used to reduce muhrs, deficient by three grains, to six grains deficiency, whilst they accepted muhrs six grains deficient as muhrs deficient by nine grains. This reduction of coins being continued, large quantities of gold were stolen, and the losses seemed never to end. By the command of his Majesty grain weights of babūghūrī were made, which were to be used in weighing. On the same date other stringent regulations were issued, that the treasurers and revenue collectors should not demand from the tax payers any particular species of coins and that the exact deficiency in weight and purity, whatever it might be, should be taken according to the present rate and no more. This order of his Majesty disappointed the wicked, taught covetous men moderation, and freed the nation from the cruelty of oppressors.

A^s in 11

THE DIRHAM AND THE DĪNAR

Having given some account of the currency of the empire, I shall add a few particulars regarding these two ancient coins, and remark on the value of ancient coinage.

The Dirham or Dirhām as the word is sometimes given is a silver coin, the shape of which resembled that of a date-stone. During the khilafat of 'Umar,¹ it was changed to a circular form and in the time of Zubayr it was impressed with the words Allāh (God) barakat (blessing) Hayy is stamped upon it the chapter of the Qur'ān called Ikkhlās, and others say that he imprinted it with his own name. Others assert, that 'Umar was the first who stamped an impression on dirhams, whilst, according to some, Greek, Khusravite, and Himyarite dirhams were in circulation at the time of 'Abd' 'l Malik, the son Marwan by whose order Hajjāj the son of Yūsuf, had struck dirhams. Some say that Hajjāj refined the base dirhams, and coined them with the words Allāh' ahad (God is one), and Allāh' aṣ ṣamad (God is eternal), and these dirhams were called mahrūha (abominable), because God's holy name was thereby dishonoured, unless this term be a corruption of some other name. After Hajjāj, at the time of the reign of Yazid bin 'Abd' 'l Malik, 'Umar bin Hubayrah coined in the kingdom of 'Irāq better dirhams than Hajjāj had made, and afterwards Khalīd bin 'Abd' 'lāh Qasrī, when governor of 'Irāq, made them still finer, but they were brought to the highest degree of purity by Yūsuf son of 'Umar. Again, it has been said that Mus'ab bin Zubayr was the first who struck dirhams. Various accounts are given of their weights, some saying that they were of ten or nine, or six or five misqāls, whilst others give the weights of twenty, twelve, and ten qīrāts, asserting at the same time that 'Umar had taken a dirham of each kind, and formed a coin of fourteen qīrāts, being the third part of the aggregate sum. It is likewise said that at the time of 'Umar there were current several kinds of dirhams first, some of eight dāngs, which were called baghlī, after Rās baghl, who was an assay master, and who struck dirhams by the command of 'Umar,¹ but others call them baghallī, from baghal, which is the name of a village,² secondly, some of four dāngs, which were called fabrī, thirdly, some of three dāngs, which were known as maghrībī, and lastly, some of one dāng, named yamanī, the half of which four kinds 'Umar is said to have taken as a uniform average weight. Fāzil of Khujand says that in former days dirhams had been of two kinds first, full ones of

[¹ Furuq—P]

The Dīnār is a gold coin, weighing one misqāl, i.e. 1½ dirhams as they put 1 misqāl = 6 dāngs, 1 dāng = 4 fassūj, 1 fassūj = 2 habbas, 1 habba = 2 javs (barley grains), 1 jav = 6 khardals (mustard grain), 1 khardal = 12 fals, 1 fals = 6 faṭils, 1 faṭil = 6 naqīrs, 1 naqīr = 6 qitmīrs, and 1 qitmīr = 12 zaras. One misqāl, by this calculation, would be equal to 96 barley grains. Misqāl is a weight used in weighing gold, and it is also the name of the coin ¹ From some ancient writings it appears that the Greek misqāl is out of use, and weighs two qīrats less than this, and that the Greek dirham differs likewise from others, being less in weight by $\frac{1}{2}$ or $\frac{1}{3}$ of a misqāl

[¹ مخرجات in the Persian.—P.]

² According to some inferior MSS, the name of a kind of gold

A^{tin} 12

THE PROFIT OF THE DEALERS IN GOLD AND SILVER

One round muhr of 11 mashas buys one tola of gold of 10 bān, or one tola 2 surkhs of $9\frac{3}{4}$ bān, or 1 tola, 4 s of $8\frac{1}{2}$ ban or 1 tola 6 s of $9\frac{1}{4}$ bān, or 1 tola, 1 māsha of 9 bān, and similarly, according to the same proportion, the decrease of one ban increases the quantity of gold which a muhr can buy by one masha

The merchant buys for 100 Laṣl : Jalālī muhrs 130 t 2 m $0\frac{3}{4}$ s of Hun gold of $8\frac{1}{4}$ bāns Of this quantity 22 t 9 m $7\frac{1}{2}$ s burn away in melting and mix with the llāk : klālas, so that 107 t 4 m $1\frac{1}{2}$ s of pure gold remain which are coined into 105 muhrs, leaving a remainder of nearly half a tola of gold, the value of which is 4 rupees From the khāk : lhalas are recovered 2 t 11 m 4 s of gold, and 11 t 11 m $4\frac{1}{2}$ s of silver, the value of both of which is 35 rupees $12\frac{1}{2}$ tangas ² so that altogether the above mentioned quantity of Hun gold yields 105 muhrs 39 Rs and 25 dams

This sum is accounted for as follows First, 2 Rs 18 d $12\frac{1}{2}$ j, due to the workmen according to the rates which have been explained above, secondly, 5 Rs 8 d 8 j for ingredients, which sum is made up of 1 R 4 d $1\frac{1}{2}$ j on account of articles used in refining the metal, viz 26 d $16\frac{1}{2}$ j dung³, 4 d 20 j salonī, 1 d 10 j water, 11 d 5 j quicksilver, and 4 Rs 4 d $6\frac{1}{4}$ j on account of the khāk : lhalas (viz 21 d $7\frac{1}{4}$ j charcoal, and 3 Rs 22 d 21 j lead), thirdly, 6 Rs 37 $\frac{1}{2}$ d, which the owners of the gold take from the merchant, as a consideration for lending him the gold, this item goes to the Dewan if the gold belongs to the exchequer, fourthly, 100 Laṣl : Jalālī muhrs, which the merchant gets in exchange for the gold which he brought, fifthly 12 Rs 37 d $3\frac{1}{2}$ j which the merchant takes as his profit, sixthly, 5 muhrs 12 Rs $3\frac{1}{2}$ d, which go to the exchequer ⁴ According to this proportion merchants make their profits

Although gold is imported into Hindustan, it is to be found in abundance in the northern mountains of the country, as also in Tibet

¹ In text a gold coin —B]

² One tanga = 2 dāms, now a days one tanga = 2 pais

³ ساجک بسی —F]

⁴ There is a slight mistake of $1\frac{1}{2}$ grals, as the several items added up give 105 m 31 R 24 d 23 $\frac{1}{2}$ j, but not 105 m 39 R 25 d

Gold may also be obtained by the Salonī process from the sands of the Ganges and Indus and several other rivers, as most of the waters of this country are mixed with gold, however, the labour and expense greatly exceed the profit

One Rupee buys 1 t 0 m 2 s of pure silver, hence for 950 Rs the merchant gets 969 t 9 m 4 s of silver. Out of this quantity, 5 t 0 m 4½ s burn away in casting ingots. The remainder yields 1006 rupees and a surplus of silver worth 27½ dāms. The several items are—first, 2 Rs 22 d 12 j, as wages for the workmen (viz The Weighman 5 d 7½ j, the Chāshnīgīr 3 d 4½, the Melter 6 d 12½ j, the Zarrāb 2 Rs 1 d 0 j, the Silkachī 6 d 12½ j), secondly, 19 d 15 j, on account of requisites (viz 10 d charcoal and 15 j water), thirdly 50 Rs 13 d 0 j, payable to the Diwan, fourthly, 950 Rs, which the merchant gets in exchange for the silver he brought, and fifthly, 3 Rs 21 d 10½ j, being the profit of the merchant. If he refines the base silver at his own house, his profit will be much greater, but when he brings it to be coined, his profit cannot be so great.

Of the silver called lārī and shāhī and the other above mentioned baser coins one rupee buys 1 t 0 m 4 s so that 950 rupees will buy 989 t 7 m. In the Sabbākī process 14 t 10 m 1 s burn away, being at the rate of 1½ t per cent, and in making the ingots 4 t 11 m 3 s are lost in the fire. The remainder yields 1012 rupees, and from the khāk, khārā 3½ Rs are recoverable. The several items are—first 4 Rs 27 d 24½ j, on account of the wages of the workmen (viz the Weighman 5 d 7½ j, the Sabbāk 2 Rs 0 d 19 j, the Qur'lob 4 d 19 j, the Chāshnīgīr 3 d 4 j, the Melter 6 d 12½ j, the Zarrāb 2 Rs 1 d, the Silkachī 6 d 12½ j), secondly, 5 Rs 24 d 15 j for necessaries (viz 5 Rs 14 d lead, 10 d charcoal and 15 j water), thirdly, 50 Rs 24 d payable to the State, fourthly, 950 Rs which the merchant receives for his silver, fifthly, 4 Rs 29 d his profit¹. Sometimes the merchant gets the silver cheap, when his profit is much larger.

1044 dāms buy one man of copper, i.e. at the rate of 26 d 2½ j per ser. Out of this quantity, one ser is burnt away in melting, and as each ser yields 30 dāms, there are coined altogether 1170 dāms from which the merchant takes his capital, and 18 d 19½ j as profit, 33 d 10 j go to the workmen, and 15 d 8 j for necessaries (viz 13 d 8 j for charcoal, 1 d for water, and 1 d for clay), 58½ d go to the state.

¹ These items added give Rs 1015 25 d 14½ j, i.e., a little more than the sum mentioned by Abu I Fazl (1015 Rs 20 d)

THE ORIGIN OF METALS

The Creator by calling into existence the four elements, has raised up wonderful forms. Fire is absolutely warm, dry, light, air is relatively warm moist, light, water is relatively cold, moist, heavy, earth is absolutely cold, dry, heavy. Heat is the cause of lightness, and cold of heaviness, moistness easily separates particles, whilst dryness prevents their separation. This wonderful arrangement calls four compounds into existence, first, the āsār i *śulavī*¹, secondly, stones, thirdly, plants; fourthly, animals. From the heat of the sun watery particles become lighter, mix with the air, and rise up. Such a mixture is called bukhār (gas). From the same cause, earthy particles mix with the air, and rise up. This mixture is called dukhān (vapour). Sometimes, however, airy particles mix with the earth. Several philosophers call both of the above mixtures bukhār, but distinguish the mixture of watery particles and air by the name of moist, or watery bulhār, whilst they call the mixture of earthy particles and air dry bukhār, or dukhānī bukhār (vapour like gas). Both mixtures, they say, produce above the surface of the earth, clouds, wind, rain, snow, etc., and, below the surface of our earth, earthquakes, springs, and minerals. They also look upon the bukhār as the body, and upon the dukhān as the soul of things. From a difference in their quality and quantity, various bodies are called into existence as described in books on philosophy.

Minerals are of five kinds. first, those which do not melt on account of their dryness, as the yāqūt, secondly, those which do not melt, on account of their liquidity, as quicksilver, thirdly, those which can be melted, being at the same time neither malleable, nor inflammable, as blue stone. fourthly, those which can be melted, being however, not malleable, but inflammable, as sulphur, fifthly, those which can be melted, and are malleable, but not inflammable, as gold. A body is said to melt when from the union of the inherent principles of dryness and moisture its particles are movable, and a body is called malleable when we can make it extend in such a manner as to yield a longer and wider surface without, however, either separating a part from it or adding a part to it.

When in a mixture of bukhār with dukhān, the former is greater in quantity and when, after their mixture and complete union, the heat of the sun causes the whole to contract quicksilver will be produced

¹ Or downs from on high, as rain, snow, etc.

Since no part of it is destitute of dukhān, the dryness is perceptible, hence, on touching it, it does not affect the hand, but flees from it, and since its contraction was produced by heat, no warmth can dissolve it. Again, when in a mixture of bukhūr and dukhān, both are nearly in equal proportion a tenacious greasy moisture is produced. At the time of fermentation, airy particles enter, when cold causes the whole to contract. This mass is inflammable. If the dukhān and the greasiness are a little in excess sulphur will be produced in colour either red or yellow, or grey or white. If the proportion of the dukhān is large, and that of the grease less, arsenic will result, which is red and yellow. And if the quantity of the bukhūr is greater, pure, black and yellow naphtha will arise, after the mixture gets solid. Since in all, cold was the cause of the contraction they can be melted, and on account of the prevalence of greasiness and tenacious moistness, they are also inflammable, though, on account of the moistness, not malleable.

Although quicksilver and sulphur are the only component parts of "the seven bodies", there arise various forms from a difference in purity, or from peculiar circumstances of the mixture, or from a variety of the action of the component parts on each other. Thus silver will result, when neither of the two components mixes with earthy particles, when they are pure and become perfectly united, and when the sulphur is white, and less than the quicksilver. Or, when both are in equal proportions and the sulphur red and capable of colouring, gold will originate. Again under similar circumstances, if both contract after the mixture, but before a complete union has been effected Irchīnī will be produced. This body is also called Ahanchīnī and seems really to be raw gold, some say it is a kind of copper. Again if only the sulphur be impure and the quicksilver the larger component with an additional power of burning copper will result. And if the mixture be not thorough and the quicksilver larger, tin will be produced, some say that purity of the components is essential. If both compounds be of an inferior kind closely mixed and if the earthy particles of the quicksilver have a tendency of separating and the power of burning be inherent in the sulphur, iron will result. And if under similar conditions the intermixture be not perfect, and the quicksilver quantitatively larger lead will come into existence. These seven metals are called the seven bodies, and quicksilver has the name of the mother of the bodies, and sulphur the father of the bodies. Quicksilver is also denominated the spirit and arsenic and sulphur the roots of life.

Jast (pewter)¹ which according to the opinions of some is Ruh :

[¹ Or zinc?—P.]

tūtuyā, and resembles lead, is nowhere mentioned in philosophical books, but there is a mine of it in Hindustan, in the territory of Jālor, which is a dependency of the Sūba of Ajmir. Some practical mechanics¹ are of opinion that the metal called ṛivās is a silver in the state of leprosy, and quicksilver a silver in the state of apoplexy; that lead is gold apoplectic and burnt and bronze crude gold, and that the chemist, like the doctor can restore these diseased metals by the principles of similarity and opposition.

Practical men form of the above seven bodies several compounds, used for ornaments vessels, etc. Among them I may mention 1 Safīdrū, which the people of Hindustan call l'īsī. It is a mixture of 4 sers of copper to 1 ser of tin melted together. 2 Rūy 4 sers of copper to 1½ sers of lead. It is called in this country bhaṅgār. 3 Brass which the Hindus call ṛital, is made in three ways first 2½ sers copper to 1 ser rūh : tūtuyā which is malleable when cold. secondly 2 sers of copper to 1 ser of rūh : tūtuyā which is malleable when heated, thirdly 2 sers of copper to 1 ser of rūh : tūtuyā not worked with the hammer but by casting. 4 Sim : sūllīta composed of lead silver and bronze, it has a black lustre and is used in painting. 5 Haft josh which like the Khārchīnī is nowhere to be found. It is said to consist of six metals. Some call it tālīqūn whilst others give this name to common copper. 6 Ishldhāt a compound of eight metals viz the six of the haftjosh rūh : tūtuyā and l'īsī. It is also made of seven compounds. 7 Kaulpatr, 2 sers of safīdrū and 1 ser of copper. It is coloured and looks well and belongs to the inventions of his Majesty².

A^t in 14

ON SPECIFIC GRAVITY

It has been said above that various compounds result from a mixture of bukhār and duklīn which themselves consist of light and heavy elements. Besides buljār is wet or dry and a complete union of the two sets in sometimes before and after the mixture and sometimes in either of these conditions. It is on this account that a compound whose fiery and airy particles are more numerous than its watery and earthy particles is lighter than a mineral in which there are more watery and earthy particles, and likewise every mineral in which the bukhār predominates

¹ According to some MSS. the Hindus

² This phrase seems to mean that the invention was made at the time of Akbar over the dukhān is lighter than a mineral, in which the opposite is the case. Again a mineral in which the complete union of the bulhār and dukhān has set in, is heavier than one which has not reached this degree, because the interstices between the particles, and the entering of air, make a body large and light. Bearing this in mind, we have a means of discovering the weight and lightness of every body. Some one,¹ now long ago dead, has expressed the weight of several bodies in verses (metre Muqtas) —

*Z rū yi juṣṣa yi haftād u yak diram sīmah,
Chil o shash ast, u z' arzīz enj u hashht shumūr,
Zahab sad ast surb panjah u nuh, āhan chil
Birinj o mis chihil o panj, nuqra panjah u chūr*

"Quicksilver² 14 71, Rūy 14 46, Tin 14 38; Gold 100, Lead 59, Iron 40, Brass and Copper 45, Silver 54" Others have expressed the numbers by mnemo-technical words in rhyme (metre Ramal) —

*Nuh filizz i mustawiyū³ 'l haym rā chūn bar kashī, Iktūlāf i wazn dārad har yak ī bī ishtibāh
Zar lakan, zībaq alam, usrub dahan, arzīz hal
Fizza nad, āhan yak ī, miss u shabūh mah, rūy māh*

"If you weigh equal volumes of the following nine metals, you will doubtlessly find their different weights as follows: gold *lakan*³ quicksilver alam, lead dahan, tin hal, silver nad, iron yali, copper and brass mah rūy māh" If of the

their weights to the 100 —

it is we find the weights by common and hydrostatic balances. Several deep-sighted philosophers compute the weight of bodies with a reference to water. They fill a suitable vessel with water, and throw into it 100 misqals of each metal, and from the quantities of water thrown out upon the introduction of the metals are found the differences between them in volume and weight. The greater the quantity of the water which 100 misqals of a body displace, the greater is its volume and the less its weight,

¹ Abu Naṣr i Farāhī of Fārah a town in Sijistan. His real name is Muḥammad Badr ad Din. He has written a Vocabulary in rhyme —

Joi	side
Sil	325,
Ab	unity
gra	specific
77	Copper 501, Iron

² The Arabic consonants of the mnemo-technical words lakan alam etc, represent numbers: thus $l + k + n = 30 + 20 + 50$ $a + l + m = 1 + 30 + 40$, etc and reversely. Thus 100 m. of silver displace $9\frac{3}{4}$ m. of water, and the same quantity of gold, $5\frac{1}{4}$ m. If the weight of the water displaced by a body be subtracted from its weight in air, its weight in water will be found. The scales of the air balance are both suspended in air; those of the hydrostatic balance are both on the surface of the water. As the heavier body possesses the greater power for sinking, it will, in any case, move in the direction of the perpendicular; but, if either of the two scales be on the surface of the water, and the other in the air, the latter scale, although perhaps the lighter, will necessarily sink, as air, being a finer substance than water, does not offer so much resistance. A body will sink in water if the quantity of water displaced by it be less than the weight of the body, and a body will float if that quantity be greater, and if the water displaced be equal to the weight of the body, its upper side will coincide with the surface of the water. *Abū Rayhān*¹ has drawn up a table which I shall insert here

Quantity of water displaced by 100 misqāls of	Misqal Dang Tassū,			Apparent weight (weight in water) of 100 misqāls of	Misqal Dang Tassūj.
	Misqal	Dang	Tassū,		Misqal	Dang	Tassūj.
Gold, ²	5	1	2	Gold,	95	4	2
Quicksilver,	7	2	1	Quicksilver,	92	3	3
Lead, . .	8	5	3	Lead,	91	1	3
Silver,	9	1	1	Silver,	90	1	3
Rūy, .	11	2	3	Rūy,	88	4	3
Copper,	11	3	3	Copper,	88	3	3
Brass,	11	4	3	Brass,	88	2	3
Iron,	12	5	2	Iron,	87	3	2
Tin,	13	4	3	Tin	86	2	3
Yāqūt (light blue),	25	1	2	Yāqūt (light blue),	74	4	2
Yāqūt (red);	26	3	3	Yāqūt (red),	74	3	3
Ruby (lu⁴l),	27	5	2	Ruby (lu⁴l),	72	3	2
Zumurrud,	36	2	3	Zumurrud,	63	4	3
Pearl,	37	1	3	Pearl,	62	5	3
Lapis lazuli,	38	3	3	Lapis lazuli	61	3	3
Cornelian,	38	3	3	Cornelian,	61	3	3
Amber	39	3	3	Amber, .	60	3	3
Bullūr,	40	3	3	Bullūr,	60	3	3

[¹ أبو ريحان برهاني — P.]

The weight (in air) of the under mentioned metals the volume of 100 misqāls of gold being taken as the unit of volume

The weight (in air) of the under mentioned precious stones the volume of 100 misqāls of the blue ḡāqut being taken as the unit of volume

	مِسْقَال	دِنْجَر	تَمَبَك		مِسْقَال	دِنْجَر	تَمَبَك
Gold	100	0	0	Yāqut (light blue)	91	3	3
Quicksilver,	71	1	1	Yāqūt (red)	94	3	,
Lead	59	2	2	Ruby,	90	2	3
Silver,	54	3	3	Zumurrud,	69	3	3
Ruy	46	2	3	Pearls	67	5	2
Copper	45	3	3	Lāpis lazuli	65	3	2
Brass	45	3	5	(?)Cornelian	64	4	2
Iron	10	0	0	Amber	61	3	1
Tin	38	2	2	Bullūr	63	3	3

4th in 15

THE IMPERIAL HARM

His Majesty is a great friend of good order and propriety in business. Through order the world becomes a meadow of truth and reality, and that which is but external receives through it a spiritual meaning. For this reason the large number of women¹—a vexatious question even for great statesmen—furnished his Majesty with an opportunity to display his wisdom and to rise from the low level of worldly dependence to the eminence of perfect freedom. The imperial palace and household are therefore in the best order.

His Majesty forms matrimonial alliances with princes of Hindustan, and of other countries and secures by these ties of harmony the peace of the world.

As the sovereign by the light of his wisdom has raised fit persons from the dust of obscurity and appointed them to various offices, so does he also elevate faithful persons to the several ranks in the service of the seraglio. Short sighted men think of impure gold which will gradually turn into pure gold,² but the far sighted know that his Majesty understands how to use elixirs³ and chemical processes. Any kind of growth

[¹ درگهان — P]

² So according to the opinion of the philosophers of the Middle Ages

³ Elixirs change quickly that which is worthless into pure gold will alter the constitution of a body, copper and iron will turn to gold, and tin and lead to silver, hence it is no matter of astonishment if an excellent being changes the worthless into men. "The saying of the wise is true that the eye of the exalted is the elixir for producing goodness." Such also are the results flowing from the love of order of his Majesty, from his wisdom insight, regard to rank, his respect for others his activity, his patience. Even when he is angry, he does not deviate from the right path, he looks at everything with kindly feelings weighs rumours well, and is free from all prejudice, he considers it a great blessing to have the good wishes of the people and does not allow the intoxicating pleasures of this world to overpower his calm judgment.

His Majesty has made a large enclosure with fine buildings inside where he reposes. Though there are more than five thousand women he has given to each a separate apartment. He has also divided them into sections and keeps them attentive to their duties. Several chaste women have been appointed as dāroghas and superintendents over each section, and one has been selected for the duties of writer. Thus as in the imperial offices, everything is here also in proper order. The salaries are sufficiently liberal. Not counting the presents which his Majesty most generously bestows the women of the highest rank receive from 1610 to 1028 Rs per mensem. Some of the servants have from 51 to 20 others from 40 to 2 Rs. Attached to the private audience hall of the palace is a clever and zealous writer, who superintends the expenditure of the Harem and keeps an account of the cash and the stores. If a woman wants anything, within the limit of her salary, she applies to one of the Tahuıldārs (cash keepers) of the seraglio. The Tahuıldār then sends a memorandum to the writer who checks it when the General Treasurer makes the payment in cash as for claims of this nature no cheques are given.

The writer also makes out an estimate of the annual expenditure writes out summarily a receipt which is countersigned by the ministers of the state. It is then stamped with a peculiar imperial seal, which is only used in grants connected with the Harem when the receipt becomes payable. The money itself is paid by the cash keeper of the General Treasury to the General Tahuıldār, who on the order of the writer of the Harem hands it over to the several Sub Tahuıldārs for distribution among the servants of the seraglio. All moneys are reckoned in their salaries at the current rate¹.

The inside of the Harem is guarded by sober and active women, the

¹ At 40 dāms per rupee

most trustworthy of them are placed about the apartments of his Majesty Outside the enclosure the eunuchs are placed, and at a proper distance, there is a guard of faithful Rājapūts, beyond whom are the porters of the gates Besides, on all four sides, there are guards of Nobles, Ahadīs, and other troops, according to their ranks

Whenever Begams, or the wives of nobles, or other women of chaste character, desire to be presented, they first notify their wish to the servants of the seraglio, and wait for a reply From thence they send their request to the officers of the palace, after which those who are eligible are permitted to enter the Harem Some women of rank obtain permission to remain there for a whole month

Notwithstanding the great number of faithful guards, his Majesty does not dispense with his own vigilance, but keeps the whole in proper order

Aⁱⁿ 16THE ENCAMPMENT ON JOURNEYS¹

It would be difficult to describe a large encampment, but I shall say something on the equipage used for hunting parties and short journeys

1 The Gulāl bār is a grand enclosure, the invention of his Majesty, the doors of which are made very strong, and secured with locks and keys. It is never less than one hundred yards square² At its eastern end a pavilion of two entrances is erected, containing 54 divisions, 24 yards long and 14 broad, and in the middle there stands a large chūbīn rā,olī,³ and round about it a *sarā parda*⁴ Adjoining to the chūbīn, they built up a two storied pavilion, in which his Majesty performs divine worship, and from the top of which, in the morning, he receives the compliments of the nobility No one connected with the seraglio enters this building without special leave Outside of it twenty four chūbīn rā,olīs are erected, 10 yards long and 6 yards wide, each separated by a canvas, where the favourite women reside There are also other pavilions and tents for the servants, with *sāyabāns*⁵ of gold embroidery, brocade, and velvet. Adjoining to this is a sarā parda of carpet, 60 yards square, within which a few tents are erected, the place for the Urdū begīs,⁶ and other female

[¹ In text Yurish T properly means 'attack, assault'. Yurish hā seems to mean here 'military expeditions—P']

[² مربع مائة يارد—P]

³ Described in the twenty first Aⁱⁿ

⁴ Awnings

⁵ Armed women

servant Farther on up to the private audience hall, there is a fine open space, 150 yards long and 100 yards broad, called the Mahtābī, and on both sides of it, a screen is set up as before described, which is supported by poles 6 yards long, fixed in the ground at distances of two yards. The poles are one yard in the ground, and are ornamented with brass knobs on the top, and kept firm by two ropes, one passing inside and the other outside of the enclosure. The guards watch here, as has been described.

In the midst of the plain is a raised platform,¹ which is protected by an awning, or Nam-gīra, supported by four poles. This is the place where his Majesty sits in the evening, and none but those who are particularly favoured are here admitted. Adjoining to the Gulāl bār, there is a circular enclosure, consisting of twelve divisions, each of thirty yards, the door of the enclosure opening into the Mahtābī, and in the midst of it is a Chūbīn rā, ofī, ten yards long, and a tent containing forty divisions, over which twelve awnings are spread, each of twelve yards and separated by canvases. This place, in every division of which a convenient closet is constructed, is called Ibachkī,² which is the (*Chauhatī*³) name used by his Majesty. Adjoining to this a Sarī parda is being put up, 150 yards in length and breadth, containing sixteen divisions, of thirty six square yards, the Sarī-parda being as before, sustained by poles with knobs. In the midst of it, the state hall is erected, by means of a thousand carpets, it contains seventy two rooms, and has an opening fifteen yards wide. A tent like covering or Qalandarī made of wax-cloth, or any other lighter material, is spread over it, which affords protection against the rain and the sun, and round about it are fifty awnings, of twelve yards each. The pavilion, which serves as Diwān : khūss or private audience hall, has proper doors and locks. Here the nobles and the officers of the army, after having obtained leave through the Bakhshīs,⁴ pass before the Emperor, the list of officers eligible for admission being changed on the first of every month. The place is decorated, both inside and outside with carpets of various colours, and resembles a beautiful flower bed. Outside of it, to a distance of 350 yards, ropes are drawn, fastened to poles, which are set up at a distance of three yards from each other. Watchmen are stationed about them. This is the Diwān ī Āmm, or public audience hall, round which, as above described,

¹ As may be still seen in the ruins of Pathpur Sikri

² تاح "tent wall" —P]

³ In text shachkī khānd —P]

⁴ Paymasters. The Commanding Officers were at the same time paymasters as they collected the rents of the lands assigned to them for the payment of their contingents

the various guards are placed At the end of this place, at a distance of twelve *tanābs*¹ is the Naqqāra Khāna,² and in the midst of the area the *Ikās diyā*³ is lighted up

Some encampments, as just now described, are sent off, and one of them is put up by the Farrāshes on a piece of ground which the *Mīr Manzils*⁴ have selected as an eligible spot, whilst the other camp furniture is sent in advance, to await the approach of his Majesty Each encampment requires for its carriage 100 elephants, 500 camels, 400 carts, and 100 bearers It is escorted by 500 troopers, Mansabdars,⁵ Ahadīs Besides, there are employed a thousand Farrāshes, natives of Iran, Tūran and Hindustan, 500 pioneers, 100 water carriers, 50 carpenters, tent makers, and torch bearers, 30 workers in leather, and 150 sweepers

The monthly pay of the foot varies from 240 to 130 dāms

Aⁱⁿ 17

THE ENCAMPMENT OF THE ARMY

Although his Majesty but rarely collects his armies a large number of troops accompany him in whatever direction an expedition may go, but a considerable number, in every province, are employed on various services and are not allowed to follow him On account of the crowding of camp followers, and the number of the troops themselves, it would take a soldier days to find his tent, and how much worse would it be for a stranger? His Majesty has invented an admirable method of encamping his troops, which is a source of much comfort to them On an open ground they pitch the imperial seraglio the audience hall, and the Naqqāra Khāna, all occupying a space the length of which is 1530 yards To the right and left, and behind, is an open space of 360 yards, which no one but the guards is allowed to enter Within it, at a distance of 100 yards to the left⁶ and centre are the tents of Maryam Mākan,⁷ and Gulbadan Begum and other chaste ladies, and the tents of Prince Daryāl, to the

[¹ طاب شب گزی —P]

² A turret on the top of which the band plays Regarding the tanab, vide the tenth Aⁱⁿ of the third book

³ A high pole to the top of which an immense lamp is fixed Vide p 50

⁴ Quartermasters

⁵ Grandees

[⁶ Qol, M is said to be the centre of an army in battle array —P]

⁷ Maryam Malānī (i.e., dwelling with the Virgin Mary, who together with Asiyah, the wife of Pharaoh Khadija Muhammad's first wife, and the four perfect w Bānū Begum, vide appears to be the

.....
 ۴۷۲۱۰ ۰ ۱۵۱-۲۳
 ۲۰ ۱۰۰

right, those of Prince Sultān Salīm, and to the left, those of Prince Shāh Murād Behind their tents, at some distance, the offices and workshops are placed, and at a further distance of 30 yards behind them, at the four corners of the camp, the bāzārs The nobles are encamped without on all sides, according to their rank

The guards for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday encamp in the centre, those for Sunday and Monday, on the right, and those for Tuesday and Wednesday, on the left

A*in 18

ON ILLUMINATIONS

His Majesty maintains that it is a religious duty and divine praise to worship fire and light, surly, ignorant men consider this forgetfulness of the Almighty, and fire worship But the deep sighted know better As the external form of the worship of "the select",¹ is based upon propriety, and as people think the neglect of some sort of worship abominable, there can be nothing improper in the veneration of that exalted element which is the source of man's existence, and of the duration of his life, nor should base thoughts enter such a matter

How beautifully has Shaykh Sharif² 'd Dīn said "What can be done with a man who is not satisfied with the lamp when the sun is down?" Every flame is derived from that fountain of divine light (the sun), and bears the impression of its holy essence If light and fire did not exist, we should be destitute of food and medicines, the power of sight would be of no avail to the eyes The fire of the sun is the torch of God's sovereignty

At noon of the day, when the sun enters the 19th degree of Aries, the whole world being then surrounded by his light they expose a round piece of a white and shining stone, called in Hindi Surajkrānt, to the rays of the sun A piece of cotton is then held near it, which catches fire from the heat of the stone This celestial fire is committed to the care of proper persons The lamp lighters, torch bearers, and cooks of the household, use it for their offices, and when the year has passed away in happiness, they renew the fire The vessel in which this fire is preserved, is called Agingir, i e fire pot

¹ The members of the Divine Faith

² This famous saint died in the beginning of the fifteenth century Munair is a town in Bahār, vide Journal As Soc Bengal, 1868 p 7 13 from below and the biographies of Indian Saints in the fourth book His works are to be found among the Persian MSS of the Society's Library

thor
. I ced
s of acc e gr for esd

s b ap
A
e t et na
d e li ow
a r r f tl ou av

ns f ri
gr
—
rt ri u ap
et

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15
16
17
18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30 31 32
33 34 35
36
37
38
39 40
41 42
43
44
45
46
47 48
49
50 51
52
53
54
55
56 57
58
59 60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82 83
84
85
86
87
88 89
90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99
100

There is also a shining white stone, called Chandrkrānt, which, upon being exposed to the beams of the moon, drips water.

Every afternoon, one *ghari*¹ before sunset, his Majesty, if riding, alights or, if sleeping, he is awakened. He then lays aside the splendour of royalty and brings his external appearance in harmony with his heart. And when the sun sets, the attendants light twelve white candles,² on twelve candlesticks of gold and silver, and bring them before his Majesty, when a singer of sweet melodies, with a candle in his hand, sings a variety of delightful airs to the praise of God, beginning and concluding with a prayer for the continuance of this auspicious reign. His Majesty attaches the utmost importance to praise and prayer, and earnestly asks God for renewed light.

It is impossible to describe the beauty and various forms of the candlesticks and shades, and to give an account of the offices of the workmen. Some of the candlesticks weigh ten mans and upwards, and are adorned with various designs, some single, others of two branches and more. They give light to the internal eye. His Majesty has invented a candlestick one yard high. Five others are placed on the top of it, and each is adorned with the figure of an animal. White wax candles, three yards and upwards in length are cast for it so that a ladder is required to snuff it. Besides there are everywhere flambeaux,³ both inside and outside, which increase the light very much. The first, second, and third nights of every lunar month when there is moonlight but for a short time, eight wicks are used. From the fourth to the tenth, they decrease one in number every night so that on the tenth night, when the moon is very bright, one is sufficient, and they continue in this state till the fifteenth, and increase one wick every day from the sixteenth to the nineteenth, and increase twenty second they increase one daily, and from the twenty fourth to the last eight wicks are lighted up. They allow for every wick one ser of oil and half a ser of cotton. In some places there are fat burners, where grease is burnt instead of oil. The allowance varies according to the size of the wick.

In order to render the royal camp conspicuous to those who come from far his Majesty has caused to be erected, in front of the Durbār, a pole upwards of forty yards high, which is supported by sixteen ropes,

¹ One ghari = 24 minutes.

² [پانچ سو کاندیاں، i.e. wax candles.—P.]

³ [Fat burners with several wicks are very common in India.]

⁴ For each flambeau.

and on the top of the pole is a large lantern which they call *Ālās dīja*¹. Its light, seen from great distance guides the soldiers to the imperial camp and helps them to find their tent. In former times before the lamp was erected the men had to suffer hardships from not being able to find the road.

In this department Mansabdars, Aladis and other troops are employed. The allowance of a foot soldier never exceeds 2100 and is never less than 80 damas.

PLATE 19

THE INSIGNS OF ROYALTY

The *Shamsa*² of the arch of royalty is a divine light which God directly transfers to kings without the assistance of men and kings are fond of external splendor because they consider it an image of the Divine glory. I shall mention some of the insignia used at present.

1 The Aurang or throne is made of several forms some are inlaid with precious stones and others are made of gold silver etc. 2 The Chatr or umbrella is adorned with the most precious jewels of which there are never less than seven. 3 The Saya ban is of an oval form a yard in length and its handle like that of the umbrella is covered with brocade and ornamented with precious stones. One of the attendants holds it to keep off the rays of the sun. It is also called Astābqūr. 4 The *Kaulab*³ of which several are hung up before the assembly hall.

These four insignia are used by kings only.

5 The Ālam or standard. When the king rides out not less than five of these are carried along with the *Qur*⁴ wrapped up in scarlet cloth bags. On days of festivity and in battle they are unfurled. 6 The Ātirtoq a kind of Ālam but smaller than it is adorned with the tails of Tibetan yaks. 7 The Tumantog is like the Chatrtog but longer. Both insignia are flags of the highest dignity and the latter is bestowed upon great nobles only. 8 The Jhan lu is an Indian flag. The Qur necessarily contains a flag of each kind but on great occasions many are displayed.

Of musical instruments used in the Naqārahkhana I may mention 1 the Kuurgā commonly called damama there are eighteen pairs of them more or less, and they give a deep sound 2 The naqāra, twenty pair, more or less 3 The dukul, of which four are used 4 *The Karnā*¹ is made of gold, silver, brass, and other metals and they never blow fewer than four 5 The surnā of the Persian and Indian kinds, they blow nine together 6 The nafīr, of the Persian, European, and Indian kinds, they blow some of each kind 7 The sing is of brass and made in the form of a cow's horn, they blow two together 8 The sanj, or cymbal of which three pair are used

¹ From Ālās dīja and Ālās is the name of the lamp. ² Shamsa is the name of the sun. ³ Kaulab is the name of the umbrella. ⁴ Qur is the name of the standard.

Formerly the band played four gharīs before the commencement of the night, and likewise four gharīs before daybreak, now they play first at midnight, when the sun commences his ascent, and the second time at dawn. One gharī before sunrise the musicians commence to blow the surnā, and wake up those that are asleep, and one gharī after sunrise, they play a short prelude, when they beat the kucorga a little, whereupon they blow the karnā, the nafīr, and the other instruments, without, however, making use of the naqāra, after a little pause the surnās are blown again, the time of the music being indicated by the nafīrs. One hour later the naqāras commence, when all musicians raise "the auspicious strain"². After this they go through the following seven performances: 1 The Mursalī which is the name of a tune played by the mursil, and afterwards the bardasht, which consists likewise of certain tunes, played by the whole band. This is followed by a pianissimo, and a crescendo passing over into a diminuendo, 2 The playing of the four tunes, called ihhlāfī, ibtidā'ī, shīrāzī, qalandarī nigar qatra,³ or nūhūd qatra, which occupies an hour 3 The playing of the old ⁴ Khwarizmīte tunes. Of these his Majesty has composed more than two hundred, which are the delight of young and old, especially the tunes Jalālshāhī, Mahūmīr karkat (?), and the Nawro-ī 4 The swelling play of the cymbals 5 The playing of Bā miyān dawr 6 The passing into the tunes azfar, also called rah-i-bālā, after which comes a pianissimo 7 The Khwarizmīte tunes, played by the Mursil, after which he passes into the mursalī, he then pauses, and commences the blessings on his Majesty, when the whole band strikes up a pianissimo. Then follows the reading of beautiful sentences and poems. This also lasts for an hour. Afterwards the surnā

¹ Or Karrāna [In text karna —P]

² Probably blessings on his Majesty

³ Several of these names of melodies are unclear and will in all probability remain so. Perhaps the words shīrāzī qalandarī a hermit of Shiraz, belong to each other. Nigar qatra means, behold the tear [Qalandar is a kind of wandering dervish of wild appearance —P]

⁴ [In text 'old and new' —P] players perform for another hour, when the whole comes to a proper conclusion.

His Majesty has such a knowledge of the science of music as trained musicians do not possess, and he is likewise an excellent hand in performing, especially on the naqāra

Mansabdārs, Ahad's, and other troops are employed in this department. The monthly pay of a foot soldier does not exceed 340 and is not less than 74 dāms

Āⁱⁿ 20

THE ROYAL SEALS

Seals are used in the three¹ branches of the Government, in fact every man requires them in his transactions². In the beginning of the present reign, Mawlanī Maqsūd, the seal engraver, cut in a circular form upon a surface of steel, in the riqā^c character, the name of his Majesty, and those of his illustrious ancestors up to Timūrlang, and afterwards he cut another similar seal, in the nasta^cliq character, only with his Majesty's name. For judicial transactions a second kind of seal was made, mihrābī in form,³ which had the following verse round the name of his Majesty —

Rāsī mūyib : rizā yi khudāst kas nadīdam kī gum shud az rāh ī rāsī
 "Uprightness is the means of pleasing God, I never saw any one lost in the straight road"

Tamkīn made a new seal of the second kind, and afterwards Mawlānā ʿAlī Ahmad of Dīhlī improved both. The round small seal goes by the (chaghatā^c) name of Uzūk, and is used for farmān & sabās,⁴ and the large one, into which he cut the names of the ancestors of his Majesty, was at first only used for letters to foreign kings, but nowadays for both. For other orders a square seal is used, engraved with the words Allāh^c Akbar jall^c jalālahū, whilst another of a peculiar stamp is used for all matters connected with the seraglio. For the seals attached to farmāns, another stamp is used of various forms.

Of seal engravers I shall mention

1 Mawlānā Maqsūd of Hirāt, one of the servants of Humāyūn, who writes well the riqā^c and nasta^cliq characters. The astrolabe, globes, and various *mistars*¹ which he made, were much admired by people of experience. The patronage of his Majesty perfected his art.

¹ Corresponding to the threefold division of the Āⁱⁿ : Aklari

² The word muār, a seal, means also a stamp, and generally, the signature of a man.

2 Tamāin of Kābul. He was educated in his native country, and brought his art to such a perfection as to excite the jealousy of the preceding engraver, whom he surpassed in the nastaʿliq.

3 Mir Dost of Kābul. He cuts both the riqāʿ and nastaʿliq characters in cornelian. He does not come up to the preceding artists. His riqāʿ is better than his nastaʿliq. He also understands assaying.

4 Mawlānā Ibrāhīm. In the art of cutting cornelians he is the pupil of his brother Sharaf of Yazd. He surpasses the ancient engravers, and it is impossible to distinguish his riqāʿ and nastaʿliq from the master pieces of the best calligraphers. He engraved the words laʿl jalāli, or the glorious ruby, upon all imperial rubies of value.

5 *Mawlānā ʿAlī Ahmad*² of Dihli who according to all calligraphers, stands unsurpassed as a steel engraver, so much so that his engravings are used as copies. His nastaʿliq is charming, but he writes also other characters as well. He learned the trade from his father Shaykh Husayn, studied the manner of Mawlānī Maqṣūd, and eventually surpassed all.

Āṭīnā 21

THE FARRĀSH KHANA

His Majesty considers this department³ as an excellent dwelling place, a shelter from heat and cold, a protector against the rain, as the ornament of royalty. He looks upon its efficiency as one of the insignias of a ruler, and therefore considers the care bestowed upon it as a part of Divine worship. The department has been much improved, both in the quality and the quantity of the stores, and also by the introduction of new fashions. I shall mention a few particulars as specimens for future enquirers.

1 The Bārgāh when large, is able to contain more than ten thousand intervals, and draw a string from the first hole at the left hand to the first hole of the right of the pasteboard. Similarly the two second holes are joined, and so on, care being taken that the horizontal strings are parallel. This contrivance is called mistar, from satar a line. The copyist then puts the blank sheets on the top of the mistar and presses on them with the hands when the strings will leave marks on the paper sufficiently clear to prevent the writer from writing crookedly.

¹ Asrām of Hirāt in his Fabaqāt i Akbari, mentions him among the contemporaneous Persian poets and gives a few of his verses.

[* سازش - P.]

people It takes a thousand farrāshes, a week to erect with the help of machines There are generally two door poles, fastened with hinges If plain (i.e. without brocade, velvet, or gold ornaments) a bārgāh costs 10,000 rupees and upwards, whilst the price of one full of ornaments is unlimited The price of others may be estimated from the price of a plain one 2 The Chūbīn rāwafī is raised on ten pillars They go a little into the ground, and are of equal height, with the exception of two, which are a little higher, as the crossbeam rests upon them The pillars have above and below, a dāsa,¹ to keep them firm, and several rafters pass over the dāsas and the crossbeam, the whole being kept tightly together by clamps and bolts and nuts The walls and the roof consist of mats There is one door or two, and at the height of the lower dāsas there is a raised platform The inside is ornamented with brocade and velvet, and the outside with scarlet sackcloth,² tied to the walls with silk tape 3 The Do-āshiyāna manzil or house of two storeys, is raised upon eighteen pillars, six yards in height, which support a wooden platform, and into this, pillars of four cubits in length are fixed with bolt and nuts, forming an upper storey The inside and outside are ornamented, as in the preceding On the march it is used by his Majesty as a sleeping apartment, and also as a place of divine worship where he prays to the Sun, and hence the building resembles a man who strives after God without forgetting his worldly duties whose one eye is directed to the solitude of pure devotion, and the other eye to the motley sarā of the world After the devotions are over, the women are allowed to enter to pay their compliments, and after them outsiders On journeys his Majesty inspects in this building the rations (of the elephants, camels, etc.), which is called gharōka,³ or window 4 The Zamīndo is a tent made of various forms, sometimes with one, sometimes with two door poles, screens are also hung up within it so as to form divisions 5 The ‘Ajā‘ibī consists of nine awnings on four pillars Five of the awnings are square, and four tapering, sometimes they make it so as to contain one division only and four tapering, sometimes they make it so as to contain one division only, supported by a single pole 6 The Mandal is composed of five awnings joined together, and is supported by four poles Four of the awnings are let down so as to form a private room, sometimes all four are drawn up, or one side only is left open 7 The Ath khamba consists of seventeen awnings, sometimes

¹ A triangular piece of wood fixed into the angle formed by the vertical beam and the cross beam, a support

[² Saqirāt, perhaps a scarlet broad cloth —P]

[³ Jharokā, a small window in an upper storey, especially one in a palace, to obtain a view —P]

separate, sometimes joined together, they are supported by eight poles 8 The Khargāh is a folding tent made in various ways, some with one, others with two doors 9 The Shāmyāna awning is made of various sizes, but never more than of twelve yards square 10 The Qalandarī has been described¹ 11 The Sarāparda was made in former times of coarse canvas, but his Majesty has now caused it to be made of carpeting, and thereby improved its appearance and usefulness 12 The Gulābār is a wooden screen, its parts being fastened together, like the walls of the Khargāh, with leather straps, so that it can be folded together when the camp breaks up The gulābār is covered with red cloth, tied with tape

Carpets²

His Majesty has caused carpets to be made of wonderful varieties and charming textures, he has appointed experienced workmen, who have produced many masterpieces The gilims of Irān and Tūrān are no more thought of, although merchants still import carpets from Goshkān,² Khūzistan, Kırman, and Sabzwār All kinds of carpet weavers have settled here, and drive a flourishing trade These are found in every town, especially in Āgra, Fathpūr and Lāhor In the imperial workshops single gilims are made 20 gaz 7 tassūjes long, and 6 gaz 11½ tassūjes broad, at a cost of 1810 rupees, which those who are skilled in the business have valued at 2715 rupees

Takya-namads, or woollen coverlets, are brought from Kābul and Persia,⁴ but are also made in this country

It would take up too much time to describe the ḡājams, shatrinjīs, balūchīs, and the fine mats which look as if woven of silk

A² in 22

THE ĀBDĀR KHĀNA

His Majesty calls this source of life "the water of immortality", and has committed the care of this department to proper persons He does not drink much, but pays much attention to this matter Both at home and on travels he drinks Ganges water. Some trustworthy persons are stationed on the banks of that river, who dispatch the water in sealed jars. When the court was at the capital Āgra and in Fathpūr, the water came from the district of Sorūn,¹ but now² that his Majesty is in the Panjāb, the water is brought from Hardwār. For the cooking of the food, rain-water or water taken from the Jamna and the Chanāb is used, mixed with a little Ganges water. On journeys and hunting parties, his Majesty, from his predilection for good water, appoints experienced men as water-tasters.

¹ Vide p 48

[² In text gilim which is a carpet without a pile —P]

Saltpetre, which in gunpowder produces the explosive heat, is used by his Majesty as a means for cooling water, and is thus a source of joy for great and small. Saltpetre is a saline earth. They fill with it a perforated vessel, and pour some water over it, and collecting what drops through, they boil it, clean it, and let it crystallize. One ser of water is then put into a goglet of pewter, or silver, or any other such metal, and the mouth closed. Then two and a half sers of saltpetre are thrown into a vessel, together with five sers of water, and in this mixture the goglet is stirred about for a quarter of an hour, when the water in the goglet will become cold. The price of saltpetre varies from $\frac{3}{4}$ to 4 mans per rupee.

Since the thirtieth year³ of the Divine Era, when the imperial standards were erected in the Panjāb, snow and ice have come into use. Ice is brought by land and water, by post carriages or bearers, from the district of Panhān, in the northern mountains, about forty-five los from Lāhor. The dealers derive a considerable profit, two to three sers of ice being sold per rupee. The greatest profit is derived when the ice is brought by water, next when by carriages, and least when by bearers. The

Out of the ten boats employed for the transport of ice, one arrives daily at the capital, each being manned by four boatmen. The ice bundles contain from six to twelve sers, according to the temperature. A carriage brings two loads. There are fourteen stages, where the horses are changed, and besides, one elephant is used. Twelve pieces of ten to four sers arrive daily. By this kind of transport, a ser of ice costs in winter 3 d 21 j, during the rains 14 d 20 j, in the intermediate time 9 d 21½ j.

¹ The nearest station on the Ganges from Āgra.

² A.D. 1596. As in 1586 Fathpur had ceased to be the capital Akbar resided mostly in the Panjab.

³ A.D. 1586.

and in the average,¹ 5 d 15½j If it is brought by bearers, twenty-eight men are required for the fourteen stages They bring every day one load, containing four parcels In the beginning of the year, the ice costs 5 d 19½j, in the middle 16 d 2½j, and in the end 19 d 15½j per ser, in the average,¹ 8½ d

All ranks use ice in summer, the nobles use it throughout the whole year

Ā⁴ in 23

THE IMPERIAL KITCHEN

HIS Majesty even extends his attention to this department, and has given many wise regulations for it, nor can a reason be given why he should not do so, as the equilibrium of man's nature, the strength of the body, the capability of receiving external and internal blessings, and the acquisition of worldly and religious advantages, depend ultimately on proper care being shown for appropriate food This knowledge distinguishes man from beasts, with whom, as far as mere eating is concerned, he stands upon the same level If his Majesty did not possess so lofty a mind, so comprehensive an understanding, so universal a kindness, he would have chosen the path of solitude, and given up sleep and food altogether, and even now, when he has taken upon himself the temporal and spiritual leadership of the people, the question, "What dinner has been prepared to-day?" never passes over his tongue In the course of twenty four hours his Majesty eats but once, and leaves off before he is fully satisfied, neither is there any fixed time for this meal, but the servants have always things so far ready, that in the space of an hour, after the order has been given, a hundred dishes are served up The food allowed to the women of the seraglio commences to be taken from the kitchen in the morning, and goes on till night

Trustworthy and experienced people are appointed to this department, and all good servants attached to the court, are resolved to perform well whatever service they have undertaken Their head is assisted by the Prime Minister himself His Majesty has entrusted to the latter the affairs of the state, but especially this important department Notwithstanding all this, his Majesty is not unmindful of the conduct of the servants He appoints a zealous and sincere man as Mīr Bakāwal, or

¹ The text has ṣarāṣarī which may mean the average, but the price given by Abū l Faṣl is not an average The charges for ice at the time of Akbar may be compared to the prices of the present age Here in Calcutta one ser of American ice costs two annas or ½ rupee 1 c 4² = 5 dams of Akbar

Master of the Kitchen, upon whose insight the success of the department depends, and gives him several upright persons as assistants. There are also treasurers for the cash and the stores, several tasters, and a clever writer. Cooks from all countries prepare a great variety of dishes of all kinds of grains, greens, meats, also oily, sweet, and spicy dishes. Every day such dishes are prepared as the nobles can scarcely command at their feasts, from which you may infer how exquisite the dishes are which are prepared for his Majesty.

In the beginning of the year the Sub-treasurers make out an annual estimate, and receive the amount, the money bags and the door of the store house being sealed with the seals of the Mīr Bakāwal and the writer, and every month a correct statement of the daily expenditure is drawn up, the receipt for which is sealed by the same two officers, when it is entered under the head of the expenditure. At the beginning of every quarter,¹ the Dīwān ; *buyūtāl*² and the Mīr Bakāwal, collect whatever they think will be necessary, e.g. Sukhdās rice from Bharaj,³ Deuzīra rice from Gwālār, Jinjīn rice from Rajōri and Nīmlah, ghī from Hīṣār Fīrūza; ducks,⁴ water fowls, and certain vegetables from Kashmir. Patterns are always kept. The sheep, goats, berberies,⁵ fowls, ducks,⁶ etc., are fattened by the cooks, fowls are never kept less than a month. The slaughter house is without the city or the camp, in the neighbourhood of rivers and tanks, where the meat is washed, when it is sent to the kitchen in sacks sealed by the cooks. There it is again washed, and thrown into the pots. The water carriers pour the water out of their leather bags into earthen vessels, the mouths of which are covered with pieces of cloth, and sealed up, and the water is left to settle before it is used. A place is also told off as a kitchen garden, that there may be a continual supply of fresh greens. The Mīr Bakāwal and the writer determine the price of every eatable, which becomes a fixed rule, and they sign the day book, the estimates, the receipts for transfers, the list of wages of the servants, etc., and watch every transaction. Bad characters, idle talkers, unknown persons are never employed, no one is entertained without a personal security, nor is personal acquaintance sufficient.

The victuals are served up in dishes of gold and silver, stone and earthenware, some of the dishes being in charge of each of the Sub-

[¹ Fasl —P]

² Superintendent of the stores workshops etc

[³ Bhraich —B.]

[⁴ Qaz T goose not duck —P]

[⁵ Apparently the Barbary goat —P]

[⁶ Qaz T goose —P]

Bakāwals During the time of cooking, and when the victuals are taken out, an awning is spread, and lookers on kept away. The cooks tuck up their sleeves, and the hems of their garments, and hold their hands before their mouths and noses when the food is taken out, the cook and the Bakāwal taste it, after which it is tasted by the Mīr Bakāwal, and then put into the dishes. The gold and silver dishes are tied up in red cloths, and those of copper and china in white ones. The Mīr Bakāwal attaches his seal, and writes on it the names of the contents, whilst the clerk of the pantry writes out on a sheet of paper a list of all vessels and dishes, which he sends inside, with the seal of the Mīr Bakāwal, that none of the dishes may be changed. The dishes are carried by the Bakāwals, the cooks, and the other servants, and macebearers precede and follow, to prevent people from approaching them. The servants of the pantry send at the same time, in bags containing the seal of the Bakāwal, various kinds of bread, saucers of curds piled up, and small stands containing plates of pickles, fresh ginger, limes, and various greens. The servants of the palace again taste the food, spread the table cloth on the ground, and arrange the dishes, and when after some time his Majesty commences to dine, the table servants sit opposite him in attendance, first, the share of the derwishes is put apart, when his Majesty commences with milk or curds. After he has dined, he prostrates himself in prayer. The Mīr Bakāwal is always in attendance. The dishes are taken away according to the above list. Some victuals are also kept half ready, should they be called for.

The copper utensils are tinned twice a month, those of the princes, etc., once, whatever is broken is given to the braziers, who make new ones.

Ā'in 24

RECIPES FOR DISHES

There are many dishes, but the description is difficult. I shall give some particulars. Cooked victuals may be arranged under three heads, first, such in which no meat is used, called now a days sūfiyāna secondly, such in which meat and rice, etc., are used, thirdly, meats with spices. I shall give ten recipes of each kind.

First, 1 Zard birinj 10 s of rice, 5 s of sugarcandy, 3½ s of ghi, raisins, almonds, and pistachios, ½ s of each, ¼ s of salt, ⅓ s of fresh ginger, 1½ dāms saffron, 2½ miqāls of cinnamon. This will make four ordinary dishes. Some make this dish with fewer spices, and even without any and instead of without meat and sweets, they prepare it also with meat and salt 2 Khushka 10 s rice, $\frac{1}{2}$ s salt, but it is made in different ways This will likewise give four dishes One maund of Dewzira paddy yields 25 s of rice, of which 17 sers make a full pot, jinyin rice yields 22 sers 3 Khichrī Rice, mūng dāl,¹ and ghī 5 s of each, $\frac{1}{2}$ s salt, this gives seven dishes 4 Shīrbirinj 10 s milk, 1 s rice, 1 s sugarcandy, 1 d salt, this gives five full dishes 5 Thūlī 10 s of wheat, ground, of which one third will be lost, half of that quantity of ghī, 10 misqāls of pepper, 4 m cinnamon, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m cloves and cardamums, $\frac{1}{2}$ s salt, some add milk and sweetmeats this gives four dishes 6 Chikhī 10 s of wheat flour, made into a paste, and washed till it is reduced to 2 s of fine paste This is mixed with spices, and dressed with various kinds of meat 1 s ghī; 1 s onions, saffron, cardamums, and cloves, $\frac{1}{2}$ d of each, cinnamon, round pepper, and coriander seed, 1 d of each, fresh ginger, salt 3 d of each this gives two dishes, some add lime juice 7 Badinjān ² 10 s, 1 s ghī $3\frac{1}{2}$ s onions, $\frac{1}{2}$ s ginger and lime juice, pepper and coriander seed, 5 m of each, cloves, cardamums and assafoetida, each $\frac{1}{2}$ m This gives six dishes 8 Pahū For ten sers of dal of vetches (or gram, or skinned lentils, etc) take $2\frac{1}{2}$ s ghī $\frac{1}{2}$ s of salt and fresh ginger, 2 m cuminseed, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m assafoetida this yields fifteen dishes It is mostly eaten with Khushka 9 Sāg It is made of spinach, and other greens, and is one of the most pleasant dishes 10 s spinach, fennel, etc, $1\frac{1}{2}$ s ghī, 1 s onions, $\frac{1}{2}$ s fresh ginger, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m of pepper, $\frac{1}{2}$ m of cardamums and cloves, this gives six dishes 10 Halwā Flour, sugarcandy, ghī, 10 s of each, which will give fifteen dishes, it is eaten in various ways

There are also various kinds of sugared fruits, and drinks which I cannot here describe

Secondly, 1 Qabūlī 10 s rice, 7 s meat, $3\frac{1}{2}$ s ghī, 1 s gram skinned, 2 s onions, $\frac{1}{2}$ s salt, $\frac{1}{2}$ s fresh ginger, cinnamon round pepper cuminseed, of each 1 d, cardamums and cloves, $\frac{1}{2}$ d of each, some add almonds and raisins this gives five dishes 2 Duzdbiryān 10 s rice, $3\frac{1}{2}$ s ghī, 10 s meat, $\frac{1}{2}$ s salt this gives five dishes 3 Qīma ³ Palāo Rice and meat as in the preceding, 4 s ghī, 1 s peeled gram, 2 s onions, $\frac{1}{2}$ s salt, $\frac{1}{2}$ s fresh ginger, and pepper, cuminseed, cardamums and cloves, 1 d of each this gives five dishes 4 Shulla 10 s meat, $3\frac{1}{2}$ s rice, 2 s ghī, 1 s gram, 2 s onions, $\frac{1}{2}$ s salt, $\frac{1}{2}$ s fresh

[¹ All split peas pulse lentils vetches etc, are called dal — P]

[² Badinjān is the egg plant or brinjāl — P]

[³ Qīma is pounded (or minced) meat — P]

ginger, 2 d garlic, and round pepper, cinnamon, cardamums, cloves, 1 d of each this gives six dishes 5 Buḡhrā 10 s meat, 3 s flour; 1½ s ghī, 1 s gram, 1½ s vinegar, 1 s sugarcandy, onions, carrots, beets, turnips, spinach, fennel, ginger, ¼ s of each, saffron, cloves, cardamums, cuminseed, 1 d of each, 2 d cinnamon, 8 m round pepper: this gives twelve dishes 6 Qīma Shūrbā 10 s meat, 1 s rice, 1 s ghī, ½ s gram, and the rest as in the Shulla this gives ten full dishes 7 Harīsa 10 s meat, 5 s crushed wheat, 2 s ghī, ½ s salt, 2 d. cinnamon this gives five dishes 8 Kashl 10 s meat, 5 s crushed wheat, 3 s ghī, 1 s gram ¼ s salt, 1½ s onions, ½ s ginger, 1 d cinnamon, saffron, cloves cardamums, cuminseed, 2 m of each. this gives five dishes 9 Halīm The meat, wheat, gram, spices, and saffron, as in the preceding, 1 s ghī, turnips, carrots, spinach, fennel, ¼ s of each this gives ten dishes 10 Qutab, which the people of Hind call sanbūsa This is made in several ways 10 s meat, 4 s fine flour; 2 s ghī, 1 s onions, ¼ s fresh ginger, ½ s salt, 2 d pepper and coriander seed, cardamums, cuminseed, cloves, 1 d of each, ¼ s of summāq This can be cooked in twenty different ways, and gives four full dishes

Thirdly, 1 Biryān For a whole Dashmandī sheep, take 2 s salt, 1 s ghī, 2 m saffron, cloves, pepper, cuminseed it is made in various ways 2 *Yakhnī*¹ for 10 s meat, take 1 s onions, and ½ s salt 3 Yulma A sheep is scalded in water till all the wool comes off, it is then prepared like yakhnī, or any other way, but a lamb, or a kid, is more preferred 4 Kabāb is of various kinds 10 s meat, ½ s ghī, salt, fresh ginger, onions, ¼ s of each, cuminseed, coriander seed, pepper, cardamums, cloves, 1½ d of each 5 Musamman They take all the bones out of a fowl through the neck, the fowl remaining whole, ½ s minced meat, ½ s ghī, 5 eggs, ¼ s onions, 10 m coriander, 10 m fresh ginger, 5 m salt, 3 m round pepper, ¼ m saffron It is prepared as the preceding 6 Dupiyāza 10 s meat that is middling fat, 2 s ghī; 2 s onions, ¼ s salt, ½ s fresh pepper, cuminseed, coriander seed, cardamums, cloves, 1 d of each, 2 d pepper this will give five dishes 7. *Mutanjana*² sheep 10 s meat that is middling fat, 2 s ghī, ½ s gram; ¼ s ginger, 1 d cuminseed, round pepper, cloves, cardamums, coriander seed, 2 d of each, this will give seven dishes full It is also made of fowl and fish 8 *Dampukht*³ 10 s meat, 2 s ghī, 1 s onions, 11 m fresh ginger, 10 m pepper, 2 d cloves, 2 d cardamums 9 Qaliyy

[¹ Yakhnī is a gravy or broth — P]

[² Does this mean fried?]

[³ Dam pukht means cooking slowly in a vessel with its lid closed by paste — P]

10 s meat, 2 s ghi, 1 s onions, 2 d pepper, cloves, cardamums, 1 d each, $\frac{1}{2}$ s salt this will give eight dishes In preparing qaliya, the meat is minced and the gravy rather thick, in opposition to the mutanjana Here in Hind they prepare it in various ways 10 Malghūba 10 s meat, 10 s curds, 1 s ghi, 1 s onions, $\frac{1}{2}$ s ginger, 5 d cloves this will give ten dishes

Ā'in 25

OF BREAD

This belongs, properly speaking, to the preceding chapter Bread is made in the pantry There is a large kind,¹ baked in an oven, made of 10 s flour, 5 s milk, $1\frac{1}{2}$ s ghi, $\frac{1}{2}$ s salt They make also smaller ones The this kind is baked on an iron plate One ser will give fifteen, or even more There are various ways of making it, one kind is called chapātī, which is sometimes made of lhushka, it tastes very well when served hot For the bread used at court, one man of wheat is made to yield $\frac{1}{2}$ m of fine flour, 2 s coarsely pounded flour, and the rest bran, if this degree of fineness be not required, the proportions are altered

Ā'in 26

THE DAYS OF ABSTINENCE (Sufiyāna)²

His Majesty cares very little for meat, and often expresses himself to that effect It is indeed from ignorance and cruelty that although various kinds of food are obtainable, men are bent upon injuring living creatures, and lending a ready hand in killing and eating them, none seems to have an eye for the beauty inherent in the prevention of cruelty, but makes himself a tomb for animals If his Majesty had not the burden of the world on his shoulders, he would at once totally abstain from meat, and now it is his intention to quit it by degrees, conforming, however, a little to the spirit of the age His Majesty abstained from meat for some time on Fridays, and then on Sundays, now on the first day of every solar month, on Sundays, on solar and lunar eclipses, on days between two fasts, on the Mondays of the month of Rajab³ on the feast day of every solar month, during the whole month of Farvardīn,¹ and during the month in which his Majesty was born, viz the month of Ābān. Again, when the number of fast days of the month of Ābān had become equal to the number of years his Majesty had lived, some days of the month of Āzar also were kept as fasts. At present the fast extends over the whole month. These fast days, however, from pious motives, are annually increased by at least five days. Should fasts fall together, they keep the longer one, and transfer the smaller by distributing its days over other months. Whenever long fasts are ended, the first dishes of meat come dressed from the apartments of Maryam Makani, next from the other begums, the princes, and the principal nobility.

[¹ Probably a large flat cake — P]

² Living according to the manners of the Sufis

.....

In this department nobles, ahādīs, and other military, are employed. The pay of a foot soldier varies from 100 to 400 dāms.

*A*¹ in 27

STATISTICS OF THE PRICES OF CERTAIN ARTICLES

The prices of course vary, as on marches, or during the rains, and for other reasons, but I shall give here the average prices for the information of future enquirers.

A The spring harvest

Wheat, per man	12 d	Safflower seed (carthamus),
Kabul gram, do	16 d	do	8 d
Black gram, do	8 d	Fenugreek, do	10 d
Lentils, do	12 d	Peas, ² do	6 d
Barley, do	8 d	Mustard seed do	12 d
Millet, do	6 d	Kewū , do	7 d
Lanseed per man	10 d

B The autumnal harvest

Mushkīn paddy per man	110 d	Jinjūn rice, do	80 d
Sada paddy, do	100 d	Dakah (?) rice, do	50 d
Sukhdas rice, do	100 d	Zirhi rice, do	40 d
Dūnaparsad rice do	90 d	Sathi rice, do	20 d
Samzira rice, do	90 d	Mūng (black gram) do	18 d
Shakarchinī rice do	90 d	Māsh (a kind of vetch) per
Dewzira rice do	90 d	man	16 d

¹ February March [or March and April ?—P], vide the first *A*¹ in of the third book. Ābān corresponds to October November.

² Mashang or mushang a pea ?—P]

Moth (a kind of vetch)		Lahdara do	8 d
per man	12 d	Ködram do	7 d
White sesame do	20 d	Kurî do	7 d
Black sesame do	19 d	Shamalāh (Hind Sāwanā)
Lobiya (a kind of bean) do	12 d	do	6 d
Juwarî (a kind of millet)		Cal (Hind Kangni) do	8 d
do	10 d	Millet (Hind chûa) do	8 d

Mung dal per man	18 d	Dal of Lentils per man	16 d
Nulhud dal do	16½ d	Moth dil do	12 d

Wheat flour per man	22 d	Nu/ud flour per man	22 d
Do coarse do	15 d	Barley flour do	11 d

C Vegetables

Fennel per man	10 d	Garlic flowers per ser	1 d
Spinach do	16 d	Upalhak (from Kashmir)
Mint do	40 d	do	1 d
Onions do	6 d	Jîtu do	3 d
Garlic do	40 d	Ginger (green) do	2½ d
Turnips do	21 d	Po i do	1 d
Cabbage per ser ¹	1 d	Kachnâr buds do	½ d
Kankachhu from Kash		Chula (sorrel) do	½ d
mîr do	4 d	Bathua do	¼ d
Duniretu	2 d	Ratsaka do	1 d
Shaqgul (wild carrot ²) do	3 a	Chaula i do	¼ d

D Living animals and meats

Dashmandî sheep per head	6½ R	Mutton per man	65 d
Afghan sheep 1st kind do	2 R	Goat do	54 d
Do 2nd kind do	1½ R	Geese per head	20 d
Do 3rd kind do	1¼ R	Duck per head	1 R
Kashmîr sheep do	1½ R	Tu/udari (bustard) ³ do	20 d
Hindustanî sheep do	1½ R	Kulāng (crane) ⁴ do	20 d
Barbarî goat 1st kind do	1 R	Jarz (a kind of bustard) ⁵
Do 2nd kind do	¾ R	do	18 d

[¹ Tu b rad h not turn p — P]

[² Or wild parsnip? — P]

[³ Tuqāda is the Rubara bustard — P]

[⁴ Kulāng is the Common Crane or coolan — P]

[⁵ For charz in Baluchistan this is the name of the Hubara but elsewhere of the Flo can — P]

Durrāy (black partridge), per head 3 d.	Lāwah , ³ do. 1 d.
Kabg ¹ (partridge), do 20 d.	Karicānal (stone curlew), do. 20 d.
Būdana , ² do. 1 d.	Fākhta (ringdove), do 4 d

E. Butter, Sugar, etc

Ghī, per man 10½ d	Refined Sugar, per ser 6 d
Oil, do 80 d	White sugar candy, do 5½ d
Milk, do 25 d	White sugar, per man 128 d.
Curds, do 18 d.	Brown sugar, do. 56 d

F Spices

Saffron, per ser 400 d	Turmeric (Hind haldī) do 10 d
Cloves, do 60 d	Coriander seed, do 3 d
Cardamums, do 52 d	Siyāhdāna (Hind kalaunji), do 1½ d.
Round pepper, do 17 d	Assafœtida, do 2 d.
Long pepper, do 16 d	Sweet fennel, do 1 d.
Dry ginger, do 4 d.	Cinnamon, do 40 d.
Fresh do, do. 2½ d	Salt, per man 16 d.
Cuminseed, do 2 d
Aniseed, per ser 2 d

G. Pickles

Sour limes, per ser 6 d.	Pickled bamboo, per ser 4 d.
Lemon juice, do 5 d	Do apples, do 8 d.
Wine vinegar 5 d	Do quinces, do 9 d
Sugarcane vinegar, do 1 d	Do garlic, do 1 d
Pickled ashtarqihār , do 8 d	Do onions, do ½ d
Mangoes in oil, do 2 d	Do bādinjān (egg plant), do. 1 d.
Do in vinegar, do 2 d	Do raisins and munaqqa , ⁴ do 8 d
Lemons in oil, do 2 d	Do kachnār , do 2 d.
Do in vinegar, do 2 d	Do peaches, do 1 d
Do in salt, do 1½ d	Do sahajna (horse radish) 1 d.
Do in lemon juice, do 3 d	Do karīl buds (capparis), do ½ d
Pickled ginger 2½ d
Adarshākh , do 2½ d.
Turnips in vinegar, do 1 d.
Pickled carrots, do. ½ d

[¹ Kakk the Chukor partridge — P]

[² The Common Quail — P]

[³ The Rock Bush quail — P]

[⁴ Kisalmisā salted raisins, munaqqa large black raisins — P]

Pickled karīl berries , per ser	$\frac{1}{2}$ d	Do cucumbers, do	$\frac{1}{2}$ d
Do sūran , do	1 d	Do bādrang , ¹ (gourd) do	$\frac{1}{2}$ d
Do mustard	$\frac{1}{2}$ d	Do kachālū , do	$\frac{1}{2}$ d
Do torī (a kind of cucumber)	$\frac{1}{2}$ d	Do radishes, do	$\frac{1}{2}$ d

Ā'in 28

THE FRUITERY

His Majesty looks upon fruits as one of the greatest gifts of the Creator, and pays much attention to them. The horticulturists of Irān and Turan have, therefore, settled here, and the cultivation of trees is in a flourishing state. Melons and grapes have become very plentiful and excellent, and water melons, peaches, almonds, pistachios, pomegranates, etc., are everywhere to be found. Ever since the conquest of Kabul, Qandahār, and Kashmir, loads of fruit are imported, throughout the whole year the stores of the dealers are full, and the bāzārs well supplied. Muskmelons come in season, in Hindūstān, in the month of Farvardīn (February–March),² and are plenty in Urdībīhīsh (March–April).³ They are delicious, tender, opening, sweet smelling, especially the kinds called nāshpālī, bābāshaylī, alisherī, alcha, barg, nay, dūd, chirāgh, etc. They continue in season for two months longer. In the beginning of Sharīwar (August),⁴ they come from Kashmir, and before they are out of season plenty are brought from Kābul, during the month of Āzar (November),⁵ they are imported by the caravans from Badaḵshān, and continue to be had during Day (December).⁶ When they are in season in Zābulstān, good ones also are obtainable in the Panjab, and in Bhakkar and its vicinity they are plentiful in season, except during the forty cold days of winter. Various kinds of grapes are here to be had from Khurdād (May)⁷ to Amurdād (July),⁸ whilst the markets are stocked with Kashmir grapes during Shahrīwar.⁴ Eight sers of grapes sell in Kashmir for one dām, and the cost of the transport is two rupees per man. The Kashmiris bring them on their backs in conical baskets, which look very curious.

[¹ Badrang not gourd. Perhaps a citron.—P.]

[² March–April.—P.]

[³ April–May.—P.]

[⁴ August–September.—P.]

[⁵ November–December.—P.]

[⁶ December–January.—P.]

[⁷ May–June.—P.]

[⁸ July–August.—P.]

From Māh (September)¹ till *Urdābihist*² grapes come from Kābul, together with cherries,³ which his Majesty calls shāhālū, seedless pomegranates, apples, pears, quinces, guavas, peaches, apricots, girdālūs, and ālūchas, etc., many of which fruits grow also in Hindūstān. From Samarqand even they bring melons, pears, and apples.

Whenever his Majesty wishes to take wine, opium, or kūkār (he calls the latter sābras), the servants in charge place before him stands of fruits; he eats a little, but most is distributed. The fruits are marked according to their degree of excellence: melons of the first quality are marked with a line drawn round the top, those of the second, with two lines, and so on.

In this department Mansabdars,⁴ Ahādīs, and other soldiers are employed, the pay of a foot soldier varies from 140 to 100 d.

The following tables contain particulars regarding the names, seasons, taste, and prices of various fruits.

A Tūrānī Fruits

Arhang melons, 1st quality, at	2½ R	Plums, do	8 d
Do, 2nd and 3rd do, at 1 to 2½ R		Khūbānī (dried apricots), per ser	8 d
Kābul melons, 1st do, at 1 to 1½ R		Qandahar dry grapes, do	7 d
Do, 2nd do, at ¾ to	1 R	Figs, per ser	7 d
Do, 3rd do, at ½ to	¾ R	Munaqqa , do	6½ d
Samarqand apples, 7 to 15 for	1 R	Jujubes, do	3½ d
Quinces, 10 to 30 for {	1 R	Almonds, without the shell, do	28 d
Pomegranates, per man , 6½ to	15 R	Do, with do, do	11 d
Guavas, 10 to 100 for	1 R	Pistachios, do, do	9 d
Kabul and European apples, 5 to 10 for	1 R	Chilghāza ⁴ nuts, per ser	8 d
Kashmir grapes, per man 108 d		Sinjīd (jujubes), do	6½ d
Dates, per ser	10 d	Pistachios, without shell, do	6 d
Raisins (kishmish), do	9 d	Jauz (nuts), do	4½ d
Abjosh (large raisins), do	9 d	Filberts, do	3 d
		Hazel ⁵ nuts, do	2½ d

¹ September-October — P]

² The original has a word kūlār which is not to be found in our dictionaries. It may be cerasus. [Gūās is the common name in Persia and in Kashmir for the white sweet cherry — P]

³ A town in Bada Khehān

⁴ Edible seed of pinus Gerardiana — P]

⁵ Girdān is properly the walnut — P]

B The sweet fruits of Hindustan

Mangoes, per hundred, up		Tendū , do	2 d
to	40 d	Ūsīra	*
Pine apples, one for	4 d	Dates, per ser	4 d
Oranges, ¹ two for	1 d	Anguhal	*
Sugarcanes, two for	1 d	Dela , do	1 d
Jackfruits, two for	1 d	Gula	*
Plantains do	1 d	Bholsari , per ser	4 d
Ber , per ser	2 d	Tarkul , two for	1 d
Pomegranates, per man ,		Paniyāla , per ser	2 d
80 to	100 d	Lahsaura , do	1 d
Guavas, ² two for	1 d	Gumbhi , do	4 d
Figs, per ser	1 d	Karahrī	4 d
Mulberry, do	2 d	Tarrī	*
Custard apples, ³ one for	1 d	Banga , two for	1 d
Melons per man	40 d	Gular , ⁴ per ser	2 d
Water melons, one	2 to 10 d	Pīlu , do	2 d
Khīrnī , per ser	4 d	Barauta	*
Mahuwā , do	1 d	Piyār , do	4 d
Dephāl , do	4 d

* The original does not mention the price

Mulberries and *gūlar*s are in season during spring, pine apples, oranges sugarcane, bers, ūsiras, bholsaris, gumbhis, déphals during winter, jackfruits, tarkuls figs, melons, lahsauras, karahrīs, mahuwās, tendūs, pīlūs, barautas, during summer, and mangoes plantains dates, delās, gūlas, pomegranates, guavas, water melons, paniyalas, bangas, khīrnīs, piyārs during the rains

C Dried Fruits

Coco nuts, one for	4 d	Malhānā , per ser	4 d
Dry Dates per ser	6 d	Supyari , do	8 d
Walnuts, do	8 d	Kaulgatta , do	2 d
Chiraunchi do	4 d

Dates, walnuts, chiraunchis, and kaulgattas are in seasons during summer, and coco nuts, malhānas, and supyaris, during winter

[¹ Kāuta ?]

[² Amrud guava but in Persia and locs ly too in India a pear —P]

[³ Sadī phāl The custard apple is sita phāl —P] The original says that custard apples are to be had throughout the whole year This seems a mistake of the MSS The remark su is the next fruit (melons)

[⁴ Gūlar wild fg —P]

D Vegetables

Palūcal , per ser	2 d	Kachālū , per ser	2 d
Gourd, ¹ one	2½ d	Chachīndā , do	2 d
Bādīnyan , per ser	1½ d	Sūran , do	1 d
Tura ī , do	1½ d	Carrots, do	1 d
Kandūrī , do	1½ d	Singhāra , do ²	3 d
Senb , do	1½ d	Sālak , do	2 d
Peth , do	1½ d	Pīndālu , do	2 d
Karīla , do	1½ d	Siyātī	*
Kakura , do	1½ d	Kaseru , do	3 d

Surans and siyātīs are in season during summer, palūcals, gourds, tura īs, kachālūs, chachīndas, landūrīs, senbs, peths, karīlas, kakuras, and singharas during the rains, and carrots, sālaks, pīndālus and laserūtis, during winter. Bādīnyāns are to be had throughout the year.

E Sour Fruits

Limes, four up to	1 d	Ghep	*
Amalbet , do	1 d	Biyaūrā , one for	8 d
Galgāl , two up to	1 d	Āwlā , ³ per ser	2 d

Limes and āulas are to be had in summer, the others during the rains.

F Fruits somewhat acid

Ambīlī , per ser	2 d	Kait , four up to	1 d
Badhal one for	1 d	Kanku	*
Kamraḥ , four up to	1 d	Pakar , per ser	½ d
Nārangī , ⁴ two up to	1 d	Karnā , one for	1 d
Mountain grapes	*	Labhīrā	*
Jāman per ser	1 d	Janbhīrī , five up to	1 d
Phulsa , do	1½ d	Garnal	*
Karaunda , do	1 d

* The original does not mention the price.

Kamraḥs and nārangīs,⁴ are in season during winter, ambīlīs, badhals, mountain grapes, phalsas, labhīrās, during summer, and kaitis, pākars, karnās, jāmans, karaundās, janbhīrīs, during the rains.

The fruits of Hindustan are either sweet, or subacid, or sour, each kind is numerous. Some fruits also taste well when dry, others as above described are used when cooked. I shall give now a few details.

[¹ Kadu pumpkin.—P.]

[² The water nut.—P.]

[³ The emblic myrobalans.—P.]

[⁴ The orange with close skin.—P.]

The Mango The Persians call this fruit Naghzak, as appears from a verse of *Khusraw*¹ This fruit is unrivalled in colour, smell, and taste, and some of the gourmets of Tūrān and Irān place it above muskmelons and grapes In shape it resembles an apricot, or a quince, or a pear, or a melon, and weighs even one ser and upwards There are green, yellow, red, variegated, sweet, and subacid mangoes The tree looks well, especially when young, it is larger than a walnut tree, and its leaves resemble those of the willow, but are larger The new leaves appear soon after the fall of the old ones in autumn, and look green and yellow, orange, peach coloured, and bright red The flower, which opens in spring, resembles that of the vine, has a good smell, and looks very curious² About a month after the leaves have made their appearance, the fruit is sour, and is used for preserves and pickles It improves the taste of qalyas (p 61), as long as the stone has not become hard If a fruit gets injured whilst on the tree, its good smell will increase Such mangoes are called loyilās The fruit is generally taken down when unripe, and kept in a particular manner Mangoes ripened in this manner are much finer They mostly commence to ripen during summer, and are fit to be eaten during the rains, others commence in the rainy season, and are ripe in the beginning of winter, the latter are called Bhadvyya Some trees bloom and yield fruit the whole year, but this is rare Others commence to ripen, although they look unripe, they must be quickly taken down, else the sweetness would produce worms Mangoes are to be found everywhere in India, especially in Bengal, Gujrāt, Mālwah, Khandesh, and the Dekhan They are rarer in the Panjāb, where their cultivation has, however, increased, since his Majesty made Lāhor his capital A young tree will bear fruit after four years They put milk and treacle round about the tree, which makes the fruits sweeter Some trees yield in one year a rich harvest, and less in the next one, others yield for one year no fruit at all When many mangoes are eaten, digestion is assisted by drinking milk with the kernels of the mango stones The kernels of old stones are subacid and taste well, when two or three years old they are used as medicine If a half ripe mangoe, together with its stalk to a length of about two fingers, be taken from the tree, and the broken end of its stalk be closed with warm wax, and kept in butter, or honey, the fruit will retain its taste for two or three months, whilst the colour will remain even for a year

¹ Vide the fourth note on p 70 of my Persian text edition
² Shāgarf beautiful, fine — P]

They have several methods of distilling it, first, they put the above liquor into brass vessels, in the interior of which a cup is put, so as not to shake, nor must the liquid flow into it. The vessels are then covered with inverted lids which are fastened with clay. After pouring cold water on the lids, they kindle the fire, changing the water as often as it gets warm. As soon as the vapour inside reaches the cold lid, it condenses, and falls as arrack into the cup. Secondly, they close the same vessel with an earthen pot, fastened in the same manner with clay, and fix to it two pipes, the free ends of which have each a jar attached to them, which stands in cold water. The vapour through the pipes will enter the jars and condense. Thirdly, they fill an earthen vessel with the above mentioned liquor, and fasten to it a large spoon with a hollow handle. The end of the handle they attach to a pipe, which leads into a jar. The vessel is covered with a lid, which is kept full with cold water. The arrack, when condensed, flows through the spoon into the jar. Some distil the arrack twice, when it is called Duātasha, or twice burned. It is very strong. If you wet your hands with it, and hold them near the fire the spirit will burn in flames of different colours without injuring the hands. It is remarkable that when a vessel containing arrack is set on fire you cannot put it out by any means but if you cover the vessel, the fire gets extinguished at once.

The Jackfruit has the shape of a black pudding,¹ looks greenish, and is sometimes a yard long and half a yard broad. When small it resembles a water melon, its peel is full of thorns. It grows out of the branches, the trunk, and the roots. Those that grow below the ground are sweetest. On opening you see round clusters, so viscous, that the fingers stick together, when you take them out. The tree looks like a nut tree, but is somewhat bigger and has larger leaves. The flower like the fruit, has a good smell. The fruits are also taken down when unripe. They then apply lime etc. when the fruits will get ripe.

The Plantain tree looks straight like a spear, the leaves come out of the trunk thick and soft, and resemble an unsewn plaited² sleeve, but are much larger and wider. Out of the middle rises something looking like a spindle, of a lilac³ colour this is the bud. The fruit consists of a cluster of seventy to eighty plantains. In shape they resemble small cucumbers the peel is easily removed. As plantains are very heavy you cannot eat many. There are various kinds of plantains. The plant is every year cut down, and a stump only is left of it if this is not done, it will no longer bear fruit. The vulgar believe that the plantain tree yields camphor, but this is wrong, for the camphor tree, as shall be hereafter explained, is a different tree, although it has the same name. They also say that pearls originate in plantain trees—another statement upon which the light of truth does not shine.

[¹ K pā the gut of a sheep stuffed with mince and rice --P]

[² أو كسده might mean ironed --P]

[³ Susan is the common purple flag iris --P]

The Mahuca tree resembles the mango tree, its wood is used for building purposes. The fruit, which is also called Gilaunda, yields an intoxicating liquor.

The Bholsiri tree is large and handsome,¹ the fruit has an orange colour, and resembles the jujube.

The Tarkul tree, and its fruit, resemble the coco-nut palm and its fruit. When the stalk of a new leaf comes out of a branch, they cut off its end and hang a vessel to it to receive the out flowing juice. The vessel will fill twice or three times a day. The juice is called tari, when fresh it is sweet, when it is allowed to stand for some time it turns subacid and is inebriating.

The Paniyala fruit resembles the *Zardalu*² and its tree the lime tree, the leaves are like those of the willow. When unripe the fruit is green, and red when ripe.

The Gumbhi has a stem the branches of which are like creepers, its leaves and fruits, as those of the kunar, come from below the roots.

The Tari forms at the root, it grows mostly in the mountains, and weighs a man, more or less when the creeper is a year old, and two, when two years old. It looks like a millstone. When older it grows larger according to the same proportion. Its leaves resemble those of the water melon.

The Piyar is like a small grape, brownish and sweet. The inside of the kernel is like butter, and is used in the preparation of food, it is called Chraunji. Its tree is about a yard high.

The Coco nut is called by the Persians Jawz-i Hind the tree resembles the date tree but is larger, its wood, however, looks better, and the leaves are larger. The tree bears fruit throughout the whole year, the fruits ripen in three months. They are also taken down, when unripe and green, and kept for some time. Their inside contains a cup full of milk like juice, which tastes well,¹ and is very often drunk in summer, mixed with sugar. When ripe, the fruit looks brown. The juice has now become solid, and gets black when mixed with butter, it is sweet and greasy. When eaten with pān leaves, it makes the tongue soft and fresh. The shell is used for spoons, cups, and ghitchaks (a kind of violin). There are nuts having four, three, two, and one, holes or eyes, each kind is said to possess certain qualities, the last being considered the best. Another kind is used for the preparation of an antidote against poison. The nuts weigh some times twelve seers and upwards. The bark of the tree is used for ropes, the large ropes used on ships are made of it.

¹ The text has here a few words the meaning of which I do not understand
² Zardalu is the acid apricot — P]

Dates are called in Hindi Pind khayūr. The tree has a short stem, rising little above the ground, and produces from four to five hundred fruits.

The Sūpyārī, or betel nut, is called in Persian fusal. The tree is graceful and slender, like the cypress. The wind often bends it, so that its crown touches the ground, but it rises up again. There are various kinds. The fruit when eaten raw tastes somewhat like an almond, but gets hard when ripe. It is eaten with betel leaves.

The Singhāra is a triangular fruit, its creeper grows in tanks, and the fruit is on the surface of the water. It is eaten raw or roasted.

The Sālak grows in tanks under the earth. They go into the water and dig it up.

The Pindālū is reared on lattice work, and grows about two yards high. Its leaf resembles the betel leaf, they dig up the root.

The Kaserū grows in tanks. When the water gets low, they take it out of the ground and eat it, raw or boiled.

The Siyālī root is long and conical, the plant is a creeper, to whose root the fruit is attached.

The *Orange*¹ has the shape of an egg. One kind is called *lāghazī*². Between the peel and the fruit is a thin white membrane. The fruit is juicy, and tastes well, one kind is to be had throughout the whole year.

The Amalbet is like a lime,³ and very sour. If you put a steel needle into this fruit, the needle in a short time will dissolve, and a white shell when put into its juice will soon disappear.

The Karnā resembles an apple, and appears after the plant has reached the third year. At first the fruit is green, sour and also somewhat bitter, but turns afterwards yellow and bitter, when ripe it is red and sweet. When it is kept long, it turns green again. The tree looks like an orange tree, but the leaves are somewhat broader, and the buds like fine arrows.³

[¹ Naranj orange?—P]

[² Limu lime laghazī is applied to a small green lime with a skin as thin as paper—P]

[³ Paykan & khaki?—P]

The flower is white, and has four petals and yellow stamens. It has a fine smell, and is used for ambergris, but it is beyond my power to describe the process of the manufacture.

The Betel leaf is, properly speaking, a vegetable, but connoisseurs call it an excellent fruit. Mir Khusraw of Dihli, in one of his verses, says, "It is an excellent fruit like the flower of a garden, the finest fruit in Hindustan." The eating of the leaf renders the breath agreeable, and repasts odorous. It strengthens the gums, and makes the hungry satisfied, and the satisfied hungry. I shall describe some of the various kinds. 1. The leaf called Bilāhri is white and shining, and does not make the tongue harsh and hard. It tastes best of all kinds. After it has been taken away from the creeper it turns white, with some care, after a month, or even after twenty days when greater efforts are made. 2. The Kāker leaf is white with spots, and full, and has hard veins. When much of it is eaten, the tongue gets hard. 3. The Jaisūār leaf does not get white, and is profitably sold mixed with other kinds. 4. The Kapūrī leaf is yellowish, hard, and full of veins, but has a good taste and smell. 5. The Kapūrkant leaf is yellowish green, and pungent like pepper, it smells like camphor. You could not eat more than ten leaves. It is to be had at Banāras, but even there it does not thrive in every soil. 6. The Bangla leaf is broad, full, hard, plushy, hot, and pungent.

The cultivation is as follows. In the month of Chait (March-April), about New Year's¹ time, they take a part of a creeper four or five fingers long with Karhānj leaves on it, and put it below the ground. From fifteen to twenty days after, according as leaves and knots form, a new creeper will appear from a knot, and as soon as another knot forms, a leaf will grow up. The creepers and new leaves form for seven months, when the plant ceases to grow. No creeper has more than thirty leaves. As the plant grows, they prop it with canes, and cover it, on the top and the sides, with wood and straw, so as to rear it up in the shade. The plant requires continually to be watered, except during the rains. Sometimes they put milk, sesame oil and its dregs, etc., about the plant. There are seven kinds of leaves, known under nine names. 1. The Karhānj leaf, which they separate for seedlings and call Peṛī. The new leaf is called Gadauta. 2. The Lawūī leaf. 3. The Bahūī leaf. 4. The Chāhū leaf. 5. The Adhīnīdā leaf. 6. The Agāhīya or Lewar leaf. 7. The Karhānj leaf itself. With the exception of the Gadauta, the leaves are taken away from the creeper when a month old. The last kind of leaf is eaten by some, others keep it for seeding they consider it very excellent, but connoisseurs prefer the Peri

[¹ The 21st March is New Year's Day.—P.]

A bundle of 11,000 leaves was formerly called Lahāsa, which name is now given to a bundle of 14,000 Bundles of 200 are called Dholi, a lahāsa is made up of dholis In winter they turn and arrange the leaves after four or five days, in summer every day From 5 to 25 leaves, and sometimes more, are placed above each other, and displayed in various ways They also put some betel nut and *lath*¹ on one leaf, and some lime² paste on another, and roll them up, this is called a birā Some put camphor and musk into it, and tie both leaves with a silk thread Others put single leaves on plates, and use them thus They are also prepared as a dish

A¹ in 29

ON FLAVOURS

As I have mentioned various kinds of food I shall also say something on flavours Heat renders pungent that which is agreeable, bitter that which is greasy, and brackish that which has the proper flavour cold makes the first acid, the second astringent and the third tart Astringency when affecting the tongue merely, is called in Arabic qabz, and ʿufusat when affecting the whole frame A moderate temperature renders the first quality greasy, the second sweet, and the last tasteless These are the fundamental flavours Others count four, viz, the sweet, the bitter, the acid, the brackish The flavours produced by combinations are endless, some have, however, names, e g baḥāʿat is a bitter and tart flavour, and zuʿūqa a combination of the brackish and the bitter

A¹ in 30

ON PERFUMES

His Majesty is very fond of perfumes, and encourages this department from religious motives The court hall is continually scented with ambergris, aloewood, and compositions according to ancient recipes, or mixtures invented by his Majesty, and incense is daily burnt in gold and silver censers of various shapes, whilst sweet smelling flowers are used

¹ An astringent vegetable extract eaten by the natives of India with the pān leaf It looks brown and stains the tongue and the gums red [Catechu ?—P]

² In Persian chūna but in Anglo Indice chūnām

in large quantities Oils are also extracted from flowers, and used for the skin and the hair I shall give a few recipes

1 Santūk is used for keeping the skin fresh $1\frac{1}{2}$ tolas Civet, 1 *t Chūca*¹, 2 māshas Chambēl essence, 2 bottles of rose water 2 Argaja $\frac{3}{4}$ s sandalwood, 2 t Iksīr and Mīd, 3 t Chūca, 1 t violet root, and gehla (the seed of a plant), $\frac{1}{2}$ m camphor, 11 bottles of rose water It is used in summer for keeping the skin cool 3 Gulkāma. Pound together 1 t best Ambergis, $\frac{1}{2}$ t Lādan, 2 t best musk, 4 t wood of aloes and 8 t Iksīr ʿabīr, and put it into a porcelain vessel, mix with it a ser of the juice of the flower called Gul surkh,² and expose it to the sun, till it dries up Wet it in the evening with rose-water and with the extract of the flower called Bahār, and pound it again on *Sarrāq*³ stone Let it stand for ten days, mix it with the juice of the flower called Bahār Narany,⁴ and let it dry During the next twenty days, add occasionally some juice of the black Rayhan (also called black Nābū)⁵ A part of this mixture is added to the preceding 4 Ruh af-ā, 5 s Aloewood, $1\frac{1}{2}$ s Sandalwood, $1\frac{1}{2}$ s Lādan, Iksīr, Lūbān, Dhup (a root brought from Kashmir) $3\frac{1}{2}$ t of each, 20 t violet root, 10 t Ushna, called in Hind Chharīla Press till it gets tenacious like syrup To be made into discs with four bottles of rose water It is burnt in censers, and smells very fine 5 Opatna is a scented soap $2\frac{1}{2}$ s Lādan, $1\frac{1}{2}$ s 5 d Aloewood, the same quantity of Bahār Narany,⁴ and $1\frac{1}{2}$ s of its bark, 1 s 10 d Sandalwood, 1 s 5 d *Sumbul*⁶ t tīb, called in Hind Chhar, the same quantity of Ushna, 38 $\frac{1}{2}$ t musk, 1 s 4 t pācha leaves, 36 t apples, 11 t Sūd, called in Hind Moth, 5 d violet root, 1 t 2 m Dhūp, $1\frac{1}{2}$ t Ikankī (a kind of grass), the same quantity of Zurumbād, called in Hind kachūr (zerumbet), 1 t 2 m Lūbān, 106 bottles of rose water, 5 bottles of extract of Bahār Pound the whole, sift it, and boil slowly in rose water When it has become less moist let it dry 6 ʿAbīrmāya,⁶ 4 d Aloewood, 2 d Sandalwood, 1 d violet root, 3 d *Sumbul*⁶ t tīb, 3 d Duūlak, 4 t musk of Khata (Cathay) $2\frac{1}{2}$ d Lādan, 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ d Bahar Nāranj Pound and sift, boil over a slow fire in 10 bottles of rose water, and put it into the shade to dry 7 Kīshā, 24 t Aloewood, 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ Lādan Lūbān, and Sandalwood, Iksīr and Dhup, 2 t of each, violet root and musk, 2 t,

¹ This and the following names of perfumes are explained further on in this chapter

² Gul surkh in Persian is a pink fragrant rose that blooms in Spring — P]

³ Summāq (vide sumāq) is the hardest kind of marble — P]

⁴ Orange-flower bloom — P]

⁵ Sweet basil — P]

⁶ Vide below the twelfth flower

1 t Ushna, mix with 50 t. refined sugar, and boil gently in two bottles of rose water. It is made into discs. It smells very fine when burnt, and is exhilarating. 8 Bukhūr 1 s Aloewood and Sandalwood, $\frac{1}{2}$ s Iādan, 2 t musk, 5 t Iksīr, mix with two *ser*s of refined sugar and one bottle of rose-water over a slow fire. 9 Fatīla 5 s Aloewood, 72 t Sandalwood, Iksīr and Lādan, 20 t of each, 5 t Violet root, 10 t Lubān, 3 t refined sugar, mix with two bottles of rose water, and make into tapers. 10 Bārjāt, 1 s Aloewood, 5 t Lādan, 2 t musk, 2 t Sandalwood, 1 t Lūbān, $\frac{1}{2}$ t Camphor. Then distill it like Chuua (vide below). 11 Abīr Iksīr $\frac{3}{4}$ s Sandalwood, 26 t Iksīr, 2 t 8 m musk. Pound it, and dry it in the shade. 12 Ghasul (a liquid soap), 35 t Sandalwood, 17 t Katul (?)¹ 1 t musk 1 t Chuua, 2 m Camphor, 2 m Mīd. Mix with 2 bottles of rose water.

A List of Perfumes² and their Prices

Ambar : ashhab	1 to 3 Muhurs, per tolā
Zabād (crvet)	$\frac{1}{2}$ R to 1 M , do
Musk	1 to 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ R , do
Lignum aloes Hind Agar	2 R to 1 M per ser
Chuua (Distilled wood of Aloes)	$\frac{1}{8}$ R to 1 R per tolā
Gaura ³	3 to 5 R do
Bhīmsīnī Camphor	3 R to 2 M , do
Mūd	1 to 3 R , do
Zaʿfarān	12 to 22 R , per ser
Zaʿfarān : Kamandī	1 to 3 M , do
Zaʿfaran (from Kashmir)	8 to 12 R , do
Sandalwood	32 to 55 R , per man
Nafa yi mushk	3 to 12 M per ser
Kalanbak (Calembic)	10 to 40 R , per man
Silāras	3 to 5 R , per ser
Ambar : Lādan	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 R , do
Kāfur : Chīna	1 to 2 R , do
Araq : Futna	1 to 3 R , per bottle
Araq : Bed : Mushk	1 to 4 R , do
Rosewater	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 R do
Araq : Bahār	1 to 5 R do
Araq : Chambelī	$\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ R , do
Violet root	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 R , per ser

¹ According to some MSS Kawal

² Most of the following names are explained below

³ In the text p 83 by mistake Kaurah vide my text edition p 94 L 6

Azfar t tīb	1½ to 2 R, per ser
Barg t Maḡ (brought from Gujrat)	½ to 1 R do
Sugandh Gugala	10 to 13 R do
Luban (from Sargard ?)	½ to 3 R, per tola
Luban (other kinds)	1 to 2 R per ser
Alak Hind Chhar	¼ to ½ R do
Duwalak Hind Chharula	3 to 4 d do
Gehla	*
Suṣḍ	*
Ikanki	*
Zurumbad	*

* The original does not mention the prices

A List of fine smelling Flowers

- 1 The Seviti Whitish blooms the whole year especially towards the end of the rains
- 2 The Bholsari Whitish in the rains
- 3 The Chambeli White yellow and blue In the rains and partly during winter
- 4 Ray bel White and pale yellow In the end of the hot season and the beginning of the rains
- 5 The Mongra Yellow In summer
- 6 The Champa Yellow All the year especially when the sun stands in Pisces and Aries
- 7 Kethi The upper leaves are green the inner ones yellowish white It blooms during the hot summer
- 8 Ku a White During the hot season
- 9 The Padal Brownish lilac In spring
- 10 The Juhi White and yellow like jasmīn During the rains
- 11 The Nikari Whitish In spring
- 12 The Nargis White In spring
- 13 The Kewara From Leo to Libra
- 14 The Chalta
- 15 The Gulal In spring
- 16 The Tasbiḥ Gulal White In winter
- 17 The Singarhar It has small white petals In the hot season
- 18 The Violet Violet In the hot season
- 19 The Karna White In spring
- 20 The Kapur bel
- 21 The Gul t Zaṣfaran Lilac colour In autumn

A List of Flowers notable for their beauty

- 1 The Gul : Aftāb Yellow
- 2 The Gul : Kawal White and also bluish In the rains
- 3 The Ja^sfarī A golden yellow, or orange coloured, or greenish.
In spring
- 4 The Gudhal Of different colours, red, yellow, orange, white In the rains
- 5 The Ratan-manyanī Bright red It is smaller than jasmin All the year
- 6 The Kesū In the hot season
- 7 The Senbal Dark red In spring
- 8 The Ratan mālā Yellow In spring
- 9 The Sonzard Yellow In spring
- 10 The Gul : Mālī
- 11 The Karnphūl A golden red
- 12 The Karūl In spring
- 13 The Kaner Red and white
- 14 The Kadam Outside green, in the middle yellow threads, the inside leaves white In spring
- 15 The Nāg kesar In spring
- 16 The Surpan White, with red and yellow stripes in the middle
During the rains
- 17 The Sirī khandī Inside yellowish white, outside reddish In spring
- 18 The Jar Inside yellow, outside a blackish red In the rains
- 19 The Champala White, like orange blossoms In spring
- 20 The Lāhī It blooms in Pisces
- 21 The Gul : Karaunda White It is smaller than the Chambēli, and blooms during the rains
- 22 The Dhanantar resembles the Nīlufar During the rains
- 23 The Gul : Hinna
- 24 The Dupahriyā Bright red and white All the year
- 25 The Bhūn Champā Peach coloured
- 26 The Sudarsan Yellow, it resembles the Nīlufar, but is smaller
- 27 The Kanglā : There are two kinds, red and white
- 28 The Sirs Yellowish green It is full of stamens In spring
- 29 The San Yellow During the rains

On the Preparation of some Perfumes

1 Ambar Some say that Ambar grows at the bottom of the sea, and that it is the food brought up again after eating, by various animals living in the sea. Others say that fishes eat it and die from it, and that it is taken from their intestines. According to some, it is the dung of the sea-cow, called sārā, or the foam of the sea. Others again say, it trickles from the mountains of islands. Many look upon it as marine gum, others whose opinion I adopt, take it to be wax. It is said that on some mountains a great deal of honey is to be found, so much in fact that it runs into the sea, the wax rises to the surface, when the heat of the sun reduces it to a solid state. As the bees collect the honey from sweet smelling flowers, Ambar is, naturally, scented. Bees are also occasionally found in it. Abu Sīnā thinks that there is a fountain at the bottom of the sea, from which Ambar rills, when it is carried by waves to the shore. Ambar, when fresh, is moist, the heat of the sun causes it to dry up. It is of various colours: the white is the best, and the black is the worst, the middling sort is pistachio coloured and yellow. The best kind goes by the name of ashhab. It feels greasy, and consists of layers. If you break it, it looks yellowish white. The whiter, lighter, and more flexible it is the better. Next in quality is the pistachio coloured Ambar, and the inferior to it the yellow kind, called Khashkhāshī. The black kind is bad, it is inflammable. Greedy bazaar dealers will mix it with wax, Mandal and Lādan, etc., but not every one has recourse to such practices. Mandal is a kind of Ambar taken from the intestines of dead fishes, it does not smell much.

2 Lādan is also often called Ambar. It is taken from a tree which grows in the confines of Qībrus (Cyprus) and Qīsus (Chios) or Qīstūs. It is a moisture that settles on the leaves of the tree. When goats in grazing pass near it the hairs of their thighs and the horn of their hoofs stick to it, and the whole then dries up. Such Lādan as is mixed with goat's hair is counted superior. It looks greenish, and has a good smell. But Lādan which is mixed with horn is looked upon as inferior. Sometimes people tie ropes round about the trees, and collect the Lādan which sticks to them. Afterwards they boil it in water, clean it, and make it into discs.

3 The Camphor tree is a large tree growing in the ghauts of Hindustan and in China. A hundred horsemen and upwards may rest in the shade of a single tree. Camphor is collected from the trunk and the branches. Some say that during summer a large number of snakes wind themselves round about the tree for the sake of its coolness, people then mark such trees by shooting an arrow into the trunks, and collect the camphor during remainder is pure aloes. Some say that they do so with the whole tree. The statement occasionally found in some old books that the habitat of the tree is Central India, is an absurdity of fanciful writers. There are several kinds, the best is called Mandalī, and the second in quality, Jabalī or Hindī. The smell of the wood, especially that of the first kind, is a preventive against fleas, but some think both kinds equal in this respect. Of other good kinds I may mention the Samandūrī, the Qumārī, which is inferior to it, the Qāqulī, next in rank, the Barrī, the Qitī, and the Chinese, also called Qismurī, which is wet and sweet. Still inferior are the Jalalī, the Mayatāqī, the Iawāqī, the *Ritalī*¹. But of all kinds, the Mandalī is the best. The Samandurī is grey, fatty, thick, hard, juicy, without the slightest sign of whitishness, and burns long. The best of all is the black and heavy, in water it settles at the bottom, is not fibrous, and may be easily pounded. The wood which floats is looked upon as bad. Former kings transplanted the tree to Gujrat, and nowadays it grows in Chanpanir. It is generally brought from Āchin and Dahnasari. Nothing is known of the habitat mentioned in old books. Aloewood is often used in compound perfumes, when eaten, it is exhilarating. It is generally employed in incense, the better qualities, in form of a powder, are often used for rubbing into the skin and clothes.

8 Chūwa is distilled wood of aloes, it is in general use. The preparation is as follows. They take fine clay, mix it with cotton or rice bran and beat it well. When properly intermixed, they take a small bottle large enough to put a finger in smear it all over with the clay, and let it dry. After this, they put very small pieces of wood of aloes into it so as nearly to fill the bottle. The wood must have been kept wet for a week before. Another vessel, with a hole in the middle, is now placed on a three legged stand. Into this vessel, they pass the neck of the little bottle inverted, placing a cup full of water at the bottom of the vessel in such a manner that the mouth of the bottle reaches the surface of the water. On the top of the vessel they then put cow s dung, and light a gentle fire. Should flames break out they extinguish them with water. The wood of aloes will then secrete a moisture which trickles on the surface of the water where it remains. This is collected, and washed several times with water and rose water to take off all smell of smoke. The oftener it is washed, and the older it gets the better will be the scent. It looks black, although experienced people make it white. One ser of wood aloes will yield from two to fifteen tolas of Chūwa. Some avaricious dealers mix sandalwood or almonds with it, thereby to cheat people.

¹ The last three names are doubtful

9 Sandalwood is called in Hind Chandan. The tree grows in China. During the present reign, it has been successfully planted in India. There are three kinds, the white, the yellow, the red. Some take the red to be more refreshing than the white, others prefer the white. The latter is certainly more cooling than the red, and the red more so than the yellow. The best is that which is yellow and oily, it goes by the name of Maqūṣarī. Sandalwood is pounded and rubbed over the skin, but it is also used in other ways.

10 Silarax (storax) is called in Arabic Mīṣāh. It is the gum of a tree that grows in Turkey. The kind which is clear is called Mīṣāh yī sāyila (liquid), the other kinds, Mīṣāh yī yābisa (dry). The best kind is that which spontaneously flows out of the trunk, it is yellowish.

11 Kalanbal (calembic) is the wood of a tree brought from Zīrbād (?)¹: it is heavy and full of veins. Some believe it to be raw wood of aloes. When pounded it looks grey. They use it for compound perfumes, and they also make rosaries of it.

12 The Malagīr is a tree resembling the former, only that the wood is lighter and not veined. When pounded it looks reddish white.

13 Lubān (frankincense) is the odorous gum of a tree which is found in Java. Some take it to be the same as Mīṣāh yī yābisa. When exposed to fire it evaporates like camphor. The Lubān which the Persians call Kundur i darya'ī (mastix) is a resin brought from Yaman, but it is not odorous.

14 Azfar' i tib, or scented finger nails, are called in Hind Nakh, and in Persian Nakhun i boyā. It is the house of an animal, consisting, like a shell of two parts. It has a sweet smell, as the animal feeds on sumbul, it is found in the large rivers of Hindustan, Basrah, and Bahrayan, the latter being considered the best. It is also found in the Red Sea, and many prefer it to the other kinds. It is heated in butter, some expose it to the fire, pound it, and mix it with other perfumes.

15 Sugandh gugala (bdellium) is a plant very common in Hindustan, it is used in perfumes.

As I have said something on perfumes, I shall make a few remarks on several beautiful flowers.

1 The Senfi resembles the Gul i Surkh, but is smaller. It has in the middle golden stamens and from four to six petals Habitat, Gujrat and the Dakhin

¹ Zīrbād (Zirabad) a town near the frontiers of Bengal. Chiyōṣā' i luḡḡat (The Persian translation of the Malay Buwah and n. buwah being the Malay name.)

2 Of the Chambelī there are two kinds The Rāy Chambelī has from five to six petals, outside red The Chambelī proper is smaller, and has on the top a red stripe Its stem is one and a half or two yards high and trails over the ground It has many long and broad branches It flowers from the first year

3 The Rāybel resembles the jasmin There are various kinds, single and double, etc A quintuple is very common so that each petal might be separated as a distinct flower Its stem grows a yard high The leaves of the tree resemble those of the lime tree but they are somewhat smaller and softer

4 The Mungra resembles the Rāybel It is larger but inferior in perfume It has more than a hundred petals the plant grows to a large tree

5 The Champa flower has a conical shape of the size of a finger,¹ and consists of ten petals and more, lying in folds one above the other It has several stamens The tree looks graceful and resembles in leaf and trunk the nut tree It flowers after seven years

6 The Ketkī has the form of spindle² of the size of a quarter of a yard with twelve or more petals Its smell is delicate and fragrant It bears flowers in six or seven years

7 The Keura resembles the preceding but is more than twice as big The petals have thorns As they grow on different places, they are not all equal In the midst of the flower, there is a small branch with honey coloured threads not without smell The flower smells even after it is withered Hence people put it into clothes when the perfume remains for a long time The stem of the tree is above four yards high, the leaves are like those of the maize, only longer, and triangular, with three thorns in each corner It flowers from the fourth year Every year they put new earth round about the roots The plant is chiefly found in the Dakhin Gujrat, Malwah and Bihār

8 The Chalta resembles a large tulip³ It consists of eighteen petals, six green ones above, six others, some red, some green some greyish yellow, and six white In the midst of the flower as in the flower called Hamesha Bahār, there are nearly two hundred little yellow leaves, with a red globule in the centre The flower will remain quite fresh for five or six

¹ Orientals as a rule have very small hands and fingers

² Sandbari paykar a fir cone ?—P]

³ Lāla is the name of the common red poppy as well as of the tulip —P]

days after having been plucked It smells like the violet When withered, the flower is cooked and eaten The tree resembles the pomegranate tree, and its leaves look like those of the lime tree It blooms in seven years

9 The Tasbīh gulāl has a fine smell The petals have the form of a dagger The stem of the plant is two yards high It flowers after four years They make rosaries of the flowers, which keep fresh for a week

10 The Bholsarī is smaller than the jasmīn, its petals are indented When dry the flower smells better The tree resembles the walnut tree, and flowers in the tenth year

11 The Singār hār is shaped like a clove, and has an orange coloured stalk The stamens look like poppy seeds The tree resembles the pomegranate tree, and the leaves are like the leaves of a peach tree It flowers in five years

12 The Kūrā looks like a Gul i surkh, but the plant and the leaves are larger It has five or a hundred petals and golden coloured stamens in the middle They make Abirmāya and an extract from it

13 The Pādāl has five or six long petals It gives water an agreeable flavour and smell It is on this account that people preserve the flowers, mixed with clay, for such times when the flower is out of season The leaves and the stem are like those of a nut tree It flowers in the twelfth year

14 The Jūhī has small leaves This creeper winds itself round about trees, and flowers in three years

15 The Nuarī looks like a simple Rāy bel, but has larger petals The flowers are often so numerous as to conceal the leaves and branches of the plant It flowers in the first year

16 The Kapur bel has five petals, and resembles the saffron flower This flower was brought during the present reign from Europe

17 The Za^sfarān (saffron)¹ In the beginning of the month of Urdībihsht, the saffron seeds are put into the ground, which has been carefully prepared and rendered soft After this the field is irrigated with rain water The seed itself is a bulb resembling garlic The flower appears in the middle of the month of Ābān, the plant is about a quarter of a yard long, but, according to the difference of the soil in which it stands, there are sometimes two thirds of it above, and sometimes two thirds below the ground The flower stands on the top of the stalk, and consists of six petals and six stamens Three of the six petals have a fresh lilac colour, and stand round about the remaining three petals The stamens

¹ Vide a similar account of the saffron flower in the third book (Suba Kabul)

the middle golden stamens and from four to six petals Habitat, Gujrāt and the Dakhin

2 Of the Chambelī there are two kinds The Rāy Chambelī has from five to six petals, outside red The Chambelī proper is smaller, and has on the top a red stripe Its stem is one and a half or two yards high, and trails over the ground It has many long and broad branches It flowers from the first year

3 The Rāybel resembles the jasmīn There are various kinds, single and double, etc A quintuple is very common so that each petal might be separated as a distinct flower Its stem grows a yard high The leaves of the tree resemble those of the lime tree, but they are somewhat smaller and softer

4 The Mungrū resembles the Rāybel It is larger, but inferior in perfume It has more than a hundred petals, the plant grows to a large tree

5 The Champa flower has a conical shape, of the size of a finger,¹ and consists of ten petals and more, lying in folds one above the other It has several stamens The tree looks graceful and resembles in leaf and trunk the nut tree It flowers after seven years

6 The Ketkī has the form of spindle² of the size of a quarter of a yard with twelve or more petals Its smell is delicate and fragrant It bears flowers in six or seven years

7 The Keura resembles the preceding but is more than twice as big The petals have thorns As they grow on different places, they are not all equal In the midst of the flower, there is a small branch with honey-coloured threads, not without smell The flower smells even after it is withered Hence people put it into clothes when the perfume remains for a long time The stem of the tree is above four yards high, the leaves are like those of the maize, only longer, and triangular, with three thorns in each corner It flowers from the fourth year Every year they put new earth round about the roots The plant is chiefly found in the Dakhin, Gujrāt, Mālwah, and Bihār

8 The Chalta resembles a large tulip³ It consists of eighteen petals, six green ones above, six others, some red, some green some greyish yellow, and six white In the midst of the flower, as in the flower called Hamesha Bahār, there are nearly two hundred little yellow leaves, with a red globule in the centre The flower will remain quite fresh for five or six

¹ Orientals as a rule have very small hands and fingers

² Sanabari paykar a fir cone ?—P]

³ Lala is the name of the common red poppy as well as of the tulip —P]

days after having been plucked. It smells like the violet. When withered, the flower is cooked and eaten. The tree resembles the pomegranate tree, and its leaves look like those of the lime tree. It blooms in seven years.

9 The Tasbīh gulāl has a fine smell. The petals have the form of a dagger. The stem of the plant is two yards high. It flowers after four years. They make rosaries of the flowers, which keep fresh for a week.

10 The Bholsarī is smaller than the jasmīn, its petals are indented. When dry the flower smells better. The tree resembles the walnut tree, and flowers in the tenth year.

11 The Singārhar is shaped like a clove, and has an orange coloured stalk. The stamens look like poppy seeds. The tree resembles the pomegranate tree, and the leaves are like the leaves of a peach tree. It flowers in five years.

12 The Kū'a looks like a Gul i surkh, but the plant and the leaves are larger. It has five or a hundred petals and golden coloured stamens in the middle. They make ʿAbīrmāya and an extract from it.

13 The Pādāl has five or six long petals. It gives water an agreeable flavour and smell. It is on this account that people preserve the flowers, mixed with clay, for such times when the flower is out of season. The leaves and the stem are like those of a nut tree. It flowers in the twelfth year.

14 The Juhī has small leaves. This creeper winds itself round about trees, and flowers in three years.

15 The Nīwārī looks like a simple Rāy bel, but has larger petals. The flowers are often so numerous as to conceal the leaves and branches of the plant. It flowers in the first year.

16 The Kapūr bel has five petals, and resembles the saffron flower. This flower was brought during the present reign from Europe.

17 The Zaʿfaran (saffron)¹ In the beginning of the month of Urdibīshht, the saffron seeds are put into the ground, which has been carefully prepared and rendered soft. After this the field is irrigated with run water. The seed itself is a bulb resembling garlic. The flower appears in the middle of the month of Āban, the plant is about a quarter of a yard long, but, according to the difference of the soil in which it stands, there are sometimes two thirds of it above, and sometimes two-thirds below the ground. The flower stands on the top of the stalk, and consists of six petals and six stamens. Three of the six petals have a fresh lilac colour, and stand round about the remaining three petals. The stamens are similarly placed three of a yellow colour standing round about the other three, which are red. The latter yield the saffron. Yellow stamens are often cunningly intermixed. In former times saffron was collected by compulsory labour, they pressed men daily, and made them separate the saffron from the petals and the stamens, and gave them salt instead of wages, a man who cleaned two pals receiving two pals of salt. At the time of Ghāzi Khān,¹ the son of (Khajī) Chak, another custom became general, they gave the workmen eleven *tark*s of saffron flowers, of which one tark was given them as wages, and for the remaining ten they had to furnish two Akbarshahi sers of clean, dry saffron, i e., for two Akbarshahi *mans*² of saffron flowers they had to give two sers of cleaned saffron. This custom however, was abolished by his Majesty on his third visit to Kashmir, to the great relief of the people.

¹ See a similar account of the saffron flower in the third book (Saba Kabol).

When the bulb has been put into the ground, it will produce flowers for six years, provided the soil be annually softened. For the first two years, the flowers will grow sparingly, but in the third year the plant reaches its state of perfection. After six years the bulbs must be taken out, else they get rotten. They plant them again on some other place, and leave the old ground uncultivated for five years.

* Saffron comes chiefly from the place Panpur, which belongs to the district of Mararaj.³ The fields there extend over nearly twelve kōs. Another place of cultivation is in the Parganah of Paraspūr, near Indrakol, not far from Kamraj, where the fields extend about a lōs.

18 The Aftabī (sun flower) is round, broad, and large, has a large number of petals, and turns continually to the sun. Its stem reaches a height of three yards.

19 The Kanwal. There are two kinds. One opens when the sublime Sun shines, turning wherever he goes, and closing at night. It resembles the shaqāyiq,⁴ but its red is paler. Its petals which are never less than six in number, enclose yellow stamens, in the midst of which there is an excrescence of the form of a cone with the base upwards, which is the fruit, and contains the seeds. The other kind has four white petals, opens at night and turns itself according to the moon, but does not close.

¹ He was the contemporary of Shēr Khān, vide Abu l Fa l's list of Kashmir Rulers in the third book. A good biography of Ghāzi Khān may be found in the beginning of the Ma'āz-i-Rāshidi Persian MS No 45 of the Asiatic Society of Bengal.

² One Kashmiri Tark = 8 sers (of Akbar) = 4 Kashmiri mans, 1 Kashmiri man = 4 Kashmiri sers, 1 Kashmiri ser = 7½ pals.

³ These places lie to the south of Srinagar the capital of Kashmir, for Mararāj the text has ماراراج. Vide Suba Kabul third book.

⁴ The shaqāyiq is probably the anemone — P.]

20 The Jaṣfarī is a pretty, round flower, and grows larger than the ṣadbarg. One kind has five, another a hundred petals. The latter remains fresh for two months and upwards. The plant is of the size of a man, and the leaves resemble those of the willow, but are indented. It flowers in two months.

21 The Gudhal resembles the jūghāsū tulip, and has a great number of petals. Its stem reaches a height of two yards and upwards, the leaves look like mulberry leaves. It flowers in two years.

22 The Ratanmanjanī has four petals, and is smaller than the jasmin. The tree and the leaves resemble the rāy bel. It flowers in two years.

23 The Kesu has five petals resembling a tiger's claw. In their midst is a yellow stamen of the shape of a tongue. The plant is very large, and is found on every meadow, when it flowers, it is as if a beautiful fire surrounded the scenery.

24 The Kaner remains a long time in bloom. It looks well, but it is poisonous. Whoever puts it on his head is sure to fall in battle.¹ It has mostly five petals. The branches are full of the flowers, the plant itself grows to a height of two yards. It flowers in the first year.

25 The Kadam resembles a *tumāgha*² (a royal cap). The leaves are like those of the walnut tree, which the whole tree resembles.

26 The Nāg kesar, like the Gul : surkh, has five petals and is full of fine stamens. It resembles the walnut tree in the leaves and the stem, and flowers in seven years.

27 The Surpan resembles the sesame flower, and has yellow stamens in the middle. The stem resembles the Hinnā plant, and the leaves those of the willow.

28 The *Srīkand*³ is like the Chambeī, but smaller. It flowers in two years.

29 The Hinna has four petals, and resembles the flower called Nafarmān. Different plants have often flowers of a different colour.

30 The Dupahriya is round and small, and looks like the flower called Hamesha bahar. It opens at noon. The stem is about two yards high.

31 The Bhun champā resembles the Nilufar, and has five petals. The stem is about a span long. It grows on such places as are periodically under water. Occasionally a plant is found above the water.

32 The Sudarsan resembles the Rāy bel, and has yellow threads inside. The stem looks like that of the *Sūsan*³ flower.

[¹ تورق فر آمد gets entangled in quarrels?—P.]

[² Tumī locally survives in the sense of a hawk's hood.—P.]

[³ Susan is properly the flag iris.—P.]

33 Senbal has five petals, each ten fingers long, and three fingers broad

34 The Ratanmālā is round and small Its juice, boiled and mixed with vitriol and mu^casar,¹ furnishes a fast dye for stuffs Butter, sesame, oil, are also boiled together with the root of the plant, when the mixture becomes a purple dye

35 The Sūnzard resembles the jasmīn, but is a little larger, and has from five to six petals The stem is like that of the Chambelī It flowers in two years

36 The Mālī is like the Chambelī, but smaller In the middle there are little stamens looking like poppyseed It flowers in two years more or less

37 The Karīl has three small petals It flowers luxuriantly, and looks very well The flower is also boiled and eaten, they also make pickles of it

38 The Jat plant grows to a large tree, its leaves look like Tamarind leaves

39 The Chanpala is like a nosegay The leaves of the plant are like walnut leaves It flowers in two years The bark of the plant, when boiled in water, makes the water red It grows chiefly in the hills, its wood burns bright like a candle

40 The Lāhī has a stem one and a half yards high The branches before the flowers appear are made into a dish, which is eaten with bread When camels feed on this plant they get fat and unruly

41 The Karaunda resembles the Jūhī flower

42 The Dhanantar resembles the Nīlūfar, and looks very well It is a creeper

43 The Siras flower consists of silk like threads, and resembles a tumāgha It sends its fragrance to a great distance It is the king of the
Within the stem the

44 The Kanglā,² has five petals, each four fingers long, and looks very beautiful Each branch produces only one flower

45 The San (hemp) looks like a nosegay The leaves of the plant resemble those of the *Chīnār*³ Of the bark of the plant strong ropes are made One kind of this plant bears a flower like the cotton tree, and is called Pat san It makes a very soft rope

[¹ Mu^casar is perhaps bastard saffron —P]

[² Bar the banyan tree —P]

[³ Chīnār, the plane tree —P]

It is really too difficult for me, ignorant as I am, to give a description of the flowers of this country. I have mentioned a few for those who wish to know something about them. There are also found many flowers of Iran and Tūran, as the Gul : surkh, the Nargis, the violet, the Yāsman : kabūd, the Sūsan,¹ the Rayhan,² the Raṣnā, the Zēbā, the Shaqayiq,³ the Tāj : khurūs, the Qalgha, the Nafarmān, the Khatmī,⁴ etc. Garden and flower beds are everywhere to be found. Formerly people used to plant their gardens without any order, but since the time of the arrival in India of the emperor Babar, a more methodical arrangement of the gardens has obtained, and travellers nowadays admire the beauty of the palaces and their murmuring fountains.

It would be impossible to give an account of those trees of the country whose flowers, fruits, buds, leaves, roots, etc., are used as food or medicine. If, according to the books of the Hindus, a man were to collect only one leaf from each tree, he would get eighteen bārs (or loads) (5 surkhs = 1 māsha, 16 māshas = 1 larg, 4 kargs = 1 pal, 100 pals = 1 tula, 20 tulās = 1 bar), &c., according to the weights now in use, 96 mans. The same books also state that the duration of the life of a tree is not less than two gharīs (twice 24 minutes), and not more than ten thousand years. The height of the trees is said not to exceed a little above a thousand yujans.⁵ When a tree dies, its life is said to pass into one of the following ten things: fire, water, air, earth, plants, animals, animals of two senses, such as have three, or four, or five senses.

Ā'in 31

THE WARDROBE⁶ AND THE STORES FOR MATTRESSES

His Majesty pays much attention to various stuffs, hence Iranian, European, and Mongolian articles of wear are in abundance. Skilful masters and workmen have settled in this country to teach people an improved system of manufacture. The imperial workshops, the towns of Lāhor, Āgra, Fathpūr, Ahmadabad, Gujrat, turn out many masterpieces of workmanship, and the figures and patterns, knots, and variety of

[¹ Sūsan the iris — P.]

[² Rayhān sweet basil — P.]

[³ Shaqāyiq rīde p. 85 note 1 — P.]

[⁴ Khatmī — P.]

[⁵ Yujan — P.]

[⁶ Wardrobe — P.]

[⁷ Stores — P.]

fashions which now prevail, astonish experienced travellers His Majesty himself acquired in a short time a theoretical and practical knowledge of the whole trade, and on account of the care bestowed upon them the intelligent workmen of this country soon improved All kinds of hair weaving and silk spinning were brought to perfection, and the imperial workshops furnish all those stuffs which are made in other countries A taste for fine material has since become general, and the drapery used at feasts surpasses every description

All articles which have been bought, or woven to order, or received as tribute or presents, are carefully preserved, and according to the order in which they were preserved, they are again taken out for inspection, or given out to be cut and to be made up, or given away as presents Articles which arrive at the same time, are arranged according to their prices Experienced people inquire continually into the prices of articles used both formerly and at present, as a knowledge of the exact prices is conducive to the increase of the stock Even the prices became generally lower Thus a piece woven by the famous Ghiyās i Naqshband may now be obtained for fifty muhrs, whilst it had formerly been sold for twice that sum, and most other articles have got cheaper at the rate of thirty to ten, or even forty to ten¹ His Majesty also ordered that people of certain ranks should wear certain articles, and this was done in order to regulate the demand

I shall not say much on this subject, though a few particulars regarding the articles worn by his Majesty may be of interest

1 The Takauchiya is a coat without lining of the Indian form Formerly it had slits in the skirt, and was tied on the left side, his Majesty has ordered it to be made with a round skirt and to be tied on the right side² It requires seven yards and seven girihs,³ and five girihs for the binding The price for making a plain one varies from one rupee to three rupees, but if the coat be adorned with ornamental stitching, from one to four and three quarters rupees Besides a misgāl of silk is required

2 The peshwāz (a coat open in front) is of the same form, but ties in front It is sometimes made without strings

3 The Dutāhī (a coat with lining) requires six yards and four girihs for the outside six yards lining, four girihs for the binding, nine girihs for the border. The price of making one varies from one to three rupees. One mīqal of silk is required.

4 The Shah ajīda (or the royal stitch coat) is also called Shast khatt (or sixty rows), as it has sixty ornamental stitches per giriḥ. It has generally a double lining, and is sometimes wadded and quilted. The cost of making is two rupees per yard.

5 The Sūzanī requires a quarter of a ser of cotton and two dāms of silk. If sewed with *bakhya*¹ stitches, the price of making one is eight rupees, one with ajīda stitches costs four rupees.

6 The Qalamī requires $\frac{2}{3}$ s cotton, and one dam silk. Cost of making, two rupees.

7 The Qabā, which is at present generally called jama yī pumba-dār, is a wadded coat. It requires 1 s of cotton and 2 m silk. Price, one rupee to a quarter rupee.

8 The Gadar is a coat wider and longer than the qabā, and contains more wadding. In Hindustan it takes the place of a fur coat. It requires seven gaz of stuff, six yards of lining, four girihs binding, nine for bordering $2\frac{1}{2}$ s cotton, 3 m silk. Price, from one half to one and one half rupees.

9 The Farjī has no binding and is open in front. Some put buttons to it. It is worn over the jama (coat), and requires 5 gaz 12 giriḥ stuff, 5 gaz 5 giriḥ lining, 14 giriḥ bordering, 1 s cotton, 1 m silk. Price, from a quarter to one rupee.

10 The Fargul resembles the *yāpanjī*² but is more comfortable and becoming. It was brought from Europe,³ but everyone nowadays wears it. They make it of various stuffs. It requires 9 gaz $6\frac{1}{2}$ giriḥ stuff, the same quantity of lining 6 m silk, 1 s cotton. It is made both single and double. Price from $\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 rupees.

¹ Bakhya in Hind bakhṣya corresponds to what ladies call backstitching. Ayda is the buttonhole stitch. These at least are the meanings which bakhya and ayda now have.

11 The *Chakman*¹ is made of broadcloth, or woollen stuff, or wax cloth His Majesty has it made of *Dārā*² wax cloth, which is very light and pretty The rain cannot go through it It requires 6 gaz stuff, 5 giriḥ binding, and 2 m silk The price of making one of broadcloth is 2 R, of wool, 1½ R, of wax cloth, ½ R

12 The Shaluar (drawers) is made of all kinds of stuff, single and double, and wadded It requires 3 gaz 11 giriḥ cloth, 6 giriḥ for the hem through which the string runs, 3 gaz 5 giriḥ lining, 1½ m silk, ½ s cotton Price, from ¼ to ½ rupee

There are various kinds of each of these garments It would take me too long to describe the chīras, fawlas, and dupattas,² or the costly dresses worn at feasts or presented to the grandees of the present time Every season, there are made one thousand complete suits for the imperial wardrobe, and one hundred and twenty, made up in twelve bundles, are always kept in readiness From his indifference to everything that is worldly, His Majesty prefers and wears *woollen*³ stuffs, especially shawls, and I must mention, as a most curious sign of auspiciousness that his Majesty's clothes becomingly fit every one, whether he be tall or short, a fact which has hitherto puzzled many

His Majesty has changed the names of several garments, and invented new and pleasing terms⁴ Instead of jāma (coat), he says sarbgālī, i e. covering the whole body, for izār (drawers), he says yār pīrāhan (the companion of the coat), for nīmtana (a jacket), tanzeb, for fauta, patgat, for *burqa*⁵ (a veil), chitragupita, for kulāh (a cap), sīs sobhā, for mūy bāf (a hair ribbon), lesghan, for patkā (a cloth for the loins), katzeb, for shal (shawl), parmnarm, for parmgarm, for kapārdhūr, a Tibetan stuff, kapurnūr, for pāy afzār (shoes), charndharn, and similarly for other names

¹ As this word is not given in any dictionary the vowels are doubtful So is Vuller's form chaspan

terms

⁴ The MSS have an unintelligible word The Banāras MS has pardak Firdng or European Pardak (*)

ON SHAWLS, STUFFS, ETC

His Majesty improved this department in four ways. The improvement is visible, first, in the Tūs shawls, which are made of the wool of an animal of that name, its natural colours are black, white, and red, but chiefly black. Sometimes the colour is a pure white. This kind of shawl is unrivalled for its lightness, warmth, and softness. People generally wear it without altering its natural colour, his Majesty has had it dyed. It is curious that it will not take a red dye. Secondly, in the Safid Alchas,¹ also called Tarhdārs, in their natural colours. The wool is either white or black. These stuffs may be had in three colours, white, black, or mixed. The first or white kind, was formerly dyed in three ways, his Majesty has given the order to dye it in various ways. Thirdly, in stuffs as Zardozi,² Kalābatun, Kashīda, *Qalgha*³, Bāndhnūn, Chhīnt, Alcha, Purzdār, to which his Majesty pays much attention. Fourthly, an improvement was made in the width of all stuffs, his Majesty had the pieces made large enough to yield the making of a full dress.

The garments stored in the Imperial wardrobe are arranged according to the days, months, and years, of their entries, and according to their colour, price, and weight. Such an arrangement is nowadays called misl, a set. The clerks fix accordingly the degree of every article of wear, which they write on a strip of cloth, and tack it to the end of the pieces. Whatever pieces of the same kind arrive for the imperial wardrobe on the ... pieces are equal in value, their precedence or otherwise, is determined by the character³ of the day of their entry, and if pieces are equal as far as the character of the day is concerned, they put the lighter stuff higher in rank, and if pieces have the same weight, they arrange them according to their colour. The following is the order of colours: tūs, safidalcha, ruby coloured, golden, orange, brass coloured, crimson, grass green, cotton flower coloured, sandalwood coloured, almond coloured, purple, grape coloured, mauve like the colour of some parrots, honey coloured, brownish lilac, coloured like the Ratanmanjanī

¹ Alcha or Alacha ...

² Zardozi ...

gold and silk in the piece ...

... The arrangement Similar arrange ... perhaps they indicate ... some order at least was kept flower, coloured like the Kāsnī flower, apple coloured, hay coloured, pistachio, ¹ bhojpatra coloured pink light blue, coloured like the galghah flower, water coloured oil coloured, brown red emerald, bluish like China ware, violet bright pink mangoe coloured, musk coloured, coloured like the Fākhla ²

In former times shawls were often brought from Kashmir People folded them up in four folds, and wore them for a very long time Nowa days they are generally worn without folds, and merely thrown over the shoulder His Majesty has commenced to wear them double, which looks very well

His Majesty encourages in every possible way, the manufacture of shawls in Kashmir In Lahor also there are more than a thousand work shops A kind of shawl called māyān, is chiefly woven there, it consists of silk and wool mixed Both are used for chīras (turbans) fotas (loin bands), etc

I subjoin the following tabular particulars

A Gold stuffs

Brocaded velvet from Yazd ³ per piece	15 to 150 M
Do from Europe, do	10 to 70 M
Do from Gujrāt, do	10 to 50 M
Do from Kāshān do	10 to 40 M
Do from Hirāt, do	"
Do from Lahor, do	10 to 40 M
Do from Barsah (?) do	3 to 70 M
Mutabbaq , do ⁴	2 to 70 M
Milak do	3 to 70 M
Brocade, from Gujrat do	4 to 60 M
Tas ⁵ Brocade from do do	1 to 35 M

¹ The text contains two doubtful words The next word bhojpatra is the bark of a tree used for making hugga tubes

Dārā'i-bāf , from Gujrāt	2 to 50 M.
Muqayyash , do	1 to 20 M.
Shirwānī Brocade, do	6 to 17 M.
Mushayyar , from Europe, per yard	1 to 4 M.
Debā silk, do do	1 to 4 M.
Do, from Yazd, do	1 to 1½ M.
Khārā , do	5 R. to 2 M.
Satin, from Chinese Tartary	•
Nawār , from do	•
Khazz silk	•
Tafīla (a stuff from Mecca)	from 15 to 20 R.
Kurtahwār , from Gujrāt	1 to 20 M.
Mindil	1 to 14 M.
Chīra (for turbans)	½ to 8 M.
Dupattā , do	9 to 8 R.
Fotas (loin bands)	½ to 12 M.
Counterpanes	1 to 20 M.

* The Text does not give the prices.

B. Silks, etc., plain

Velvet from Europe, per yard	1 to 4 M.
Do from Kāshān, per piece	2 to 7 M.
Do from Yazd, do	2 to 4 M.
Do. from Mashhad, do	2 to 4 M.
Do from Hirāt, do	1½ to 3 M.
Do Khāfi , do	2 to 4 M.
Do from Lāhor, do	2 to 4 M.
Do from Gujrāt, per yard	1 to 2 R.
Qatīfa-yi Pūralī , ¹ do	1 to 1½ R.
Tāja-bāf , per piece	2 to 30 M.
Dārā'i-bāf , do	2 to 30 M.
Mutabbāq , do	1 to 30 M.
Shirwānī , do	1½ to 10 M.
Afīlāt , do	1 to 7 M.
Kamīlāb , from Kābul and Peruz, do	1 to 5 M.
Tawār (1), do	2 R. to 2 M.
Khārī (1), do	4 to 10 R.
Mushayyar , from Europe, per yard	2 R. to 1 M.
Do. from Yazd, per piece	1 to 2 M.

¹ A kind of velvet.

Satin, from Europe, per yard	2 R to 1 M
Satin, from Hīrat, per piece	5 R to 2 M
Khārā , per yard	1 R to 6 R
Sīhrang , ¹ per piece	1 to 3 M
Qutnī , ² do	1½ R to 2 M
Katān ³ from Europe per yard	½ to 1 R
Tāsta , ⁴ do	¼ to 2 R
Anbarī do	4 d to ½ R
Dārā ⁵ do	⅓ R to 2 R
Sūīpūrī per piece	6 R to 2 M
Qabāband do	6 R to 2 M
Tat bandpūrī do	2 R to 1½ M
Lāh per yard	½ to ½ R
Mīsrī , per piece	½ to 1 M
Sār per yard	⅙ to ⅓ R
Tassar , ⁵ per piece	½ to 2 R
Plain Kurtavār Satin per yard	½ to 1 R
Kapūrī formerly called Kapūrdhur , do	⅓ to 1 R
Alcha do	⅓ to 2 R
Tafsīla per piece	7 to 12 R

C Cotton cloths

Ahasa per piece	3 R to 15 M
Chautar do	2 R to 9 M
Malmal do	4 R
Tansukh do	4 R to 5 M
Siri Sif do	2 R to 5 M
Gangujal do	4 R to 5 M
Bhiraun do	4 R to 4 M
Salan do	1 to 3 M
Jhona do	1 R to 1 M
Atan do	2½ R to 1 M
Asarālī do	1 to 5 M
Bīsta do	1½ R to 5 M
Mahmudī do	½ to 3 M

¹ Cl at g ng s ll

²

³

th n

⁴

⁵

* see that it is exceed ngly
it is Muslin

ruigo tessa

Panchtoliya, per piece	1 to 3 M
Jhola, do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ M
Sālū per piece	3 R to 2 M
Doriva per piece	6 R to 2 M
Bahādur Shāhī, do	6 R to 2 M
Garba Sālī, do	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 M
Shela, from the Dakhin, do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 M
Mīrkuī, do	3 R to 2 M
Mīndīl, do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 M
Sarband, do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 M
Dupatta, do	1 R to 1 M
Katāncha, do	1 R to 1 M
Fota, do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 R
Goshpech, do	1 to 2 R
Chhīnt per yard	2 d to 1 R
Gā īna per piece	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ R
Silāhāfī per yard	2 to 4 d

D Woollen stuffs

Scarlet Broadcloth from Turkey, Europe ¹ and Portugal per yard	2 $\frac{1}{2}$ P to 4 M
Do, from Nagor and Lāhor, per piece	2 R to 1 M
Sufī murabbāc do	4 to 15 M
Sufī do	3 R to 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ M
Parmnarm do	2 R to 20 M
Ch'ra yī Parmnarm do	2 R to 25 M
Fota do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 M
Jāmavīr's Parmnarm do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 M
Goshpech do	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ R to 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ M
Sarpech do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 M
Ch'ra yī do	7 R to 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ M

¹ The articles imported from Europe were chiefly broad cloth, muscalinettes, merino, astrakhan, pictures; but cottons (vide Pādshāhī II p. 206 l. 2 from below p. 234 l. 7) and amiricots (ibid. col. 4) the names of cloths mentioned by Al-Biruni several are not now known, as native weavers cannot compete with the English loom; the little cheap European Muslin Al'paras (Charles and Martin) which are nowadays in common use with the natives all over the East. At that time of the Moguls and before the use of woollen stuffs and for the poorer classes, blanket was not so general as now. Even the English serge generally worn by Muhammadans in this country, as well as the topi and in Persian talī'ā (to be

Satin, from Europe, per yard	2 R to 1 M
Satin, from Hirat per piece	5 R to 2 M
Khārā , per yard	1 R to 6 R
Sihrang ¹ per piece	1 to 3 M
Qutnā , ² do	1½ R to 2 M
Katān , ³ from Europe per yard	½ to 1 R
Tāsta , ⁴ do	¼ to 2 R
Anbarī do	4 d to ½ R
Dāra ⁴ do	½ R to 2 R
Sitipurī , per piece	6 R to 2 M
Qababand do	6 R to 2 M
Tat bandpurī do	2 R to 1½ M
Lāh , per yard	¼ to ¼ R
Misrī , per piece	½ to 1 M
Sar per yard	⅓ to ⅓ R
Jassar , ⁵ per piece	½ to 2 R
Plain Kurtavar Satin per yard	¼ to 1 R
Kapurnur formerly called Kapūrdhūr , do	⅓ to 1 R
Alcha , do	½ to 2 R
Tafsula per piece	7 to 12 R

C Cotton cloths

Khasa per piece	3 R to 15 M
Chautar do	2 R to 9 M
Malmal do	4 R
Tansukh do	4 R to 5 M
Siri saf do	2 R to 5 M
Gangajal do	4 R to 5 M
Bhiraun do	4 R to 4 M
Sahan do	1 to 3 M
Jhona do	1 R to 1 M
Atan do	2½ R to 1 M
Isai ali do	1 to 5 M
Bifta do	1½ R to 5 M
Muhmudī do	½ to 3 M

ree that it is exceed ngly it is Musl n

vulgo tessa

Panchtoliya per piece	1 to 3 M
Jhola do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to $2\frac{1}{2}$ M
Salu per piece	3 R to 2 M
Doriva per piece	6 R to 2 M
Bahadur Shahi do	6 R to 2 M
Garba Sati do	$1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 M
Shela from the Dakhun do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 M
Mihkul do	3 R to 2 M
Mindil do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 M
Sarband do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 M
Dupatta do	1 R to 1 M
Katancha do	1 P to 1 M
Fota do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 R
Goshpech do	1 to 2 R
Chhint per yard	2 d to 1 R
Ga ina per piece	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 11 R
Silahasi per yard	2 to 4 d

D Woollen stuffs

Scarlet Broadcloth from Turkey Europe¹ and Portugal per yard	$2\frac{1}{2}$ P to 4 M
Do from Nagor and Lahor per piece	2 R to 1 M
Sufi murabbac do	4 to 15 M
Sufi „² do	3 R to $1\frac{1}{2}$ M
Iarmnarm do	2 R to 20 M
Ch-ra-yi Iarmnarm do	2 R to 25 M
Fota do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 M
Jamawar Iarmnarm do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 M
Costpech do	11 R to 11 M
Sazpech do	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 M
Agri d	7 R to 21 M

¹ The articles imported from Europe were chiefly broad cloth, musical instruments, a strange picture cut out of (de Padioni II p. 200) 12 from below p. 101) and a 1600 tobacco. Of the names of cloths mentioned by Al I Far several are not better known as native weavers cannot compete with the East by their cheap European Muslin Alpacas Chintzes and Mohairs. At the present day in common use with the natives all over the East. At the time of the Moguls and before the use of woollen stuffs and for the poorer classes, it was much more common than now. Even the light caps generally worn by the soldiers in the country called in Hindustani and in Persian tsiat'ja (see p. 101) are mostly imported from England. I am not aware that the soldiers of the Moguls were uniformly dressed, though it appears that the commanders of the contingents at least looked to an uniformity in the caps and turbans.

² The MGR. have an expression for this word.

Parmgarm, per piece	3 R to 2½ M.
Katās, do	2½ R to 10 M.
Phūk, do	2½ to 15 R
Durman, do	2 R to 4 M.
Patū, do	1 to 10 R
Rewlār, do	2 R. to 1 M.
Misri, do	5 to 50 R
Burd i Yamanī, do	5 to 35 R
Mānjī (?) namad, do	2 R to 1 M.
Kanpak (?) namad, do	2 R to 1 M.
Takyal namad, from Kabul and Persia	*
Do, country made, do	1½ to 5 R.
Lo^sī, do	14 d to 4 R
Blankets, do	10 d to 2 R.
Kashmīrian Caps, do	2 d to 1 R.

* The price is not given in the text

A^sin 33

ON THE NATURE OF COLOURS

White and black are believed to be the origin of all colours. They are looked upon as extremes, and as the component parts of the other colours. Thus white when mixed in large proportions with an impure black, will yield yellow, and white and black, in equal proportions, will give red. White mixed with a large quantity of black, will give a bluish green. Other colours may be formed by compounding these. Besides, it must be borne in mind that cold makes a juicy white body, and a dry body black, and heat renders that which is fresh black, and white that which is dry. These two powers (heat and cold) produce, each in its place, a change in the colour of a body, because bodies are both qābil, i e capable of being acted upon, and muqtaza, i e subject to the influence of the heavenly bodies (chiefly the sun), the active origin of heat.

A^sin 34

THE ARTS OF WRITING AND PAINTING

What we call form leads us to recognize a body, the body itself leads us to what we call a notion, an idea. Thus, on seeing the form of a letter, we recognize the letter, or a word, and this again will lead us to some idea. Similarly in the case of what people term a picture. But though it is true that painters especially those of Europe succeed in drawing figures expressive of the conceptions which the artist has of any of the mental states¹ so much so that people may mistake a picture for a reality yet pictures are much inferior to the written letter inasmuch as the letter may embody the wisdom of bygone ages and become a means to intellectual progress.

I shall first say something about the art of writing as it is the more important of the two arts. His Majesty gave much attention to both, and is an excellent judge of form and thought. And indeed, in the eyes of the friends of true beauty, a letter is the source from which the light confined within it beams forth, and in the opinion of the far-sighted, it is the world reflecting cup² in the abstract. The letter a magical power, is spiritual geometry emanating from the pen or invention a heavenly writ from the hand of fate, it contains the secret word and is the tongue of the hand. The spoken word goes to the heart of such as are present to hear it, the letter gives wisdom to those that are near and far. If it was not for the letter, the spoken word would soon die and no keepsake would be left us of those that are gone by. Superficial observers see in the letter a sooty figure but the deep-seated a lamp of wisdom. The written letter looks black, notwithstanding the thousand rays within it, or it is a light with a mole on it that wards off the evil eye³. Alas! it is the portrait painter of wisdom, a rough sketch from the realm of ideas, a dark night ushering in day, a black cloud pregnant with knowledge, the wand for the treasures of insight speaking though dumb, stationary, and yet travelling, stretched on the sheet and yet soaring upwards.

When a ray of God's knowledge falls on man's soul it is carried by the mind to the realm of thought which is the intermediate station between that which is conscious of individual existence (ru'yūfī) and that which is material (maddī). The result⁴ is a concrete thing mixed with the absolute or an absolute thing mixed with that which is concrete. This compound steps forward on man's tongue and enters with the assistance of the conveying air, into the windows of the ears of others. It then drops the heavens

¹ ḥayāt "life" referring to the artist's life - ḥayāt to us as reverence

² Human beauty is imperfect unless accompanied by a mole. For the mole on the cheek of his sweetest ear, Hafiz would make a present of Samargand and Balkh. Other poets rejoice to see at least one black spot on the beautiful face of the beloved who without such an amulet would be subject to the influence of the evil eye.

⁴ The spoken word, the idea expressed by a sound.

burden of its concrete component, and returns, as a single ray, to its old place the realm of thought. But the heavenly traveller occasionally gives his course a different direction by means of man's fingers, and having passed along the continent of the pen and crossed the ocean of the ink alights on the pleasant expanse of the page, and returns through the eye of the reader to its wonted habitation.

As the letter is a representation of an articulate sound, I think it necessary to give some information regarding the latter.

The sound of a letter is a mode of existence depending on the nature of the air. By qara we mean the striking together of two hard substances, and by qala, the separation of the same. In both cases the intermediate air, like a wave, is set in motion, and thus the state is produced which we call sound. Some philosophers take sound to be the secondary effect, and define it as the air set in motion, but others look upon it as the primary effect, i.e. they define sound to be the very qara, or the qala, of any hard substances. Sound may be accompanied by modifying circumstances, it may be a piano, deep nasal, or guttural as when the throat is affected by a cold. Again, from the nature of the organ with which man utters a sound and the manner in which the particles of the air are divided another modifying circumstance may arise, as when two pianos, two deep, two nasal, or two guttural sounds separate from each other. Some as Abu 'Alī Sina, call this modifying element (ṣāriḥ) the sound of the letter, others define it as the original state of the sound thus modified (maṣru), but the far sighted define an articulate sound as the union of the modifying element and the original state modified. This is evidently the correct view.

There are fifty two articulate sounds in Hindi, so and so many¹ in Greek, and eighteen in Persian. In Arabic there are twenty eight letters represented by eighteen signs, or by only fifteen when we count the joined letters and if we take the Hamzah as one with the alif. The reason for writing an alif and a lam (ل) separately as the end of the single letters the Arabic alphabet is merely to give an example of a sakin letter, which must necessarily be joined to another letter and the reason why the letter lām is preferred² as an example is because the letter lām is the

¹ Abū l Faṣl has forgotten to put in the number. He counts eighteen letters or rather signs in Persian because ۛ, ۛ, and ۛ have the same fundamental sign.

² he . on these two letters middle letter of the word alif, and the letter alif the middle letter of the word lam

The vowel signs did not exist in ancient times, instead of which letters were dotted with a different kind of ink, thus a red dot placed over a letter expressed that the letter was followed by an a, a red dot in front of the letter signified a u, and a red dot below a letter an i. It was Khalīl ibn Ahmad,¹ the famous inventor of the Metrical Art of the Arabians, who fixed the forms of the vowel signs as they are now in use

The beauty of a letter and its proportions depend much on personal taste, hence it is that nearly every people has a separate alphabet. Thus we find an Indian Syriac, Greek, Hebrew, Coptic, Maṣṣalī, Kuṣī Kashmirī, Abyssinian, Ray/ānī, Arabic, Persian, Himyaritic Berberic, Andalusian Ruhānī, and several other ancient systems of writing. The invention of the Hebrew characters is traced in some poems to Ādam ḥaḥāzārī,² but some mention Idrīs³ as the inventor. Others, however, say that Idrīs perfected the Maṣṣalī character. According to several statements, the Kufic character was derived by the Khalīfah ʿAlī from the Maṣṣalī.

The difference in the form of a letter in the several systems, lies in the proportion of straight and round strokes, thus the Kufic character consists of one sixth curvature and five sixths straight lines, the Maṣṣalī has no curved lines at all, hence the inscriptions which are found on ancient buildings are mostly in this character.

In writing we have to remember that black and white look well, as these colours best prevent ambiguities in reading.

In Iran and Tūran, India and Turkey, there are eight caligraphical

¹ i. e. do not read this compound lam alif but pass over it when you say the Alphabet look upon it as a mere example of a sākin letter.

The term ham ah as used here in native schools is carefully distinguished from the terms Shālī, Ham ah and Marīz; Ham ah Shālī, Ham ah is the small sign consisting of slanting letter when either of the

in Europe

explain the word Ham ah as the name of a sign.

Another peculiarity of European grammars is this that in arranging the letters of the alphabet the zero is placed after the he, here in the East the he is invariably put before the ya.

² He is said to have been born A. H. 100 and died at Basrah A. H. 175 or 190. He wrote several works on the science which he had established as also several books on the rhyme lexicographical compilations etc.

³ Adam is called Haft ha ḥūrī because the number of inhabitants on earth at his death had reached the number seven thousand. A better explanation is given by Badaonī (II p. 337 l. 10) who puts the creation of Adam seven thousand years before his time. See the first Aḥ of the Third Book.

⁴ Idrīs or Enoch

systems¹ current, of which each one is liked by some people. Six of them were derived in A. H. 310 by Ibn al Muqlah from the Maḥqalī and the Kūfic characters, viz, the Sulʿ, Tauqīʿ, Muḥaqqaq, Naskḥ, Rayḥān, Riqāʿ. Some add the Ghubār, and say that this seventh character had likewise been invented by him. The Naskḥ character is ascribed by many to Yāqūt, a slave of the Khalīfah *Mustaʿsam Billāh*². The Sulʿ and the Naskḥ consist each of one third³ curved lines, and two thirds straight lines, the former (the sulʿ) is jalī,⁴ whilst the latter (the naskḥ) is khafī. The Tauqīʿ and Riqāʿ consist of three fourths curved lines and one fourth straight lines, the former is jalī, the latter is khafī. The Muḥaqqaq and Rayḥān contain three fourths straight lines, the former, as in the preceding, is jalī, and the Rayḥān is khufī.

Among famous copyists I must mention ʿAlī ibn al Hilāl, better known under the name of Ibn al Bawwāb,⁵ he wrote well the six characters Yāqūt brought them to perfection. Six of Yāqūt's pupils are noticeable, 1 Shayḥ Ahmad, so well known under the name of Shayḥ zāda yā Suhrwardī, 2 Arghūn of Kabul, 3 Mawlāna Yūsuf Shah of Mashhad, 4 Mawlānā Mubārīk Shāh, styled Zarrīn qalam (the golden pen), 5 Haydar, called Gandahnawīs (i. e., the writer of the jalī), 6 Mir Yahyā

1511 1510 1510
² He was the last caliph, and reigned from 1242 to 1258 when he was put to

Ibn al Muqlah or according to some it is said that he was the first to invent

The following calligraphists are likewise well known Sūfi Nasr^u 'llāh, also called Sadr; 'Irāqī, Arqūn, 'Abd^u 'llāh, Khwāja 'Abd^u 'llāh; Sayrafī, Hajī Muhammad, Mawlānā 'Abd^u 'llāh; Āshpaz; Mawlānā Muhi of Shirāz, Muḥsin^u 'd Dīn; Tanūrī, Shams^u 'd Dīn; Khatā'ī, 'Abd^u 'r Rahmī; Khatūh (1), 'Abd^u 'l Hayy Mawlānā Jaḥfar¹ of Tabriz, Mawlānā Shih of Mashhad, Mawlāna Maḥrūf² of Baghdād, Mawlānā Shams^u 'd Dīn Bāyasanghur, Muḥsin^u 'd Dīn of Farāh, 'Abd^u 'l Haqq of Sabzwār, Maulānā Niḥmat^u 'llāh; Bawwab, Khwājagī Mumin; Marward, the inventor of variegated papers and sands for strewing on the paper Sultan Ibrahim, son of Mirzā Shāhrūkh, Mawlāna Muhammad Halīm Hafīz, Mawlānā Mahmūd Siyā'ūsh, Mawlānā Jamal¹ 'd Dīn Husayn, Mawlānā Pīr Muhammad, Mawlānā Fazl^u 'l Haqq of Qazwīn²

A seventh kind of writing is called Taḥliq, which has been derived from the Riqāḥ and the Tauqīḥ. It contains very few straight lines, and was brought to perfection by Khwāja Taj; Salmān⁴ who also wrote well the other six characters. Some say that he was the inventor.

Of modern calligraphists I may mention Mawlānā 'Abd^u 'l Hayy, the Private Secretary⁵ of Sultān Abū Saḥīd Mirza, who wrote Taḥliq well, Mawlāna Darwish,⁶ Amir Mansūr, Mawlāna Ibrāhīm of Astarābad, Khwāja Ikhtivar,⁷ Muḥshī Jamāl^u 'd Dīn, Muhammad of Qazwīn, Mawlānā Idrīs Khwāja Muhammad Husayn Munshī, and Ashraf Khan,⁸

Mahmud

also mention Mulla Abu Bakr and Shaykh

¹ According to the Maktūbat and several MSS Sulaymān.

² In the original text p. 114 l. 5 by mistake Mawlāna 'Abd^u 'l Hayy and the Munshī of Sultān Abū Saḥīd.

³ Mawlāna Darwish Muhammad was a friend of the famous Amir 'Alī Sher the vizier of Sultān Husayn Mirzā King of Khorāsān (A. D. 1470 to 1505) and the patron of the poet Jamī. Mawlāna Darwish entered afterward the service of Shah Junayd; Safawī King of Persia (A. D. 1499 to 1507).

calligraphist

the Private Secretary of his Majesty, who improved the Taʿlīq very much

The eighth character which I have to mention is the Nastaʿlīq it consists entirely of round lines They say that Mir ʿAlī of Tabriz, a contemporary of Tīmūr, derived it from the Naskh and the Taʿlīq but this can scarcely be correct because there exist books in the Nastaʿlīq character written before Tīmūr's time Of Mir ʿAlī's pupils, I may mention two ¹ Mawlana Jaʿfar of Tabriz and Mawlana Azhar, and of other calligraphists in Taʿlīq Mawlana Muhammad of Awbah (near Hirat) an excellent writer Mawlana Bari of Hirat, and Mawlana Sulṭān ʿAlī ² of Mashhad, who surpasses them all He imitated the writing of Mawlana Azhar, though he did not learn from him personally Six of his pupils are well known Sultan Muhammad ³ Ḥāndan Sultan Muhammad Nur Mawlana ʿAlā ⁴ d Dīn of Hirat, Mawlana Zayn ⁵ d Dīn (of Nishapur) Mawlana ʿAbdī of Nishapūr, Muhammad Qasīm Shādī Shah, each of whom possessed some distinguishing qualities

Besides these, there are a great number of other good calligraphists, who are famous for their skill in Nastaʿlīq as Mawlana Sulṭān ʿAlī, of Qayn, ⁶ Mawlana Sulṭān ʿAlī of Mashhad, ⁷ Mawlana Hujranī, ⁸ and after them the illustrious Mawlana Mir ʿAlī ⁹ the pupil as it appears of Mawlana Zayn ⁵ d Dīn He brought his art to perfection by imitating the writing of Sulṭān ʿAlī of Mashhad The new method, which he established is a proof of his genius he has left many masterpieces Some one asked him once what the difference was between his writing and that of the Mawlana He said "I also have brought writing to perfection, but yet, his method has a peculiar charm

¹ The Mirʿat mentions a third immediate pupil of Mir ʿAlī Mawlana Ḥāwaya Muhammad and relates that he put Mir ʿAlī's name to his own writings without giving offence to his master

² He also was a friend of Amir ʿAlī Sher and died A. H. 910 during the reign of Sultan Husayn Mirza mentioned in the fourth note

³ He was called Ḥāndan as he was always happy He was a friend of Amir ʿAlī

In conclusion I may mention Shāh Mahmūd¹ of Nishāpūr, Mahmūd Is hāq, Shams² 'd Dīn of Kirmān, Mawlānā Jamshed, the riddle-writer, Sultan Husayn of Khujand, Mawlānā 'Ayshī, Ghayās³ 'd Dīn, the gilder, Mawlānā 'Abd⁴ s Samad, Mawlana Malik, Mawlānā 'Abd⁵ 'l Karīm, Mawlānā 'Abd⁶ 'r Rahīm of Khwārizm, Mawlānā Shaykh Muhammad, Mawlana Shah Mahmud i Zarrīngalam (or gold pen), Mawlānā Muhammad Husayn⁷ of Tabriz, Mawlānā Hasan 'Alī of Mash had, Mir Mu⁸izz of Kashan, Mirza Ibrahim of Isfahan, and several others who have devoted their lives to the improvement of the art

His Majesty shows much regard to the art, and takes a great interest in the different systems of writing, hence the large number of skilful calligraphists Nasta'liq has especially received a new impetus. The artist who in the shadow of the throne of his Majesty, has become a master of calligraphy, is Muhammad Husayn⁹ of Kashmir. He has been honoured with the title of Zarīngalam, the gold pen. He surpassed his master Mawlana 'Abd¹⁰ 'l 'Aziz, his maddāt and *dawā¹¹'ir*⁴ show everywhere a proper proportion to each other, and art critics consider him equal to Mulla Mir 'Alī. Of other renowned calligraphists of the present age, I must mention Mawlānā Baqir, the son of the illustrious Mulla Mir 'Alī, Muhammad Amin of Mash had, Mir Husayn i Ku'anki, Mawlānā 'Abd¹² 'l Hay; Mawlana Dawri,⁵ Mawlana 'Abd¹³ 'r Rahīm, Mir 'Abd¹⁴ 'llah, Nizāmī of Qazwin, 'Alī Chaman of Kashmir, Nur¹⁵ 'llah Qasim Arsalan

His Majesty's library is divided into several parts, some of the books are kept within, and some without, the Harem. Each part of the library

¹ According to the Maktubāt and the Mu¹⁶fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur Both ment on another calligraphist) Ma¹⁷fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur)

² He will be for Ma¹⁸fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma¹⁹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur)

³ He c Ma²⁰fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma²¹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur)

⁴ By (curvatures) letters like Ma²²fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma²³fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur)

Draw four horizontal lines at equal intervals call the spaces between them a b c of which n is the highest. Every letter which fills the space b is called a shusha, as Ma²⁴fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur). The d acritical points are immaterial. Every line above b is called a markaz every line below b is in c a dāmar. Thus Ma²⁵fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) consists of a shusha and a markaz Ma²⁶fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) of a shusha and a daman. The knob of a Ma²⁷fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) or Ma²⁸fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) is called lalla. Thus Ma²⁹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) is a Madda consisting of a kalla and a daman, so also Ma³⁰fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur). The Ma³¹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) consists of a markaz and a daman.

In Grammar the word markaz means the same as shusha in calligraphy thus Ma³²fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) consist of a markaz and a shaki i hamza

By Ma³³fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) calligraphists mean any additional ornamental strokes or refilling a Ma³⁴fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma³⁵fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma³⁶fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma³⁷fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma³⁸fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma³⁹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴⁰fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴¹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴²fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴³fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴⁴fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴⁵fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴⁶fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴⁷fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴⁸fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁴⁹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵⁰fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵¹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵²fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵³fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵⁴fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵⁵fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵⁶fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵⁷fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵⁸fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁵⁹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶⁰fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶¹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶²fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶³fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶⁴fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶⁵fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶⁶fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶⁷fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶⁸fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁶⁹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷⁰fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷¹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷²fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷³fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷⁴fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷⁵fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷⁶fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷⁷fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷⁸fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁷⁹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸⁰fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸¹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸²fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸³fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸⁴fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸⁵fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸⁶fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸⁷fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸⁸fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁸⁹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹⁰fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹¹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹²fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹³fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹⁴fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹⁵fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹⁶fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹⁷fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹⁸fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma⁹⁹fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur) Ma¹⁰⁰fat Shāh Muḥammad (f Nishapur)

Maḥmūd (Akbar bestowed pupil was Khwaja or Ibrāhīm, in the is subdivided, according to the value of the books and the estimation in which the sciences are held of which the books treat. Prose books, poetical works, Hindi, Persian, Greek, Kashmirian, Arabic,¹ are all separately placed. In this order they are also inspected. Experienced people bring them daily and read them before His Majesty, who hears every book from the beginning to the end. At whatever page the readers daily stop, His Majesty makes with his own pen a sign, according to the number of the pages, and rewards the readers with presents of cash, either in gold or silver, according to the number of leaves read out by them. Among books of renown, there are few that are not read in his Majesty's assembly hall, and there are no historical facts of the past ages, or curiosities of science, or interesting points of philosophy with which His Majesty, a leader of impartial sages, is unacquainted. He does not get tired of hearing a book over again, but listens to the reading of it with more interest. The Akhlaq-i Nāsiri, the Kimiyā-yi Sa'adat the Qibūshnāma, the works of Sharaf of Munayr (vide p. 50), the Galistān, the Hadiqa of Hakim Sana'i, the Maṣnawī of Maṣnawī, the Jām-i Jam, the Bustān, the Shahnama, the collected Maṣnawīs of Shaykh Nizāmī, the works of ... ... f Kāshān ... ... Anvarī, and se ... ty

Philolo, ... bic, and Persian books, into other languages. Thus a part of the Zich-i Tadid-i Mirzā'i (vide 3rd book, A⁴ in 1) was translated under the superintendence of Amīr Fath'ullah of Shīrāz (vide p. 34), and also the Kishinjoshī the Gangādhar, the Mohesh Mahanand, from Hindi (Sanskrit) into Persian, according to the interpretation of the author of this book. The Mahābhārat which belongs to the ancient books of Hindustan has likewise been translated, from Hindi into Persian, under the superintendence of Naqib Khan,² Mawlāna 'Abd'ul Qadir of Badaon,³ and Shaykh Sultan of

¹ Observe that the Arabic books are placed last. [For see p. 104 line 4 — B.]

² Regarding this renowned man vide Abu'l Faḍl's list of Cranlees 2nd book No. 161.

³ Mulla 'Abd'ul Qadir Badaon a town near

⁷ [or 949] at His father

Thanesar¹ The book contains nearly one hundred thousand verses His Majesty calls this ancient history Ra-mnāma, the book of Wars The same learned men translated also into Persian the Ramayan, likewise a book of ancient Hindustan which contains the life of Ram Chandra, but is full of interesting points of Philosophy Hajī Ibrahim of Sarhind translated into Persian the *Atharban*² which, according to the Hindus, is one of four thousand rat extracts adā A copy

ng the Persian
* Tawarikh

Atharban there is one which says that no man will be saved unless he read a certain passage This passage contains many times the letter l and resembles very much our

Badāoni II p 212

the four divine books. The Lilawatī, which is one of the most excellent works written by Indian mathematicians on arithmetic, lost its Hindū veil, and received a Persian garb from the hand of my elder brother, Shaykh 'Abd' 'l Fayz, Fayzī¹. At the command of His Majesty, Mukammal Khān of Gujrāt translated into Persian the Tūjak, a well known work on Astronomy. The *Memoirs*² of Bābir, the Conqueror of the world, which may be called a code of practical wisdom, have been translated from Turkish into Persian by Mirzā 'Abd' 'r-Rahīm Khān, the present Khān Khānan (Commander in Chief). The History of Kashmīr, which extends over the last four thousand years, has been translated from Kashmīran into Persian³ by Mawlinā Shāh Muhammad of Shāhābād. The *Musjam*⁴ 'l Buldān, an excellent work on towns and countries, has been translated from Arabic into Persian by several Arabic scholars, as Mullā Ahmad of Thathah,⁴ Qa'im Beg, Shaykh Munawwar, and others. The Harībīs, a book containing the life of Krishna, was translated into Persian by Mawlanā Sherī (vide the poetical extracts of the second book). By order of His Majesty, the author of this volume composed a new version of the Kalīlah Damnah, and published it under the title of *'Ayār Dīnīsh*⁵. The original is a masterpiece of practical wisdom, but is full of rhetorical difficulties, and though Nasr' Allah Mustawfi and Mawlanā Husayn Wa'iz has translated it into Persian, their style abounds in rare metaphors and difficult words. The Hindī story of the love of Nal and Damay, which melts the hearts of feeling readers, has been metrically translated by my brother Shaykh Fayzī Fayyazī, in the masnauī metre of the Layl Majnūn and is now every where known under the title of Nal Daman ¹

As His Majesty has become acquainted with the treasure of history, he ordered several well informed writers to compose a work containing the events which have taken place in the seven zones for the last one thousand years Naqib Khan and several others commenced this history A very large portion was subsequently added by Mulla Ahmad of Thathah, and the whole concluded by Ja'far Beg Āsaf Khan The introduction is composed by me The work has the title of Tarīkh Alfī,² the History of a thousand years

The Art of Painting

Drawing the likeness of anything is called taswīr His Majesty, from his earliest youth has shown a great predilection for this art and gives it every encouragement, as he looks upon it as a means both of study and amusement Hence the art flourishes and many painters have obtained great reputation The works of all painters are weekly laid before His Majesty by the Daroghas and the clerks, he then confers rewards according to excellence of workmanship, or increases the monthly salaries Much progress was made in the commodities required by painters and the correct prices of such articles were carefully ascertained The mixture of colours has especially been improved The pictures thus received a hitherto unknown finish Most excellent painters are now to be found and masterpieces worthy of a Bihād,³ may be placed at the side of the wonderful works of the European painters who have attained world wide fame The minuteness in detail, the general finish the boldness of execution etc now observed in pictures are incomparable, even inanimate

compos with a Naqib
the l k r discipl

D n i l
The

contains no place commences with the Prophet (8th June 632) and ends at Mahak (A.H. 99 or A.D. 717-18)
Prophet not from the Hijrah For Badoni n p 317

³ Bihad was a famous painter who lived at the court of Shah Isma'īl Ṣafawī of Persia Sirayullughat powerful as to make an impression on it. A sufficient number of such armours has been made so as to supply whole armies. His Majesty also looks into the prices of such as are sold in the bāzārs.

All weapons for the use of His Majesty have names, and a proper rank is assigned to them. Thus there are thirty swords (llūṣa swords), one of which is daily sent to His Majesty's sleeping apartments. The old one is returned, and handed over to the servants outside the harem, who keep it till its turn comes again. Forty other swords are kept in readiness, they are called lotal swords. When the number of llūṣa swords (in consequence of presents, etc.) has decreased to twelve, they supply new ones from the lotal swords. There are also twelve Yalbandī (¹), the turn of every one of which recurs after one week. Of Jāmdhars and Khapras, there are forty of each. Their turn recurs every week, and each has thirty lotals, from which deficiencies are supplied as before. Besides, eight knives, twenty spears and barchhas are required monthly. Of eighty six Mash hadī bows, Bhadāyan bows, and twenty four others, are returned monthly. ² In the same manner a rank is assigned to each.

Whenever His Majesty rides out, or at the time of the Bār or Ām, or Levee the sons of the Amīrs, and other Mansabdārs and Ahadīs, carry the Qur in their hands and on their shoulders. The every four of them carry four quivers, four bows, four swords, four shields, and besides, they take up lances, spears, axes, pointed axes, piṣūṛī war clubs, sticks, bullet bows, pestles, and a footstool, all properly arranged. Several qatār ³ of camels and mules are loaded with weapons and kept in readiness, and on travels they use Bactrian camels, etc., for that purpose. At court receptions, the Amīrs and other people stand opposite the Qur ready for any service, and on the march they follow behind it, with the exception of a few who are near His Majesty. Elephants in full trappings, camel-carriages, naqqūras, flags, the lawkabas, and other Imperial insignia accompany the Qur, while eager macebearers superintend the march assisted by the Mirbākhshis. In hunting expeditions several swift runners are in attendance, and a few others are in charge of harnesses.

In order to shorten the trouble of making references, I shall enumerate the weapons now in use in form of a table, and give pictures of some of them.

¹ I doubt the correctness of the translation. The word yalbandī is not in the dictionaries.

² The text has an unintelligible sentence.

³ Five camels are called qatār in Hind. qatar. A string of some length is tied to the tail of the front camel and is drawn through the nose holes of the next behind it and so on. Young camels are put on the backs of their mothers.

1 Swords (slightly bent)	$\frac{1}{2}$ R to 15 Muhurs
2 Ahadā (straight swords)	1 to 10 P
3 Gupṭī Saṣṭī (a sword in a walking stick)	2 to 20 L
4 Jamdhār (a broad dagger)	$\frac{1}{2}$ R to 2½ M
5 Khanjar	4 to 5 R
6 Kṛapica	1 R to 1½ M
7 Jam khāl	½ R to 1½ M
8 Bāl	½ R to 1 M
9 Jhanbica	½ R to 1 M
10 Katūra	½ R to 1 M
11 Darsinī moth	½ R to 1 M
12 Kamān (bows)	½ R to 2 M
13 Takhsh kaman	½ R to 3 M
14 Naṭak	1 to 4 R
15 Arrows per bundle	½ R to 1 M
16 Quivers	½ to 30 R
17 Dadī	½ R to 2 M
18 Tirbardār (arrow drawers) ¹	½ to 5 R
19 Pailānkash (do)	½ to 2½ d
20 Neza (a lance)	½ to 3 R
21 Barchha	1½ R to 6 M
22 Sṛṣṭī	½ R to 2 M
23 Sainthi	½ to 1½ R
24 Selara	½ to 1 R
25 Gurz (a war club)	10 d to ¾ R
26 Shashpar (do)	½ to 5 R
27 Kestan (?) ²	½ R to 3 M
¹ 28 Tabar (a war axe)	1 to 3 R
29 Piya ī (a club)	½ R to 2 M
30 Zaqlindl (a pointed axe)	½ to 5 R
31 Chakar basola	½ R to 1 M
32 Tabar zūql nol	1 to 6 R
33 Tarangala	1 to 4 R
34 Kard (a knife)	½ to 2 R
35 Gupṭī kard	2 d to 1 M
36 Qanchi kard	3 R to 1½ M
37 Chāqu (a clasp knife)	1 to 3½ R
	2 d to ½ R

¹ If this spelling be correct it is the same as the next (No 19) but it may be Tirbardār an arrow with a feather at the bottom of the shaft a barbed arrow

² This name is doubtful. The MSS. give all sorts of spellings. I take my text edited on p. 121 l. 1. The dictionary gives no information.

38	Kamān 1 guroha (bullet bow)	2 d to 1 R
39	Kamtha	5 d to 3 R
40	Tufak 1 dahān 2 (a tube, Germ Blaserohr)	10 d to $\frac{1}{2}$ R
41	Pushl^hhār 2	2 d to 2 R
42	Shastāuez 3	2 d to 1 R
43	Girihkushā	1 d to $\frac{1}{4}$ R
44	Khār 1 māhī	1 to 5 R
45	Gobham (a sling)	1' d to $\frac{1}{4}$ R
46	Gaybāg	1 to 5 R
47	Sīpar (a shield)	1 to 50 R
48	Dhāl	$\frac{1}{2}$ R to 4 M
49	Khera	1 R to 4 M
50	Pahrī	1 R to 1 M
51	Udāna	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 5 R
52	Dubul^hhā	$\frac{1}{2}$ R to 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ M
53	Khoghī	1 to 4 R
54	Zirih kulāh	1 to 5 R
55	Ghūghuwa	1 R to 2 M
56	Jaibāh 4	20 R to 30 M
57	Zirih .	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ R to 100 M
58	Bagtar 5	4 R to 12 M
59	Joshan	4 R to 3 M
60	Chār a^cīna	2 R to 7 M
61	Kothī	5 R to 8 M
62	Sādīqī	3 R to 8 M
63	Angīrkha	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ R to 5 M
64	Bhanyu	3 R to 2 M
65	Chīhrahzīrīh 1 āhanī	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ R to 1 M
66	Salhgabā	5 R to 8 M
67	Chihilqad	5 to 25 R
68	Dastuāna	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ R to 2 M
69	Rāl 6	1 R to 10 M

[1 A blow pipe —P]

* According to some Mbb rag

70 Kantha sobha ¹	1 to 10 R
71 Moza-yi ahanī	$\frac{1}{2}$ to 10 R
72 Kajem	50 to 300 R
73 Artak (the quilt) : layem	4 R to 7 M
74 Qashqa	1 R to 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ M
75 Gardani ²	1 R to 1 M
76 Matchlocks	$\frac{1}{2}$ R to 1 M
77 Bān (rockets)	2 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 R

A^c in 36

ON GUNS

Guns are wonderful locks for protecting the august edifice of the state, and besitting keys for the door of conquest. With the exception of Turkey, there is perhaps no country which in its guns has more means of securing the government than this. There are nowadays guns made of such a size that the ball weighs 12 mans, several elephants and a thousand cattle are required to transport one. His Majesty looks upon the care bestowed on the efficiency of this branch as one of the higher objects of a king, and therefore devotes to it much of his time. Daroghas and clever clerks are appointed to keep the whole in proper working order.

His Majesty has made several inventions which have astonished the whole world. He made a gun which, on marches, can easily be taken to pieces, and properly put together again when required. By another invention, His Majesty joins seventeen guns in such a manner as to be able to fire them simultaneously with one match. Again he made another kind of gun which can easily be carried by a single elephant, such guns have the name Gajnals. Guns which a single man may carry are called Narnals.

The imperial guns are carefully distributed over the whole kingdom and each Suba has that kind which is fit for it. For the siege of fortresses and for naval engagements, His Majesty has separate guns made, which accompany his victorious armies on their marches. It is impossible to count every gun, besides clever workmen make continually new ones, especially Gujnāls and Narnāls.

Amirs and Aliads are on staff employ in this branch. The pay of the foot varies from 100 to 400 d.

¹ The figure represents a long spear, but the etymology as also its position in the list of weapons, shows that it must be a part of the armour a neck p. etc.

² A round shield like plate of iron attached to the neck of the horse and hanging down so as to protect the chest of the animal.

ON MATCHLOCKS, ETC

These are in particular favour with His Majesty, who stands unrivalled in their manufacture, and as a marksman Matchlocks are now made so strong that they do not burst, though let off when filled to the top Formerly they could not fill them to more than a quarter Besides, they made them with the hammer and the anvil by flattening pieces of iron, and joining the flattened edges of both sides Some left them, from foresight, on one edge open, but numerous accidents were the result, especially in the former kind His Majesty has invented an excellent method of construction They flatten iron, and twist it round obliquely in form of a roll, so that the folds get longer at every twist, they then join the folds, not edge to edge, but so as to allow them to lie one over the other, and heat them gradually in the fire They also take cylindrical pieces of iron, and pierce them when hot with an iron pin Three or four of such pieces make one gun, or, in the case of smaller ones, two Guns are often made of a length of two yards, those of a smaller kind are one and a quarter yards long, and go by the name of Damānak The gunstocks are differently made From the practical knowledge of His Majesty, guns are now made in such a manner that they can be fired off, without a match, by a slight movement of the cock Bullets are also made so as to cut like a sword Through the assistance of the inventive genius of His Majesty there are now many masters to be found among gunmakers, e g, Ustad Kabir and Husayn

Iron, when heated, loses about one half of its volume

When a barrel is completed lengthways, before the transverse bottom piece is fixed to it, they engrave on it the quantity of its iron and the length, both being expressed in numerals A barrel thus far finished, is called Daul In this imperfect state they are sent to His Majesty, and delivered, in proper order, at the harem, to which place they are also brought for ¹ At the same time, the weight of the ball is fixed, and the order is given for the transverse section of the matchlock For long guns the weight of a ball does not exceed twenty five tanls, and for smaller ones fifteen But balls of the former weight no one but His Majesty ² would dare to fire When the barrels are polished, they are again

¹ The text has an unintelligible word the variantes lectiones are marked on p 125 of my text edition Note (13) The Banāras MS. has دول The word appears to be a foreign term.

² Akbar was remarkable for bodily strength. Idē Tusuk i Jahāngīr, p 16 sent to the harem, and preserved in proper order. They are afterwards taken out, and closed, by the order of His Majesty, with a transverse bottom piece. Having been put to an old stock, they are filled to one third of the barrel with powder, and fired off. If no *tarāwīsh*¹ takes place, and the trial is satisfactory, they take the barrels again to His Majesty, who gives the order to finish the mouthpiece of the barrel. After this the gun is again placed on the stock, and subjected to a trial. If the ball issues in a crooked line, the barrel is heated, and straightened by means of a rod introduced into it, and, in the presence of His Majesty, handed over to a filer. He adorns the outside of the barrel in various ways, according to orders, when it is taken to the harem. The wood and the shape of the stock are then determined on. Several things are marked on every matchlock, viz, the weight of the raw and the manufactured iron, the former marks being now removed, the place where the iron is taken from, the workman, the place where the gun is made, the date, its number. Sometimes without reference to a proper order, one of the unfinished barrels is selected and completed at His Majesty's command. It is then entered in another place, the transverse bottom piece is fixed, and the order is given to make the cock, the ramrod, the pargaz,² etc. As soon as all these things have been completed, a new trial is ordered, and when it succeeds, they send in the gun and deliver it a third time at the harem. In this state the gun is called sāda (plain). Five bullets are sent along with it. His Majesty, after trying it in the manner above described, returns it with the fifth bullet. The order for the colour of the barrel and the stock is now given, one of the nine kinds of colour is selected for the stock. Guns also differ in the quality of inlaid gold and enamel, the colour of the barrel is uniform. A gun thus far completed is called rangīn (coloured). It is now, as before, handed over together with five bullets, His Majesty makes four trials, and returns it with the last ball. When ten of such guns are ready, His Majesty orders to inlay the mouth of the barrel and the butt end with gold. They are then again sent for trial into the harem and whenever ten are quite complete they are handed over to the slaves.

¹ Tarawīsh means a trickling, the particular meaning which it here has is not clear and not given in the Dictionaries.

² Pargaz or Purgaz may mean the groove into which the ramrod is put or the ramrod itself. The word is not in the dictionary, and appears to be unknown at the present day.

Aⁿ 38

THE MANNER OF CLEANING GUNS

Formerly a strong man had to work a long time with iron instruments in order to clean matchlocks His Majesty, from his practical knowledge, has invented a wheel, by the motion of which sixteen barrels may be cleaned in a very short time The wheel is turned by a cow Plate XV will best show what sort of a machine it is

Aⁿ 39

THE RANKS OF THE GUNS

The Imperial arsenal contains manufactured, purchased, and presented, guns Each of them is either long, or short, and these are again subdivided into sāda (plain), rangīn (coloured), and loftkār (hammered) guns His Majesty has selected out of several thousand guns, one hundred and five as khāsa, i e for his special use First, twelve in honour of the twelve months each of them is brought back in its turn after eleven months Secondly, thirty for every week, after every seven days one goes out, and another is brought Thirdly, thirty two for the solar days, one for every day Fourthly, thirty one kotals Sometimes there are only twenty eight Whenever some of the former guns have been given away, kotals are brought, to supply their places The order of precedence is as follows the guns for the month, the week, days, kotals, plain, coloured, loftkār, not handed over to the slaves, loftkar, handed over to the slaves, long ones, selected from peshkash presents, or from such as were bought, damānaks, selected from peshklash, or from bought ones, such as have been chosen from selections of both The one hundred and five khāsa guns are divided into seven parts, every fifteen form a kishk, or guard, and are always kept ready by the slaves On Sundays two are taken from the first, four from the second, five from the third, four from the fourth This order is also followed on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays On Thursdays, two are again taken from the first, and four from the second, four from the third, five from the fourth On Fridays, one is taken from the first, five from the second, four from the third, five from the fourth So also for Saturdays In order to supply the places of such khāsa guns as have been given away, five other classes have been determined on half kotals, fourteen, quarter kotals, seven, one eighth kotals, four, one-sixteenth kotals, two, one-thirtysecond kotals, one When kotal guns are given away, they bring half kotals, similarly, the place of a gun, and to the success of a conqueror, and is of the greatest use for the army. Experienced men of Hindustan put the value of a good elephant equal to five hundred horses, and they believe that, when guided by a few bold men armed with matchlocks, such an elephant alone is worth double that number. In vehemence on one side, and submissiveness to the reins on the other, the elephant is like an Arab, whilst in point of obedience and attentiveness to even the slightest signs, it resembles an intelligent human being. In restiveness when full blooded, and in vindictiveness, it surpasses man. An elephant never hurts the female, though she be the cause of his captivity, he never will fight with young elephants, nor does he think it proper to punish them. From a sense of gratitude, he does his keepers no harm, nor will he throw dust over his body when he is mounted, though he often does so at other times. Once an elephant, during the rutting season was fighting with another. When he was in the height of excitement a small elephant came in his way, he kindly lifted up the small one with his trunk set him aside, and then renewed the combat. If a male elephant breaks loose during the rutting season in order to have his own way, few people have the courage to approach him, and some bold and experienced man will have to get on a female elephant, and try to get near him and tie a rope round his foot. Female elephants, when mourning the loss of a young one, will often abstain from food and drink, they sometimes even die from grief.

The elephant can be taught various feats. He learns to remember such melodies as can only be remembered by people acquainted with music, he will move his limbs to keep time, and exhibit his skill in various ways. He will shoot off an arrow from a bow, discharge a matchlock, and will learn to pick up things that have been dropped and hand them over to the keeper. Sometimes they get grain to eat wrapped up in hay, this they hide in the side of their mouth, and give it back to the keeper, when they are alone with him.

The teats of a female elephant, and the womb resemble those of a woman. The tongue is round like that of a parrot. The testicles are not visible. Elephants frequently with their trunks take water out of their stomachs and sprinkle themselves with it. Such water has no offensive smell. They also take out of their stomach grass on the second day, without its having undergone any change.

The price of an elephant varies from a lak¹ to one hundred rupees,

¹ During the reigns of Akbar's successor the price of a well trained war elephant rose much higher. Vide Tuzuk i Jahangiri p 198. At the time of Shahjahan, the first white elephant was brought from Pegu. Padishāhnama : p 267

elephants worth five thousand, and ten thousand rupees, are pretty common

There are four kinds of elephants 1 Bladdar It is well proportioned, has an erect head, a broad chest, large ears, a long tail, and is bold and can bear fatigue They take out of his forehead an excrescence resembling a large pearl, which they call in Hindi Gaj manik ¹ Many properties are ascribed to it 2 Mand It is black, has yellow eyes, a uniformly sized belly, a long penis, and is wild and ungovernable 3 Miry It has a whitish skin with black spots, the colour of its eyes is a mixture of red, yellow, black, and white 4 Mir It has a small head, and obeys readily It gets frightened when it thunders

From a mixture of these four kinds are formed others of different names and properties The colour of the skin of elephants is threefold, white, black, grey Again, according to the threefold division of the dispositions assigned by the Hindus to the mind, namely, sat benevolence, raj love of sensual enjoyment, and tam irascibility, which shall be further explained below,² elephants are divided into three classes First, such in which sat predominates They are well proportioned, good looking, eat moderately, are very submissive, do not care for intercourse with the female, and live to a very old age Secondly, such in whose disposition raj prevails They are savage-looking, and proud, bold, ungovernable, and voracious Lastly, such as are full of tam They are self willed, destructive, and given to sleep and voraciousness

The time of gestation of the female is generally eighteen ³ lunar months For three months the fluida germinalia intermix in the womb of the female, when agitated the mass looks like quicksilver Towards the fifth month the fluida settle and get gelatinous In the seventh month, they get more solid, and draw to perfection towards the ninth month In the eleventh, the outline of a body is visible, and in the twelfth, the veins, bones, hoofs, and hairs, make their appearance In the thirteenth month the genitalia become distinguishable, and in the fifteenth, the process of quickening commences. If the female, during gestation, gets stronger, the foetus is sure to be a male, but if she gets weak it is the sign of a female. During the sixteenth month the formation becomes still more perfect, and the life of the foetus becomes quite distinct. In the seventeenth month there is every chance¹ of a premature birth on account of the efforts made by the foetus to move, till, in the eighteenth month, the young one is born.

¹ This excrescence is also called (ajmal) or elephant's pearl. To be sure also Gajmanik,

According to others the sperm gets solid in the first month, the eyes, ears, the nose, mouth, and tongue are formed in the second, in the third month the limbs make their appearance, in the fourth month, the foetus grows and gets strong, in the fifth, it commences to quicken, in the sixth, it gets sense, which appears more marked during the seventh month, in the eighth, there is some chance of a miscarriage, during the ninth, tenth and eleventh months the foetus grows, and is born during the twelfth. It will be a male young one if the greater part of the sperm came from the male, and it will be a female young one if the reverse is the case. If the sperm of both the male and female is equal in quantity the young one will be a hermaphrodite. The male foetus lies towards the right side, the female towards the left, a hermaphrodite in the middle.

Female elephants have often for twelve days a red discharge, after which gestation commences. During that period they look startled, sprinkle themselves with water and earth, keep ears and tail upwards, and go rarely away from the male. They will rub themselves against the male, bend their heads below his tusks, smell at his urine and dung, and cannot bear to see another female near him. Sometimes, however, a female shows aversion to intercourse with the male, and must be forced to copulate, when other female elephants at hearing her noise, will come to her rescue.

In former times, people did not breed elephants, and thought it unlucky, by the command of His Majesty, they now breed a very superior class of elephants, which has removed the old prejudice in the minds of men. A female elephant has generally one young one, but sometimes two. For five years the young ones content themselves with the milk of the mother, after that period they commence to eat herbs. In this state they are called bāl. When ten years old they are named put, when twenty years old, biḷka, when thirty years old, kalba. In fact the animal changes appearance every year, and then gets a new name. When sixty years old, the elephant is full grown. The skull then looks like two

¹ The words of the text are ambiguous. They may also mean. In the seventeenth month the effort of the foetus to move causes the female to sink down.

11/18

1. The following table shows the number of children in each age group in a school in 2010 and 2011.

Age Group	2010	2011
6-7	120	110
8-9	130	125
10-11	140	135
12-13	150	145
14-15	160	155

2. The number of children in each age group in 2010 is 120, 130, 140, 150, 160.

3. The number of children in each age group in 2011 is 110, 125, 135, 145, 155.

The Bhaddar ruts in Libra and Scorpio, the Mand in spring, the Mrg in Capricorn and Sagittarius, the Mir in any season. Elephant drivers have a drug which causes an artificial heat, but it often endangers the life of the beast. The noise of battle makes some superior elephants just as fierce as at the rutting season, even a sudden start may have such an effect. Thus His Majesty's elephant Gajmukta he gets brisk as soon as he hears the sound of the Imperial drum, and gets the above mentioned discharge. This peculiar heat generally makes its first appearance when elephants have reached the age of thirty, sometimes, however, earlier, at an age of twenty five. Sometimes the heat lasts for years, and some of the Imperial elephants have continued for five years in an uninterrupted alacrity. But it is mostly male elephants that get in heat. They then commence to throw up earth, and run after a female, or roll about in mud, and daub themselves all over with dirt. When in heat they are very irritable, and yawn a great deal, though they sleep but little. At last they even discontinue eating and dislike the foot-chain they try to get loose, and behave noisily.

The elephant, like man, lives to an age of one hundred and twenty years.

The Hindi language has several words for an elephant, as hastī, gaj, pīl, hāthī, etc. Under the hands of an experienced keeper it will much improve, so that its value in a short time may rise from one hundred to ten thousand rupees.

The Hindus believe that the eight points of the earth are each guarded by a heavenly being in the shape of an elephant, they have curious legends regarding them. Their names are as follows: 1 Airāvata, in the East, 2 Pundarika, south east, 3 Bāman, south, 4 Kumada, south west, 5 Anyan, west, 6 Puṣpadanta, north west, 7 Sārbhabhūma, north, 8 Supraṭika, north east. When occasions arise, people read incantations in their names, and address them in worship. They also think that every elephant in the world is the offspring of one of them. Thus, elephants of a white skin and white hairs are related to the first, elephants with a large head and long hairs, of a fierce and bold temper, and eyelids apart, belong to the second, such as are ¹ good looking, black, and high in the back, are the offspring of the third, if tall, ungovernable, quick in understanding, short-haired, and with red and black eyes, they come from the fourth, if bright black, with one tusk longer than the other, with a white breast and belly, and long and thick fore-feet, from the

¹ The MSS have an unintelligible word. Perhaps śūśāmanj graceful, is the correct reading.

and Jhārkhānd, and in the Sūba of Bengal, in Orisā, and Sītḡāw. The elephants from Pannah are the best

A herd of elephants is called in Hindi sahn. They vary in number, sometimes a herd amounts to a thousand elephants. Wild elephants are very cautious. In winter and summer, they select a proper place, and break down a whole forest near their sleeping place. For the sake of pleasure, or for food and drink, they often travel over great distances. On the journey one runs far in front of the others, like a sentinel, a young female is generally selected for this purpose. When they go to sleep they send out to the four sides of the sleeping place pickets of four female elephants, which relieve each other.

Elephants will lift up their young ones, for three or four days after their birth, with their trunks, and put them on their backs, or lay them over their tusks. They also prepare medicines for the females when they are sick or in labour pains and crowd round about them. When some of them get caught, the female elephants break through the nets, and pull down the elephant drivers. And when a young elephant falls into a snare they hide themselves in an ambush, go at night to the place where the young one is, set it at liberty, and trample the hunters to death. Sometimes immediately, and left it, but when we came next morning near the place, we saw that some wild elephants had filled the pit with broken logs and grass, and thus pulled out the young one." Again "Once a female elephant played us a trick. She feigned to be dead. We passed her, and went onwards, but when at night we returned, we saw no trace left of her."

There was once an elephant in the Imperial stables named Ayāz. For some reason it had got offended with the driver, and was for ever watching for an opportunity. Once at night, it found him asleep. It got hold of a long piece of wood, managed to pull off with it the man's turban, seized him by the hair, and tore him asunder.

Many examples are on record of the extraordinary cleverness of elephants, in some cases it is difficult to believe them.

Kings have always shown a great predilection for this animal and done everything in their power to collect a large number. Elephant keepers are much esteemed, and a proper rank is assigned to such as have a special knowledge of the animal. Wicked, low men see in an elephant a means of lawlessness, and unprincipled evildoers, with the help of this animal, carry on their nefarious trade. Hence kings of former times never succeeded in suppressing the rebellious, and were thus disappointed in their best intentions. But His Majesty, though overwhelmed with other important matters, has been able, through God's assistance and his numerous elephants, to check those low but haughty men, he teaches them to desire submission and bestows upon them, by wise laws, the blessings of peace.

His Majesty divided the Imperial elephants into sections, which he put in charge of honest Daroghas. Certain elephants were also declared Mhāsa, i e., appointed for the exclusive use of His Majesty.

Aⁱⁿ 42

THE CLASSIFICATION OF THE IMPERIAL ELEPHANTS

His Majesty made a sevenfold division, based upon experience: 1 Mast (full blood), 2 Shergīr (tiger seizing), 3 Sāda (plain), 4 Manjhola (middlemost), 5 Karla, 6 Plandurkya, 7 Mokal. The first class comprises young elephants possessed of the peculiar heat which renders the animal so strong. The second class contains likewise young ones which once or twice have given signs of perfection and exhibit an uninterrupted alacrity. The third class comprises useful elephants, which are nearly as good as the preceding. The fourth class contains elephants of a somewhat inferior value. Those of the fifth class are younger than those of the fourth. The elephants of the sixth class are smaller than those of the fifth. The last class contains all young ones still unfit for use.

Each class is divided into three subdivisions, viz., large sized, middle, young ones, the last class contains ten kinds. A certain quantity of food has been fixed for each class.

Aⁱⁿ 43

THE FOOD ALLOWED TO THE ELEPHANTS

Formerly the classification of the elephants was never attended to, hence in feeding them a large quantity of the stores was wasted. But when His Majesty, soon after lifting the veil¹ commenced to care for the ¹ The same phrase as on p. 13 line 12. It refers to the year 160 when Ixatim fell in disgrace and Akbar assumed the reins of the government.

- 2 Shergīrs Large ones, 2 m 9 s , middle sized ones, 2 m 4 s , small ones, 1 m 39 s 3 Sūdas Large ones, 1 m 31 s , middle sized ones, 1 m 29 s , small ones, 1 m 21 s 4 Manyhōlas Large ones, 1 m 22 s , middle-sized ones, 1 m 20 s , small ones, 1 m 18 s 5 Karhas Large ones, 1 m 14 s , middle sized ones, 1 m 9 s , small ones, 1 m 4 s 6 Phandurkīyas Large ones, 1 m , middle sized ones, 36 s , small ones, 32 s 7 Mōkals Large ones, 26 s , middle sized ones, 24 s , third class, 22 s , fourth class, 20 s , fifth class, 18 s , sixth class, 16 s , seventh class 14 s eighth class, 12 s , ninth class, 10 s , tenth class, 8 s

Female elephants have been divided into four classes, viz , large ones, middle sized ones, small ones, mōkals The first two classes are divided into three, the third, into four, the fourth, into nine subdivisions
 1 Large ones Big, 1 m 22 s , middling, 1 m 18 s , small ones, 1 m 14 s
 2 Middle sized ones Big, 1 m 10 s , middling 1 m 6 s , small, 1 m 2 s
 3 Small ones Big, 37 s , middling, 32 s , small, 27 s , still smaller, 22 s 4 Mōkals First class, 22 s , second, 20 s , third, 18 s , fourth, 16 s , fifth, 14 s , sixth, 12 s , seventh, 10 s , eighth, 8 s , ninth, 6 s

Ā'in 44

THE SERVANTS OF THE ELEPHANT STABLES

1 Maṣt elephants There are five and a half^r servants for each, viz , a Mahāwat, who sits on the neck of the animal and directs its movements He must be acquainted with its good and bad properties, and thus contribute to its usefulness He gets 200 dāms per month , but if the elephant be khutakar, i e , wicked and addicted to pulling down the driver, he gets 220 d Secondly, a Bhoī, who sits behind, upon the rump of the elephant, and assists in battle and in quickening the speed of the animal , but he often performs the duties of the Mahāwat His monthly pay is 110 d Thirdly, the Meths, of whom there are three and one half, or only three in case of small elephants A meth fetches fodder, and assists in caparisoning the elephant Meths of all classes get on the march four dāms daily, and at other times three and a half

2 For every Shergīr, there are five servants, viz , a Mahāwat, at 180 d , a Bhoī, at 103 d , and three Meths as before

^r i e either eleven servants for two elephants or the last was a boy

3 For every Sāda, there are four and a half servants, viz, a Mahāwat, at 160 d, a Bhoī at 90 d, and two and a half Meths

4 For every Manjhola, there are four servants, viz, a Mahāwat, at 140 d, a Bhoī, at 80 d, and two Meths

5 For every Karha, there are three and a half servants, viz, a Mahāwat at 120 d, a Bhoī, at 70 d and one and a half Meths

6 For every Phandurkiya, there are two servants, viz, a Mahāwat, at 100 d, and a Meth

7 For every Mokāl, there are likewise two servants, viz, a Mahāwat, at 50 d, and a Meth.

Female Elephants 1 Large ones have four servants, viz, a Mahāwat, at 100 d, a Bhoī, at 60 d, two Meths 2 Middle sized ones have three and a half servants, viz, a Mahāwat, at 80 d, a Bhoī, at 50 d, and one and a half Meths 3 Small ones have two, viz, a Mahāwat, at 60 d, and a Meth 4 Mokāls have likewise two, viz, a Mahāwat, at 60 d, and a Meth

The Faujdār

His Majesty has appointed a superintendent over every troop of ten, twenty, and thirty elephants. Such a troop is called a halqa, the superintendent is called Faujdār. His business is to look after the condition and the training of the elephants, he teaches them to be bold, and to stand firm at the sight of fire and at the noise of artillery, and he is responsible for their behaviour in these respects. When a Faujdār is raised to the dignity of a Sadī (a commander of one hundred) or higher, he has twenty five elephants assigned to himself, the other Faujdārs, as Bistīs (commanders of twenty) and Dahbāshīs (commanders of ten) being under his orders. The same order is followed from the Dahbāshīs up to the Hazārīs (commanders of one thousand). The pay of officers above the Sadī is different. Some Faujdārs have been raised to the dignity of grantees of the court. A Sadī marks two horses. A Bistī of the first grade has 30 rupees per mensem, second grade, 25 R, third grade, 20 R. A Dahbāshī of the first grade has twenty R, second grade, 16 R, third grade, 12 R. Bistīs and Dahbāshīs mark one horse, and belong to the Ahadīs. Such Faujdārs as have thirty or twenty five elephants assigned to themselves have to pay the wages of the Mahāwat and of one Bhoī of that elephant, which they select for their own use, but such as have twenty or ten only pay for a Mahāwat.

The above arrangement regarding the servants was not thought sufficient by His Majesty, who has much experience in this matter. He therefore put several halqas in charge of every grantee, and required him to look after them. The fodder also is now supplied by the government. A trustworthy clerk has, besides, been appointed, who is in charge of the correspondence of this branch, he looks after the receipts and expenditure and sees that the orders of His Majesty are carried out. He also parades the elephants in the order described below (A'in 78)

A'in 45

THE HARNESS OF ELEPHANTS

1 The Dharna is a large chain made of iron, gold, or silver. It is made of sixty oval links, each weighing three seers, but the chain differs in length and thickness according to the strength of the elephant. One end of the chain is fixed in the ground, or fastened to a pillar, the other end is tied to the left hind leg of the elephant. Formerly, they fastened this chain to the forefoot, but as this is injurious for the chest of the elephant His Majesty ordered to discontinue the usage.

2 The Andū is a chain, with which both forefeet are tied. As it annoys the elephant, His Majesty ordered it to be discontinued.

3 The Berī is a chain for fastening both hind feet.

4 The Baland is a fetter for the hind feet, an invention of His Majesty. It allows the elephant to walk, but prevents him from running.

5 The Gaddh berī resembles the Andū, and is an additional chain for the hindlegs of unruly and swift elephants.

6 The Loh langar is a long chain, suitable for an elephant. One end is tied to the right fore foot, and the other end to a thick log, a yard in length. Thus the driver keeps near him, and drops it when the elephant runs too swiftly, or gets so unruly as no longer to obey. The chain twists round his leg, and the log will annoy the animal to such extent that it necessarily stops. This useful invention, which has saved many lives, and protected huts and walls, is likewise due to His Majesty.

7 The Charakāi is a piece of hollowed bamboo half a yard and two tassūjes long, and has a hole in the middle. It is covered with sinews and filled with gunpowder, an earthen partition dividing the powder into two halves. A fuzee wrapped in paper is put into each end. Fixed into the hole of the bamboo at right angles is a stick which serves as a handle. Upon fire being put to both ends, it turns round and makes a frightful noise. When elephants fight with each other, or are otherwise unruly, a bold man on foot takes the burning bamboo into his hand, and holds it before the animals when they will get quiet. Formerly, in order to separate two elephants that were fighting they used to light a fire, but people had much trouble, as it seldom had the desired effect His Majesty invented the present method, which was hailed by all.

8 Andhīyārī, i e., darkness, a name which His Majesty changed into Ujyūī, i e., light, is a piece of canvas above one and a half yards square It is made of brocade, velvet, etc., and tied with two ends to the Kilāwa (vide next) When the elephant is unruly, it is let fall, so that he cannot see This has been the saving of many As it often gives way, especially when the elephant is very wild, His Majesty had three heavy bells attached to the ends of the canvas, to keep it better down This completed the arrangement

9 The Kilāwa consists of a few twisted ropes, about one and a half yards long They are laid at the side of each other, without, however, being interwoven among themselves, the whole being about eight fingers broad A ring is drawn through both ends of the ropes, and fastened where the throat of the elephant is, the elephant driver rests his feet in it, and thus sits firmly Sometimes it is made of silk or leather Others fix small pointed iron spikes to the kalāwa, which will prevent an unruly elephant from throwing down the driver by shaking its head

10 The Dulhī is a rope, five yards long, as thick as a staff This they tie over the kalāwa to strengthen it

11 The Kanār is a small pointed spike, half a yard long This they likewise attach to the kalāwa, and prick the elephant's ears with it in order to make the animal wild or to urge it on

12 The Dor is a thick rope passing from the tail to the throat When properly tied it is an ornament They also catch hold of it, when the elephant makes an awkward movement They also attach many other trappings to it

13 The Gadela is a cushion put on the back of the elephant below the dulhī It prevents galling, and is a source of comfort

14 The Gudauī is a chain of brass They attach it near the tail, which it prevents from getting injured by the dulhī It is also ornamental

15 The Pichwa is a belt made of ropes and is fastened over the buttocks of the elephant It is a support for the Bhoī, and of much use to him in firing

16 The Chaurāsī consists of a number of bells attached to a piece of

to look after them. The iqdār also is now supplied by the government. A trustworthy clerk has, besides, been appointed, who is in charge of the correspondence of this branch, he looks after the receipts and expenditure and sees that the orders of His Majesty are carried out. He also parades the elephants in the order described below (Aⁿ 78)

Aⁿ 45

THE HARNESS OF ELEPHANTS

1 The Dharna is a large chain made of iron, gold, or silver. It is made of sixty oval links, each weighing three sers, but the chain differs in length and thickness according to the strength of the elephant. One end of the chain is fixed in the ground, or fastened to a pillar, the other end is tied to the left hind leg of the elephant. Formerly, they fastened this chain to the forefoot, but as this is injurious for the chest of the elephant His Majesty ordered to discontinue the usage.

2 The Āndū is a chain, with which both forefeet are tied. As it annoys the elephant, His Majesty ordered it to be discontinued.

3 The Berī is a chain for fastening both hind feet.

4 The Baland is a fetter for the hind feet, an invention of His Majesty. It allows the elephant to walk, but prevents him from running.

5 The Gaddh berī resembles the Āndū, and is an additional chain for the hindlegs of unruly and swift elephants.

6 The Loh langar is a long chain, suitable for an elephant. One end is tied to the right fore foot, and the other end to a thick log, a yard in length. This the driver keeps near him, and drops it, when the elephant runs too swiftly, or gets so unruly as no longer to obey. The chain twists round his leg, and the log will annoy the animal to such extent that it necessarily stops. This useful invention, which has saved many lives, and protected huts and walls, is likewise due to His Majesty.

7 The Charkhī is a piece of hollowed bamboo half a yard and two tassūjes long, and has a hole in the middle. It is covered with sinews and filled with gunpowder, an earthen partition dividing the powder into two halves. A fuzee wrapt in paper is put into each end. Fixed into the hole of the bamboo at right angles is a stick, which serves as a handle. Upon fire being put to both ends, it turns round and makes a frightful noise. When elephants fight with each other, or are otherwise unruly, a bold man on foot takes the burning bamboo into his hand, and holds it before the animals, when they will get quiet. Formerly, in order to separate two elephants that were fighting, they used to light a fire, but people had much trouble, as it seldom had the desired effect His Majesty invented the present method, which was hailed by all

8 Andhiyārī, i e, darkness, a name which His Majesty changed into Ujyāti, i e, light, is a piece of canvas above one and a half yards square It is made of brocade, velvet, etc, and tied with two ends to the Kilāwa (vide next) When the elephant is unruly, it is let fall, so that he cannot see This has been the saving of many As it often gives way, especially when the elephant is very wild, His Majesty had three heavy bells attached to the ends of the canvas, to keep it better down This completed the arrangement

9 The *Kilāwa*¹ consists of a few twisted ropes, about one and a half yards long They are laid at the side of each other, without, however, being interwoven among themselves, the whole being about eight fingers broad A ring is drawn through both ends of the ropes, and fastened where the throat of the elephant is, the elephant driver rests his feet in it, and thus sits firmly Sometimes it is made of silk or leather Others fix small pointed iron spikes to the kalāwa, which will prevent an unruly elephant from throwing down the driver by shaking its head

10 The Dulhī is a rope, five yards long as thick as a staff This they tie over the kalāwa to strengthen it

11 The Kanār is a small pointed spike, half a yard long This they likewise attach to the kalāwa, and prick the elephant's ears with it in order to make the animal wild or to urge it on

12 The Dor is a thick rope passing from the tail to the throat When properly tied it is an ornament They also catch hold of it, when the elephant makes an awkward movement They also attach many other trappings to it

13 The Gadela is a cushion put on the back of the elephant below the dulhī It prevents galling, and is a source of comfort

14 The Gudautī is a chain of brass They attach it near the tail, which it prevents from getting injured by the dulhī It is also ornamental

15 The Pichwa is a belt made of ropes and is fastened over the buttocks of the elephant It is a support for the Bhoī, and of much use to him in firing

16 The Chaurāsī consists of a number of bells attached to a piece of

¹ This should be Kalāwa. Abū l Faḡl spells the word wrong. vide my text edition p. 136 l. 16. It looks as if Abū l Faḡl had mistaken this Persian word for a Hindi term else why should he have any spelling at all. In Vullera Persian Dictionary ii, p. 626, read khān for khaf and ba tanid for his emendation (?) tabyin.

broadcloth, which is tied on before and behind with a string passed through it. It looks ornamental and grand.

17 Pitkachh is the name of two chains fastened over the elephant's sides. Attached to them, a bell hangs below the belly. It is of great beauty and grandeur.

18 Large chains. They attach six on both sides, and three to the kalāwa, the latter being added by His Majesty.

19 Qutās (the tail of the Thibetan Yak). There are about sixty, more or less, attached to the tusk, the forehead, the throat, and the neck. They are either white, or black, or pied, and look very ornamental.

20 The Ṭayyā consists of five iron plates, each a span long, and four fingers broad, fastened to each other by rings. On both sides of the Ṭayyā there are two chains, each a yard long, one of which passes from above the ear, and the other from below it to the kalāwa, to which both are attached. Between them there is another chain, which is passed over the head and tied to the kalāwa, and below, crossways, there are four iron spikes ending in a curve, and adorned with knobs. The Qutās are attached here. At their lower end there are three other chains similarly arranged. Besides, four other chains are attached to the knob, two of them, like the first, end in a knob, whilst the remaining two are tied to the tusks. To this knob again three chains are attached, two of which are tied round about the trunk, the middle one hanging down. Qutās and daggers are attached to the former knobs, but the latter lies over the forehead. All this is partly for ornament, partly to frighten other animals.

21 The Pakhar is like an armour, and is made of steel, there are separate pieces for the head and the trunk.

22 The Gaj jhamp is a covering put as an ornament above the pakhar. It looks grand. It is made of three folds of canvas, put together and sewn, broad ribbons being attached to the outside.

23 The Megh dambar is an awning to shade the elephant driver, an invention by His Majesty. It also looks ornamental.

24 The Ranpiyal is a fillet for the forehead made of brocade or similar stuffs, from the hem of which nice ribbons and qutās hang down.

25 The Gatēi consists of four links joined together, with three above them, and two others over the latter. It is attached to the feet of the elephant. Its sound is very effective.

26 The Pāy ranjan consists of several bells similarly arranged.

27 The Ankus is a small crook. His Majesty calls it *Gajbāga*¹. It is used for guiding the elephant and stopping him.

¹ i.e. an elephant rein. His Majesty had reason to change the name Ankus which sounds offensive to a Persian ear. Rasāid. Hence the Persians pronounce it anguzā.

28 The Gad is a spear which has two prongs instead of an iron point. The Bhoī makes use of it, when the elephant is refractory.

29 The Bangrī is a collection of rings made of iron or brass. The rings are put on the tusks, and serve to strengthen as well as to ornament them.

30 The Jagūraṭ resembles the Gad (No 28) and is a cubit long. The Bhoī uses it, to quicken the speed of the elephant.

31 The Jhandā, or flag, is hung round with Qutūs, like a *toḡh*¹. It is fixed to the side of the elephant.

But it is impossible to describe all the ornamental trappings of elephants.

For each Mast and Shergīr and Sāda, seven pieces of cotton cloth are annually allowed, each at a price of 8½ dams. Also, four coarse woollen pieces, called in Hindi lambal, at 10 d each, and eight ox hides, each at 8 d. For Manḡhola and Karha elephants, four of the first, three of the second, and seven of the third, are allowed. For Phandurkīyas and Mokals, and female elephants, three of the first, two of the second, four of the third. The saddlecloth is made of cloth, lining, and stuff for edging it round about, for sewing, half a ser of cotton thread is allowed. For every man of grain, the halqa dār is allowed ten *ser*s of iron for chains, etc., at 2 d per ser, and for every hide, one ser of sesame oil, at 60 d per man. Also 5 s coarse cotton thread for the kalāwa of the elephant on which the Fayḡdār rides, at 8 d per ser, but for other elephants, the men have to make one of leather, etc., at their own expense.

A sum of twelve dāms is annually subtracted from the servants, but they get the worn out articles.

A¹in 46

THE ELEPHANTS FOR HIS MAJESTY'S USE (KHĀSA)

There are one hundred and one elephants selected for the use of His Majesty. Their allowance of food is the same in quantity as that of the other elephants, but differs in quality. Most of them also get 5 s of sugar, 4 s of ghī, and half a man of rice mixed with chillies, cloves, etc., and some have one and a half *man*² of milk in addition to their grain. In the sugar-cane season, each elephant gets daily, for two months, 300 sugar canes, more or less. His Majesty takes the place of the Mahāwat.

Each elephant requires three bhoīs in the rutting season, and two, when cool. Their monthly wages vary from 120 to 400 d, and are fixed by His

¹ Toḡh is the same as ṭoḡ. See A¹ in 19 p. 52.

² Liquids are sold in India by the weight.

Majesty himself. For each elephant there are four Meths. In the Halqas, female elephants are but rarely told off to accompany big male ones; but for each khāsa elephant there are three, and sometimes even more, appointed. First class big female elephants have two and one half meths, second class do, two, third class do, one and one-half, for the other classes as in the Halqas.

As each Halqa is in charge of one of the grandees, so is every khāsa elephant put in charge of one of them. Likewise, for every ten khāsa elephants, a professional man is appointed, who is called Dahā, idār. They draw, twelve, ten, and eight rupees per mensem. Besides, an active and honest superintendent is appointed for every ten elephants. He is called Naqīb (watcher) and has to submit a daily report, when elephants eat little, or get a shortened allowance, or in cases of sickness, or when anything unusual happens. He marks a horse, and holds the rank of an Ahadī. His Majesty also weekly dispatches some of the servants near him, in the proportion of one for every ten elephants, who inspect them and send in a report.

Ā'in 47

THE MANNER OF RIDING KHĀSA-ELEPHANTS

His Majesty, the royal rider of the plain of auspiciousness, mounts on every kind of elephant, from the first to the last class, making them, notwithstanding their almost supernatural strength, obedient to his command. His Majesty will put his foot on the tusks, and mount them, even when they are in the rutting season, and astonishes experienced people.¹

They also put comfortable turrets on the backs of swift-paced elephants, which serve as a travelling sleeping apartment. An elephant so caparisoned is always ready at the palace.

Whenever His Majesty mounts an elephant, a month's wages are given as a donation to the bhoīs. And when he has ridden ten elephants, the following donations are bestowed, viz., the near servant who has weekly to report on the elephants, receives a present, the former, 100 R, the Dahā, ī, 31 R, the Naqīb, 15 R, the Mushrif (writer), 7½ R. Besides, the regal rewards given to them at times when they display a particular zeal or attentiveness, go beyond the reach of speech.

Each elephant has his match appointed for fighting, some are always ready at the palace, and engage when the order is given. When a fight is over, if the combatants were khāsa elephants, the bhoīs receive 250 dāms as a present, but if other elephants, the bhoīs get 200 d.

¹ Jahangir, in his Memoirs gives several examples of Akbar's daring in this respect, vide Tuzuk, p. 16.

The Dahā idār of khāsa elephants receives one dām for every rupee paid as wages to the bhoīs and meths, the Mushrif is entitled to $\frac{1}{2} d$, and the Naqīb to $\frac{1}{4} d$. In the case of halqa elephants, the Sadīwāl, the Dahbāshī, and the Bisfī, are entitled to 1 d for every rupee, and the Mushrif and the Naqīb receive the allowance given for khāsa elephants.

Āⁱⁿ 48

ON FINES

In order to prevent laziness and to ensure attentiveness, His Majesty, as for all other departments, has fixed a list of fines. On the death of a male or a female khāsa elephant the Bhoīs are fined three months' wages. If any part of the harness is lost, the Bhoīs and Meths are fined two-thirds of the value of the article, but in the case of a saddlecloth, the full price. When a female elephant dies from starvation, or through want of care, the Bhoīs have to pay the cost price of the animal.

If a driver mixes drugs with the food of an elephant to make the animal hot, and it dies in consequence thereof, he is liable to capital punishment, or to have a hand cut off, or to be sold as a slave. If it was a khāsa elephant, the Bhoīs lose three months' pay and are further suspended for one year.

Two experienced men are monthly dispatched to inquire into the fatness or leanness of the khāsa elephants. If elephants are found by them out of flesh to the extent of a quarter, according to the scale fixed by the Pāgoshī Regulation (vide Āⁱⁿ 83), the grandees in charge are fined, and the bhoīs are likewise liable to lose a month's wages. In the case of halqa elephants, Ahadīs are told off to examine them, and submit a report to His Majesty. If an elephant dies, the Mahāwat and the Bhoī are fined three months' wages. If part of an elephant's tusk is broken, and the injury reaches as far as the lalī—thus is a place at the root of the tusks, which on being injured is apt to fester, when the tusks get hollow and become useless—a fine amounting to one eighth of the price of the elephant is exacted, the dārogha paying two thirds, and the Fawjdar one-third. Should the injury not reach as far as the lalī, the fine is only one half of the former, but the proportions are the same. But, at present, a fine of one per cent has become usual, in the case of khāsa elephants, however, such punishment is inflicted as His Majesty may please to direct.

THE IMPERIAL HORSE STABLES

His Majesty is very fond of horses, because he believes them to be of great importance in the three branches of the government, and for expeditions of conquest, and because he sees in them a means of avoiding much inconvenience

Merchants bring to court good horses from 'Irāq i 'Arab and 'Irāq i 'Ajam, from Turkey, Turkestan, Badakhshān, Shirwān, Qirghiz, Thibet, Kashmīr, and other countries. Drove after drove arrive from Tūran and Irān, and there are nowadays twelve thousand in the stables of His Majesty. And in like manner, as they are continually coming in, so there are others daily going out as presents, or for other purposes.

Skilful, experienced men have paid much attention to the breeding of this sensible animal, many of whose habits resemble those of man, and after a short time Hindustan ranked higher in this respect than Arabia, whilst many Indian horses cannot be distinguished from Arabs or from the 'Irāqī breed. There are fine horses bred in every part of the country, but those of Cachh excel, being equal to Arabs. It is said that a long time ago an Arab ship was wrecked and driven to the shore of Cachh, and that it had seven choice horses, from which, according to the general belief, the breed of that country originated. In the Panjāb, horses are bred resembling 'Iraqis, especially between the Indus and the Bahat (Jhelum) they go by the name of Sanūjī,¹ so also in the district of Patī Haybatpūr,² Bājwāral, Tihāra, in the Śūba of Āgra, Mewāt, and in the Sūba of Ājmir, where the horses have the name of pachwariya.

near Kūch [-Bahār], another kind of horses occurs, which are like the gūt and Turkish horses, and are called tānghān,³ they are strong and powerful.

His Majesty, from the light of his insight and wisdom, makes himself acquainted with the minutest details, and with the classification and the condition of every kind of article, he looks to the requirements of the times and designs proper regulations. Hence he also pays much attention to everything that is connected with this animal, which is of so great an importance for the government and an almost supernatural means for the attainment of personal greatness.

¹ Several good MSS. read Satāj.

² Haibatpur Lat 29° 51', Long 76° 2', Tihara Lat 30° 57' Long 75° 25'

[³ Tāghān.—P]

whose value comes up to ten muhurs, is kept in a Daḥ muhrī stable, those worth from eleven to twenty muhurs, in a Bīst muhrī stable, and so on Grandeers and other Maṅṣabdārs, and Senior Anadīs are in charge of the stables. Hay and crushed grain are found by the government for all horses, except the horse which the Yatāqdar (guard) of every stable is allowed to ride, and which he maintains in grain¹ and grass at his own expense

Ā'in 51

THE FODDER ALLOWED IN THE IMPERIAL STABLES

A khāṣa horse was formerly allowed eight *ser*s fodder per diem, when the ser weighed twenty eight dāms. Now that the ser is fixed at thirty dāms a khāṣa horse gets seven and a half *ser*s. In winter, they give boiled peas or vetch, in summer, grain¹. The daily allowance includes two *ser*s of flour and one and a half *ser*s of sugar. In winter, before the horse gets fresh grass, they give it half a ser of ghī. Two dāms are daily allowed for hay, but hay is not given, when fresh grass² is available. About three bīghās of land will yield sufficient fodder for a horse. When, instead of sugar, the horses get molasses,³ they stop the ghī and when the season of fresh grass² comes, they give no grain for the first three days but allow afterwards six *ser*s of grain and two *ser*s of molasses *per diem*³. In other Irāqī and Turkī stables, they give seven and a half *ser*s of grain¹. During the cool six months of the year, they give the grain¹ boiled, an allowance of one dam being given for boiling one man of it. The horses also get once a week a quarter ser of salt. When ghī and fresh grass² are given each horse, of sugar get half grass² is given horses of a value from twenty one to upwards of one hundred muhurs, get one man and ten *ser*s of ghī, such as are worth from eleven to twenty muhurs thirty *ser*s, but horses up to ten muhurs get neither ghī, brown sugar, nor green oats². Salt is given at the daily rate one fiftieth of a dām, though it is mostly given in a lump. Irāqī and Turkī horses which belong to the court are daily allowed two d for grass, but such of them as are in the country only one and a half. In winter, each horse gets a bīghā of

[¹ Mofā a small, hard blue grain used when well boiled for fattening horses. Dāms grain colloquially amongst horse dealers etc means gram. P.]

[² A harid is green wheat or barley (not oats) before the ear is well formed, it is cut and used as fodder.—P.]

[³ Qand i siyāh is probably gur—P.]

fresh oats ¹ the price of which, at court, is 240 d, and in the country 200 d. At the time of fresh oats, ¹ each horse gets two mans of molasses, ² the same quantity being subtracted from the allowance of grain ³

Experienced officers, attached to the Imperial offices, calculate the amount required, and make out an estimate, which in due course is paid. When a horse is sick, every necessary expense is paid on the certificate of the horse doctor.

Every stallion to a stud of mares receives the allowance of a khāsa horse. The gut horses get five and a half *ser*s of grain, ³ the usual quantity of salt, and grass at the rate of one and a half d per diem, if at court, and at the rate of $1\frac{3}{4}$ d, when in the country, but they do not get ghī, molasses, or green oats ¹. Qisrāqs [i.e., female horses] get, at court, four and a half *ser*s of grain, ³ the usual allowance of salt, and one d for grass, and in the country, the same, with the exception of the grass, for which only three fourths of a dām are allowed. Stud mares get two and three-fourths *ser*s of grain, ³ but the allowance for grass, salt, and fuel, is not fixed.

A foal sucks its dam for three months, after which, for nine months, it is allowed the milk of two cows, then, for six months, two and three-fourths *ser*s of grain ³ per diem, after which period, the allowance is every six months increased by a ser, till it completes the third year, when its food is determined by the above regulations.

Ā'in 52

ON HARNESS, ETC

It would be difficult and tedious to describe the various ornaments, jewels, and trappings, used for the khāsa horses on which His Majesty rides.

For the whole outfit of a khāsa horse, the allowance is 277½ d per annum, viz., an artak, or horse quilt, of wadded chintz, 47 d, a yālposh (a covering for the mane), 32 d, a woollen towel, 2 d—these three articles are renewed every six months, in lieu of the old artak, half the cost price is deducted, and one sixth for the old yālposh, a saddle-cloth, the outside of which is woven of hair, the lining being felt, 42 d, halters for the

[¹ A harid is green wheat or barley (not oats) before the ear is well formed, it is cut and used as fodder.—P.]

[² Qand & siyāh is probably gur.—P.]

[³ Dāna colloquially means, as here gram.—P.]

*nukhta*¹ (headstall) and the hind feet,² 40 d , a pusht tang (girth), 8 d , a magas rān (a horse tail to drive away flies), 3 d , a nukhta and *qayza*³ (the bit), 14 d , a curry comb, 1½ d , a grain bag, 6 d , a basket, in which the horse gets its grain, 1⁴ d . These articles are given annually, and fifteen dāms, ten jetals, subtracted in lieu of the old ones

In the other stables, the allowance for horses whose value is not less than twenty-one muhurs, is 196½ d per annum, the rate of the articles being the same . Twenty five and a half dāms are subtracted in lieu of the old articles

In stables of horses worth twenty to eleven muhurs, the annual allowance is 155½ d , viz , for the artak, 39½ d , the yālposh, 27½ d , a coarse saddle cloth, 30 d , the girth, 6 d , the nukhta and qayza, 10 d , and the nukhta ropes and feet ropes, 32 d . the magas rān, 2 d , a towel, 1½ d , a curry comb, 1½ d , a basket, 1 d , a grain bag, 4½ d . Twenty dāms are subtracted for the old articles

For horses worth up to ten muhurs, and qisrāqs, and gūt, the allowance is 117½ d ,⁵ viz , an artak, 37 d , a yālposh, 24½ d , a jul, 24 d , a nukhta band and a pāy band , 8 d , a nukhta and qayza, 8 d , a pusht tang, 5 d , a magas rān and a towel, each 1½ d , a curry comb 1½ d , a basket, 1 d , a grain bag, 4½ d . The amount subtracted is the same as before

1 The *Karāh*⁶ is an iron vessel for boiling grain sufficient for ten horses . The price of a karāh is at the rate of one hundred and forty dāms per man of iron , but this includes the wages of the maker . 2 The Missin Sattl, or brass bucket, out of which horses drink . There is one for every ten khāsa horses . The price of making one is 140 d . For other horses, as in the stables of thirty, etc , there is only one . 3 The Kamand, attached to iron pegs, is for fastening the horses . In stables of forty, there are three , in stables of thirty, two , in others, one . The weight of a halter is half a man , its cost price is 140 d , and 16 d the wages of the rope maker 4 The Ahanin mekh or iron peg, of which there are two for every halter Each peg weighs five seers, and costs 15 d 5 The Tabartul hmaq or hammer, weighs five seers, and is used for fixing the iron pegs There is one in every stable

[¹ Nukhta for nukhtā — P¹

All broken and old utensils of brass and iron, in the khāsa stables, if repairable, are repaired at the expense of the Daroghas and when they are past mending their present value is deducted, and the difference paid in cash In other stables, a deduction of one half of their value is made every third year

6 Naql or horseshoes are renewed twice a year Formerly eight dāms were given for a whole set, but now ten 7 Kūndlān One is allowed for ten horses¹ The price of it is 80½ R

Ā'in 53

THE OFFICERS AND SERVANTS ATTACHED TO THE IMPERIAL STABLES

1 The Āibegī is in charge of all horses belonging to the government He directs all officers charged with the management of the horses This office is one of the highest of the State, and is only held by grandees of high rank at present it is filled by the *Khān Khānān*² (Commander in Chief) 2 The Dārogha There is one appointed for each stable This post may be held by officers of the rank of commanders of five thousand down to Senior Abadis 3 The Mushrif, or accountant He keeps the roll of the horses, manages all payments and fines, sees that His Majesty's orders are carried out, and prepares the estimate of the stores required for this department He is chosen from among the grandees 4 The Dida war, or inspector His duty is occasionally to inspect the horses before they are mustered by His Majesty, he also determines the rank and the condition of the horses His reports are taken down by the Mushrif This office may be held by the Mansabdars or Abadis 5 The Akhtachis look after the harness, and have the horses saddled Most of them get their pay on the list of the Abadis 6 The Chāduksuicār rides the horses, and compares their speed with the road, which is likewise taken down by the Mushrif He receives the pay of an Abadi 7 The Hādā This name is given to a class of Rajpūts, who teach horses the elementary

¹ This appears to be the same as the Hind. لاف which our meagre dictionaries describe as a kind of tent

² Or Mirzā Āhān Āhānān i. e. Ābdi r Ralim son of Bavram Khān i. e. Last of Grandees, 2nd book, No 29

steps Some of them get their pay on the list of the Ahadīs 8 The Mirdaha is an experienced groom placed over ten servants He gets the pay of an Ahadī, but in other khāṣa stables, he only gets 170 d, in the country bred stables, 160 d, in the other sī aspī stables, 140 d, in the bīst aspī stables, 100 d, and in the daḥ aspī stables, 30 d Besides he has to look after two horses 9 The Baytar, or horse doctor, gets the pay of an Ahadī 10 The Naqīb, or watcher Some active intelligent men are retained for supervision They report the condition of each stable to the Dāroghas and the Mushrif, and it is their duty to have the cattle in readiness The two head Naqībs are Ahadīs, and they have thirty people under them who receive from 100 to 120 d 11 The Sāṣ, or groom There is one groom for every two horses In the chūhīl-aspī stables, each groom gets 170 d, in the stables of the eldest prince, 138 d, in the stables of the other princes, and in the courier horse stables, 136 d, in the country bred stables, 126 d, in the other sī-aspī stables, 106 d, in the bīst-aspī stables, 103 d, and in the daḥ aspī stables, 100 d 12 The Jīlawdār (vide *Ā in 60) and the Payk (a runner) Their monthly pay varies from 1,200 to 120 d, according to their speed and manner of service Some of them will run from fifty to one hundred kroh (kos) a day 13 The Naṣībān, or farrier Some of them are Ahadīs, some foot soldiers They receive 160 d 14 The Zindār, or saddle holder, has the same rank and pay as the preceding In the Lhāsa stable of forty horses, one saddle is allowed for every two horses, in the following manner for the first and twenty first, for the second and twenty second, and so on If the first horse is sent out of the stable, the saddle remains at its place, and what was the second horse becomes first, and the second saddle falls to the third horse, and so on to the end If a horse out of the middle leaves, its saddle is given to the preceding horse 15 The Ābkash, or water carrier Three are allowed in the stables of forty, two in stables of thirty, and only one in other stables The monthly pay is 100 d 16 The Farrāsh (who dusts the furniture) There is one in every Lhāsa stable His pay is 130 d 17 A *Sipandsoz*¹ is only allowed in the stables of forty horses,

¹ The seeds of sipand (in Hind sarāḥ a kind of mustard seed) are put on a heated plate of iron. Their smoke is an effectual preventive against the evil eye (nazar : bad chāsham rasūdan) which is even dangerous for Akbar's choice horses. The seeds burn away slowly, and emit a crackling sound. The man who burns them is called Sipandsoz. Vide the poetical extracts of the 2nd book, under Sikr-ḥa. Instead of Sipand grooms some times keep a monkey over the entrance of the stable. The influence of the evil eye passes from the horses to the ugly monkey.

Another remedy consists in nailing old horseshoes to the gates of the stables. Hundreds of such shoes may still be seen on the gates in Fatḥ pur Sikri.

{Sipand P., or ḥarwal A., is wild rue not mustard — P } his pay is 100 d 18 The Khākṛūb, or sweeper Sweepers are called in Hindustan Halālkhūr,¹ His Majesty brought this name en vogue In stables of forty, there are two, in those of thirty and twenty, one Their monthly pay is 65 d

During a march, if the dāroḡhas are in receipt of a fixed allowance for coolies, they entertain some people to lead the horses In the stables of thirty horses, fifteen are allowed And in the same proportion does the government appoint coolies, when a dāroḡha has not received the extra allowance Each cooly gets two dāms per diem

Ā^s in 54

THE BĀRGIR

His Majesty, from the regard which he pays to difference in rank, believes many fit for cavalry service, though he would not trust them with the keeping of a horse For these he has told off separate stables, with particular Dāroḡhas and Mushrifs When their services are required, they are furnished with a horse on a written order of the Butikchī (writer), but they have not to trouble themselves about the keeping of the horse A man so mounted is called a Bārgīrsuwār

Ā^s in 55

REGULATIONS FOR BRANDING HORSES

In order to prevent fraudulent exchanges, and to remove the stamp of doubtful ownership, horses were for some time marked with the word ناظر (naẓr, sight), sometimes with the word دآق (dāḡh, mark), and sometimes with the numeral ۷ (seven)² Every horse that was received by government had the mark burnt on the right cheek, and those that were returned, on the left side Sometimes, in the case of Irāqī and *Mujannas*³

¹ Akbar was very fond of changing names which he thought offensive, or of giving new names to things which he liked, vide p. 46, l. 28, p. 53, l. 18, p. 65, l. 16, p. 90, l. 23, also Forbes Dictionary under sangtarā. Halālkhūr, i.e., one who eats that which the ceremonial law allows is a euphemism for harāmkhūr one who eats forbidden things as pork, etc. The word halālkhūr is still in use among educated Muhammadans but it is doubtful whether it was Akbar's invention. The word in common use for a sweeper is mihtar, a prince, which like the proud title of khāisfa, nowadays applied to cooks, tailors, etc., is an example of the irony of fate

² Vide Ā^s ins 7 and 8 of the second book. The branding of horses was revived in A.H. 981 A.D. 1573, when Shāhbāz had been appointed Mīr Bakhsāl. He followed the regulations of Ālā^u ud Din Khujji and Sher Shāh, vide Badaoni pp. 173, 190

³ Mujannas i.e., put nearly equal (to an Irāqī horse), vide 2nd book Ā^s in 2 [I think mujannas means half bred.—P.]

horses, they branded the price in numerals on the right cheek, and in the case of Turki and Arab horses, on the left. Nowadays the horses of every stable are distinguished by their price in numerals. Thus, a horse of ten muhurs is marked with the numeral ten, those of twenty muhurs have a twenty, and so on. When horses, at the time of the musters, are put into a higher or a lower grade, the old brand is removed.

Ā'in 56

REGULATIONS FOR KEEPING UP THE FULL COMPLEMENT OF HORSES

Formerly, whenever there had been taken away either ten horses from the stables of forty, or from the stud bred horses, or five from the courier horses, they were replaced in the following manner. The deficiency in the stables of forty was made up from horses chosen from the stables of the princes, the stud bred horses were replaced by other stud bred ones, and the courier horses from other stables. Again, if there were wanting fifteen horses in the stables of the eldest prince (Salim) they were replaced by good horses of his brothers, and if twenty were wanting in the stables of the second prince (Murād), the deficiency was made up by horses taken from the stables of the youngest prince and from other stables, and if twenty five were wanting in the stables of the youngest prince (Danyāl), the deficiency was made up from other good stables.

But in the thirty seventh year of the Divine Era (A. D. 1593), the order was given that, in future, one horse should annually be added to each stable. Thus, when, in the present year, the deficiency in the khāsa stables had come up to eleven, they commenced to make up the complement, the deficiency of the other stables being made up at the time of the muster parades.

Ā'in 57

ON FINES

When a khāsa horse dies, the Darogha has to pay one rupee, and the Mirdaha ten d, upon every muhur of the cost price, and the grooms lose one fourth of their monthly wages. When a horse is stolen, or injured, His Majesty determines the fine, as it cannot be uniform in each case.

In the other stables they exacted from the Darogha for a single horse that dies, one rupee upon every muhur, for two horses, two rupees upon every muhur, and from the Mirdaha and the grooms the above proportions. But now they take one rupee upon every muhur for one to three horses that die, and two upon every muhur for four horses, and three upon every muhur for five.

If the mouth of a horse gets injured, the Mirdaha is fined ten dāms upon every muhur, which fine he recovers from the other grooms.

Ā'in 58

ON HORSES KEPT IN READINESS

There are always kept in readiness two khāsa horses, but of courier horses ¹ three, and one of each stable from the seventy muhurs down to the ten muhur stables and the gūts. They are formed into four divisions, and each division is called a misl.

First misl one from the chihilaspī stables, one from the stable of the eldest prince, one from those of the second prince, one from the stable of khāsa courier horses. Second misl one from the stable of the youngest prince, one from the stud bred, one from the chihilaspī stables, one courier horse. Third misl, one horse from the stables of the three princes, one stud bred. Fourth misl, one horse from each of the stables of horses of forty, thirty, twenty, and ten muhurs.

His Majesty rides very rarely on horses of the fourth misl. But when prince Shah Murad joined his appointment ² His Majesty also rode the best horses of the stables of forty muhurs. The arrangement was then as follows. First misl, one horse from the stables of forty, one horse from the stables of the eldest and the youngest prince, and a courier horse. Second misl, stud bred horses from the stables of horses above seventy muhurs, khāsa horses of forty muhurs, and courier horses. Third misl, one horse from the stables of each of the two princes, the stud bred, and the seventy muhur horses. Fourth misl, horses from the stables of sixty, forty, and thirty muhurs.

Horses are also kept in readiness from the stables of twenty and ten muhurs and the gūts.

[¹ Rahwar—a mbling a roadster.—P.]

² Prince Murad in the beginning of that year was in command of the army. He was killed at the time after Akbar heard of the carelessness and (43rd year) and died. He came just in time to escape from epileptic fits (ear

Ā'in 59

ON DONATIONS

Whenever his Majesty mounts a horse belonging to one of the six khāsa stables, he gives something, according to a fixed rule, with a view of increasing the zeal and desire for improvement among the servants. For some time it was a rule that, whenever he rode out on a khāsa horse, a rupee should be given, viz, one dām to the Ātbeḡī, two to the Jilawdar, eighteen and one half to the grooms, the rest being shared by the Mushrif, the Naqīb, the Akhtachī, and the Zindar. In the case of horses belonging to the stables of the eldest prince, thirty dāms were given, each of the former recipients getting a quarter of a dām less. For horses belonging to stables of the second prince, twenty dāms were given, the donations decreasing by the same fraction, and for horses belonging to the stables of the youngest prince, as also for courier horses,¹ and stud breds, ten dāms, according to the same manner of distribution.

Now, the following donations are given —For a horse of a stable of forty, one rupee as before, for a horse belonging to a stable of the eldest prince, twenty dāms, for a horse belonging to the youngest prince, ten dāms, for courier horses, five, for stud breds, four, for horses of the other stables, two.

Ā'in 60

REGULATIONS FOR THE JILAWĀNA²

Whenever a horse is given away as a present the price of the horse is calculated fifty per cent higher, and the recipient has to pay ten dāms upon every muhur of the value of the horse. These ten dāms per muhur are divided as follows —The Ātbeḡī gets five dāms, the Jilawbeḡī two and a half, the Mushrif, one and a quarter, the Naqīb nine jetals, the grooms, a quarter dam, the Tahsildar, fifteen jetals, the remainder is equally divided among the Zindar and Akhtachī.

In this country horses commonly live to the age of thirty years. Their price varies from 500 muhurs to 2 rupees.

[¹ Rahuar, ambling, a roadster —P.]

THE CAMEL STABLES

From the time His Majesty paid regard to the affairs of the state, he has shown a great liking for this curiously shaped animal, and as it is of great use for the three branches of the government, and well known to the emperor for its patience under burdens, and for its contentment with little food, it has received every care at the hands of His Majesty. The quality of the country breed improved very much, and Indian camels soon surpassed those of Irān and Tūrān.

From a regard to the dignity of his court; and the diversion of others, His Majesty orders camel fights, for which purpose several choice animals are always kept in readiness. The best of these khāsa camels, which is named Shāhpasand (approved of by the Shah), is a country bred twelve years old, it overcomes all its antagonists, and exhibits in the manner in which it stoops down and draws itself up every finesse of the art of wrestling.

Camels are numerous near Ājmir, Jodhpūr, Nagor, Bikānīr, Jaisalmir, Batindā, and Bhatnīr, the best are bred in the Sūba of Gujrat, near Cachh. But in Sind is the greatest abundance, many inhabitants own ten thousand camels and upwards. The swiftest camels are those of Ājmir, the best for burden are bred in Thatha.

The success¹ of this department depends on the Arucānas, i.e., female camels. In every country they get hot in winter and couple. The male of two humps goes by the name of Bughur. The young ones of camels are called nar (male) and māya (female), as the case may be, but His Majesty has given to the nar the name of bughdī,² and to the female that of jammāza. The bughdī is the better for carrying burdens and for fighting, the jammāza excels in swiftness. The Indian camel called lol, and its female, come close to them in swiftness, and even surpass them. The offspring of a bughur and a jammāza goes by the name of ghurd, the female is called māya ghurd. If a bughdī, or a lol, couples with a jammāza, the young one is called bughdī or lol respectively. But if a bughdī or a lol couples with an arucāna, the young male is named after its sire and the young female after its dam. The lol is considered superior to the ghurd and the māya ghurd.

¹ In the text māya which also means a female camel—a very harmless pun. Vide Dr Sprenger's Golistan, preface p. 6. Regarding the word bughur, vide Journal Asiatic Society Bengal, for 1868, p. 59.

² Corruption of bughdī—P.]

When camels are loaded and travel, they are generally formed into qatārs (strings), each qatār consisting of five camels. The first camel of each qatār is called *peshang*¹; the second, peshdara, the third, mīyāna qatār, the fourth, dumdast, the last camel, dumdār.

Ā'in 62

THE FOOD OF CAMELS

The following is the allowance of such bughdīs as are to carry burdens. At the age of two and a half, or three years, when they are taken from the herd of the stud dams, a bughdī gets 2 s of grain, when three and a half to four years old, 5 s., up to seven years, 9 s., at eight years, 10 s.. The same rule applies to bughurs. Similarly in the case of jammāzas, ghurds, māyah ghurds, and loks, up to four years of age, but from the fourth to the seventh year, they get 7 s., and at the age of eight years, 7½ s., at the rate of 28 dāms per ser. As the ser has now 30 dāms, a corresponding deduction is made in the allowance. When bughdīs are in heat, they eat less. Hence also concession is made, if they get lean, to the extent of 10 s., according to the provisions of the Pāgosht rule (Ā'in 83), and when the rutting season is over, the Daroghas give out a corresponding extra allowance of grain to make up for the former deficiency. If they have made a definite entry into their day-book, and give out more food, they are held indemnified according to the Pāgosht rule, and similarly in all other cases, note is taken of the deductions according to that rule.

At Court, camels are found in grass by the government for eight months. Camels on duty inside the town are daily allowed grass at the rate of 2 d per head, and those outside the town, 1½ d. During the four rainy months, and on the march, no allowance is given, the drivers taking the camels to meadows² to graze.

Ā'in 63

THE HARNESS OF CAMELS

The following articles are allowed for lhāsa camels: an Afsār (head stall), a Dum afsār (crupper), a Mahār lāthī (furniture resembling a horse saddle, but rather longer—an invention of His Majesty); a lūchī

¹ So according to the best MSS. The word is evidently a vulgar corruption of pesh āhang the leader of a troop. Peshdara means in front of the belly or middle, of the qatār.

[² Chara qah, grazing places — P.]

(which serves as a saddle cloth), a Qatārchī, a Sarbhī,¹ a Tang (a girth), a Sartang (a head strap), a Shebband (a loin strap), a Jalājīl (a breast rope adorned with shells or bells), a Gardanband (a neck strap), three Chādars (or coverings) made of broadcloth, or variegated canvas, or waxcloth. The value of the jewels, inlaid work, trimmings, and silk, used for adorning the above articles, goes beyond description.

Five qatārs of camels, properly caparisoned, are always kept ready for riding, together with two for carrying a Mihaffa, which is a sort of wooden turret, very comfortable, with two poles, by which it is suspended, at the time of travelling, between two camels.

A camel's furniture is either coloured or plain. For every ten qatārs they allow three qatārs coloured articles.

For Buqhdīs, the cost of the [coloured] furniture is 225½ d, viz, a head stall studded with shells, 20½ d, a brass ring 1½ d, an iron chain, 4½ d, a kallagī (an ornament in shape of a rosette, generally made of peacock's feathers, with a stone in the centre), 5 d, a pushpozī (ornaments for the strap which passes along the back), 8 d, a dum-afsār (a crupper), 1½ d, for a takaltū (saddle quilt) and a sarbhī, both of which require 5 sers of cotton, 20 d, a jul (saddle cloth),² 68 d, a jahūz & qajlārī,³ which serves as a maharkāthī (vide above), 40 d, a tang, shebband, gulūband (throat strap), 24 d, a tanāb (long rope) for securing the burden—camel drivers call this rope tāqa tanāb, or kharwār—38 d, a bālāposh, or covering, 15 d.⁴

For Jammā as, two additional articles are allowed, viz, a gardanband, 2 d, and a sī ia band (chest-strap) 16 d.

The cost of a set of plain furniture for Buqhdīs and Jammāzas amounts to 168½ d, viz, an afsār, studded with shells, 10 d, a dum-afsār, ½ d, a jahūz, 16½ d, a jul, 52½ d, a ring a shebband, and gulūband, 24 d, a tāqa tanāb, 37½ d, a bālāposh, 23 d.⁵

For Lols, the allowance for furniture is 143 d, viz, an afsār, jahūz,

Jharuār, according to the former rates, a jul, $37\frac{1}{2} d$, a tang, shebband, gulūband, $14\frac{1}{2} d$, a bālūposh, $28 d$ ¹

The coloured and plain furniture is renewed once in three years, but not so the iron bands and the woodwork. In consideration of the old coloured furniture of every qatār, sixteen dāms, and of plain furniture, fourteen dāms, are deducted by the Government. At the end of every three years they draw out an estimate, from which one-fourth is deducted, then, after taking away one-tenth of the remainder, an assignment is given for the rest²

⁵*Alafī* camels (used for foraging) have their furniture renewed annually, at the cost of $52\frac{1}{2} d$ for country-bred camels, and loks, viz [for country bred camels] an afsār, $5 d$, a jul, $36\frac{1}{2} d$, a sardoz, $\frac{1}{2} d$, a tang and a shebband, $10\frac{1}{2} d$,³ and [for loks], an afsār, a tang, and a shebband, as before, a jul, $45\frac{1}{2} d$, a sardoz, $\frac{3}{4} d$

From the annual estimate one fourth is deducted, and an assignment is given for the remainder

Shalūta tāts, or canvas sacks, for giving camels their grain, are allowed one for every qatār, at a price of $30\frac{3}{4} d$ for bughdīs and jammāzas, and $24\frac{1}{2} d$ for loks

Hitherto the cost of these articles had been uniformly computed and fixed by contract with the camel drivers. But when, in the forty second year of the divine era [1598 A D], it was brought to the notice of His Majesty that these people were, to a certain extent, losers; this regulation was abolished, and the current market price allowed for all articles. The price is therefore no longer fixed

On every New Year's day, the head camel-drivers receive permission for shearing the camels, anointing them with oil, injecting oil into the noses of the animals, and indenting for the furniture allowed to Salafī camels

Aⁿ 64

REGULATIONS FOR OILING CAMELS, AND INJECTING OIL INTO THEIR NOSTRILS

The scientific terms for these operations are tālīya and tajrīc, though we might expect tālīya and tanshīq, because tanshīq means injecting into the nose

¹ The items added up give $144 d$, instead of Abū i Fazl's $143 d$

² Hence the Government paid, as a rule $\frac{3}{4} \times \frac{2}{3} = \frac{1}{2}$ of the estimates presented

³ The addition gives $52\frac{1}{2} d$, instead of $52\frac{1}{2}$. The following items, for loks, give added up $62\frac{1}{2}$

For each Bughdī and Jammāza $3\frac{1}{2}$ *ser*s of sesame oil are annually allowed, viz, three *ser*s for anointing, and $\frac{1}{2}$ ser for injection into the nose. So also $\frac{1}{2}$ s of brimstone, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ s of butter-milk. For other kinds of camels the allowance is $\frac{1}{2}$ s of brimstone, $6\frac{1}{2}$ s of butter milk, and $\frac{1}{2}$ s of grease for injecting into the nose holes.

Formerly these operations were repeated three times, but now only once, a year.

Ā'in 65

THE RANKS OF THE CAMELS, AND THEIR SERVANTS

His Majesty has formed the camels into qatārs, and given each qatār in charge of a sārbān, or driver. Their wages are four fold. The first class get 400 d, the second, 340 d, the third, 280 d, the fourth, 220 d, per mensem.

The qatārs are of three kinds—1 Every five qatārs are in charge of an experienced man, called Bistopanji, or commander of twenty-five. His salary is 720 d. He marks a Yabu horse, and has four drivers under him. 2 Double the preceding or ten qatārs, are committed to the care of a Panyāhī, or commander of fifty. He is allowed a horse, draws 960 d, and has nine drivers under him. 3 Every hundred qatārs are in charge of a Pansadī, or commander of five hundred. Ten qatārs are under his personal superintendence. With the exception of one qatār, Government finds drivers for the others. The Panyāhīs and Bistopanjis are under his orders. Their salary varies, nowadays many *Yūzbāshīs*¹ are appointed to this post. One camel is told off for the farrāshes. A writer also has been appointed. His Majesty, from his practical knowledge, has placed each Pansadī under a grandee of the court. Several active foot soldiers have been selected to inquire from time to time into the condition of the camels, so that there may be no neglect. Besides, twice a year some people adorned with the jewel of insight inspect the camels as to their leanness or fatness at the beginning of the rains and at the time of the annual muster.

Should a camel get lost, the Sārbān is fined the full value, so also the Panyāhī and the Pansadī. If a camel get lame or blind, he is fined the fourth part of the price.

Raibārī

Raibārī is the name given to a class of Hindus who are acquainted with the habits of the camel. They teach the country bred lok camel so to step as to pass over great distances in a short time. Although from the capital to the frontiers of the empire, in every direction relay horses are stationed, and swift runners have been posted at the distance of every five kos, a few of these camel riders are kept at the palace in readiness. Each Raibārī is also put in charge of fifty stud aruānas, to which for the purpose of breeding one bughur and two loks are attached. The latter (the males) get the usual allowance of grain but nothing for grass. The fifty aruānas get no allowance for grain or grass. For every bughur, bughdī, and jammāza in the stud, the allowance for oiling and injecting into the nostrils is 4 s of sesame oil, $\frac{3}{4}$ s of brimstone 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ s of butter milk¹. The first includes $\frac{3}{4}$ s of oil for injection. Loks, aruānas, ghurds, and māya ghurds, get only 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ s of sesame oil—the deduction is made for injection—6 $\frac{1}{2}$ s of butter milk¹ and $\frac{1}{2}$ s of brimstone.

¹ Corresponding to our Captains of the Army, commanders of 100 soldiers.

Botas and Dumbalas—these names are given to young camels, the former is used for light burdens they are allowed 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ s of oil inclusive of $\frac{1}{2}$ s for injection into the nostrils, $\frac{1}{2}$ s of brimstone and 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ s of butter milk¹.

Full grown stud camels get weekly $\frac{1}{2}$ s of saltpetre and common salt botas get $\frac{1}{4}$ s.

The wages of a herdsman is 200 d per mensem. For grazing every fifty stud camels he is allowed five assistants, each of whom gets 2 d per diem. A herdsman of two herds of fifty is obliged to present to His Majesty three aruānas every year, on failure, their price is deducted from his salary.

Formerly the state used to exact a fourth part of the wool sheared from every bughdī and jammāza, each camel being assessed to yield four seers of wool. This His Majesty has remitted, and in lieu thereof, has ordered the drivers to provide their camels with dum afsars, wooden pegs etc.

The following are the prices of camels — a bughdī from 5 to 12 muhurs, a jammāza, from 3 to 10 M, a bughur, from 3ⁿ to 7 M,³ a mongrel lok, from 8 to 9 M a country bred, or a Baluchi lok from 3 to 8 M, an aruāna from 2 to 1 M.

His Majesty has regulated the burdens to be carried by camels. A first class bughdī, not more than 10 mans, a second class do 8 m, superior jammāzas loks, etc 8 m a second class do 6 m.

In this country, camels do not live above twenty four years.

[¹ Māst curda.—P]

[² In text from 4 to 7 —P]

[³ The text has also here a māya bughur from 3 to 5 a ghurd from 3 to 8 a māya ghurd and a lok from 3 to 7 —P]

THE GĀW KHĀNA OR COW¹ STABLES

Throughout the happy regions of Hindustan, the cow¹ is considered auspicious, and held in great veneration, for by means of this animal, tillage is carried on, the sustenance of life is rendered possible, and the table of the inhabitant is filled with milk, butter milk,² and butter. It is capable of carrying burdens and drawing wheeled carriages, and thus becomes an excellent assistant for the three branches of the government.

Though every part of the empire produces cattle of various kinds, those of Gujrat are the best. Sometimes a pair of them are sold at 100 muhurs. They will travel 80 kos [120 miles] in 24 hours, and surpass even swift horses. Nor do they dung whilst running. The usual price is 20 and 10 muhurs. Good cattle are also found in Bengal and the Dakhin. They kneel down at the time of being loaded. The cows give upwards of half a man of milk. In the province of Dilli again, cows are not worth more than 10 Rupees. His Majesty once bought a pair of cows for two lacs of dāms [5,000 Rupees].

In the neighbourhood of Thibet and Kashmīr, the Qutās, or Thibetan Yak, occurs, an animal of extraordinary appearance.

A cow will live to the age of twenty five.

From his knowledge of the wonderful properties of the cow, His Majesty, who notices everything which is of value, pays much attention to the improvement of cattle. He divided them into classes, and committed each to the charge of a merciful keeper. One hundred choice cattle were selected as khūṣa and called kotal. They are kept in readiness for any service, and forty of them are taken unladen¹ on hunting expeditions, as shall be mentioned below (Book II, Ā'in 27). Fifty one others nearly as good are called half kotal, and fifty one more, quarter kotal. Any deficiency in the first class is made up from the second, and that of the middle from the third. But these three form the cow¹-stables for His Majesty's use.

Besides, sections of cattle have been formed, each varying in number from 50 to 100, and committed to the charge of honest keepers. The rank of each animal is fixed at the time of the public muster, when each gets its proper place among sections of equal rank. A similar proceeding is adopted for each section when selected for drawing waggons and travelling carriages, or for fetching water (vide Ā'in 22).

[¹ Git or The bullock only is used for work.—P.]

[² Māt curds.—P.]

There is also a species of oxen, called gainī, small like gut horses, but very beautiful

Milch-cows and buffaloes have also been divided into sections, and handed over to intelligent servants

Ā⁶in 67

THE DAILY ALLOWANCE OF FOOD

Every head of the first lāhāsa class is allowed daily $6\frac{1}{4}$ s of grain,¹ and $1\frac{1}{2}$ d of grass. The whole stable gets daily 1 man 19 s of molasses,² which is distributed by the Darogha, who must be a man suitable for such a duty, and office. Cattle of the remaining lāhāsa classes get daily 6 s of grain,¹ and grass as before, but no molasses² are given.

In other cow stables the daily allowance is as follows. First kind, 6 s of grain,¹ $1\frac{1}{2}$ d of grass at court, and otherwise only 1 d. The second kind get 5 s of grain,¹ and grass as usual. The oxen used for travelling carriages get 6 s of grain,¹ and grass as usual. First class gainīs get 3 s of grain, and 1 d of grass at court, otherwise only $\frac{3}{4}$ d. Second class do, $2\frac{1}{2}$ s of grain,¹ and $\frac{3}{4}$ d of grass at court, otherwise only $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

A male buffalo (called arna) gets 8 s of wheat flour boiled, 2 s of ghī, $\frac{1}{2}$ s of molasses,² $1\frac{1}{2}$ s of grain¹ and 2 d of grass. This animal, when young, fights astonishingly, and will tear a lion³ to pieces. When this peculiar strength is gone, it reaches the second stage, and is used for carrying water. It then gets 8 s of grain, and 2 d for grass. Female buffaloes used for carrying water get 6 s of grain, and 2 d for grass. First class oxen for leopard waggons⁴ get $6\frac{1}{4}$ s of grain, and other classes, 5 s of grain, but the same quantity of grass. Oxen for heavy waggons got formerly 5 s of grain, and $1\frac{1}{2}$ d for grass, but now they get a quarter ser less, and grass as before.

The milch cows, and buffaloes, when at court, have grain given them in proportion to the quantity of milk they give. A herd of cows and buffaloes is called thāt. A cow will give daily from 1 to 15 s of milk, a buffalo from 2 to 30 s. The buffaloes of the Panjab are the best in this respect. As soon as the quantity of milk given by each cow has been ascertained, there are demanded two dāms weight of ghī for every ser of milk.

[¹ Dāsa = gram see p. 142 note 1 — P.]

[² Qand = siyāh see p. 142 footnote 3 — P.]

[³ Sār in India is the tiger, but sār in Persia is the lion — P.]

⁴ Carriages for the transport of trained hunting leopards. Vide Book II, Ā⁶in 27

THE SERVANTS EMPLOYED IN THE COW¹ STABLES

In the khūṣa stables, one man is appointed to look after four head of cattle. Eighteen such keepers in the first stable get 5 d per diem, and the remaining keepers, 4 d. In other stables, the salary of the keepers is the same, but each has to look after six cows¹. Of the carriage drivers, some get their salaries on the list of the Ahadis, others get 360 d, others 256 d down to 112 d. Bahals, or carriages, are of two kinds — 1 Chatridār or covered carriages, having four or more poles (which support the chatr, or umbrella), 2 without a covering. Carriages suited for horses are called *ghur bahal*². For every ten waggons, 20 drivers and 1 carpenter are allowed. The head driver, or Mirdaha, and the carpenter, get each 5 d per diem, the others 4 d. For some time 15 drivers had been appointed, and the carpenter was disallowed, the drivers themselves undertook the repairs, and received on this account an annual allowance of 2,200 dāms [55 Rupees]

If a horn of an ox was broken, or the animal got blind, the Dārogha was fined one fourth of the price, or even more, according to the extent of the injury.

Formerly the Dāroghas paid all expenses on account of repairs, and received for every day that the carriages were used, half a dām as ūng money— ūng is hemp smeared with ghī, and twisted round about the axle tree which, like a pivot, fits into the central hole of the wheel, and thus prevents it from wearing away or getting broken. When afterwards the Daroghaship was transferred to the drivers, they had to provide for this expense. At first, it was only customary for the carts to carry on marches a part of the baggage belonging to the different workshops, but when the drivers performed the duties of the Daroghas they had also to provide for the carriage of the fuel required at court and for the transport of building materials. But subsequently 200 waggons were set aside for the transport of building materials, whilst 600 others have to bring, in the space of ten months, 1,50,000 mans of fuel to the Imperial kitchen. And if officers of the government on any day use the Imperial waggons for other purposes, that day is to be separately accounted for, as also each service rendered to the court. The drivers are not subject to the Pāgosht regulation (vide Ā'in 83). If, however, an ox dies, they have to buy another.

[¹ Gir, ox, vide p. 157, note 1 — P.]

[² Chur bahal — P.]

But when it came to the ears of His Majesty that the above mode of contract was productive of much cruelty towards these serviceable, but mute animals he abolished this system, and gave them again in charge of faithful servants. The allowance of grain for every cart bullock was fixed at 4 s, and 1½ d were given for grass. For other bullocks, the allowance is one half of the preceding. But during the four rainy months no money is allowed for grass. There were also appointed for every eighteen carts twelve drivers, one of whom must understand carpenter's work. Now, if a bullock dies, government supplies another in his stead, and likewise pays for the ūng, and is at the expense of repairs.

The cattle that are worked are mustered once a year by experienced men who estimate their fatness or leanness, cattle that are unemployed are inspected every six months. Instead of the above mentioned transport of firewood, etc, the carters have now to perform any service which may be required by the government.

A* in 69

THE MULE STABLES

The mule possesses the strength of a horse and the patience of an ass and though it has not the intelligence of the former it has not the stupidity of the latter. It never forgets the road which it has once travelled. Hence it is liked by His Majesty, whose practical wisdom extends to everything and its breeding is encouraged. It is the best animal for carrying burdens and travelling over uneven ground, and it has a very soft step. People generally believe that the male ass couples with a mare, but the opposite connexion also is known to take place as mentioned in the books of antiquity. The mule resembles its dam. His Majesty had a young ass coupled with a mare, and they produced a very fine mule.

In many countries just princes prefer travelling about on a mule, and people can therefore easily lay their grievances before them¹ without inconveniencing the traveller.

Mules are only bred in Hindustan in Pakhal,² and its neighbourhood. The simple inhabitants of the country used to look upon mules as asses and thought it derogatory to ride upon them, but in consequence of the interest which His Majesty takes in this animal, so great a dislike is now nowhere to be found

¹ Which the subjects could not so easily do if the princes on their tours of administration of justice were to ride on elephants because the plaintiff would stand too far from the king.

² The Sarkar of Pakhal lies between Atak (Attock) and Kashmir, a little north of Rawul Pindie. It lies toward the end of Book II.

Mules are chiefly imported from ṢIrāq : ṢArab and ṢIrāq : ṢAjam Very superior mules are often sold at Rs 1,000 per head

Like camels, they are formed into qatārs of five, and have the same names, except the second mule of each qatār, which is called bardast, [instead of peshdara, vide *Ā in 61, end]

Mules reach the age of fifty

*Ā in 70

THE DAILY ALLOWANCE OF FOOD FOR MULES

Such mules as are not country bred, get at court, 6 s of grain, and 2 d for grass, otherwise, only 1½ d Country bred mules get 4 s of grain, and 1½ d of grass, when at court, otherwise, 1 d for grass Each mule is allowed every week 3½ jetals for salt, but they give the salt in one lot

*Ā in 71

THE FURNITURE OF MULES

For imported mules, a head stall of leather, 20½ d, an iron chain weighing 2 s, 10 d, a ranakī (crupper) of leather, 4 d, a pālān (pack-saddle), 102 d, a shāltang (shawl strap) and a palās tang (blanket strap), 36½ d, a taqa tanāb (a rope for fastening the burden), 63 d, a qāfir vhalāq (a short whip), 6 d, a bell, one for every qatā, 10 d, a horse hair saddle, 40 d, a kalaua (vide *Ā in 45, No 9) of leather, 13 d, a set of ropes, 9 d, a saddle cloth, 4½ d a sardoz (a common head stall), 4 d, a khurjīn (wallet) 15 d, a fodder bag 4 d, a magas rān (to drive away flies) of leather, 1 d, a curry comb and a hair glove (for washing), 4 d Total 345½ d

For country bred mules the allowance is 151½ d, viz, a head stall of leather, 4 d, pack saddle, 51 d 18½ j, the two straps 16½ d, a tāqa tanāb and sardoz, 40 d, a bell 5 d, a fodder bag, 3 d, a crupper, 3 d, a saddle, 24 d, a curry comb and a hair glove 4 d

The furniture is renewed every third year but for all iron and wood work, half the price is deducted The annual allowance for the repair of the furniture is 40 d, but on the march, the time of renewal depends on the wear Mules are shod every six months at a cost of 8 d per head

Each qatār is in charge of a keeper Tūranis, Irānis and Indians are appointed to this office, the first two get from 400 to 1,920 d, and the third class, from 240 to 256 d per mensem. Such keepers as have monthly salaries of 10 R [400 d] and upwards have to find the peshang (first mule of their qatār) in grain and grass. Experienced people inspect the mules twice a year as to leanness or fatness. Once a year they are paraded before His Majesty.

If a mule gets blind or lame the muleteer is fined one fourth of the cost price, and one half if it is lost.

Asses also are employed for carrying burdens and fetching water. They get 3 s of grain and 1 d for grass. The furniture for asses is the same as that for country bred mules, but no saddle is given. The annual allowance for repairs is 23 d. The keepers do not get above 120 d per mensem.

A^c in 72

THE MANNER IN WHICH HIS MAJESTY SPENDS HIS TIME

The success of the three branches of the government, and the fulfilment of the wishes of the subjects, whether great or small, depend upon the manner in which a king spends his time. The care with which His Majesty guards over his motives, and watches over his emotions, bears on its face the sign of the Infinite, and the stamp of immortality, and though thousands of important matters occupy, at one and the same time, his attention, they do not stir up the rubbish of confusion in the temple of his mind, nor do they allow the dust of dismay to settle on the vigour of his mental powers, or the habitual earnestness with which His Majesty contemplates the charms of God's world. His anxiety to do the will of the Creator is ever increasing, and thus his insight and wisdom are ever deepening. From his practical knowledge, and capacity for everything excellent, he can sound men of experience, though rarely casting a glance on his own ever extending excellence. He listens to great and small, expecting that a good thought, or the relation of a noble deed, may kindle in his mind a new lamp of wisdom, though ages have passed without his having found a really great man. Impartial statesmen, on seeing the sagacity of His Majesty, blotted out the book of their own wisdom, and commenced a new leaf. But with the magnanimity which distinguishes him, and with his wonted zeal, he continues his search for superior men, and finds a reward in the care with which he selects such as are fit for his society.

[¹ The peshang is selected for being a quick stepper and for intelligence.—P.]

Although surrounded by every external pomp and display and by every inducement to lead a life of luxury and ease he does not allow his desires or his wrath to renounce allegiance to Wisdom his sovereign—how much less would he permit them to lead him to a bad deed! Even the telling of stories which ordinary people use as a means of lulling themselves into sleep serves to keep His Majesty awake

Ardently feeling after God and searching for truth His Majesty exercises upon himself both inward and outward austerities though he occasionally joins public worship in order to hush the slanderous tongues of the bigots of the present age. But the great object of his life is the acquisition of that sound morality the sublime loftiness of which captivates the hearts of thinking sages and silences the taunts of zealots and sectarians

Knowing the value of a lifetime he never wastes his time nor does he omit any necessary duty so that in the light of his upright intentions every action of his life may be considered as an adoration of God

It is beyond my power to describe in adequate terms His Majesty's devotions. He passes every moment of his life in self-examination or in adoration of God. He especially does so at the time when morning spreads her azure silk and scatters abroad her young golden beams and at noon when the light of the world illuminating sun embraces the universe and thus becomes a source of joy for all men in the evening when that fountain of light withdraws from the eyes of mortal man to the bewildering grief of all who are friends of light and lastly at midnight when that great cause of life turns again to ascend and to bring the news of renewed cheerfulness to all who in the melancholy of the night are stricken with sorrow. All these grand mysteries are in honour of God and in adoration of the Creator of the world and if dark-minded ignorant men cannot comprehend their signification who is to be blamed and whose loss is it? Indeed every man acknowledges that we owe gratitude and reverence to our benefactors, and hence it is incumbent on us though our strength may fail to show gratitude for the blessings we receive from the sun the light of all lights and to enumerate the benefits which he bestows. This is essentially the duty of kings upon whom according to the opinion of the wise this sovereign of the heavens sheds an immediate light¹. And this is the very motive which actuates His Majesty to venerate fire and reverence lamps

But why should I speak of the mysterious blessings of the sun or of the transfer of his greater light to lamps? Should I not rather dwell on the perverseness of those weak minded zealots who with much concern talk of His Majesty's religion as of a deification of the Sun and the introduction of fire worship? But I shall dismiss them with a smile

¹ Vide Abu l Fazl's Preface pp 31 and 49

The compassionate heart of His Majesty finds no pleasure in cruelties or in causing sorrow to others he is ever sparing of the lives of his subjects wishing to bestow happiness upon all

His Majesty abstains much from flesh so that whole months pass away without his touching any animal food which though prized by most is nothing thought of by the sage His august nature cares but little for the pleasures of the world In the course of twenty four hours he never makes more than one meal He takes a delight in spending his time in performing whatever is necessary and proper He takes a little repose in the evening and again for a short time in the morning but his sleep looks more like waking

His Majesty is accustomed to spend the hours of the night profitably to the private audience hall are then admitted eloquent philosophers and virtuous Sufis who are seated according to their rank and entertain His Majesty with wise discourses On such occasions His Majesty fathoms them and tries them on the touch stone of knowledge Or the object of an ancient institution is disclosed or new thoughts are hailed with delight Here young men of talent learn to revere and adore His Majesty and experience the happiness of having their wishes fulfilled whilst old men of impartial judgment see themselves on the expanse of sorrow finding that they have to pass through a new course of instruction

There are also present in these assemblies unprejudiced historians, who do not mutilate history by adding or suppressing facts and relate the impressive events of ancient times His Majesty often makes remarks wonderfully shrewd or starts a fitting subject for conversation On other occasions matters referring to the empire and the revenue are brought up when His Majesty gives orders for whatever is to be done in each case

About a watch before daybreak musicians of all nations are introduced who recreate the assembly with music and songs and religious strains and when four ghazals are left till morning His Majesty retires to his private apartments brings his external appearance in harmony with the simplicity of his heart and launches forth into the ocean of contemplation In the meantime at the close of night soldiers merchants peasants tradespeople and other professions gather round the palace patiently waiting to catch a glimpse of His Majesty Soon after daybreak they are allowed to make the korrasi (le de X^e in 74) After this, His Majesty allows the attendants of the Harem to pay their compliments. During this time various matters of worldly and religious import are brought to the notice of His Majesty. As soon as they are settled, he returns to his private apartments and reposes a little.

The good habits of His Majesty are so numerous that I cannot adequately describe them. If I were to compile dictionaries on this subject they would not be exhaustive.

Aⁿ 73

REGULATIONS FOR ADMISSION TO COURT

Admittance to Court is a distinction conferred on the nation at large, it is a pledge that the three branches of the government are properly looked after, and enables subjects personally to apply for redress of their grievances. Admittance to the ruler of the land is for the success of his government what irrigation is for a flower bed, it is the field, on which the hopes of the nation ripen into fruit.

His Majesty generally receives twice in the course of twenty four hours when people of all classes can satisfy their eyes and hearts with the light of his countenance. First, after performing his morning devotions, he is visible from outside the awning to people of all ranks, whether they be given to worldly pursuits, or to a life of solitary contemplation, without any molestation from the mace bearers. This mode of showing himself is called, in the language of the country, darsan (view), and it frequently happens that business is transacted at this time. The second time of his being visible is in the State Hall, whither he generally goes after the first watch of the day. But this assembly is sometimes announced towards the close of day, or at night. He also frequently appears at a window, which opens into the State Hall, for the transaction of business, or he dispenses there justice calmly and serenely, or examines into the dispensation of justice, or the merit of officers, without being influenced in his judgment by any predilections or anything impure and contrary to the will of God. Every officer of government then presents various reports, or explains his several wants and is instructed by His Majesty how to proceed. From his knowledge of the character of the times, though in opposition to the practice of kings of past ages His Majesty looks upon the smallest details as mirrors capable of reflecting a comprehensive outline, he does not reject that which superficial observers call unimportant, and counting the happiness of his subjects as essential to his own, never suffers his equanimity to be disturbed.

Whenever His Majesty holds court they beat a large drum, the sounds of which are accompanied by Divine praise. In this manner, people of all classes receive notice. His Majesty's sons and grandchildren, the grandees of the Court, and all other men who have admittance, attend to make the Jornish, and remain standing in their proper places. Learned men of renown and skilful mechanics pay their respects, the Daroghas and Bitikhis (writers) set forth their several wants, and the officers of justice give in their reports. His Majesty, with his usual insight, gives orders, and settles everything in a satisfactory manner. During the whole time, skilful gladiators and wrestlers from all countries hold themselves in readiness, and singers, male and female, are in waiting. Clever jugglers and funny tumblers, also are anxious to exhibit their dexterity and agility.

His Majesty, on such occasions, addresses himself to many of those who have been presented, impressing all with the correctness of his intentions, the unbiassedness of his mind, the humility of his disposition, the magnanimity of his heart, the excellence of his nature, the cheerfulness of his countenance, and the frankness of his manners, his intelligence pervades the whole assembly, and multifarious matters are easily and satisfactorily settled by his truly divine power.

This vale of sorrows is changed to a place of rest. The army and the nation are content. May the empire flourish, and these b'less'ngs endure!

A^cin 74

REGULATIONS REGARDING THE KORNISH AND THE TASLIM

Superficial observers, correctly enough, look upon a king as the origin of the peace and comfort of the subjects. But men of deeper insight are of opinion that even spiritual progress among a people would be impossible unless emanating from the king, in whom the light of God dwells, for near the throne, men wipe off the stain of conceit and build up the arch of true humility.¹

With the view, then, of promoting this true humility, kings in their wisdom have made regulations for the manner in which people are to show their obedience. Some kings have adopted the bending down of the head. His Majesty has commanded the palm of the right hand to be placed upon the forehead and the head to be bent downwards. This mode of salutation, in the language of the present age, is called kornish, and signifies that the saluter has placed his head (which is the seat of the senses and the mind) into the hand of humility, giving it to the royal assembly as a present, and has made himself in obedience ready for any service that may be required of him

¹ Hence the presence of the king promotes humility, which is the foundation of all spiritual life. So especially in the case of Akbar towards whom as the head of the New Church, the subjects occupy the position of disciples. See A^cin 77 and the Note after it.

The salutation, called taslim, consists in placing the back of the right hand on the ground, and then raising it gently till the person stands erect, when he puts the palm of his hand upon the crown of his head, which pleasing manner of saluting signifies that he is ready to give himself as an offering

His Majesty relates as follows "One day my royal father bestowed upon me one of his own caps, which I put on. Because the cap of the king was rather large, I had to hold it with my [right] hand, whilst bending my head downwards, and thus performed the manner of salutation (kornish) above described. The king was pleased with this new method, and from his feeling of propriety ordered this to be the mode of the kornish and taslim

Upon taking leave, or presentation, or upon receiving a mansab, a jāgīr, or a dress of honour, or an elephant, or a horse, the rule is to make three taslims, but only one on all other occasions, when salaries are paid, or presents are made

Such a degree of obedience is also shown by servants to their masters, and looked upon by them as a source of blessings. Hence for the disciples of His Majesty, it was necessary to add something, viz, prostration¹ (siyda), and they look upon a prostration before His Majesty as a prostration performed before God, for royalty is an emblem of the power of God, and a light shedding ray from this Sun of the Absolute

Viewed in this light, the prostration has become acceptable to many, and proved to them a source of blessings upon blessings

But as some perverse and dark minded men look upon prostration as blasphemous man worship, His Majesty, from his practical wisdom, has ordered it to be discontinued by the ignorant, and remitted it to all ranks, forbidding even his private attendants from using it in the Darbār : Ām (general court days) However in the private assembly, when any of those are in waiting, upon whom the star of good fortune shines, and they receive the order of seating themselves, they certainly perform the prostration of gratitude by bowing down their foreheads to the earth, and thus participate in the halo of good fortune

¹ siyda the superior because he looked with fondness upon every custom of the ancient Persian kings at whose courts the proskuneu had been the usual salutation. It was Azizim of Badakhshan who invented the prostration upon the emperor's feet (before 1586). The success of the siyda was so great that I had been the inventor of it. Nizam or Ghazi Khan ride Abu siyda as an article of Akbar's Div. c. 10, v. 1. It is referred to in the note to A² in 77

In this manner by forbidding the people at large to prostrate, but allowing the Elect to do so, His Majesty fulfils the wishes of both, and shows the world a fitting example of practical wisdom

Ām 75

ON ETIQUETTE

Just as spiritual leadership requires a regulated mind, capable of controlling covetousness and wrath, so does political leadership depend on an external order of things, on the regulation of the difference among men in rank, and the power of liberality If a king possess a cultivated mind, his position as the spiritual leader of the nation will be in harmony with his temporal office, and the performance of each of his political duties will be equivalent to an adoration of God Should anyone search for an example, I would point to the practice of His Majesty, which will be found to exhibit that happy harmony of motives, the contemplation of which rewards the searcher with an increase of personal knowledge, and leads him to worship this ideal of a king¹

When His Majesty seats himself on the throne, all that are present perform the kornish, and then remain standing at their places according to their rank, with their arms crossed² partaking, in the light of his imperial countenance, of the elixir of life, and enjoying everlasting happiness in standing ready for any service

The eldest prince places himself, when standing, at a distance of one to four yards from the throne, or when sitting, at a distance from two to eight. The second prince stands from one and one half to six yards from the throne, and in sitting from three to twelve. So also the third, but sometimes he is admitted to a nearer position than the second prince, and at other times both stand together at the same distance. But His Majesty generally places the younger princes affectionately nearer.

Then come the Elect of the highest rank, who are worthy of the spiritual guidance of His Majesty, at a distance of three to fifteen yards, and in sitting from five to twenty. After this follow the senior grandees from three and a half yards, and then the other grandees, from ten or twelve and a half yards from the throne.

All others stand in the *Yasal*¹. One or two attendants² stand nearer than all.

.Ā'in 76

THE MUSTER OF MEN

The business which His Majesty daily transacts is most multifarious; hence I shall only describe such affairs as continually recur.

A large number of men are introduced on such days, for which an Anjuman : Dād o Duhsh, or assembly of expenditure, has been announced. Their merits are inquired into, and the coin of knowledge passes current. Some take a burden from their hearts by expressing a wish to be enrolled among the members of the Divine Faith, others want medicines for their diseases³. Some pray His Majesty to remove a religious doubt, others again seek his advice for settling a worldly matter⁴. There is no end to such requests, and I must confine myself to the most necessary cases.

The salaries of a large number of men⁵ from Tūrān and Īrān, Turkey and Europe, Hindustān and Kashmir, are fixed by the proper officers in ¹ Yasal signifies the wing of an army, and here, the two wings into which the assembly is divided. The place before the throne remains free. One wing was generally occupied by the grandees of the Court and the chief functionaries, on the other wing stood the Qur (see p. 116), the Mullis and the Sulamā, etc.

² The servants who hold the shya bān .Ā'in 19 or the fans.

³ This is to be taken literally. The water on which Akbar breathed, was a universal remedy. See next .Ā'in.

⁴ As settling a family feud, recommending a matrimonial alliance, giving a new born child a suitable name, etc.

⁵ .Ā'in 1. Fasl means men who were willing to serve in the several grades of the standing army. The standing army consisted of cavalry, artillery, and rifles. There was no regular infantry. Men who joined the standing army in the beginning of Akbar's reign brought their own horse and accoutrements with them, but as this was found to be the cause of much inefficiency (see Second Book, .Ā'in 1) a horse was given to each recruit on joining for which he was answerable.

a manner described below, and the men themselves are taken before His Majesty by the paymasters. Formerly it had been the custom for the men to come with a horse and accoutrements, but nowadays only men appointed to the post of an Ahadī¹ bring a horse. The salary as proposed by the officers who bring them is then increased or decreased, though it is generally increased, for the market of His Majesty's liberality is never dull. The number of men brought before His Majesty depends on the number of men available. Every Monday all such horsemen are mustered as were left from the preceding week. With the view of increasing the army and the zeal of the officers, His Majesty gives to each who brings horsemen, a present of two dāms for each horseman.

Special *Butkchīs*² [writers] introduce in the same manner such as are fit to be Ahadis. In their case, His Majesty always increases the stipulated salary. As it is customary for every Ahadī to buy³ his own horse, His Majesty has ordered to bring to every muster the horses of any Ahadis who may have lately died, which he hands over to the newly appointed Ahadis either as presents or charging the price to their monthly salaries.

On such occasions, Senior Grandees and other Anurs introduce also any of their friends, for whom they may solicit appointments. His Majesty then fixes the salaries of such candidates according to circumstances, but appointments under fifty rupees per mensem are rarely ever solicited in this manner.

Appointments to the Imperial workshops also are made in such assemblies, and the salaries are fixed.

Ā'in 77

HIS MAJESTY⁴ AS THE SPIRITUAL GUIDE OF THE PEOPLE

God, the Giver of intellect and the Creator of matter, forms mankind as He pleases, and gives to some comprehensiveness, and to others narrowness of disposition. Hence the origin of two opposite tendencies

* * * * *

newcomers

⁴ A note will be found at the end of this Ā'in

among men, one class of whom turn to religious (dīn) and the other class to worldly thoughts (dunyā) Each of these two divisions selects different leaders,¹ and mutual repulsiveness grows to open rupture It is then that men's blindness and silliness appear in their true light, it is then discovered how rarely mutual regard and charity are to be met with

But have the religious and the worldly tendencies of men no common ground? Is there not everywhere the same enrapturing beauty² which beams forth from so many thousand hidden places? Broad indeed is the carpet³ which God has spread, and beautiful the colours which He has given it

The Lover and the Beloved are in reality one,⁴ Idle talkers speak of the Brahmin as distinct from his idol
 There is but one lamp in this house, in the rays of which,
 Wherever I look, a bright assembly meets me

One man thinks that by keeping his passions in subjection he worships God, and another finds self discipline in watching over the destinies of a nation The religion of thousands of others consists in clinging to an idea, they are happy in their sloth and unfitness of judging for themselves But when the time of reflection comes, and men shake off the prejudices of their education, the threads of the web of religious blindness⁵ break, and the eye sees the glory of harmoniousness

But the ray of such wisdom does not light up every house, nor could every heart bear such knowledge Again, although some are enlightened, many would observe silence from fear of fanatics, who lust for blood, but look like men And should anyone muster sufficient courage, and

¹ As prophets, the leaders of the Church, and kings, the leaders of the State

² God He may be worshipped by the multitude, but the former speculates and does his duty hes men how that the light

 The reader

³ The world

⁴ These Sufic lines illustrate the idea that "the same enrapturing beauty" is everywhere where God is everywhere, in everything, hence everything is God Thus God the Beloved dwells openly proclaim his enlightened thoughts pious simpletons would call him a mad man and throw him aside as of no account, whilst ill starved wretches would at once think of heresy and atheism, and go about with the intention of killing him

Whenever from lucky circumstances the time arrives that a nation learns to understand how to worship truth the people will naturally look to their king on account of the high position which he occupies and expect him to be their spiritual leader as well, for a king possesses, independent of men the ray of Divine wisdom¹ which banishes from his heart everything that is conflicting A king will therefore some times observe the element of harmony in a multitude of things or some times reversely, a multitude of things in that which is apparently one, for he sits on the throne of distinction and is thus equally removed from joy or sorrow

Now this is the case with the monarch of the present age and this book is a witness of it

Men versed in foretelling the future knew this when His Majesty was born² and together with all others that were cognizant of the secret, they have since been waiting in joyful expectation His Majesty however, wisely surrounded himself for a time with a veil as if he were an outsider, or a stranger to their hopes But can man counteract the will of God? His Majesty, at first took all such by surprise as were wedded to the prejudices of the age, but he could not help revealing his intentions, they grew to maturity in spite of him, and are now fully known He now is the spiritual guide of the nation, and sees in the performance of this duty a means of pleasing God He has now opened the gate that leads to the right path and satisfies the thirst of all that wander about panting for truth

But whether he checks men in their desire of becoming disciples or admits them at other times he guides them in each case to the realm of bliss Many sincere inquirers from the mere light of his wisdom or his holy breath obtain a degree of awakening which other spiritual doctors could not produce by repeated fasting and prayers for forty days. Numbers of those who have renounced the world, as Sannāsīs, Jogīs, Sevrās, Qalandars, Hakīms, and Sūfīs, and thousands of such as follow worldly pursuits as soldiers, tradespeople, mechanics, and husbandmen, have daily their eyes opened to insight, or have the light of their knowledge increased. Men of all nations, young and old, friends and strangers, the far and near, look upon offering a vow to His Majesty as the means of solving all their difficulties, and bend down in worship on obtaining their desire. Others again, from the distance of their homes, or to avoid the crowds gathering at Court, offer their vows in secret, and pass their lives in grateful praises. But when His Majesty leaves Court, in order to settle the affairs of a province, to conquer a kingdom, or to enjoy the pleasures of the chase, there is not a hamlet, a town, or a city that does not send forth crowds of men and women with vow offerings in their hands and prayers on their lips, touching the ground with their foreheads, praising the efficacy of their vows, or proclaiming the accounts of the spiritual assistance received. Other multitudes ask for lasting bliss, for an upright heart, for advice how best to act, for strength of the body, for enlightenment, for the birth of a son, the reunion of friends, a long life, increase of wealth, elevation in rank, and many other things. His Majesty, who knows what is really good, gives satisfactory answers to every one, and applies remedies to their religious perplexities. Not a day passes but people bring cups of water to him beseeching him to breathe upon it. He who reads the letters of the divine orders in the book of fate, on seeing the tidings of hope, takes the water with his blessed hands, places it in the rays of the world-illuminating sun, and fulfils the desire of the suppliant. Many sick people¹ of broken hopes, whose diseases the most eminent physicians pronounced incurable, have been restored to health by this divine means.

¹ Vide Abu i Fazl's preface p. iii l. 19

² This is an allusion to the wonderful event which happened at the birth of the emperor

A more remarkable case is the following. A simple-minded recluse had cut off his tongue, and throwing it towards the threshold of the palace, said, "If that certain blissful thought,² which I just now have, has been put into my heart by God, my tongue will get well, for the sincerity of my belief must lead to a happy issue." The day was not ended before he obtained his wish.

¹ He [Akbar] showed himself every morning at a window in front of which multitudes came and prostrated themselves, while women brought their sick infants to his benediction and offered presents on their recovery. From the account of the Great Miranians who came to Akbar in 1595 in Murray's Discoveries in India, p. 66.

² His thought was this. If Akbar's ray of light be must from his supernatural wisdom, and I am in what condition I am in, I am

Those who are acquainted with the religious knowledge and the piety of His Majesty, will not attach any importance to some of his customs,¹ remarkable as they may appear at first, and those who know His Majesty's charity and love of justice, do not even see anything remarkable in them. In the magnanimity of his heart he never thinks of his perfection though he is the ornament of the world. Hence he even keeps back many who declare themselves willing to become his disciples. He often says, "Why should I claim to guide men before I myself am guided?" But when a novice bears on his forehead the sign of earnestness of purpose, and he be daily enquiring more and more, His Majesty accepts him, and admits him on a Sunday, when the world illuminating sun is in its highest splendour. Notwithstanding every strictness and reluctance shown by His Majesty in admitting novices, there are many thousands, men of all classes, who have cast over their shoulders the mantle of belief, and look upon their conversion to the New Faith as the means of obtaining every blessing.

At the above mentioned time of everlasting auspiciousness, the novice with his turban in his hands, puts his head on the feet of His Majesty. This is symbolical,² and expresses that the novice, guided by good fortune and the assistance of his good star, has cast aside³ conceit and selfishness, the root of so many evils, offers his heart in worship, and now comes to inquire as to the means of obtaining everlasting life. His Majesty, the chosen one of God, then stretches out the hand of favour, raises up the suppliant and replaces the turban on his head, meaning by these symbolical actions that he has raised up a man of pure intentions who from seeming existence has now entered into real life. His Majesty then gives the novice the Shast,⁴ upon which is engraved 'The Great Name',⁵ and His Majesty's symbolical motto, 'Allih^u Ikbar'. This teaches the novice the truth that ¹ It is said that besides no other title to the Mohammedan religion.

Brahminical thread. Here a ring seems to be meant. Or it may be the likeness of the Emperor which according to Buddhism the members wore on their turbans.

² The Great Name is a name of God. Some say it is the word Allih others say it is A Si al the eternal others Al H^ujj the living others Al Qayy^um the everlasting.

"The pure Shast and the pure sight never err"

Seeing the wonderful habits of His Majesty, his sincere attendants are guided, as circumstances require it, and from the wise counsels they receive they soon state their wishes openly. They learn to satisfy their thirst in the spring of divine favour, and gain for their wisdom and motives renewed light. Others according to their capacities are taught wisdom in excellent advices.

But it is impossible, while speaking of other matters besides, to give a full account of the manner in which His Majesty teaches wisdom, heals dangerous diseases, and applies remedies for the severest sufferings. Should my occupations allow sufficient leisure, and should another term of life be granted me, it is my intention to lay before the world a separate volume on this subject.

Ordinances of the Divine Faith

The members of the Divine Faith, on seeing each other observe the following custom. One says, "Allāh Akbar," and the other responds, "Jallū Jallalū"¹. The motive of His Majesty in laying down this mode of salutation, is to remind men to think of the origin of their existence, and to keep the Deity in fresh, lively, and grateful remembrance.

It is also ordered by His Majesty that instead of the dinner usually given in remembrance of a man after his death, each member should prepare a dinner during his lifetime, and thus gather provisions for his last journey.

Each member is to give a party on the anniversary of his birthday, others Ar Rahman, ar rahim the clement and merciful, others Al Muhaymin the protector (Alīya). Qazī Hamid 'd Dīn of Nagor says the Great Name is the word Hu or He (God) because it has a reference to God's nature as it shows that He has no other at His side. Again the word lu is a root not a derivative. All epithets of God are contained in it. Kashf ul Luḡat and arrange a sumptuous feast. He is to bestow alms and thus prepare provisions for the long journey.

His Majesty has also ordered that members should endeavour to abstain from eating flesh. They may allow others to eat flesh without touching it themselves, but during the month of their birth they are not even to approach meat. Nor shall members go near anything that they have themselves slain nor eat of it. Neither shall they make use of the same vessels with butchers, fishers, and birdcatchers.

Members should not cohabit with pregnant old and barren women, nor with girls under the age of puberty.

NOTE BY THE TRANSLATOR ON THE RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE EMPEROR AKBAR

IN CONNECTION WITH THE PRECEDING Ā'IN it may be of interest for the general reader and of some value for the future historian of Akbar's reign to collect in form of a note the information which we possess regarding the religious views of the Emperor Akbar. The sources from which this information is derived are besides Abū l Faḏl's Ā'IN the Muntahab^u t Tawarikh by 'Abd l Qadir ibn l Muluk Shāh of Badaon—regarding whom I would refer the reader to p. 110 and to a longer article in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal for 1869—and the Dabistan^u l Ma'āshih¹ a work written about sixty years after Akbar's death by an unknown Muhammadan writer of strong Parsi tendencies. Nor must we forget the valuable testimony of some of the Portuguese missionaries whom Akbar called from Goa—Rodolpho Aquaviva, Antonio de Monserrato, Francisco Enriques, etc. of whom the first is mentioned by Abū l Faḏl under the name of Padrī Radalf². There exist also two articles on Akbar's religious views, one by Captain Vans Kennedy published in the second volume of the Transactions of the Bombay Literary Society and another by the late Horace Hayman Wilson which had originally appeared in the Calcutta Quarterly Oriental Magazine vol. 1, 1824 and has been reprinted in the second volume of Wilson's works London 1862. Besides a few extracts from Badaoni bearing on this subject will be found in Sir H. Elliott's Bibliographical Index to the Historians of Muhammadan India p. 243 ff. The proceedings of the Portuguese missionaries at Akbar's Court are described in Murray's represented to the emperor that Shaykh Mubārak also, in as far as he pretended to be Mahdī,¹ belonged to the class of innovators, and was not only himself damned, but led others into damnation. Having obtained a sort of permission to remove him, they dispatched police officers to bring him before the emperor. But when they found that the Shaykh, with his two sons, had concealed himself, they demolished the pulpit in his prayer-room. The Shaykh, at first, took refuge with Salīm Ḥirḥī at Fathpūr, who then was in the height of his glory, and requested him to intercede for him. Shaykh Salīm, however, sent him money by some of his disciples, and told him it would be better for him to go away to Gujrāt. Seeing that Salīm took no interest in him, Shaykh Mubārak applied to Mirzā ‘Azīz Koka [Akbar’s foster brother], who took occasion to praise to the emperor the Shaykh’s learning and voluntary poverty,

¹ First printed at Calcutta in 1819 with a short dictionary and reprinted at Bombay A.H. 1280 [A.D. 1864]. It is written in Persian and translated into French at the cost of the Government of India.

² Not to be confused with the name of the philosopher but the letter 'd' has been taken from the Persian word 'د'.

The emperor at last gave up all thoughts of killing the Shaykh. In a short time matters took a more favourable turn, and Abū ‘I Fazl when once in favour with the emperor (officious as he was, and time serving, openly faithless, continually studying His Majesty’s whims, a flatterer beyond all bounds) took every opportunity of reviling in the most shameful way that sect whose labours and motives have been so little appreciated,² and became the cause not only of the extirpation of these experienced people, but also of the ruin of all servants of God, especially of Shaykhs, pious men, of the helpless, and the orphans, whose livings and grants he cut down.

He used to say, openly and implicitly —

O Lord send down a proof³ for the people of the world !
 Send these Nimrods⁴ a gnat as big as an elephant !
 These Pharaoh like fellows have lifted up their heads,
 Send them a Moses with a staff, and a Nile !

¹ n 113 note 2

**

A few years extract shows allowed to be

And when in consequence of his harsh proceedings, miseries and misfortunes broke in upon the 'Ulamis (who had persecuted him and his father) he applied the following Rubā'ī to them —

I have set fire to my barn with my own hands,
As I am the incendiary, how can I complain of my enemy ?
No one is my enemy but myself,
Woe is me ! I have torn my garment with my own hands,

And when during disputations people quoted against him the edict of any Mujtahid,¹ he used to say, " Oh don't bring me the arguments of this sweetmeat seller and that cobbler, or that tanner ! " He thought himself capable of giving the lie to all Shavkhs and 'Ulamās

Commencement of the Disputations [Badaoni II, p 200]

" During the year 983 A H , many places of worship were built at the command of His Majesty The cause was this For many years previous to 983 the emperor had gained in succession remarkable and decisive victories The empire had grown in extent from day to day , everything turned out well and no opponent was left in the whole world His Majesty had thus leisure to come into nearer contact with ascetics and the disciples of the Muḥimiyah sect, and passed much of his time in discussing the word of God (Qur'an), and the word of the prophet (the Hadīḥ or Tradition) Questions of Sufism, scientific discussions, inquiries into philosophy and law, were the order of the day His Majesty passed whole nights in thoughts of God , he continually occupied himself with pronouncing the names Yā Hu and Yā Hādī, which had been mentioned to him ² and his heart was full of reverence for Him who is the true Giver From a feeling of thankfulness for his past successes, he would sit many a morning alone in prayer and melancholy, on a large flat stone of an old building which lay near the palace in a lonely spot, with his head bent over his chest and gathering the bliss of early hours "

In his religious habits the emperor was confirmed by a story which he had heard of Sulaymān³ ruler of Bengal, who in company with 100

¹ A man of infallible authority in his explanations of the Muslim madan law There are few Mujtahids Among the oldest there were several who played a trade at the same time The preceding Rubā'ī is translated by Sir H Elliot in the Muslim Indian Historians of India p 244

² R. some say

³ Hadīḥ O Guide The frequent Some faqrs repeat them several

He is sometimes called Karānī

... from 91 to 980 or A D 1563 to 1573

“ Other tricks also, in comparison with which the tricks of the children of Moses are nothing, and rumours of his meanness and shabbiness his open cheating and worldliness, and his cruelties said to have been practised on the Shaykhs and the poor of the whole country, but especially on the Aimadars and other deserving people of the Panjāb—all came up, one story after the other His motives, ‘ which shall be revealed on the day of resurrection ’ (Qur LXXXVI, 9), were disclosed, all sorts of stories, calculated to ruin his character and to vilify him, were got up, till it was resolved to force him to go to Makkah

“ But when people asked him whether pilgrimage was a duty for a man in his circumstances, he said No,¹ for Shaykh ‘ Abd^a ’ n Nabī had risen to power, whilst the star of the Mawlana was fast sinking ”

But a heavier blow was to fall on the ‘ Ulamās [Bad II p 207]

“ At one of the above mentioned meetings, His Majesty asked how many freeborn women a man was legally allowed to marry (by nikāh) The lawyers answered that four was the limit fixed by the prophet The emperor thereupon remarked that from the time he had come of age, he had not restricted himself to that number, and in justice to his wives, of whom he had a large number, both freeborn and slaves, he now wanted to know what remedy the law provided for his case Most expressed their opinions, when the emperor remarked that Shaykh ‘ Abd^a ’ n Nabī had once told him that one of the Mujtahids had had as many as nine wives Some of the ‘ Ulamas present replied that the Mujtahid alluded to was Ibn Abī Layā, and that some had even allowed eighteen from a too literal translation of the Qur‘an verse (Qur, Sūr IV, 3), ‘ Marry whatever women ye like, two and two,² and three and three, and four and four,’ but this was improper His Majesty then sent a message to Shaykh ‘ Abd^a ’ n Nabī, who replied that he had merely wished to point out to Akbar that a difference of opinion existed on this point among lawyers, but that he had not given a fatwa in order to legalize irregular marriage proceedings This annoyed His Majesty very much ‘ The Shaykh,’ he said, ‘ told me at that time a very different thing from what he now tells me ’ He never forgot this every tradition on the subject, decreed, first, that by mut'ah [not by nikāh] a man might marry any number of wives he pleased, and, secondly, that mut'ah marriages were allowed by Imam Malik. The Shi'ahs, as was well known, loved children born in mut'ah wedlock more than those born by nikāh wives, contrary to the Sunnis and the Ahl-i Jama'at.

“ After much discussion on this point the ‘ Ulamās, having collected

"On the latter point also the discussion got rather lively, and I would refer the reader to my work entitled Naḡāt 'r-rashīd [vide note 2, p. 104] in which the subject is briefly discussed. But to make things worse Naqīb Khan fetched a copy of the Muwatta of Imam Malik, and pointed to a Tradition in the book, which the Imam had cited as a proof against the legality of mut'ah marriages.

"Another night Qaḡī Yaḡqūb, Shaykh Abū 'l-Faḡl Ḥaḡī Ibrahim and a few others were invited to meet His Majesty in the house near the Anūptala o tank. Shaykh Abū 'l-Faḡl had been selected as the opponent and laid before the emperor several traditions regarding mut'ah marriages, which his father (Shaykh Mubarak) had collected, and the discussion commenced. His Majesty then asked me, what my opinion was on this subject. I said, 'The conclusion which must be drawn from so many contradictory traditions and sectarians customs, is this—Imām Malik and the Shi'ahs are unanimous in looking upon mut'ah marriages as legal, Imam Shafī'ī and the Great Imam (Hanīfah) look upon mut'ah marriages as illegal. But, should at any time a Qaḡī of the Maliki sect decide that mut'ah is legal, it is legal, according to the common belief, even for Shafī'ī's and Hanafīs. Every other opinion on this subject is idle talk.' This pleased His Majesty very much.

The unfortunate Shaykh Yaḡqūb, however, went on talking about the extent of the authority of a Qaḡī. He tried to shift the ground, but when he saw that he was discomfited, he said, "Very well, I have nothing else to say—just as His Majesty pleases."

"The Emperor then said, 'I herewith appoint the Maliki Qaḡī Hasan 'Arab as the Qaḡī before whom I lay this case concerning my wives, and you, Yaḡqūb, are from to-day suspended.' This was immediately obeyed, and Qaḡī Hasan on the spot gave a decree which made mut'ah marriages legal.

"The veteran lawyers, as Makhḡdum 'l-Mulk, Qaḡī Yaḡqūb, and others, made very long faces at these proceedings.

"This was the commencement of 'their sere and yellow leaf'.

"The result was that, a few days later, Mawlanā Jalāl 'd-Dīn of Multan, a profound and learned man, whose grant had been transferred, was ordered from Āgra (to Fathpūr Sikrī) and appointed Qazī of the realm Qazī Yaḥqūb was sent to Gaur as District Qazī

“ From this day henceforth, ‘ the road of opposition and difference in opinion ’ lay open, and remained so till His Majesty was appointed Mujtahid of the empire ” [Here follows the extract regarding the formula Allāh Ikbar, given on p 175, note 1]

[Badaoni II, p 211]

“ During this year [983], there arrived Hakīm Abū 'l Fath Hakīm Humāvūn (who subsequently changed his name to Humāyūn Qulī, and lastly to Hakīm Humam), and Nūr 'd Dīn, who as poet is known under the name of Qararī They were brothers and came from Gilan, near the Caspian Sea The eldest brother, whose manners and address were exceedingly winning, obtained in a short time great ascendancy over the Emperor, he flattered him openly, adapted himself to every change in the religious ideas of His Majesty, or even went in advance of them, and thus became in a short time a most intimate friend of Akbar

“ Soon after there came from Persia, Mulla Muhammad of Yazd, who got the nickname of Yazīdī, and attaching himself to the emperor, commenced openly to revile the Sahābah (persons who knew Muhammad, except the twelve Imams), told queer stories about them, and tried hard to make the emperor a Shi'ah But he was soon left behind by Bīr Bar—that bastard!—and by Shavkh Abū 'l Fazl and Hakīm Abū 'l Fath, who successfully turned the emperor from the Islam, and led him to reject inspiration, prophetship, the miracles of the prophet and of the saints, and even the whole law, so that I could no longer bear their company

“ At the same time, His Majesty ordered Qazī Jalāl 'd Dīn and several Ḥulamās to write a commentary on the Qur'an, but this led to great rows among them

“ Deb Chand Raja Manjhola—that fool—once set the whole court in laughter by saying that Allah after all had great respect for cows, else the cow would not have been mentioned in the first chapter (Sūrat 'l baqarah) of the Qur'an

“ His Majesty had also the early history of the Islam read out to him, and soon commenced to think less of the Sahābah Soon after, the observance of the five prayers and the fasts, and the belief in everything connected with the prophet, were put down as taqlīdī, or religious blindness, and man's reason was acknowledged to be the basis of all religion Portuguese priests also came frequently, and His Majesty inquired into the articles of their belief which are based upon reason ”

[Badāoni II, p 245]

“ In the beginning of the next year [984], when His Majesty was at Dīpalpūr in Malwah, Sharif of Āmul arrived. This apostate had run from country to country, like a dog that has burnt its foot, and turning from one sect to the other, he went on wrangling till he became a perfect heretic. For some time he had studied Sūfic nonsense in the school of Mawlāna Muhammad Zahid of Balkh, nephew of the great Shaykh Husayn of Khwārazm, and had lived with derwīshes. But as he had little of a derwish in himself, he talked slander, and was so full of conceit that they hunted him away. The Mawlānā also wrote a poem against him, in which the following verse occurs —

“ There was a heretic, Sharif by name,

Who talked very big, though of doubtful fame

“ In his wanderings he had come to the Dakhin, where he made himself so notorious, that the king of the Dakhin wanted to kill him. But he was only put on a donkey, and shown about in the city. Hindustan, however, is a nice large place, where anything is allowed, and no one cares for another, and people go on as they may. He therefore made for Malwah, and settled at a place five kos distant from the Imperial camp. Every frivolous and absurd word he spoke was full of venom, and became the general talk. Many fools, especially Persian heretics (whom the Islam casts out as people cast out hairs which they find in dough—such heretics are called Nuqtawīs, and are destined to be the foremost worshippers of Antichrist) gathered round him, and spread, at his order, the rumour that he was the restorer of the Millennium. The sensation was immense. As soon as His Majesty heard of him, he invited him one night to a private audience in a long prayer room, which had been made of cloth, and in which the emperor with his suite used to say the five daily prayers. Ridiculous in his exterior, ugly in shape, with his neck stooping forward, he performed his obeisance, and stood still with his arms crossed, and you could scarcely see how his blue eye (which colour is a sign of hostility to our prophet) shed lies, falsehood, and hypocrisy. There he stood for a long time, and when he got the order to sit down, he prostrated himself in worship, and sat down du-ānū (vide p 168, note 2), like an Indian camel. He talked privately to His Majesty, no one dared to draw near them, but I sometimes heard from a distance the word ‘ilm (knowledge) because he spoke pretty loud. He called his silly views ‘the truth of truths’, or ‘the

“ A fellow ignorant of things external and internal,
 From silliness indulging idle talk
 He is immersed in heresies infernal,
 And prattles—God forbid!—of truth eternal

“ The whole talk of the man was a mere repetition of the ideas of Mahmūd of Bāsakhwān (a village in Gilān), who lived at the time of Timūr Mahmūd who had written thirteen treatises of dirty filth, full of such hypocrisy as no religion or sect would suffer, and containing nothing but fitāil, which name he had given to the ‘ science of expressed and implied language ’ The chief work of this miserable wretch is entitled Bahr o Kūza (the Ocean and the Jug), and contains such loathsome nonsense, that on listening to it one’s ear vomits How the devil would have laughed in his face, if he had heard it, and how he would have jumped for joy ! And this Sharif—the dirty thief—had also written a collection of nonsense, which he styled Tarashshuh i Zuhūr, in which he blindly follows Mir ‘ Abd ‘ Alawwal This book is written in loose, deceptive aphorisms, each commencing with the words mīfarmūdand (the master said), a queer thing to look at, and a mass of ridiculous, silly nonsense But notwithstanding his ignorance, according to the proverb, ‘ Worthies will meet,’ he has exerted such an influence on the spirit of the age, and on the people, that he is now [in 1004], a commander of One Thousand and His Majesty’s apostle for Bengal, possessing the four degrees of faith, and calling, as the Lieutenant of the emperor, the faithful to these degrees ”

The discussions on Thursday evenings were continued for the next year In 986, they became violent, in as far as the elementary principles of the Islam were chosen as subject, whilst formerly the disputations had turned on single points The ‘ Ulamās, even in the presence of the emperor, often lost their temper, and called each other Kāfirs, or accursed

[Bad II, p 255]

“ Nabī, in who was n he had ordered to be killed for heresy But he also said in the pamphlet that it was wrong to say prayers with ‘ Abd ‘ n Nabī, because he had been undutiful towards his father, and was, besides, afflicted with piles Upon this, Shaykh ‘ Abd ‘ n Nabī called Makhdūm a fool, and cursed him The ‘ Ulamas now broke up into two parties, like the Sibtis and Qibtis gathering either round the Shaykh or round Makhdūm i Mulk, and the heretic innovators used this opportunity, to mislead the emperor

by their wicked opinions and aspersions, and turned truth into falsehood, and represented lies as truth

"His Majesty till now [986] had shown every sincerity, and was diligently searching for truth. But his education had been much neglected; and surrounded as he was by men of low and heretic principles, he had been forced to doubt the truth of the Islām. Falling from one perplexity into the other, he lost sight of his real object, the search of truth, and when the strong embankment of our clear law and our excellent faith had once been broken through His Majesty grew colder and colder, till after the short space of five or six years not a trace of Muhammadan feeling was left in his heart. Matters then became very different."

[Bad II, p 239]

'In 984 the news arrived that Shāh Tahmāsp of Persia had died, and Shāh Ismā'īl II had succeeded him. The Tarikh of his accession is given in the first letters of the three words طغر, فتح, and دولت = 984. Shah Ismā'īl gave the order that any one who wished to go to Makkah could have his travelling expenses paid from the royal exchequer. Thus thousands of people partook of the spiritual blessing of pilgrimage, whilst here you dare not now [1004] mention that word, and you would expose yourself to capital punishment if you were to ask leave from court for this purpose."

[Bad II, p 241]

"In 985, the news arrived that Shāh Ismā'īl, son of Shāh Tahmāsp had been murdered, with the consent of the grandees, by his sister Parī Jān Khānum. Mir Haydar, the riddle writer, found the Tarikh of his accession in the words Shahinshāh : rūz zamīn [984] 'a king of the face of the earth' and the Tarikh of his death in Shahinshāh : zer-z zamīn [985] 'a king below the face of the earth'.¹ At that time also there appeared in Persia the great comet which had been visible in India (p 240) and the consternation was awful, especially as at the same time the Turks conquered Tabriz, Shirwān, and Mazandaran. Sultān Muhammad Khudabanda, son of Shāh Tahmāsp, but by another mother, succeeded, and with him ended the time of reviling and cursing the Sahābah.

"But the heretical ideas had certainly entered Hindūstān from Persia."

¹ As Tahmāsp in his short Memoirs (Pers. Ms. 782, As. Soc. Bengal) gives the word طغر as the Turkish of his accession we have —

Tahmāsp from 930 to 934. Ismā'īl II, 934 to 935.

Pratap's Tables (Hind edition, p. 398) give — Tahmāsp 932 to 933. Ismā'īl II, from 933 to 933.

BADĀ'ONĪ'S SUMMARY OF THE REASONS WHICH LED AKBAR TO RENOUNCE
THE ISLAM

[Bad II, p 256]

The following are the principal reasons which led His Majesty from the right path I shall not give all, but only some, according to the proverb, "That which is small, guides that which is great, and a sign of fear in a man points him out as the culprit "

The principal reason is the large number of learned men of all denominations and sects that came from various countries to court, and received personal interviews Night and day people did nothing but inquire and investigate, profound points of science, the subtleties of revelation, the curiosities of history, the wonders of nature, of which large volumes could only give a summary abstract, were ever spoken of His Majesty collected the opinions of every one, especially of such as were not Muhammadans, retaining whatever he approved of, and rejecting everything which was against his disposition and ran counter to his wishes. From his earliest childhood to his manhood, and from his manhood to old age, His Majesty has passed through the most various phases, and through all sorts of religious practices and sectarian beliefs, and has collected everything which people can find in books, with a talent of selection peculiar to him, and a spirit of inquiry opposed to every [Islamitic] principle Thus a faith based on some elementary principles traced itself on the mirror of his heart, and as the result of all the influences which were brought to bear on His Majesty, they grew, gradually as the outline of a stone, the conviction in his heart that there were sensible men in all religions, and abstemious thinkers and men endowed with miraculous powers, among all nations If some true knowledge was thus everywhere to be found, why should truth be confined to one religion, or to a creed like the Islām, which was comparatively new, and scarcely a thousand years old, why should one sect assert what another denies and why should one claim a preference without having superiority conferred on itself

Moreover, Sumanis¹ and Brahmins managed to get frequent private interviews with His Majesty As they surpass other learned men in their treatises on morals, and on physical and religious sciences, and reach a high degree in their knowledge of the future, in spiritual power and human perfection, they brought proofs based on reason and testimony,

¹ Explained in Arab dictionaries as a sect in Sind who believe in the transmigration of souls (tanasukh) Akbar, as will be seen from the following was convinced of the transmigration of souls, and therefore rejected the doctrine of resurrection

for the truth of their own and the fallacies of other religions, and inculcated their doctrines so firmly and so skilfully represented things as quite self evident which require consideration, that no man, by expressing his doubts, could now raise a doubt in His Majesty, even if mountains were to crumble to dust, or the heavens were to tear asunder

Hence His Majesty cast aside the Islamic revelations regarding resurrection, the day of judgment, and the details connected with it, as also all ordinances based on the tradition of our prophet. He listened to every abuse which the courtiers heaped on our glorious and pure faith, which can be so easily followed, and eagerly seizing such opportunities, he showed in words and gestures, his satisfaction at the treatment which his original religion received at their hands

How wise was the advice which the guardian gave a lovely being,

“Do not smile at every face, as the rose does at every zephyr”¹

When it was too late to profit by the lesson,

She could but frown, and hang down the head

For some time His Majesty called a Brahmin, whose name was Purukhotam, author of a commentary on the Upanishads,² whom he asked to invent particular Sanscrit names for all things in existence. At other times, a Brahmin of the name of Debi was pulled up the wall of the castle,³ sitting on a chārpāc, till he arrived near a balcony where the emperor used to sleep. Whilst thus suspended, he instructed His Majesty in the secrets and legends of Hinduism, in the manner of worshipping idols, the fire, the sun, and stars, and of revering the chief gods of these unbelievers, as Brahma, Mahadev, Rishu, Kishu, Rām, and Mahāmāi, who are supposed to have been men, but very likely never existed, though some, in their idle belief, look upon them as gods, and others as angels. His Majesty, on hearing further how much the people of the country prized their institutions, commenced to look upon them with affection. The doctrine of the transmigration of souls especially took a deep root in his heart, and he approved of the saying—“There is no religion in which the doctrine of transmigration has not taken firm root.” Insincere flatterers composed treatises in order to fix the evidence for this doctrine, and as His Majesty relished inquiries into the sects of these infidels (who cannot be counted, so numerous they are, and who have no end of ¹ Just as Akbar liked the zephyr of inquiry into other religious systems. But zephyrs are also destructive, they scatter the petals of the rose.

² The text has a few unintelligible words.

³ Perhaps in order not to get polluted or because the balcony belonged to the Harem.

revealed books, but nevertheless, do not belong to the Ahl ı Kuāb, Jews, Christians, and Muhammadans), not a day passed but a new fruit of this loathsome tree ripened into existence

Sometimes again, it was *Shaykh Tāj*¹ 'd Dīn of Dihlī who had to attend the emperor. This Shaykh is the son of Shaykh Zakariya of Ajodhan. The principal Ulamas of the age call him *Tāj*² 'l Arifin, or crown of the Sufis. He had learned under Shaykh Zamān of Panipat, author of a commentary on the Lawaḥih, and of other very excellent works was in Sūfism and pantheism second only to Shaykh Ibn Arabi, and had written a comprehensive commentary on the *Nuzhat*³ 'l Arwāh. Like the preceding, he was drawn up the wall of the castle. His Majesty listened whole nights to his Sufic trifles. As the Shaykh was not over strict¹ in acting according to our religious law, he spoke a great deal of the pantheistic presence, which idle Sūfis will talk about, and which generally leads them to denial of the law and open heresy. He also introduced polemic matters, as the ultimate salvation by faith of Pharaoh—God's curse be upon him!—which is mentioned in the *Fusus*² 'l Hikam,² or the excellence of hope over fear,³ and many other things to which men incline from weakness of disposition, unmindful of cogent reasons, or distinct religious commands, to the contrary. The Shaykh is therefore one of the principal culprits who weakened His Majesty's faith in the orders of our religion. He also said that infidels would, of course, be kept for ever in hell, but it was not likely, nor could it be proved, that the punishment in hell was eternal. His explanations of some verses of the Qur'an or of the Tradition of our prophet, were often far fetched. Besides, he mentioned that the phrase Insān ı Kāmil (perfect man) referred to the ruler of the age, from which he inferred that the nature of a king was holy. In this way, he said many agreeable things to the emperor, rarely expressing the proper meaning, but rather the opposite of what he knew to be correct. Even the sujdah (prostration), which people mildly call zamīnboş (kissing the ground), he allowed to be due to the Insān ı Kāmil, he looked upon the respect due to the king as a religious command, and called the face of the king Kāba yı Murādūt, the sanctum of desires,

¹ As long as a S fi conforms to the Qur'an he is sharḥi, but when he feels that he has drawn nearer to God and does no longer require the ordinances of the profanum vulgare he is ḥād free and becomes a heretic.

² Pharaoh claimed divinity, and is therefore malḥūm, accursed by God. But according to some books, and among them the Fusus Pharaoh repented in the moment of death, and acknowledged Moses to be a true prophet.

³ The Islām says, Al insān bayna l khawfi wa r riya. Faith stands between fear and hope. Hence it is sin to fear God a wrath more than to hope for God a mercy, and so reversely.

and Qibla yā hājāt, the cynosure of necessities. Such blasphemies¹ other people supported by quoting stories of no credit, and by referring to the practice followed by disciples of some heads of Indian sects. And after this, when . . .²

Other great philosophical writers of the age also expressed opinions, for which there is no authority. Thus Shaykh Yaḥqūb of Kashmir, a well known writer, and at present the greatest authority in religious matters, mentioned some opinions held by Ḥayn³ 'I Quzat of Hamadān, that our prophet Muhammad was a personification of the divine name of Al hādī (the guide), and the devil was the personification of God's name of Al-muzill (the tempter),⁴ that both names, thus personified, had appeared in this world, and that both personifications were therefore necessary.

Mullā Muhammad of Yazd, too, was drawn up the wall of the castle, and uttered unworthy, loathsome abuse against the first three Khalifahs, called the whole Sahābah, their followers and next followers, and the saints of past ages, infidels and adulterers, slandered the Sunnis and the Ahl-i Jamā'at,⁴ and represented every sect except the Shi'ah, as damned and leading men into damnation.

The differences among the Ḥulamās, of whom one called lawful what the other called . . . apost super . . . and rank to Imam i Ghazzālī and Imām-i Razi,⁵ and knowing from experience the firmness of his Ḥulamās, he judged those great men of the past by his contemporaries, and threw them aside.

Learned monks also came from Europe, who go by the name of Pādre.⁶ They have an infallible head, called Papā. He can change any religious ordinances as he may think advisable, and kings have to submit to his authority. These monks brought the gospel, and mentioned to the emperor their proofs for the Trinity. His Majesty firmly believed in the truth of the Christian religion, and wishing to spread the doctrines of ¹ As the zaminbor, or the use of holy names as Kaḥbah (the temple of Makkah) or Q. Makā (Makkah, in as far as people turn to it their face when praying).

² The text has an unintelligible sentence.

³ According to the Islām God leads (hādī) men to salvation, but also to sin and damnation. God created also wickedness.

⁴ Ahl-i jamā'at is a term which is often joined with the word Sunnis. All religious ordinances are either based upon the Qur'an, or upon the Tradition, or upon the opinion (qiyās) of famous Salāhis, or lastly, upon ijmā'at agreement, or the custom generally followed during the first century of the Hijrah. Hence Ahl-i jamā'at comprises all such as believe ijmā'at binding.

⁵ Two famous authorities in religious matters. The most popular books of Imām Ghazzālī are the Iḥyā' 'Ulūm and the Kimāyā; the Kimāyā is a ḥikmah which, according to p. 100, was one of the few books which Akbar liked.

⁶ The text has ادعوى.

Jesus, ordered Prince Murad¹ to take a few lessons in Christianity by way of auspiciousness, and charged Abū 'l Fazl to translate the Gospel. Instead of the usual Bism' 'llāh' 'r-rahmān' 'r-rahīm',² the following lines were used—

Ay nām i tu Jesus o Kīristū

(O thou those names are Jesus and Christ) which means, "O thou whose name is gracious and blessed", and Shaykh Fayzī added another half, in order to complete the verse

Subhāna k^a lā sucā k^a Yā hū

(We praise Thee, there is no one besides Thee, O God !)

These accursed monks applied the description of cursed Satan, and of his qualities, to Muhammad, the best of all prophets—God's blessings rest on him and his whole house!—a thing which even devils would not do

Bīr Bar also impressed upon the emperor that the sun was the primary origin of everything. The ripening of the grain in the fields, of fruits and vegetables, the illumination of the universe, and the lives of men, depended upon the Sun. Hence it was but proper to worship and reverence this luminary, and people in praying should face towards the place where he rises, instead of turning to the quarter where he sets. For similar reasons, said Bīr Bar, should men pay regard to fire and water, stones, trees, and other forms of existence, even to cows and their dung, to the mark on the forehead and the Brahminical thread.

Philosophers and learned men who had been at Court, but were in disgrace, made themselves busy in bringing proofs. They said the sun was "the greatest light", the source of benefit for the whole world, the nourisher of kings, and the origin of royal power.

This was also the cause why the Nawrūz i Jalāli³ was observed, on which day since His Majesty's accession, a great feast was given. His Majesty also adopted different suits of clothes of seven different colours,

¹ Prince Murad was then about eight years old. Jahangir (Salim) was born on Wednesday the 17th of October 1600. There is a legend that he was born on the 10th of the month of Jumād al-Thawīyah 1009.

² Al-hamdu li-llāhi 'r-Rahmāni 'r-Rahīm is said by every schoolboy before he commences to read from his text book.

³ The formula Bism' llāh' etc. is said by every schoolboy before he commences to read from his text book.

The words Ay nām i tu Jesus o Kīristo are taken from the Dabistān, the edition of Rajah ...

each of which was worn on a particular day of the week in honour of the seven colours of the seven planets

The emperor also learned from some Hindus, formulæ to reduce the influence of the sun to his subjection, and commenced to read them mornings and evenings as a religious exercise. He also believed that it was wrong to kill cows, which the Hindus worship, he looked upon cow dung as pure, interdicted the use of beef, and killed beautiful men (?) instead of cows. The doctors confirmed the emperor in his opinion, and told him it was written in their books that beef was productive of all sorts of diseases and was very indigestible.

Fire worshippers also had come from Nausarī in Gujrāt, and proved to His Majesty the truth of Zoroaster's doctrines. They called fire-worship "the great worship", and impressed the emperor so favourably that he learned from them the religious terms and rites of the old Pārsis, and ordered Abū 'l Fazl to make arrangements that sacred fire should be kept burning at court by day and by night, according to the custom of the ancient Persian kings, in whose fire temples it had been continually burning, for fire was one of the manifestations of God, and "a ray of His rays"

His Majesty, from his youth, had also been accustomed to celebrate the Hom (a kind of fire-worship) from his affection towards the Hindu princesses of his Harem.

From the New Year's day of the twenty fifth year of his reign [988], His Majesty openly worshipped the sun and the fire by prostrations, and the courtiers were ordered to rise when the candles and lamps were lighted in the palace. On the festival of the eighth day of Virgo, he put on the mark on the forehead, like a Hindu, and appeared in the Audience Hall, when several Brahmans tied, by way of auspiciousness, a string with jewels on it round his hands, whilst the grandees countenanced these proceedings by bringing, according to their circumstances, pearls and jewels as presents. The custom of Rakhi (or tying pieces of clothes round the wrists as amulets) became quite common.

When orders in opposition to the Islām were quoted by people of other religions, they were looked upon by His Majesty as convincing, whilst Hinduism is in reality a religion in which every order is nonsense. The originator of our belief, the Arabian Saints, all were said to be adulterers and highway robbers, and all the Muhammadans were declared worthy of reproof, till at length His Majesty belonged to those of whom the Qur'an says (Sūr 61, 8) "They seek to extinguish God's light with their mouths. But God will perfect his light though the infidels be averse thereto" In fact matters went so far that proofs were no longer required when anything connected with the Islām was to be abolished

Akbar publicly assumes the spiritual leadership of the nation

[Bad II, p 268]

"In this year [987] His Majesty was anxious to unite in his person the powers of the State and those of the Church, for he could not bear to be subordinate to any one. As he had heard that the prophet, his awful successors and some of the most powerful kings as Amīr Timūr Ṣahib qiran and Mirzā Ulugh Beg ı Gurgan and several others had themselves read the Khutba (the Friday prayer), he resolved to do the same, apparently in order to imitate their example, but in reality to appear in public as the Mujtahid of the age. Accordingly, on Friday, the first Jumadu l auwal 987, in the Jamī⁶ Masjid of Fathpur, which he had built near the palace His Majesty commenced to read the Khutba. But all at once he stammered and trembled, and though assisted by others, he could scarcely read three verses of a poem, which Shaykh Fayzı had composed, came quickly down from the pulpit and handed over the duties of the Imam (leader of the prayer) to Hafiz Muhammad Amīn, the Court Khatib. These are the verses —

The Lord has given me the empire,
And a wise heart, and a strong arm,
He has guided me in righteousness and justice,
And has removed from my thoughts everything but justice
His praise surpasses man's understanding,
Great is His power, Allah Akbar ! "

[p 269]

"As it was quite customary in those days to speak ill of the doctrine and orders of the Qur^{ān}, and as Hindu wretches and Hinduizing Muhammadans openly reviled our prophet, irreligious writers left out in the prefaces to their books the customary praise of the prophet, and after saying something to the praise of God, wrote eulogies of the emperor instead.¹ It was impossible even to mention the name of the prophet, because these liars (as Abū 'I Fazl, Fayzı, etc) did not like it. This wicked innovation gave general offence, and sowed the seed of evil throughout the country,² but notwithstanding this, a lot of low and mean fellows

¹ As Abū l Fazl has done in the Ā⁶in. "But Fayzı ad led the usual praise of the prophet (ṣalāt) to his Nal Daman, a short time before his death, at the pressing request of some friends. Bad I, 101

² Because books were sure to be copied hence many would see the innovation and imitate it. As the formula Bismı' illāh, etc. had been changed to Allāh Akbar, we also find Allāh Akbar in the heading of books, as in the Ā⁶in.

put piously on their necks the collar of the Divine Faith, and called themselves disciples, either from fear or hope of promotion, though they thought it impossible to say our creed ”

[pp 270 to 272]

“ In the same year [987] a document made its appearance, which bore the signatures and seals of Maḥdūm ‘I Mulk, of Shaykh ‘Abd ‘n-Nabī, sadr s sudūr, of Qārī Jalāl ‘d Dīn of Multān, Qāzī ‘I quzat of Sadr Jahan, the muftī of the empire, of Shaykh Mubārak, the deepest writer of the age, and of Ghazī Khān of Badakhshān, who stood unrivalled in the various sciences. The objects of the document was to settle the superiority of the Imām ‘ādīl (just leader) over the Mujtahid, which was proved by a reference to an ill supported authority. The whole matter is a question, regarding which people differ in opinion, but the document was to do away with the possibility of disagreeing about laws, whether political or religious, and was to bind the lawyers in spite of themselves. But before the instrument was signed, a long discussion took place as to the meaning of ṭiṭhād, and as to whom the term Mujtahid was applicable, and whether it really was the duty of a just Imam who, from his acquaintance with politics, holds a higher rank than the Mujtahid, to decide, according to the requirements of the times, and the wants of the age, all such legal questions on which there existed a difference of opinion. At last, however, all signed the document, some willingly, others against their convictions.

I shall copy the document verbatim

The Document

“ ‘ Whereas Hindūstān has now become the centre of security and peace—and the land of justice and beneficence, a large number of people, especially learned men and lawyers, have immigrated and chosen this country for their home. Now we, the principal ‘Ulamās, who are not only well versed in the several departments of the law and in the principles of jurisprudence, and well acquainted with the edicts which rest on reason or testimony, but are also known for our piety and honest intentions, have duly considered the deep meaning, first, of the verse of the Qur‘ān (Sūr. IV, 62), “ Obey God, and obey the prophet, and those who have authority among you,” and secondly, of the genuine tradition, “ Surely, the man who is dearest to God on the day of judgment, is the Imām ‘ ‘Ādīl : whosoever obeys the Amīr, obeys Me, and Whosoever rebels against him, rebels against Me,” and thirdly, of several other proofs based on reasoning or testimony ; and we have agreed that the rank of a Sulṭān-i ‘Ādīl (a just ruler) is higher heard all this Our faith is the same, whether a man hold high or broad views' His Majesty then asked him, if he was in India on a secret mission from Constantinople, as he showed so much opposition, or if he wished to keep a small place warm for himself, should he once go away from India, and be a respectable man there, he might go at once Shāhbāz got excited, and took a part in the conversation, and when Bir Bar—that hellish dog—made a sneering remark at our religion, Shāhbāz abused him roundly, and said, 'You cursed infidel, do you talk in this manner? It would not take me long to settle you' It got quite uncomfortable when His Majesty said to Shahbāz in particular, and to the others in general, 'Would that a shoeful of excrements were thrown into your faces' "

[p 276]

"In this year the Tamghā (inland tolls) and the Jazyā (tax on infidels), which brought in several krons of dāms, were abolished, and edicts to this effect were sent over the whole empire'

"In the same year a rebellion broke out at Jaunpūr, headed by Muhammad Ma'sūm of Kabul, Muhammad Ma'sūm Khan, Mu'izz^u 'l Mulk, 'Arab Bahadur, and other grandees They objected to Akbar's innovations in religious matters, in as far as these innovations led to a withdrawal of grants of rent free land The rebels had consulted Mulla Muhammad of Yazd (vide above, pp 184, 191), who was Qaziy^u 'l quzat at Jaunpūr, and on obtaining his opinion that, under the circumstances, rebellion against the king of the land was lawful, they seized some tracts of land, and collected a large army The course which this rebellion took is known from general histories, vide Elphinstone, p 511 Mulla Muhammad of Yazd and Mu'izz^u 'l Mulk, in the beginning of the rebellion were called by the emperor to Āgra, and drowned, on the road, at the command of the emperor, in the Jamnā

"In the same year the principal 'ULmas, as Makhdū^u 'l Mulk, Shaykh Munawwar, Mullā 'Abd^u 'sh Shukūr, etc, were sent as exiles to distant provinces "

[p 278]

"Hajī Ibrāhīm of Sarhind (vide above, p 111) brought to court an old, worm eaten MS in queer characters, which, as he pretended, was written by Shaykh Ibn 'Arabī In this book, it was said that the *Sāhib-ī Zamān*¹ was to have many wives, and that he would shave his beard Some of the characteristics mentioned in the book as belonging to him

¹ Sāhib-ī Zamān, or "Man of the Period", is a title frequently given to Imam Mahdi.

“ All this made His Majesty the more inclined to claim the dignity of a prophet, perhaps I should say, the dignity of something else ”¹

[p 291]

“ At one of the meetings, the emperor asked those who were present to mention each the name of a man who could be considered the wisest man of the age , but they should not mention kings, as they formed an exception Each then mentioned that man in whom he had confidence Thus Hakīm Humām (vide above, p 184) mentioned himself, and Shaykh Abū 'l Fazl his own father

“ During this time, the four degrees of faith in His Majesty were defined The four degrees consisted in readiness to sacrifice to the Emperor property, life, honour, and religion Whoever had sacrificed these four things possessed four degrees , and whoever had sacrificed one of these four possessed one degree

“ All the courtiers now put their names down as faithful disciples of the throne ”

[p 299]

“ At this time (end of 989) His Majesty sent Shaykh Jamal Bahhtyār to bring Shaykh Qutb^a 'd Dīn of Jalesar who though a wicked man pretended to be ‘attracted by God When Qutb^a 'd Dīn came the emperor brought him to a conference with some Christian priests and rationalists and some other great authorities of the age After a discussion the Shaykh exclaimed, ‘Let us make a great fire, and in the presence of His Majesty I shall pass through it And if any one else gets safely through, he proves by it the truth of his religion The fire was made the Shaykh pulled one of the Christian priests by the coat and said to him ‘Come on in the name of God ‘ But none of the priests had the courage to go

“ Soon after the Shaykh was sent into exile to Bhakkar together with other faqirs, as His Majesty was jealous of his triumph

“ A large number of Shaykhs and Faqirs were also sent to other places, mostly to Qandahar, where they were exchanged for horses About the same time, the emperor captured a sect consisting of Shaykhs and disciples, and known under the name of Ilāhīs They professed all sorts of nonsense, and practised deceits His Majesty asked them whether they repented of their vanities They replied, ‘Repentance is our Maid’ And so they had invented similar names for the laws and religious commands of the Islam and for the fast At the command of His Majesty,

¹ God.

A Dârogha and a clerk also were appointed for it, who registered the names of such as went to prostitutes, or wanted to take some of them to their houses. People might indulge in such connexions, provided the toll collectors knew of it. But without permission, no one was allowed to take dancing girls to his house. If any well known courtiers wanted to have a virgin, they should first apply to His Majesty and get his permission. In the same way, boys prostituted themselves, and drunkenness and ignorance soon led to bloodshed. Though in some cases capital punishment was inflicted, certain privileged courtiers walked about proudly and insolently doing what they liked.

“His Majesty himself called some of the principal prostitutes and asked them who had deprived them of their virginity. After hearing their replies, some of the principal and most renowned grandees were punished or censured, or confined for a long time in fortresses. Among them His Majesty came across one whose name was Raja Bir Bar, a member of the Divine Faith, who had gone beyond the four degrees and acquired the four cardinal virtues¹. At that time he happened to live in his jagir in the Pargana of Karah, and when he heard of the affair, he applied for permission to turn Jogi, but His Majesty ordered him to come to Court, assuring him that he need not be afraid.

... considered defiling. The

in their opinion is one of the reasons why the world still exists—as something holy. Besides, the Emperor was subject to the influence of the numerous Hindu princesses of the Harem, who had gained so great an ascendancy over him as to make him forswear beef, garlic, onions, and the wearing of a beard,² which things His Majesty still avoids. He had also introduced, though modified by his peculiar views, Hindu customs and heresies into the court assemblies and introduces them still, in order to please and win the Hindus and their castes, he abstained from every thing which they think repugnant to their nature, and looked upon shaving the beard as the highest sign of friendship and affection for him. Hence this custom has become very general. Pandering pimps also expressed the opinion that the beard takes its nourishment from the testicles, for no eunuch had a beard, and one could not exactly see of what merit or importance it was to cultivate a beard. Moreover, former ascetics had looked upon carelessness in letting the beard grow as one way of mortifying one's flesh, because such carelessness exposed them to the reproach of the world, and as, at present, the silly lawyers of the Islām looked upon cutting down the beard as reproachful, it was clear that shaving was now a way of mortifying the flesh, and therefore praiseworthy, but not letting the beard grow. (But if any one considers 'his argument calmly, he will soon detect the fallacy.) Living, cheating Muftis also quoted an unknown tradition, in which it was stated that 'some Qāzīs' of Persia had shaved their beards. But the words ka mā yaf'alū ba'sū 'l qu-at' (as some Qa-īs have done), which occur in this tradition, are based upon a corrupt reading, and should be ka-mā yaf'alū ba'sū 'l cusāt (as some wicked men have done).

¹ Faza'il-i-arbaʿi or the four virtues viz hikmat wisdom, shujaʿat courage, ʿiffat chastity, ʿadilat justice. Books on Akhlaq divide each into several kinds. Compare the above with the cardinal virtues of the ancient justice, prudence, temperance, and fortitude.

² The last three things are inconvenient in kissing.

"The ringing of bells as in use with the Christians, and the showing of the figure of the cross and¹ and other childish playthings of theirs, were daily in practice. The words Kufr shayḥ shūd, or 'heresy became common, express the Tārīkh (985). Ten or twelve years after the commencement of these doings, matters had gone so far that wretches like Mirzā Janī chief of Tattah, and other apostates, wrote their confessions on paper as follows—'I, such a one, son of such a one, have willingly and cheerfully renounced and rejected the Islam in all its phases, whether low or high as I have witnessed it in my ancestors, and have joined the Divine Faith of Shah Akbar, and declare myself willing to sacrifice to him my property and life, my honour and religion'. And these papers—there could be no more effective letters of damnation—were handed over to the Mujtahid (Abū 'I Fazl) of the new Creed, and were considered a source of confidence or promotion. The Heavens might have parted asunder, and earth might have opened her abyss, and the mountains have crumbled to dust!

"In opposition to the Islam, pigs and dogs were no longer looked upon as unclean. A large number of these animals was kept in the Harem, and in the vaults of the castle, and to inspect them daily was considered a religious exercise. The Hindus, who believe in incarnations, said that the boar belonged to the ten forms which God Almighty had once assumed.

"'God is indeed Almighty—but not what they say'

"The saying of some wise men that a dog had ten virtues, and that a man, if he possesses one of them was a saint, was also quoted as a proof. Certain courtiers and friends of His Majesty, who were known for their

¹ The text has o balbalan (*) [ωλλε κυμβαλα Β] kūh lāwāghal : selānast which I do not understand excellence in every department, and proverbial as court poets,¹ used to put dogs on a tablecloth and feed them, whilst other heretical poets, Persians and Hindustānis, followed this example, even taking the tongues of dogs into their own mouths, and then boasting of it

“Tell the Mir that thou hast, within thy skin, a dog and a carcass²

“A dog runs about in front of the house, don't make him a messmate

“The ceremonial ablution after emission of *semen*³ was no longer considered binding, and people quoted as proof that the essence of man was the sperma genitale, which was the origin of good and bad men. It was absurd that voiding urine and excrements should not require ceremonial ablutions, whilst the emission of so tender a fluid should necessitate ablution, it would be far better, if people would first bathe, and then have connexion

“Further, it was absurd to prepare a feast in honour of a dead person, for the corpse was mere matter, and could derive no pleasure from the feast. People should therefore make a grand feast on their birthdays⁴. Such feasts were called Āsh : hayāt, food of life⁵

“The flesh of a wild boar and the tiger was also permitted, because the courage which these two animals possess would be transferred to any one who fed on such meat

“It was also forbidden to marry one's cousins or near relations, because such marriages are destructive of mutual love. Boys were not to marry before the age of 16 nor girls before 14, because the offspring of early marriages was weakly. The wearing of ornaments and silk dresses at the time of prayer was made obligatory⁶

“The prayers of the Islam, the fast, nay even the pilgrimage, were henceforth forbidden. Some bastards, as the son of Mulla Mubarak, a worthy disciple of Shav^{kh} Abū 'l Fazl wrote treatises in order to revile and ridicule our religious practices of course with proofs. His Majesty liked such productions, and promoted the authors

‘The era of the Hijrah was now abolished and a new era was introduced of which the first year was the year of the emperor's accession (963). The months had the same names as at the time of the old Persian kings, and as given in the Nisāb ‘ṣ sibiyan’⁷. Fourteen festivals also were

¹ Fayrī

² I.e. that you are a dog

³ According to the law bathing is required after jumaṣ and ihl lam

⁴ For the poor

⁵ Provisions for the life to come

⁶ The Muhaminadan law enjoins Muslims to go to the Mosques simply dressed. Silk is forbidden. Muhammadans disapprove of our Sunday dresses and pewage

Life p 43 note 1

introduced, corresponding to the feasts of the Zoroastrians, but the feasts of the Musalmāns, and their glory were trodden down, the Friday prayer alone being retained, because some old, decrepit, silly people¹ used to go to it. The new era was called Tārīkh: Ilāhī, or 'Divine Era'. On copper coins and gold muhrs, the era of the Millennium² was used, as indicating that the end of the religion of Muhammad, which was to last one thousand years, was drawing near. Reading and learning Arabic was looked upon as a crime, and Muhammadan law, the exegesis of the Qur'an, and the Tradition, as also those who studied them, were considered bad and deserving of disapproval. Astronomy, philosophy, medicine, mathematics, poetry, history, and novels, were cultivated and thought necessary. Even the letters which are peculiar to the Arabic language, as the ع, ن, ث, س, ح, ص, ط, and ذ, were avoided. Thus for عبدالله Abdullah, and for أحدى Ahadī, عبدالله Abdullah, people wrote عبدالله Abdullah, and for أحدى Ahadī, etc. All this pleased His Majesty. Two verses from the Shāhnāma, which Firdawsī gives as part of a story, were frequently quoted at court—

From eating the flesh of camels and lizards
The Arabs have made such progress,
That they now wish to get hold of the kingdom of Persia
Fie upon Fate! Fie upon Fate!

"Similarly other verses were eagerly seized, if they conveyed a calumny, as the verses from the . . .³ in which the falling out of the teeth of our prophet is alluded to

"In the same manner, every doctrine and command of the Islām, whether special or general, as the prophetship, the harmony of the Islām with reason, the doctrines of Ru'yat, Talkīf, and Takwīn,⁴ the details of the day of resurrection and judgment—all were doubted and ridiculed

¹ The text has an unintelligible sentence
² That is, the word alf (one thousand) was put on the coins. From this passage it would appear that coins with alf on it (vide Marsden, p. 599) were struck about 991
³ The word in the text is Sajardk (?) In an engagement Muhammad lost two of his teeth

⁴ Pu'yat, or didar: Ilāhī, dar jannat the actual seeing of God in Paradise, is a doctrine in high favour with the Sunna. The Shī'ahs say there will be no actual seeing Talkīf A man is called mukallif bi-sh-shar'ī, bound by the law, first, if he belong to the Islām secondly, if he have ṣaql or a sound mind, thirdly, if he have reached bulūgh, i.e., if he be of age
Takwīn means existence between two non existences (ṣadamayā). Thus a present event stands between a past and a future non existence. This, the Islām says, is the case with the world, which will come to an end. But Akbar denied it, as he did not believe in a day of judgment.

And if anyone did object to this mode of arguing, his answer was not accepted. But it is well known how little chance a man has who cites proofs against one who will reject them, especially when his opponent has the power of life and death in his hands, for equality in condition is a sine quâ non in arguing.

A man who will not listen if you bring the Qur^{an} and the Tradition
Can only be replied to by not replying to him.

“Many a family was ruined by these discussions. But perhaps ‘discussions’ is not the correct name—we should call them meetings for arrogance and defamation. People who sold their religion were busy to collect all kinds of exploded errors and brought them to His Majesty, as if they were so many presents. Thus Latif Khwaja who came from a noble family in Turkistan made a frivolous remark on a passage in Tirmizi’s *Shama’il*¹ and asked how in all the world the neck of the Prophet could be compared to the neck of an idol. Other remarks were passed on the straying camel². Some again expressed their astonishment that the Prophet in the beginning of his career, plundered the carvans of Quraysh that he had fourteen wives, that any married woman was no longer to belong to her husband if the Prophet thought her agreeable etc. At night, when there were social assemblies His Majesty told forty courtiers to sit down as ‘The Forty’,³ and every one might say or ask what he liked. If then any one brought up a question connected with law or religion, they said, ‘You had better ask the Mullas about that, as we only settle things which appeal to man’s reason.’ But it is impossible for me to relate the blasphemous remarks which they made about the Sahābah when historical books happened to be read out especially such as contained the reigns of the first three Khālifahs and the quarrel about Fadak, the war of Siffin⁴ etc.—would that I were deaf! The Shi'ahs, of course, gained the day, and the Sunnis were defeated, the good were in fear, and the wicked were secure. Every day a new order was given, and a new aspersion or a new doubt came up; and His Majesty saw in the discomfiture of one party a proof for his own infallibility, entirely forgetful of the proverb, 'Who slanders others, slanders himself'. The ignorant vulgar had nothing on their tongues but 'Allāh Akbar', and they looked upon repeating this phrase, which created so much commotion, as a daily religious exercise. Mullā Sherī, at this time, composed a qit'a of ten verses, in which the following occur

It is madness to believe with the fool that love towards our prophet
Will ever vanish from the earth

I smile, if I think that the following verse, in all its silliness,
Will be repeated at the feast of the rich, and as a prayer by the poor.

'This year the emperor has claimed prophethip,
Next year, if God will, he will be God.'

"At the new year's day feasts, His Majesty forced many of the 'Ulamās and the pious, nay even the Qazis and the Muftī of the realm, to drink wine. And afterwards the Mujtahids of the Divine Faith, especially Fayzī, called out, 'Here is a bumper to the confusion of the lawyers!' On the last day of this feast, when the sun enters the nineteenth degree of Aries (a day called Sharaf 'sh sharaf, and considered particularly holy by His Majesty), the grandees were promoted, or received new jagirs, or horses, or dresses of honour, according to the rules of hospitality, or in proportion of the tribute they had brought'

'In this year Gulbadan Begum [Akbar's aunt] and Salma Sultān Begum returned from a pilgrimage to Makkah. Soon after Shah Abū Turāb also, and I'timād Khan of Gujrat, returned from the pilgrimage, and brought an immense stone with them, which had to be transported on an elephant. The stone contained, according to Abū Turāb, an impression of the foot of the Prophet Akbar—though it is difficult to guess the motive—went four kos to meet it, and the grandees were ordered to carry the stone themselves by turns, and thus it was brought to town."

[P 312]

"In this year, Shaykh Mubārak of Nāgor said in the presence of the emperor to Bir Bar, 'Just as there are interpolations in your holy books, so there are many in ours (Qur'ān), hence it is impossible to trust either'

"Some shameless and ill starved wretches also asked His Majesty, why at the approaching close of the Millennium, he did not make use of the sword 'the most convincing proof,' as Shah Ismaʿil of Persia had done. But His Majesty, at last, was convinced that confidence in him as a leader was a matter of time and good counsel, and did not require the sword. And indeed, if His Majesty, in setting up his claims, and making his innovations, had spent a little money, he would have easily got most of the courtiers, and much more the vulgar, into his devilish nets.

The following Rubaʿī of Nasir i Khusraw was often quoted at court—

I see in 992 two conjunctions,
I see the sign of Mahdī and that of Antichrist
Either politics must change or religion
I clearly see the hidden secret

'At a council meeting for renovating the religion of the empire, Raja Bhagawan said, 'I would willingly believe that Hindūs and Musalmāns have each a bad religion, but only tell us where the new sect is and what opinion they hold so that I may believe.' His Majesty reflected a little, and ceased to urge the Raja. But the alteration of the orders of our glorious faith was continued. The Tārīkh was found in the words Ihdūs i bidʿat the innovation of heresy (990).

"During those days also the public prayers and the azan, which was chanted five times a day for assembly to prayer in the state hall were abolished. Names like Ahnad, Muhammad Mustafa, etc., became offensive to His Majesty, who thereby wished to please the infidels outside, and the princesses inside the Harem till, after some time, those courtiers who had such names, changed them, and names as Yār Muhammad Muhammad Khān, were altered to Rahmat. To call such ill-starred wretches by the name of our blessed prophet would indeed be wrong and there was not only room for improvement by altering their names but it was even necessary to change them, according to the proverb, 'It is wrong to put fine jewels on the neck of a pig.'

"And this destructive fire all broke out in Āgra burnt down great and small families and did not even spare their family tombs—May God forsake these wretches!

[p 315]

"In Rabīʿ's sānī 990, Mir Fathʿallah came from the Dakhīn (vide above, p 31). As he had been an immediate pupil of Mir Ghīyasʿad Dīn Mansur of Shiraz, who had not been overstrict in religious matters, His Majesty thought that Fathʿallah would only be too glad to enter into his religious scheme. But Fathʿallah was such a staunch Shīʿah, and at the same time such a worldly office hunter, and such a worshipper of mammon and of the nobility that he would not give up a jot of the titles of bigoted Shi'ism. Even in the state hall he said, with the greatest composure, his Shi'ah prayers—a thing which no one else would have dared to do. His Majesty, therefore, put him among the class of the bigots, but he connived at his practices, because he thought it desirable to encourage a man of such attainments and practical knowledge. Once the emperor in Fath' 'llah's presence,¹ said to Bir Bar, 'I really wonder how any one in his senses can believe that a man, whose body has a certain weight, could, in the space of a moment, leave his bed, go up to heaven, there have 90,000 conversations with God, and yet on his return find his bed still warm?' So also was the splitting of the moon ridiculed. 'Why,' said His Majesty, lifting up one foot, 'it is really impossible for me to lift up the other foot! What silly stories men will believe!' And that wretch (Bir Bar) and some other wretches—whose names be forgotten—said, 'Yea, we believe! Yea, we trust!' This great foot experiment was repeated over and over again. But Fath' 'llah—His Majesty had been every moment looking at him, because he wanted him to say some thing for he was a new comer—looked straight before himself, and did not utter a syllable, though he was all ear."

Here Bada'oni mentions the translations from Sanscrit into Persian, which have been alluded to above, p 110. It is not quite certain whether the translations were made from Sanscrit or from Hindi translations, or from both. Bada'oni clearly states that for some translations, as at the Atharban, Hindus were used as interpreters. For other works as the Mahabharat, there may have been Hindi translations or extracts, because Akbar himself (vide p 111, note 2) translated passages to Naqib Khān Abū 'l Farī also states that he was assisted by Pandits when writing the fourth book of the Ā'in. Compare Sir H. Elliott's Index to the Historians of India, p 259.

[p 321]

"In these days (991) new orders were given. The killing of animals on certain days was forbidden, as on Sundays, because this day is sacred to the Sun, during the first eighteen days of the month of Farwardin, the whole month of Ābān (the month in which His Majesty was born), and on several other days, to please the Hindus. This order was extended over the whole realm, and capital punishment was inflicted on every one who acted against the command. Many a family was ruined. During the time of these fasts, His Majesty abstained altogether from meat, as a religious penance, gradually extending the several fasts during a year over six months and even more, with the view of eventually discontinuing the use of meat altogether.

¹ As Fath' 'llah was a good mechanic, Akbar thought that by referring to the weight of a man, and the following experiment with his foot, he would induce Fath' 'llah to make a remark on the Prophet's ascension (mi'raj).

"A second order was given that the Sun should be worshipped four times a day, in the morning and evening, and at noon and midnight. His Majesty had also one thousand and one Sanscrit names of the Sun collected, and read them daily, devoutly turning towards the sun, he then used to get hold of both ears, and turning himself quickly round about, used to strike the lower ends of the ears with his fists. He also adopted several other practices connected with sun worship. He used to wear the Hindu mark on his forehead, and ordered the band to play at midnight and at break of day. Mosques and prayer-rooms were changed into store rooms, or given to Hindu Chaukidars. For the word jamā'at (public prayer), His Majesty used the term jima' (copulation), and for hayya 'ala, he said yala'ala talala'

"The cemetery within the town was ordered to be sequestered."

[p 324]

"In the same year (991) His Majesty built outside the town two places for feeding poor Hindus and Muhammadans, one of them being called Khayr pura and the other Dharm-pura. Some of Abul Fazl's people were put in charge of them. They spent His Majesty's money in feeding the poor. As an immense number of Jogis also flocked to this establishment, a third place was built, which got the name of Jogipura. His Majesty also called some of the Jogis and gave them at night private interviews, inquiring into abstruse truths, their articles of faith, their occupations, the influence of pensiveness, their several practices and usages, the power of being absent from the body, or into alchemy, physiognomy, and the power of omnipresence of the soul. His Majesty even learned alchemy, and showed in public some of the gold made by him. Once a year also during a night called Sirat a great meeting was held of all Jogis of the empire, when the emperor ate and drank with the principal Jogis, who promised him that he should live three and four times as long as ordinary men. His Majesty fully believed it, and connecting their promises with other inferences he had drawn, he got quite convinced of it. Fawning court doctors, wisely enough, found proofs for the longevity of the emperor, and said that the cycle of the moon, during which the lives of men are short, was drawing to its close, and that the cycle of Saturn¹ was at hand, with which a new cycle of ages, and consequently the original longevity of mankind would again commence. Thus they said, it was mentioned in some holy books that men used to live up to the age of one thousand years, whilst in Sanscrit books the ages of some men were put down as ten thousand years, and in Thibet there were even now a class of Lamas, or Mongolian devotees, and recluses and hermits, that live two hundred years, and more. For this reason His Majesty, in imitation of the usages of these Lāmas, limited the time he spent in the harem, curtailed his food and drink, but especially abstained from meat. He also shaved the hair of the crown of his head, and let the hairs at the sides grow, because he believed that the soul of perfect beings, at the time of death, passes out by the crown (which is the tenth opening² of the human body) under a noise resembling thunder, which the dying man may look upon as a proof of his happiness and salvation from sin, and as a sign that his soul, by metempsychosis, will pass into the body of some grand and mighty king.

¹ Hayya Cala for Hayya Cala a-salā [the wasf form of salāt]. Come quick to the prayer is a phrase which occurs in the A.ān. Yala'ala talala' is a phrase used by drunkards in the height of mirth.

His Majesty gave his religious system the name of Tawhīd-i Ilāhī, or 'Divine Monotheism.'

He also called, according to the manner of the Jogis, a number of special disciples Chelās (slaves). A lot of vile, swindling wicked birds, who were not admitted to the palace, stood every morning opposite to the window, near which His Majesty used to pray to the sun, and declared they had made vows not to rinse their mouths nor to eat and drink, before they had seen the blessed countenance of the emperor, and every evening there was a regular court assembly of needy Hindus and Muhammadans, all sorts of people, men and women, healthy and sick, a queer gathering, and a most terrible crowd. No sooner had His Majesty finished saying the 1,001 names of the 'Greater Luminary', and stepped out into the balcony, than the whole crowd prostrated themselves. Cheating, thieving Brahmins collected another set of 1,001

¹ Zuhā in Persian Asyūdān Saturn. The wisdom. Nuzūmī says sawād i nasīna ba ic the power of writing. Aswār Sukayli ā dar nuqta-dāni Saturn in wisdom is Abū l Qāsim has the laqab (title) of Shūh of years, over which each of the seven plar during which the ages of men were long people do not attain a very old age I says, In chā shorīst ki dar dawr i qamar m w tūmā in the cycle of the moon?

² See my text edition, fourth book, p. 8 L 9 names of 'His Majesty the Sun', and told the emperor that he was an incarnation like Ram Kṛṣṇa and other infidel kings and though Lord of the world, he had assumed his shape, in order to play with the people of our planet. In order to flatter him, they also brought Sanscrit verses, said to have been taken from the sayings of ancient sages, in which it was predicted that a great conqueror would rise up in India who would honour Brahmīns and cows, and govern the earth with justice. They also wrote this nonsense on old looking paper, and showed it to the emperor who believed every word of it.

"His Majesty once ordered that the Sunnīs should be driven away from the Shīʿahs, when the Hindustanīs, without exception, went to the Sunnī side, and the Persians to the Shīʿah side."

[p 336]

"During this year [992] Mullā Hahdād of Amroha and Mullā Sherī attended at Court in order to flatter the emperor, for they had been appointed to ṣadrshīps in the Duab of the Panjāb. Mullā Sherī presented to His Majesty a poem made by him, entitled Hazār Shuʿāʿ or 'The Thousand Rays', which contained 1,000 qitʿas in praise of the Sun. His Majesty was much pleased."

At the feast of the emperor's accession in 992, numerous conversions took place. [Bad II, p 338]

"They were admitted as disciples in sets of twelve, one set at a time, and declared their willingness to adopt the new principles, and to follow the new religion. Instead of the usual tree,¹ His Majesty gave his likeness, upon which the disciples looked as a symbol of faith and the advancement of virtue and prosperity. They used to wrap it up in cloth studded with jewels, and wore it on the top of their turbans. The phrase 'Allāh Akbar' was ordered to be used as the heading in all writings. Playing with dice, and taking interest, were allowed, and so in fact was everything else admitted which is forbidden in the Islām. A play house was even

¹ Qullalāyn, two large jars containing 1,200 raṭl-s ṣāqī (ṣirāqī pounds) of water. According to the Shīʿahs and the Shāfiʿī sect, water does not become najis or soiled from its being used, provided the quantity of water weigh not less than 1,200 raṭl, or the just been enough that the hand in passing made had for its object

. but of discipleship as etc., ending with their a) is given.

built at Court, and money from the exchequer was lent to the players on interest (vide Second book, Ā'in 15) Interest and shatal (money given at the end of the play to the bystanders) were looked upon as very satisfactory things

"Girls before the age of fourteen, and boys before sixteen, were not to marry, and the story of the marriage night of the Prophet with *Siddīqa*¹ was totally disapproved of. But why should I mention other blasphemies?—May the attention which any one pays to them run away like quicksilver—really I do not know what human ears cannot bear to hear!

"The sins which all prophets are known to have committed, were cited as a reason why people should not believe the words of the prophets. So especially in the case of David² and the story of Uriah. And if any one dared to differ from the belief of these men, he was looked upon as fit to be killed, or as an apostate and everlastingly damned, or he was called a lawyer and enemy of the emperor. But according to the proverb, 'What people sow, that they shall reap,' they themselves became notorious in the whole world as the greatest heretics by their damnable innovations, and 'the infallible' authority got the nickname of *Abū-jahl*³. Yes, 'If the king is bad, the Vizier is worse'. Looking after worldly matters was placed before religious concerns, but of all things, these innovations were the most important, and everything else was accessory.

"In order to direct another blow at the honour of our religion, His Majesty ordered that the stalls of the fancy bāzārs, which are held on New Year's day, should, for a stated time, be given up for the enjoyment of the Begums and the women of the Harem, and also for any other married ladies. On such occasions, His Majesty spent much money, and the important affairs of harem people, marriage contracts, and betrothals of boys and girls, were arranged at such meetings.

"The real object of those who became disciples was to get into office, ¹ Siddīqa is the title of Āyishā, the daughter of Abu Bakr. She was engaged to the Prophet when she was engaged to him.

took place when she was when my mother

my mother

so young she took that even in the caressed her and that she would be

² David count
³ Properly fa
father of wisdom.

and though His Majesty did everything to get this out of their heads he acted very differently in the case of Hindus, of whom he could not get enough, for the Hindus, of course, are indispensable, to them belongs half the army and half the land Neither the Hindustānis nor the Moghuls can point to such grand lords as the Hindus have among themselves But if others than Hindus came, and wished to become disciples at any sacrifice, His Majesty reprov'd or punished them For their honour and zeal he did not care, nor did he notice whether they fell in with his views or not "

[p 340]

" In this year Sultān Khwāja died He also belonged to the elect disciples of His Majesty After burying him, they laid down a new rule They put a grate over his grave in such a manner that the light of the rising sun, which cleanses from all sins, could shine on the face of the corpse People said, they had seen fiery tongues resting over his mouth, but God knows best."

During the month of Safar (the second month of the year) 994, Akbar's troops were defeated by the Yūsuf zā,¹ Badā'onī says (p 350)

" Nearly 8 000 men, perhaps even more, were killed Bir Bar also, who had fled from fear of his life, was slain, and entered the row of the dogs in hell, and thus got something for the abominable deeds he had done during his lifetime During the last night attack, many grandees and persons of renown were killed, as Hasan Khān,¹ and Khwaja Arab paymaster (colonel) of Khān Jahān and Mulla Sheri, the poet, and many others whose names I cannot specify The words *az Khwāja Arab hayf*² express the Tārīkh of the defeat, by one less Hakīm Abū 'l Fazl and Zayn Khān on the 5th Rabi¹ al awwal, reached with their defeated troops the fort of Ātak . But His Majesty cared for the death of no grandee more than for that of Bir Bar He said, ' Alas ! they could not even get his body out of the pass, that it might have been burned ', but at last, he consoled himself with the thought that Bir Bar was now free and independent of all earthly fetters, and as the rays of the sun were sufficient for him, there was no necessity that he should be cleansed by fire "

New orders were given in the beginning of 995 [Page 356]

" No one was to marry more than one wife, except in cases of barrenness, but in all other cases the rule was, ' One God, and one wife ' Women,

¹ Vide List of grandees, Text edition of the Ā'in p 227, No 220 where for Husayn read Hasan In the MSS. of the Ā'in he is called سني or شي My MS of the Ṭabaqāt reads سني اسان Paṭānī Afghān, and calls him a Haḍrī The edition of Badā'onī has wrong سني His biography is not given in the Ma'ānir I Umarā

² The letters give 993, hence one more = 994.

on reaching the limit of their period of fertility, when their courses stop, should no longer wish for the husband. If widows liked to re-marry, they might do so, though this was against the ideas of the Hindus. A Hindu girl, whose husband had died before the marriage was consummated, should not be burnt. If, however, the Hindus thought this a hardship, they should not be prevented (from burning the girl); but then a Hindu widow should take the girl . . . 2

"Again, if disciples meet each other, one should say 'Allāh Akbar', and the other should respond 'Jalla Jallālu h'. These formulas were to take the place of our salām, and the answer to the salām. The beginning of counting Hindu months should be the 28th day, and not the 16th, because the latter was the intention and innovation of Bikramājī. The Hindu feasts, likewise, were to take place in accordance with this rule. But the order was not obeyed, though farmāns to that effect, as early as 900, had been sent to Gujrāt and Bengal.

'Common people should no longer learn Arabic, because such people were generally the cause of much mischief. Cases between Hindus should be decided by learned Brahmīns, and not by Musalmān Qāzīs. If it were necessary to have recourse to oaths they should put heated irons into the hands of the accused, who was guilty if his hands were burnt, but innocent if not, or they should put the hands of the accused into hot, liquid butter, or the accused should jump into water, and if he came to the surface before an arrow had returned to the ground, which had been shot off when the man jumped into the water, he was guilty.

"People should be buried with their heads towards the east and their feet towards the west." His Majesty even commenced to sleep in this position."

[p 363]

"In the same year the prohibition of the study of Arabic was extended to all. People should learn astronomy, mathematics, medicine, and philosophy. The Tārīkh of this order is Fasād-e-fazl (995) . . .

"On the 10th day of Muharram 996, His Majesty had invited the Khan Khanān, and Mān Singh (who had just been appointed governor of Bahār, Hajipur and Patna), and whilst they were drinking, His Majesty commenced to talk about the Divine Faith, in order to test Man Singh. He said without reserve, 'If Your Majesty mean by the

and though His Majesty did everything to get this out of their heads, he acted very differently in the case of Hindus, of whom he could not get enough, for the Hindus, of course, are indispensable, to them belongs half the army and half the land. Neither the Hindūstānis nor the Moghuls can point to such grand lords as the Hindus have among themselves. But if others than Hindus came, and wished to become disciples at any sacrifice, His Majesty reprov'd or punished them. For their honour and zeal he did not care, nor did he notice whether they fell in with his views or not."

[p 340]

"In this year Sultān Khwāja died. He also belonged to the elect disciples of His Majesty. After burying him, they laid down a new rule. They put a grate over his grave in such a manner that the light of the rising sun, which cleanses from all sins, could shine on the face of the corpse. People said, they had seen fiery tongues resting over his mouth, but God knows best."

During the month of Safar (the second month of the year) 994, Akbar's troops were defeated by the Yūsuf zā, is Badā onī says (p 350)

"Nearly 8,000 men, perhaps even more, were killed. Bir Bar also, who had fled from fear of his life, was slain, and entered the row of the dogs in hell, and thus got something for the abominable deeds he had done during his lifetime. During the last night attack, many grandees and persons of renown were killed, as Hasan Khan,¹ and Khwāja Arab, pavmaster (colonel) of Khān Jahan and Mulla Sherī, the poet, and many others whose names I cannot specify. The words *az Khuāja Arab hayf*² express the Tārīkh of the defeat, by one less. Hakim Abū 'l Fazl and Zayn Khān on the 5th Rabi³ l awwal, reached with their defeated troops the fort of Ātak. But His Majesty cared for the death of no grandee more than for that of Bir Bar. He said, 'Alas! they could not even get his body out of the pass, that it might have been burned', but at last, he consoled himself with the thought that Bir Bar was now free and independent of all earthly fetters, and as the rays of the sun were sufficient for him, there was no necessity that he should be cleansed by fire."

New orders were given in the beginning of 995 [Page 356]

"No one was to marry more than one wife, except in cases of barrenness, but in all other cases the rule was, 'One God, and one wife' Women,

¹ The letters give 993, hence one more—994

on reaching the limit of their period of fertility, when their courses stop, should no longer wish for the husband. If widows liked to re marry, they might do so, though this was ¹ against the ideas of the Hindus. A Hindu girl, whose husband had died before the marriage was consummated, should not be burnt. If, however, the Hindus thought this a hardship, they should not be prevented (from burning the girl), but then a Hindu widow should take the girl ²

“Again, if disciples meet each other, one should say ‘Allāh Akbar’, and the other should respond ‘Jallā Jallalu h’ These formulas were to take the place of our salām and the answer to the salām. The beginning of counting Hindu months should be the 28th day, and not the 16th, because the latter was the invention and innovation of Bikramajit. The Hindu feasts, likewise, were to take place in accordance with this rule. But the order was not obeyed, though farmans to that effect, as early as 909, had been sent to Gujrat and Bengal.

“Common people should no longer learn Arabic, because such people were generally the cause of much mischief. Cases between Hindus should be decided by learned Brahmins, and not by Musalman Qāzis. If it were necessary to have recourse to oaths they should put heated irons into the hands of the accused, who was guilty if his hands were burnt, but innocent if not, or they should put the hands of the accused into hot, liquid butter, or the accused should jump into water, and if he came to the surface before an arrow had returned to the ground, which had been shot off when the man jumped into the water, he was guilty.

“People should be buried with their heads towards the east and their feet towards the west ³. His Majesty even commenced to sleep in this position.”

[p 363]

“In the same year the prohibition of the study of Arabic was extended to all. People should learn astronomy, mathematics, medicine, and philosophy. The Tārīkh of this order is Fasād i fazl (995) . . .

“On the 10th day of Muharram 996, His Majesty had invited the Khān Khānan, and Mān Singh (who had just been appointed governor of Bahār, Hajipur and Patna), and whilst they were drinking, His Majesty commenced to talk about the Divine Faith, in order to test Mān Singh. He said without reserve, ‘If Your Majesty mean by th-term of membership, willingness to sacrifice one's life, I have given pretty clear proofs, and Your Majesty might dispense with examining me, but if the term has another meaning, and refers to religion, surely I am a Hindu. And if I am to become a Muhammadan, Your Majesty ought to say so—but besides Hinduism and Islam I know of no other religion.' The emperor then gave up urging him.

¹ The text has was not against the ideas of the Hindus (?).
² The . . . of the whole passage is doubtful. The . . .

"During the month of Şafar 996, Mirza Fulad Beg Barlas managed to get one night Mulla Ahmad of Thathah on some pretext out of his house, and stabbed at him, because the Mulla openly reviled [as Şahs do] the companions of the prophet. The Tārīkh of this event is expressed by the words Zihe khandjar i Fülād, 'Hail steel of Fulad,' or by Khuk i saqarī, 'hellish hog!' And really, when this dog of the age was in his agony, I saw that his face looked just like the head of a pig¹ and others too witnessed it—O God! we take refuge with Thee against the evil which may befall us! His Majesty had Mirza Fulad tied to the foot of an elephant and dragged through the streets of Lahor for when Hakim Abū Fath, at the request of the emperor, had asked the Mirza whether he had stabbed at the Mulla from religious hatred he had said, 'If religious hatred had been my motive, it would have been better to kill a greater one² than the Mulla.' The Hakim reported these words to His Majesty who said, 'This fellow is a scoundrel, he must not be allowed to remain alive,' and ordered his execution, though the people of the harem asked the emperor to spare him for his general bravery and courage. The Mulla outlived the Mirza three or four days. The Şahs at the time of washing his corpse, say that, in conformity with their religion they put a long nail into the anus, and plunged him several times into the river³. After his burial Shaykh Favzi and Shaykh Abul Fazl put guards over his grave, but notwithstanding all precaution during the year His Majesty went to Kashmir, the people of Lahor one night took the hideous corpse of the Mulla from the grave and burned it.'

[pp 375, 376, 380]

'In 999 the flesh of oxen buffaloes goats, horses and camels was forbidden. If a Hindu woman wished to be burnt with her husband they should not prevent her but she should not be forced. Circumcision was

¹ Sunn's assert that this transfiguration into an animal (maskh) happens very often forbidden before the age of twelve, and was then to be left to the will of the boys. If any one was seen eating together with a butcher, he was to lose his hand, or if he belonged to the butcher's relations, the fingers which he used in eating.

"In 1000, the custom of shaving off the beard was introduced."

"In 1002 special orders were given to the lotwāls to carry out Akbar's commands. They will be found in the Third book of the Ā'in, Ā'in 5. The following are new —

"If any of the *darsaniyya*¹ disciples died, whether man or woman, they should hang some uncooked grains and a burnt brick round the neck of the corpse, and throw it into the river, and then they should take out the corpse, and burn it at a place where no water was. But this order is based upon a fundamental rule, which His Majesty indicated, but which I cannot here mention.

"If a woman was older than her husband by twelve years, he should not lie with her, and if a young girl was found running about town, whether veiled or not, or if a woman was bad, or quarrelled with her husband, she should be sent to the quarter of the prostitutes, to do there what she liked."

[p 391]

"At the time of famines and distress, parents were allowed to sell their children, but they might again buy them, if they acquired means to pay their price. Hindus who, when young, had from pressure become Musalmāns, were allowed to go back to the faith of their fathers. No man should be interfered with on account of his religion, and every one should be allowed to change his religion, if he liked. If a Hindu woman fall in love with a Muhammadan, and change her religion, she should be taken from him by force, and be given back to her family. People should not be molested if they wished to build churches and prayer rooms, or idol temples, or fire temples."

[p 398]

"In this year Aqzam Khan returned from Makkah, where he had suffered much harm at the hands of the Sharifs,² and throwing away the blessing which he had derived from the pilgrimage, joined, immediately on his return, the Divine Faith, performing the siyda and following all other rules of discipleship, he cut off his beard, and was very forward at social meetings and in conversation. He learnt the rules of the new faith from the Reverend Master Abū 'l Faḏl, and got Ghāzīpūr and Hājipur as jāgīr "

¹ From darsan for which see p. 165

² This is the title of the rulers of Makkah.

[p 404]

" During the Muharram of 1004, Ṣadr Jahān, muftī of the empire, who had been promoted to a commandership of One Thousand, joined the Divine Faith, as also his two over ambitious sons, and having taken the *Shast*¹ of the new religion, he ran into the net like a fish, and got his Hazārīshīp. He even asked His Majesty what he was to do with his beard, when he was told to let it be. On the same day, Mullā Tūqī of Shushtar² joined, who looks upon himself as the learned of all learned, and is just now engaged in rendering the Shahnama into prose, according to the wishes of the emperor, using the phrase jallā 'azzamatu hu wa 'azzā shānu hu,³ wherever the word Shūn occurs. Among others that joined were Shaykhzāda Gosāla Khan of Banaras, Nalla Shah Muhammad of Shāhabad⁴, and Ṣufī Ahmad, who claimed to belong to the progeny of the famous Muhammad Ghaws. They all accepted the four degrees of faith, and received appointments as Commanders from One Hundred to Five Hundred, gave up their beards agreeably to the rules, and thus looked like the youths in Paradise. The words mu-tarāsh i chand, or 'several shavers', express the tāwīl of this event (1004). The new candidates behaved like Hindus that turn Muhammadan⁵ or like those who are dressed in red clothes, and look in their joy towards their relations who say to them 'My dear little man these rags will be old to morrow, but the Islam will still remain on your neck'. This Ahmad, 'the little Sufi,' is the same who claimed to be the pupil, or rather the perfect successor, of Shaykh Ahmad of Egypt. He said that at the express desire of that religious leader of the age, he had come to India and the Shaykh had frequently told him to assist the Sultan of India, should he commit an error, and lead him back from everlasting damnation. But the opposite was the case "

So far, Badaoni. We have therefore, the following list of members of the Divine Faith. With the exception of Bīr Bar, they are all Muhammadans, but to judge from Badaoni's remarks the number of those that took the Shast must have been much larger.

1 Abū 'l Faḏl

2 Fayzī, his brother, Akbar's court poet

¹ Shast which has been explained on p. 174 also means a fish hook

² Vide List of Grandees Second Book No 352

³ Because Muhammadans use such phrases after the name of God

⁴ Vide p 112 note 3

⁵ That is over zealous

- 3 Shaykh Mubārak, of Nāgor, their father.
- 4 Jaʿfar Beg Āsaf Khān, of Qazwin, a historian and poet
- 5 Qāsim i Kāhī, a poet
- 6 ʿAbd^a 's Samad, Akbar's court-painter, also a poet
- 7 Aʿzam Khān Koka, after his return from Makkah
- 8 Mulla Shāh Muḥammad of Shāhābad, a historian
9. Sūfi Ahmad
- 10 to 12 Sadr Jahān, the crown lawyer, and his two sons
- 13 Mir Sharif of Āmul, Akbar's apostle for Bengal
- 14 Sulṭān Khwāja, a sadr
- 15 Mirzā Janī, chief of Thathah
- 16 Taqī of Shustar, a poet and commander of two hundred
- 17 Shaykhzāda Gosāla of Banāras
- 18 Bīr Bar

Nos 4 to 6 are taken from the Āʿīn, the others are mentioned in the above extracts from Badāonī. The literary element is well represented in the list

The above extracts from Badāonī possess a peculiar value, because they show the rise and progress of Akbar's views, from the first doubt of the correctness of the Islām to its total rejection, and the gradual establishment of a new Faith combining the principal features of Hinduism and the Fireworship of the Pārsis. This value does not attach to the scattered remarks in the Āʿīn, nor to the longer article in the Dabistān.

As the author of the latter work has used Badāonī, it will only be necessary to collect the few remarks which are new.

The following two miracles are connected with Akbar's birth

[Dabistān, p. 390¹]

" Khwāja Masʿūd, son of Khwāja Mahmūd, son of Khwāja *Murshid*² 'l Haqq, who was a gifted Sāhib i ḥāl,² said to the writer of this book, " My father related, he had heard from great saints, that the Lord of the faith and the world 'reveals himself'. I did not know, whether that august personage had appeared, or would appear, till, at last, one night I saw that event, and when I awoke, I suddenly arrived at that place, where the blessed² Lord was born, namely on a Sunday of the month of Rajab of the year 949, the lord Jalāl^a 'd Dīn Akbar, the august son of Humāyūn Padīshah and Hamīda Banū Begum "

The second miracle has been related above, on p. 172, note 2. These two miracles make up the first of the four chapters, into which the author of the Dabistān has divided his article on the "Divine Faith" The second chapter contains religious dialogues, and extracts from Badā'oni, which are rather conjecturally rendered in Shea's Translation The third chapter contains remarks on the worship of the sun and stars, chiefly with reference to the sun worship of the Tātārs¹ The last chapter contains extracts from the third and fifth books of the Ā'in

¹ I vide also Siea and Troyer's English translation of the Dabistān, III, p. 49

² I vide p. 171, note 2.

p 410 "His Majesty also sent money to Irān, to bring to India a wise Zoroastrian of the name of Ardsher"²

p 412 Abū 'l Fazl wrote, as a counterpart to his commentary on the Āyat 'l kursī (p 177), a preface to the translation of the Mahābharat (vide p 111) of two juz

p 413 "When Sultān Khwaja,³ who belonged to the members of the Divine Faith, was near his death, he said that he hoped His Majesty would not have him buried like a mad man He was therefore buried in a grave with a peculiar lamp, and a grate was laid over it, so that the greater luminary, whose light cleanses from all sins, might shine upon him

"Should a Hindu woman fall in love with a Muhammadan, and be converted to the Islām, she would be taken away by force and handed over to her family, but so should also a Musalmān woman, who had fallen in love with a Hindu, be prevented from joining Hinduism"⁴

p 414 "I heard from Mulla Tarson of Badakhshan, who was a Hanafi by sect, that once during the year 1058 he had gone on a pilgrimage to Sikandrah, the burial place of Akbar 'One of my companions,' he said, 'declined to enter the pure mausoleum, and even abused the Representative of God [Akbar] My other companions said, 'If Akbar possesses hidden knowledge, that man will certainly come to grief' Soon after a piece of a broken stone fell down, and crushed his toe"

p 431 "In Multān I saw Shāh Salām 'llah, who has renounced the world, and is a muwahhid (Umtānian) He is very rigid in discipline and avoids the society of men He said, he had often been in company with Jalāl 'd Dīn Akbar, and had heard him frequently say 'Had I

¹ The words in italics are not in Badā'oni The object of the other was evidently to prevent a woman from doing what she liked for according to the Muhammadans, women are looked upon as naqis & Caq!

formerly possessed the knowledge which I now have, I would never have chosen a wife for myself, for upon old women I look as mothers, on women of my age as sisters, and on girls as daughters' A friend of mine said, he had heard Nawāb 'Abd' 'I Hasan called Lashkar Khān of Mashhad, report the same as having been said by Akbar

"Salam" 'Ilāh also said that God's Representative (Akbar) had often wept and said, 'O that my body were larger than all bodies together, so that the people of the world could feed on it without hurting other living animals'

"A sign of the sagacity of this king is this, that he employed in his service people of all classes,¹ Jews, Persians, Tūranis, etc., because one class of people, if employed to the exclusion of others, would cause rebellions, as in the case of the Uzbaks and Qizilbashs (Persians), who used to dethrone their kings. Hence Shah 'Abbas, son of Sultan Khuda banda yī Safawī, imitated the practice of Akbar, and favoured the Gurjis (Georgians). Akbar paid likewise no regard to hereditary power, or genealogy and fame, but favoured those whom he thought to excel in knowledge and manners."

The passages in the Ā'in in which refer to Akbar's religious views are the following — p III, 11, 50, 51, 56, 59, 60, 61, II 20 to 24, Ā'in 26, p 64, p 96, notes 3 and 4, the Sanscrit names being very likely those which were alluded to by Badā'onī, vide above p 189, l 19, p 103, note 3, p 110, note 1, 111-113, p 115, l 4 because the "making of likenesses" is as much forbidden by the Islām as it was interdicted by the Mosaic law, Ā'in 72, p 162, 168, Ā'in 77, p 162, Ā'in 81, p 226. In the Second Book, *Ā'in*s 18, 19, 22-5, in the Third Book, end of Ā'in 1 (Tarikh Ilahī), *Ā'in*s 2, 5, 9, 10, and lastly, the greater part of the Fifth Book.

It will be observed that the remarks on Akbar's religious views do not extend beyond the year 1596, when the greater part of the Ā'in had been completed. Badā'onī's history ends with A H 1004, or A D 1595, but his remarks on Akbar's religion become more and more sparing towards the end, and as subsequent historians, even Jahāngīr in his "Memoirs", are almost entirely silent on the religious ideas of the emperor after 1596 Akbar, in and retained all other living as he had lived

The story related in that edition of Jahāngīr's Memoirs, which has been translated by Major Price that Akbar died as a good Musalmān, and

¹ Vide the notes of Ā'in 30 of the Second Book

repented on his death bed is most untrustworthy as every other particular of that narrative¹

With Akbar's death² the Divine Faith died out. Akbar solely relying on his influence and example had established no priesthood and had appointed no proper person for propagating his faith. If we except the influence which his spirit of toleration exerted the masses had remained passive. Most of the members mentioned on p. 219 had died before Akbar such as were still alive as Sharif of Āmul took again to sophistry, and tried to create sensations under Jahangir³. As Jahangir did not trouble himself about any religion Akbar's spirit of toleration soon changed to indifference and gradually died out when a reaction in favour of bigotry set in under Awrangzeb. But people still talked of the Divine

¹ The story of Akbar's conversions is also repeated in Ephinstone's History

we adopt our mode of religion (p. 64 note 1)

died at midnight

in (140) for the 21st or 22nd day of the month of the 10th Āl in c. 8 days after

The Chah Jalāh 13th July 1605 and Savd Almat eltu of the Jurk refer to the Jal to the gl h Ju al luth a but the word gl is of an unconfound n MSS with gl

Faith in 1643 or 1648, when the author of the Dabistān collected his notes on Akbar's religion.¹

Ā'in 78

THE MUSTER OF ELEPHANTS

The beginning of the musters is made with this animal. The Khāṣa elephants with their furniture and ornaments are the first which are daily brought before His Majesty, namely, ten on the first day of every solar month. After this, the Halqa elephants are mustered, according to their number. On Tuesdays from ten to twenty are mustered. The Bitikchī, during the muster, must be ready to answer any questions as to the name of each animal (there are more than five thousand elephants, each having a different name. His Majesty knows to which section most of the elephants belong—ten elephants form a section of ten (dahā,ī), and are in charge of an experienced officer), as to how each elephant came into the possession of His Majesty, the price, the quantity of food, the age of the animal, where it was born, the period of heat, and the duration of that state each time, the date when an elephant was made khāṣa, its promotion in the halqas, the time when the tusks are cut, how many times His Majesty has mounted it, how many times it was brought for riding out, the time of the last muster, the condition of the keepers, the name of the Amir in charge. For all other elephants eight things are to be reported, viz, the change of its name (?), the repetition of it, its price, how it came into the possession of His Majesty, whether it is fit for riding, or for carrying burdens, its rank, whether it has plain furniture or not, which rank the Fawjdār has assigned to it. The rule is, that every Fawjdār divides his elephants into four classes, separating those that are best from those that are worst, whether they are to remain with him or whether he has to give some to other Fawjdars.

Each day five takwīlī (transferable) elephants are inspected by an experienced man. The following custom is observed. When new elephants arrive for the government, they are handed over in fifties or hundreds to experienced officers, who fix their ranks. Such elephants are called Tahwīlī elephants. When His Majesty inspects them, their rank is finally settled, and the elephants are transferred to the proper sections. Every Sunday one elephant is brought before His Majesty, to be given away as a present to some deserving servant. Several halqas are set apart for this purpose. The rank of the khāsa elephants formerly depended on the number of times they had been inspected by His Majesty, but now their precedence is fixed by the number of times His Majesty has mounted them. In the halqas, the precedence of elephants is determined by the price. When all elephants have been mustered, the khāsa elephants are again examined, ten every day. Then come the elephants of the princes, who mostly march them past themselves. After them come the halqas. As they are arranged in sections according to the price, some elephants have, at every muster, their value either enhanced or lowered, and are then put among their equals. For this reason many Fawjdars are anxious to complete their sets, and place themselves for this purpose in a row at the time of the musters. His Majesty then gives the elephants to whomsoever he likes. If the number of the elephants of any Fawjdār is found correct, some more are put in his charge, for such officers are thought of first. Fawjdārs, whose elephants are found to be lean, are preferred in making up the complements to such as bring less than their original number. Each Fawjdār receives some, provided he musters all his elephants. The Mushrif (accountant) receives orders where to keep the elephants.

¹ Only one of Akbar's innovations—the Sijda was formally abolished by Shahjahan.

The elephants of the grandees also, though not belonging to the fixed establishment, are almost daily brought before His Majesty, who settles their rank, and orders them to be branded with a peculiar mark. Elephants of dealers also are brought before His Majesty, who fixes their rank and value.

Ā'in 79

THE MUSTER OF HORSES

They begin with the stables of forty, then come the stables of the princes, then the khāsa courier horses, then the country bred, and all other stables. When the ten muhr horses have been inspected, they bring the Guts, Qivrāqs, the horses on which the hunting leopards ride, and the Bārgīr horses (vide p 146 l 25, p 143, l 10 from below, and Ā'in 54, p 147). The place of the horses at the musters, is determined by their value, and in the case of horses of the same value, the precedence is determined by the time of service. Before the musters, the horses are inspected by clever officers, who again fix their value, and divide them into three classes. When the rank of a horse has been put higher or lower, it is placed among his proper class fellows. Those horses which belong to the third class, form separate stables, and are given away as presents. If horses have their value raised, they are given over to such keepers as bring to the musters either the full complement of their horses, or at least a complement not more deficient than by two. Incomplete stables are daily filled up during the musters, or if not filled up, they are put in charge of separate keepers. Twenty horses are daily mustered. On Sundays, horses are the first that are mustered. Double the usual number are then inspected. Several horses are also kept in waiting at Court, viz., one from each of the sixty to the forty muhr stables, and one more from each of the thirty to the ten muhr stables. They are given away as presents or as parts of salaries. The precedence at musters of bazār-horses is fixed according to the price. According to the number of horses available, from twenty to a hundred are daily mustered. Before the musters, experienced officers fix the prices, which are generally enhanced at the time of the parades. Horses above thirty muhrs, have their value fixed in the presence of His Majesty. A cash keeper attached to the State hall is entrusted with money, so that horse dealers have not to wait long for payment of their claims. When horses have been bought they are marked with a peculiar brand, so that there may be no fraudulent exchange.

From foresight, and on account of the large profits of the horse-dealers, His Majesty enforces a tax of three rupees for every Ṣirāqī, Mujannas (vide p. 147, note 3), and Arab imported from Kābul and Persia, two and a half rupees for every Turkish and Arabian horse imported from Qandahar, and two from Kabul horses, and Indian Arab bred.

4th in 80

THE MUSTER OF CAMELS

The beginning is made with country bred camels, of which five qatārs are daily inspected. Those pansadīs (officers in charge of five hundred camels) come first who are oldest. The Head Daroghā has the permission to parade before His Majesty a qatār of excellent Bughdīs and Jammāzas. Then come the Bughdīs, and after them the Jammāzas, the Ghurds, the Loks, and all other camels. The commencement of the muster takes place on Fridays on which day double the usual number marches past The precedence of camels is determined by their value

Aⁱⁿ 81

THE MUSTER OF CATTLE

Cattle are mustered according to their value ten vokes daily The muster commences on Wednesdays on which day double the usual number is inspected

On the day of the Diti—an old festival of this country on which the Hindus pray to the cow as they look upon reverence shown to cows as worship—several cows are adorned and brought before His Majesty People are very fond of this custom

Aⁱⁿ 82

THE MUSTER OF MULES

The muster of this beast of burden commence on Thursdays when six gatars are inspected in order of their value Mules are mustered once a year

Formerly all musters took place as above described But now horses are inspected on Sundays camels cows and mules on Mondays the soldiers on Tuesdays on Wednesdays His Majesty transacts matters of finance on Thursdays all judicial matters are settled Fridays His Majesty spends in the Harem on Saturdays the elephants are mustered

Aⁱⁿ 83

THE PAGOSHT REGULATION¹

His Majesty has taught men something new and practical and has made an excellent rule which protects the animal guards the stores

¹ The object of this curious regulation was to determine the amount of the fines which et in a maximum fatness (A) which corresponded to a maximum quantity of food (a) Similarly he determined a fatness (B) resulting from a daily quantity of food (b) though Abul Fazl does not specify how this was done The quantities A B etc of the grain, and the driver for the share of the grass. In the case of oxen used for carriages, the Dārogha is fined for the part of the grass and the grain, but the driver is not liable. In case of heavy carriages, half the fine is remitted.

Ā'in 84

ON ANIMAL FIGHTS REGULATIONS FOR BETTING

His Majesty is desirous of establishing harmony among people of different classes. He wishes to arrange feasts of friendship and union, so that everything may be done with propriety and order. But as all men do not possess a mind capable of selecting that which is true, and as every ear is not fit to listen to wisdom, His Majesty holds social meetings for amusement, to which he invites a large number of people. Through the careful arrangements of His Majesty, the court has been changed from a field of ambitious strife to a temple of a higher world, and the egotism and conceit of men have been directed to the worship of God. Even superficial, worldly people thus learn zeal and attachment, and are induced by these gatherings to inquire after the road of salvation.¹

*Deer*² fights

The manner of fighting of this animal is very interesting, and its method of stooping down and rising up again is a source of great amusement. Hence His Majesty pays much attention to this animal, and has succeeded in training this stubborn and timid creature. One hundred and one deer are khasa, each has a name, and some peculiar qualities. A keeper is placed over every ten. There are three kinds of fighting deer, first, those which fight with such as are born in captivity and with wild ones, secondly such as fight best with tame ones, and thirdly, such as fiercely attack wild deer. The fights are conducted in three different ways. First according to number, the first fighting with the second, the third with the fourth, and so on, for the whole. At the second go, the first fights with the third, the second with the fourth, and so on. If a deer runs away, it is placed last, and if it is known to have run away three times, it ceases to be khāsa. Betting on these fights is allowed, the stake does not exceed 5 dams. Secondly, with those belonging to the princes. Five khāsa pair fight with each other and afterwards, two khāsa pair from His Majesty's hunting ground, then five other khāsa pair. At the same time two pair from the deer park of His Majesty's hunting ground fight, and afterwards five khāsa deer engage with five deer of the eldest prince. Then fourteen khāsa pair engage with each other, and fight afterwards with the deer of the prince, till the fight with the deer of the prince is finished. Upon this, the deer of princes fight with each other, and then khāsa deer. The betting on such fights must not exceed one muhr. Thirdly, with the deer of other people.

¹ To join Akbar a Divine Faith

² The text has dāu which is the Persian name of the chikara (H) the ravine deer of Anglo Indian sportsmen.—P]

His Majesty selects forty two from his nearer friends, and appoints every two of them as opponents, forming thus one and twenty sets. The first winners receive each thirty deer, and all others get one less, so that the last get each eleven. To every set a Mal,¹ a water buffalo, a cow, a guchqār (fighting ram), a goat, and a cock, are given. Fights between cows² and goats are rarely mentioned to have been held in ancient times. Before the fighting commences, two khāsa deer are brought in trimmed up, and are set against two deer belonging to people of various sets. First, with a deer belonging to a powerful grandee, and then the fight takes place before His Majesty. If a general assembly is announced, the fight may also take place, if the deer belongs to a commander of One Thousand. The betting on khāsa deer is eight muhrs, and on deer belonging to one of a set, five muhrs, if it be an Atkal, and four, if an Anīn. As deer have not equal strength and impetuosity of attack, the rule among deer keepers is, once to select each of their deer in turn and take it to the arena. Such deer are called Anīn. Another then estimates its strength, and brings a deer as opponent. The latter is called Atkal. In case of Mals, the betting is five muhrs, for water buffaloes and cocks, four, for cows² and fighting rams, and goats, two. A commander of One Thousand is allowed to bet six muhrs on a khāsa deer, and with one of his own rank,³ $3\frac{1}{2}$ muhrs, if the bet is on an Atkal, and three on an Anīn, and so also in the same proportion on Mals, water buffaloes, and cocks, but on cows,⁴ fighting rams, and goats, two. A commander of Nine Hundred may bet on a khāsa deer 50 rupees, and with one of his own rank, $30\frac{1}{2}$ R on an Atkal, and 25 R on an Anīn, on a Mal $3\frac{1}{2}$ muhrs, on a water buffalo and a cock $3\frac{1}{2}$ M, and on all other animals, $1\frac{1}{2}$ M. A commander of Eight Hundred is allowed to bet 48 R on a khāsa deer, with one of his own rank, 30 R on an Atkal, and 24 R on an Anīn, on a Mal $3\frac{1}{2} M$, on a water buffalo and cock, $2\frac{1}{2} M$, and on other animals as before. A commander of Seven Hundred is allowed to bet $44 R$ on a khāṣa deer, with one of his own rank on an Atkal $27\frac{1}{2} R$, on an Anīn $22 R$, on a Mal $3 M$, on other animals as before. A commander of Six Hundred may bet $40 R$ on a khāṣa deer, with one of his own rank $25 R$ on an Atkal, $20 R$ on an Anīn, on other animals as before. A commander of Five Hundred may bet $4 M$ [$36 R$] on a khāṣa deer, with one of his own rank $2\frac{1}{2} M$ on an Atkal, and $2 M$ on an Anīn, on other animals, as the preceding. A commander of Four Hundred may bet $34 R$ on a khāṣa deer, with one of his own rank $21\frac{1}{2} R$ on an Atkal, $17 R$ on an Anīn, on a Mal $2\frac{1}{2} M$, on a water buffalo and cock, $2 M$, on a cow, a fighting ram, and goat, $1 M$. A commander of Three Hundred may bet $30 R$ on a khāṣa deer, with one of his own rank, $18\frac{1}{2} R$ on an Atkal, $15 R$ on an Anīn, $2\frac{1}{2} M$ on a Mal, on other animals as the preceding. A commander of Two Hundred may bet $24 R$ on a khāṣa deer, with one of his own rank $15 R$ on an Atkal, $12 R$ on an Anīn, and on other animals as before. A commander of One Hundred may bet $2 M$ on a khāṣa deer, with one of his own rank $1\frac{1}{2} M$ on an Atkal, $1 M$ on an Anīn, and on other animals as before. A commander of Eighty may bet $16 R$ on a khāṣa deer, with one of his own rank $10 R$ on an Atkal, $8 R$ on an Anīn, $17 R$ on a Mal, $1\frac{1}{2} M$ on a water buffalo and a cock, on other animals as before. A commander of Forty may bet $12 R$ on a khāṣa deer, with one of his own rank $7\frac{1}{2} R$ on an Atkal, $6 R$ on an Anīn, on other animals as before. A commander of Twenty may bet $10 R$ on a khāṣa deer, $6\frac{1}{2} R$ with one of his own rank on an Atkal, $5 R$ on an Anīn, on other animals as before. A commander of Ten may bet $8 R$ on a khāṣa deer, and $5 R$ on an Atkal, with one of his own rank, $4 R$ on an Anīn, on other animals as before. People who hold no mansabs, bet $4 R$ on a khāṣa deer, with one of their own rank $2\frac{1}{2} R$ on an Atkal, $2 R$ on an Anīn, $15 R$ on a Mal, on other animals as before.

¹ Mal

But if the opponent hold a less rank, the amount of the bet is determined according to the amount which the opponent is allowed to bet on an Anīn. When the last pair comes, the betting is everywhere on the deer. A fourth part of what people take from each other in Mal fights, is given to the victorious wrestler. The presents which His Majesty makes on such occasions have no limits.

The rule is that every one of such as keep animals brings on the fourteenth night of the moon one deer to the fight. The Bitikchī of this department appoints half the number of deer as Anīns, and the other half as Atkals. He then writes the names of the Atkals on paper slips, folds them up, and takes them to His Majesty, who takes up one. The animal chosen has to fight with an Anin. As such nights are clear, fights are generally announced for that time.

Besides, there are two other classes of deer, kotal and half kotal. The number of each is fixed. As often the number of khāsa deer decreases, the deficiency is made up from the kotal deer, and the deficiency in the number of lotals is made up from *half kotal*s. One pair of lotals also is brought to the fight, so that they may be tried. Hunters supply continually wild deer, and bring them to His Majesty, who fixes the price. A fat superior deer costs 2 M, a thin superior one, 1 M to 15 R, a fat middling one, 12 R, Do lean, 8 R, a third class fat one, 7 R, Do thin, 5 R, a fourth class fat one, 4 R, Do lean, 2 to 2½ R.

Deer are kept and fed as follows. Khāsa deer selected for fighting before His Majesty, get 2 s grain, ½ s boiled flour, ½ s butter and 1 d for grass. Such as are kept on His Majesty's hunting-grounds lotals, and fighting deer of the sets, get 1½ s of grain, and flour and butter as before. The grass is supplied by each amateur himself. All khāsa, home-bred, kotal deer, and those of His Majesty's hunting ground, have each one keeper. The fighting deer of the sets have one keeper for every two, the single last one has a keeper for itself. Nothing is given for grass. Deer which are given to people to have them fattened get 1½ s grain, and ½ d for grass. They have one keeper for every four, but one for every two if they are fit to become khāsa. Some deer are also sent to other towns, they get 1½ s grain, and have each one keeper. If deer are newly caught, they get no regular food for seven days, after which they get ½ s of grain for a fortnight. They then get 1 s and when one month is over, 1½ s.

In the deer park, Mansabdars, Ahadis and other soldiers are on staff employ. The pay of foot-soldiers varies from 80 to 400 d.

His Majesty has 12 000 deer, they are divided into different classes, and proper regulations are made for each of them. There is also a stud for deer, in which new results are obtained. A large female gets 1½ s grain and ½ d for grass. A new born deer drinks the milk of the dam for two months, which is reckoned as equivalent to ¼ s of grain. Afterwards, every second month, the allowance is increased by a quarter ser of grain, so that after a period of two years, it gets the same as its dam. For grass, ¼ d is given from the seventh to the tenth month. Young males also get weaned after two months, when they get ¾ s of grain, which is increased by that quantity every second month, so that, after two years, they get 2¼ s. From the fifth to the eighth month they get ½ d for grass, after which period they get ¼ d for grass.

I have given a short description of animal fights as announced for general assemblies His Majesty announces them also for day time, but as often a more important act of worship is to be performed, he announces them for the night Or else His Majesty thinks of God, and seeks for wisdom in self-examination, he cares neither for cold nor heat, he spends the time which others idle away in sleep, for the welfare of the people, and prefers labour to comfort

A^cin 85

ON BUILDINGS

Regulations for house building in general are necessary, they are required for the comfort of the army, and are a source of splendour for the government People that are attached to the world will collect in towns without which there would be no progress Hence His Majesty plans splendid edifices, and dresses the work of his mind and heart in the garment of stone and clay Thus mighty fortresses have been raised, which protect the timid, frighten the rebellious, and please the obedient Delightful villas, and imposing towers have also been built They afford excellent protection against cold and rain, provide for the comforts of the princesses of the Harem, and are conducive to that dignity which is so necessary for worldly power

Everywhere also Sarā,¹⁸ have been built, which are the comfort of travellers and the asylum of poor strangers Many tanks and wells are being dug for the benefit of men and the improvement of the soil Schools and places of worship are being founded, and the triumphal arch of knowledge is newly adorned

His Majesty has inquired into every detail connected with this depart-men

A^cin 86

THE PRICES OF BUILDING MATERIAL, ETC

Many people are desirous of building houses, but honesty and conscientiousness are rare, especially among traders His Majesty has carefully inquired into their profits and losses, and has fixed the prices of articles in such a manner, that both parties are satisfied

Red sandstone costs 3 d per man It is obtainable in the hills of Fathpūr Sikri, His Majesty's residence, and may be broken from the rocks at any length or breadth Clever workmen chisel it so skilfully, as no turner could do with wood, and their works vie with the picture book of Mānī [the great painter of the Sassanides] Pieces of red sandstone (sang 1 gulūla), broken from the rocks in any shape, are sold by the pharī, which means a heap of such stones, without admixture of earth 3 gaz long, 2½ g broad and 1 g high Such a heap contains 172 mans, and has a value of 250 d, i.e. at the rate of 1 d 11¼ j per man

*Bricks*¹ are of three kinds, burnt, half burnt, unburnt Though the first kind are generally made very heavy, they weigh in the average three *ser*s and cost 30 d per thousand The second class cost 24 d, and the third 10 d per thousand

Wood Eight kinds of wood are in general use 1 Sīsān,² unrivalled for its beauty and durability A block 1 Ilāhī gaz long, and 8 Tāssūj broad and high, costs 15 d 6 j But if the height be only 5 or 6 T, 11 d 10¼ j Other sizes according to the same proportion 2 Nāzhū, called in Hindi *Jidh*³ A beam, 10 T broad and high, costs per gaz 5 d 13¾ j, and a half size beam from 7 to 9 T broad and high, costs per gaz 5 d 3¾ j 3 Dasung (?) called in Hindi *Karī*⁴, a beam 3 T broad and 4 gaz long costs 5 d 17½ j 4 Ber,⁵ 1 T broad and high, 4 gaz long, 5 d 17¾ j, so also Tut, or Mulberry 5 Mughlān (Babūl) of the same cubic contents as No 4, 5 d 2 j 6 Sirs, size as before, 10 d 4 j 7 Dayāl, same size, first quality 8 d 22¼ j, second quality, 8 d 6½ j 8 Bakāym, same size, 5 d 2 j

Gaj-i shūrīn, or sweet limestone There is a quarry near Bahrah When a merchant brings it, it costs 1 R per three mans, but if any one sends his own carriers, only 1 d. Qal'ī yi sangīn, per man 5 d 5 j Sadafī 5 d Ohūna, or quicklime, 2 d per man, it is mostly boiled out of kangur, a kind of solid earth resembling stone in hardness

Iron cramps, if tinned, 13 for 18 d, plain ones 4 or 6 d

Iron door knockers, from Persia and Tūrān tinned, large ones, 8 d per pair, small ones, 4 d Indian do, tinned, 5½ d, plain ones, 4 d 12 j

Gul mekh (large nails with broad heads), 12 d per ser Dīnārīn nails,

[¹ Kāshī in text. In modern Persian this word means a sun dried brick as opposed to ājur, a kiln burnt brick.—P]

[² In Platt's sizō—P]

³ This word is spelt Chidh in *Ā*² in 80 No. 59

[⁴ Karī—P]

⁵ "The Ber was in great request in Akbar's time as a building timber but is now little used, except for kingposts and tiebeams as the direct cohesion of its fibres is equal to that of Salwood' Balfour's Timber Trees of India

d per ser Goga, or small nails, tinned, first quality 7 d for one hundred, second quality, 5 d, smallest, 4 d

Screws and nuts, chiefly used for doors and boxes Tinned, 12 d per ser, plain, 4 d

Rings, tinned, 6 d per ser, plain, 4 d

Khaprel, or tiles They are one hand long and ten fingers broad, are burnt, and are used for the roofs of houses, as a protection against heat and cold Plain ones 86 d per thousand, enamelled, 30 d for ten

Qulba, or spouts, to lead off water Three for 2 d

Bās, or bamboo It is used for spears First quality, 15 d for twenty pieces, second quality, 12 d for do, third quality, 10 d for do The price of some kinds of bamboo is much higher Thus a peculiar kind is sold at 8 Ashrafīs [muhrs] per piece They are used for making thrones¹

Bamboo, at a rupee per piece, is common Patal, is made of the reed which is used for *qalam*s (pens) It is used for covering ceilings First quality, cleaned, 1½ d per square gaz, second quality, 1 d Sometimes they sell patal at 2 d for pieces 2 gaz long and 1½ g broad Sirkī is made of very fine qalam reeds, looks well, and is very smooth, it is sold at the rate of 1½ d per pair, 1½ g long and 16 girihs broad The ceilings and walls of houses are adorned with it

*Khas*² is the sweet smelling root of a kind of grass which grows along the banks of rivers During summer, they make screens of it, which are placed before the door and sprinkled with water This renders the air cool and perfumed Price 1½ R per man

Kāh & *chappar*³ (reeds for thatching) is sold in bundles, which are called in Hindi pula, per ser from 100 to 10 d

Bhus, or wheat straw, used for mixing with mortar, 3 d per man

Kāh & dabh, straw, etc, which is put on roofs, 4 d for a load of 2 mans

Mūnj, the bark of qalam reeds used for making ropes to fasten the thatching, 20 d per man

*San*⁴ is a plant Peasants mix it with quicklime People also make ropes of it for well buckets, etc, 3 d per man

Gum, of an inferior quantity, is mixed with quicklime 70 d per man

Sirīsh & lāhī, or reed glue, is mixed with sweet limestone, 4 d per ser

Iul is the flower bunch of the reed which is used for matting People burn it and use it as a candle It is also mixed with quicklime and qalāsi Price 1 R per man

[¹ کاس —P]

[² Or Hindi khas khas —P]

[³ For chhappar, H —P]

[⁴ San H, hemp, flax ? —P]

Simḡil (silver clay) is a white and greasy clay, 1 d per man. It is used for white washing houses. It keeps a house cool and looks well. Gil surkh, or red clay, called in Hindi, gerū,¹ 40 d per man. There is a quarry of it in the hills of Gwāh,ār.

Glass is used for windows, price, 1 R for 1½ s or one pane for 4 d.

A*in 87.

ON THE WAGE OF LABOURERS

Gilkārs (workers in lime), first class workmen, 7 d, second class, 6 d, third class, 5 d.

Sang-tarāsh (stone masons). The tracer gets 6 e for each gaz, one who does plain work, 5 d. A labourer employed in quarries gets for every man he breaks, 22 j.

Carpenters, first class, 7 d, second do, 6 d, third do, 4 d, fourth do, 3 d, fifth do, 2 d. For plain job work, a first class carpenter gets 1 d 17 j for one gaz, second class do, 1 d 6 j, third class do, 21 j.

Pinjara sāz (lattice worker and wicker worker). First, when the pieces are joined (fastened with strings), and the interstices be dodecagonal, 24 d for every square gaz, when the interstices form twelve circles, 22 d, when hexagonal, 18 d, when jaṣfarī [or rhombus like, one diagonal being vertical, the other horizontal], 16 d, when shatranjī [or square fields, as on a chess board], 12 d for every square gaz.

Secondly, when the work is ghayr wastī (the sticks not being fastened with strings, but skilfully and tightly interwoven), for first class work, 48 d per square gaz, for second class do, 40 d.

Arra kash (one who saws beams). For job work, per square gaz 2½ d, if sīsanū wood, if nāzhū wood, 2 d. A labourer employed for the day, 2 d. There are three men for every saw, one above, two below.

Bildārs (bricklayers),² first class, daily 3½ d, second class do, 3 d. If employed by the job, for building fortress walls with battlements, 4 d per gaz, for laying foundations, 2½ d, for all other walls, 2 d. For digging ditches, ½ d per gaz.

The gaz of a labourer contains 32 tassuj.

Chāh kan, or well-diggers, first class workmen, 2 d per gaz, second class do, 1½ d, third class, 1½ d.

[¹ Geru H. Armenian bole.—P.]

[² Bel dār a digger, a pioneer.—P.]

Ghota khur, or divers They clean wells In the cold season, 4 d per diem, in the hot season, 3 d By the job 2 R for cleaning a depth of 1 gaz

Khisht¹ tarāsh or tile makers for 100 moulds, smoothened, 8 d

Surkhī kob (pounders of old bricks), 1½ d for a heap of 8 mans

Glass-cutters, 100 d per gaz

Bamboo-cutters, 2 d per diem

Chappar-band,² or thatchers, 3 d per diem, if done by the job, 24 d for 100 gaz

Patal-band (vide p 234), 1 d for 4 gaz

Lakhīra They varnish reeds, etc, with lac Wages, 2 d per diem

Ābkash, or water-carriers First class, 3 d per diem, second class do, 2 d Such water carriers as are used for furnishing house builders with water for mortar and quicklime, get 2 d per diem

Ā'in 88

ON ESTIMATES OF HOUSE BUILDING

Stonebuildings For 12 gaz, one pharī (vide above Ā'in 86) is required; also 75 mans of chūna, but if the walls be covered with red stone, 30 mans of chūna are required per gaz

Brickbuildings For every gaz there are required 250 bricks of three ser each, 8 mans chūna, and 2 m 27 s pounded brick (surkhī)

Claybuildings 300 bricks are required for the same, each brick-mould contains 1 s of earth and ¼ s of water

Astarkārī work For every gaz, 1 man chūna, 10 s galvī, 14 s surkhī, and ½ s san (vide p 234) are required

Ṣandalakārī work For every gaz, 7 s of galvī, and 3 s surkhī are required

Safidkārī work 10 s of galvī are required per gaz

Gaykārī work (white-washing) For walls and ceilings, 10 s per gaz, for pantries, 6 s, chimneys, 10 s

Windows require 24 s of lime, 2½ s of glass, 4 s of srīsh & kāhī (putty)

Plaster for walls, for 14 gaz 1 m of straw, and 20 m earth, for roofs and floors, do for 10 gaz For ceilings, and the inside of walls, do for 15 gaz

Lac (varnish work) used for *chighs*³ [sliced bamboo sticks, placed

[¹ See note 1 to Ā'in 86.—P]

[² Chappar band.—P]

[³ Chīy Y, f.—P]

horizontally, and joined by strings, with narrow interstices between the sticks They are painted, and are used as screens] If red, 4 s of lac, and 1 s of vermilion, if yellow, 4 s of lac, 1 s of zarnīkh (auripigment) If green, $\frac{1}{2}$ s of indigo is mixed with the lac, and zarnīkh is added, if black, 4 s of lac and 8 s of indigo

Ā'in 89

RULES FOR ESTIMATING THE LOSS IN WOOD CHIPS¹

One gaz = 24 ṭassūj

1 ṭassūj = 24 ṭiswānsa

1 ṭiswānsa = 24 khām

1 khām = 24 zarra

Whatever quantity of wood be used, the chippings (?) are reckoned at one eighth (?) In Sūsā wood, per ṭassūj, 26 $\frac{1}{2}$ sers 15 tānks, Babūl wood, 23 $\frac{1}{2}$ s 5 d., Sirs wood, 21 $\frac{1}{2}$ s 15 tānks, Nāzhū wood, 20 s, Ber wood, 18 $\frac{1}{2}$ s, Dayāl wood, 17 s 20 tānks

Ā'in 90

THE WEIGHT OF DIFFERENT KINDS OF WOOD

His Majesty, from his practical knowledge, has for several reasons experimented on the weight of different kinds of wood, and has thus adorned the market place of the world One cubic gaz of dry wood of every kind has been weighed, and their differences have thus been established Khanjak wood has been found to be the heaviest, and Safīdār the lightest wood I shall mention 72 kinds of wood

The weight of one cubic gaz of

		Mans	Sera	Tanka,
1	Khanjak	18	27	14 —
2.	Ambli (Tamarindus indica)		24	8 $\frac{1}{2}$ 25
3	Zaytūn (Gyrocarpus asiaticus ² ?)		21	24 —
4	Balūt (Oak)
5	Kher (Acacia catechu)		21	16 —
6	Khirnī (Mimusops)
7	Parsiddh		20	14 17
8	Ābnūs (Ebony)		20	9 20

¹ I am not sure whether this Ā'in has been correctly translated

² So according to Watson's Index. But Voigt, in his Hortus Bengalensis says the wood of Zaytūn, or Gyrocarpus, is very light, and is used for boats. Abu l Fa'iz puts Zaytūn among the heaviest woods.

	Mac	Sers	Tanks
9 Sain (Acacia suma)	19	32	10
0 Baqam (Caesalpinia sappan)	19	22½	10
11 Kharhar	19	11½	5
12 Mahwa (Bassia latifolia)	18	32½	2
13 Chandani	18	20½	10
14 Phulahı
15 Red Sandal in Hindi Rakt Chandan (Pterocarpus santalinus)	18	4½	10
16 Chamrı	18	2	7½
17 Chamar Mamrı	17	16½	—
18 Unnab (Zı yphus sativus)	17	5	4
19 Sısaü Patang (vide No 40)	17	1½	7
20 Sandan	17	1	28
21 Shamshad (Buzus sempervirens)	16	18	25
22 Dhau (Grislea tomentosa)	16	1	10
23 Āmla Hind Ānwlah (Fmblica officinalis)	16	1½	1
24 Karıl (Sterculia fetida)	16	1	10
25 Şandal	15	17	20
26 Sal (Shorea robusta)	15	4½	7
27 Banaus His Majesty calls this tree Shah Ālu but in Kabul and Persian it is called Ālu Balu ¹ (Cherry)	14	36½	10
28 Kailas ² (Cherry tree)	14	35½	—
29 Nımb (ı adıralkhta ındica)	14	32½	31
30 Darhard (Berberis aristata)	14	32½	19
31 Main	14	22½	—
32 Babul (Acacia arabica)
33 Sagaun	14	10	20
34 Bijaysar	13	34	—
35 Pılu
36 Mulberry	13	28½	15
37 Dı aman	13	25	20
38. Hau Baras	13	10	29
39 Sırs (Acacia odoratissima)	12	38	21
40 Sısaü (Dilbergia sıssoo vide No 19)	12	34½	5
41 Finduq	12	26	4

[¹ Ālu Balu is a sour dark cherry — F]

[² G. Jı in Pers a and Kashmir is a sweet cherry — F]

		Mans	Sers	Tanks
42	Chhaukar	}	12	17½	22
43	Duddhi		12	13½	32
44	Haldi		12	12½	30
45	Kaim (Nauclea parviflora)	}	12	8	20
46	Jaman (Jambosa)		12	3¼	5
47	Garas		11	29	—
48	Bar (Ficus indica)	}	11	9¼	17
49	Khandu		11	4	—
50	Chanar ¹		11	2	20
51	Charmaghz (Walnut tree)	}	10	20	—
52	Champa (Michelia champaca)		10	19½	22
53	Ber (Zizyphus jujuba)		10	10¼	21
54	Āmb (Mango Mangifera indica)	}	10	7½	34
55	Papari (Ulmus)		10	7	30
56	D yar (Cedrus deodar)		9	31	—
57	Bed (Willow)	}	8	25	20
58	Kunbhīr (Gunbhīr (?) gmelina arborea)		8	19¼	25
59	Chidh (Pinus longifolia)		8	13	34
60	Pīpal The Brahmīns worship this tree (Ficus religiosa)	}	8	9	30
61	Kathal (Jacktree Artocarpus integrifolia)		8	9	20
62	Gurdain		7	7	31
63	Ruhera (Terminalia bellerica)	}	6	7	22½
64	Palas (Butea frondosa)
65	Surkh Bed
66	Āk (Calotropis gigantea)
67	Senbal (Cotton tree)
68	Bakayin (Melea composita)
69	Lahsora (Cordia mixta)
70	Padmakh (Cerasus cuproniana)
71	And
72	Safidar

In the above weights the ser has been taken at 28 dams

[¹ Chandr the Plane—P]

BOOK SECOND.

THE ARMY.

A^cin 1

THE DIVISIONS OF THE ARMY

His Majesty guides the Imperial Army by his excellent advice and counsel, and checks in various ways attempts at insubordination. He has divided the army, on account of the multitude of the men, into several classes, and has thereby secured the peace of the country.

With some tribes, His Majesty is content, if they submit, he does not exact much service from them, and thus leads many wild races towards civilization.

The Zamindars of the country furnish more than four million, four hundred thousand men, as shall be detailed below (Third Book).

Some troopers are compelled by His Majesty to mark their horses with the Imperial brand. They are subject to divisions into ranks, and to musters.

Some soldiers are placed under the care and guidance of one commander. They are called Ahadis, because they are fit for a harmonious unity. His Majesty believes them capable of commanding, and appoints them as commanders.

A large number are worthy but poor, they receive the means of keeping a horse, and have lands assigned to themselves, without being obliged to mark their horses with the Imperial brand. Turanis and Persians get 25 Rupees, and Hindustanis, 20 R. If employed to collect the revenue, they get 15 R. Such troopers are called Baraucardi.

Some commanders, who find it troublesome to furnish men, get a number of such soldiers as accept the Imperial brand. Such troops are called Dakhilis.

In the contingent of a commander (mansabdār) of Ten Thousand, other mansabdars as high as Hazaris (commanders of One Thousand) serve, in the contingent of a commander of Eight Thousand, Mansabdars up to Hashtsadis (commanders of Eight Hundred) serve, in the contingent of a commander of Seven Thousand, Mansabdars up to Haftsadis (commanders of Seven Hundred) serve, in the contingent of a commander of Five Thousand, other Mansabdars as high as Panṣādīs (commanders of Five Hundred) serve, and in the contingent of a Pansādī, Mansabdars as high as Sādīs (commanders of One Hundred) serve. Mansabdars of lower ranks do not serve in the contingents of high Mansabdars.

Some commanders also receive auxiliaries. Such reserves are called Kumakīs.

At the present time, those troopers are preferred whose horses are marked with the Imperial brand. This class of soldiers is superior to others. His Majesty's chief object is to prevent the soldiers from borrowing horses (for the time of musters) or exchanging them for worse ones, and to make them take care of the Imperial horses, for he knows that avarice makes men so short sighted that they look upon a loss as a gain. In the beginning of the present reign, when His Majesty was still "behind the veil", many of his servants were given to dishonest practices, lived without check, and indulged, from want of honour, in the comforts of married life¹. Low, avaricious men sold their horses, and were content to serve as foot soldiers, or brought instead of a superior horse, a *tātū*² that looked more like an ass. They were magniloquent in their dishonesty and greediness of pay, and even expressed dissatisfaction, or rebelled. Hence His Majesty had to introduce the Descriptive Roll System, and to make the issue of pay dependent upon the inspection of these rolls (vide below Ā⁴ in 7). This stopped, in a short time, much lawlessness, and regenerated the whole military system. But at that time the regulations regarding the Imperial brand were not issued, as His Majesty had adopted the advice of some inexperienced men, who look upon branding an animal as an act of cruelty, hence avaricious men (who cannot distinguish that which is good from that which is bad, having neither respect for themselves nor their master, and who think to promote a cause by ruining it, thus acting against their own interest) adopted other vicious practices, which led to a considerable want of efficiency in the army. Horse borrowing was then the order of the day. His Majesty, therefore, made the branding of the horses compulsory, in addition to the Descriptive Roll System. Easy minded idlers thus passed through a school of discipline and became worthy men, whilst importunate, low men were taught honourableness and manliness. The unfeeling and avaricious learned the luxury of magnanimity. The army resembled a newly irrigated garden. Even for the Treasury the new regulations proved beneficial. Such are the results which wisdom and practical knowledge can produce! Branding a horse may indeed inflict pain, but when viewed from a higher point, it is the cause of much satisfaction to the thinking man.

[¹ In text مهر گسته بهار زمینی — P]

[² For tātū H. pony — P]

Ā'in 2

ON THE ANIMALS OF THE ARMY

In the 18th year of his reign, His Majesty introduced the branding system [vide p 147, note 2]. The ranks of the men were also laid down in the best manner, and the classification of the animals belonging to the army was attended to. The requirements for each were noted down, and excellent regulations were issued. The maximum and minimum prices were inquired into by His Majesty, and average prices were fixed. A proper check by accounts was enforced, and regulations on this subject were laid down. The Bakhshis were also freed from the heavy responsibility of bringing new men, and everything went on smoothly.

1 Horses. They have been divided into seven classes. The rate of their daily food has also been fixed. These seven classes are Arabs, Persian horses, Mujannas, Turki horses, Yabūs, Tāzīs, and Jangla horses.

The first class are either Arab bred, or resemble them in gracefulness and prowess. They cost 720 dāms per mensem, and get daily 6 s of grain (the price of which, in the estimates for each animal, is put down at 12 d per man), 2½ d of ghī, 2 d for sugar, and 3 d for grass. Also, for a jul, artak, yālposh, girth¹ (His Majesty does not call it tang, but a farākhī),¹ gaddī nakhtaband,² gayza (which the vulgar pronounces gāyza), magas sān, curry-comb, hattī (a bag made of horse hair for washing the horse), towel, pāy band, nails, etc [vide p 144] 70 d per mensem, which outlay is called khari-yarāq-asp (outlay for the harness of the horse). Besides, 60 d for the saddle, and an apchī (?) every second month, 7 d per mensem for shoes, and 63 d for a groom, who gets double this allowance if he takes charge of two horses. Total, 479 d. But as His Majesty cares for the comfort of the army, and inquires into the satisfactory condition of the soldiers, he increased, in the very beginning, this allowance of 479 d by 81 d, and when the value of the Rupee was increased from 35 to 40 dāms, His Majesty granted a second additional allowance of 80 d. This coin [the Rupee] is always counted at 40 d in salaries. Afterwards a third additional allowance of 2 R (80 d) was ordered to be given for each class of horses, except Janglas, which horses are nowadays entirely left out in the accounts

[¹ Tang is girth, but farākhī is a body roller not a girth.—P]

[² Nakhta-band for nukhtā-band headstall?—P]

The second class are horses bred in Persia,¹ or such as resemble Persian² horses in shape and bearing. Monthly allowance, 680 d. Of this, 458 d are necessary expenses, being 21 d less than the former, viz, 10 d for the yarāq, 10 d for saddle and bridle, and 1 d for shoes. The first increase which was given amounted to 67 d, the second to 75 d, the third to 80 d. Total 680 d.

The third class, or Muyannas horses, resemble Persian horses [vide p. 147, note 3], and are mostly Turki, or Persian geldings³. Monthly cost 560 d. Of this, 358 d are for necessaries. The allowance for these horses is 100 d less than the preceding, viz, 30 d less for sugar, 30 d less for saddle, bridle, etc., 15 d less in ghī, 3 d less for the groom, 2 d less for shoeing. First increase sanctioned by His Majesty, 72 d, second, 50 d, third, 80 d.

The fourth class are horses imported from Turān, though strong and well formed, they do not come up to the preceding. Monthly allowance, 480 d. Of this, 298 d are for necessaries. The allowance is 60 d less than for Muyannas horses, viz, 30 d less for sugar, 30 d less for grass, 10 d less for the yarāq, 4 d less for the saddle, bridle, etc., 2 d less for shoeing, 2 d less for ghī. But the daily allowance of grain was increased by 2 sers (which amounts to 18 d per mensem), as the sugar had been left out. First increase, 52 d, second, 50 d, third, 80 d.

The fifth class (yābū horses) are bred in this country, but fall short in strength and size. Their performances also are mostly bad. They are the offspring of Turki horses with an inferior breed. Monthly cost 400 d. Of this, 239 d are for necessaries. The allowance is 59 d less than the preceding, viz, 28 d for ghī, 15 d less for the groom, 10 d less for the yarāq, and 6 d less for the saddle, bridle, etc. First increase, 41 d, second increase, 40 d, third 80 d.

The last two classes also are mostly Indian breed. The best kind is called Tāzī, the middling Janglas, the inferior ones, *Tatū*⁴.

Good mares are reckoned as Tāzīs, if not, they are counted as Janglas.
1 Tāzī. Monthly cost, 320 d, of which 188 d are for necessaries. The allowance is 51 d less than for the Yābū, viz, 18 d less for grain, as they only get 6 sers per diem, 15 d less for grass, 10 d less for ghī and sugar, 8 d less for yarāq. First increase 22 d, second, 30 d, third, 80 d.

[¹ Ḥīrāq i ḤAjām.—P.]

[² Ḥīrāq horses.—P.]

[³ Ḥidāh does not mean gelding but of mixed breed.—P.]

[⁴ For ḥāḥ H.—P.]

2 Jangla Monthly cost, 240 d, of which 145½ d are for necessaries. The allowance is 42½ d less than for Tāzīs. The daily allowance of grain has been fixed at 5 seers. Hence there are 15 d less for grass, 9 d less for grain, 6 d less for ghī and molasses, 1 4½ d less for the yarāq, 2 d less for shoeing. First increase 29½ d, second, 25 d, third, 40 d.

Formerly mules were reckoned as Tāzī horses, but nowadays, as Jangla

For *Tatus*² the monthly expenditure is 160 d, but this animal is now altogether thrown out.

Note by the Translator We may arrange Abu l Faḥl's items in a tabular form. From several remarks in Badr-ol-ni, we may conclude that the horses of the Imperial army were mostly fourth and sixth class horses. The exportation of horses from Hindūstan was strictly prohibited by Akbar who made the kotwals responsible for it vide Bad. II p. 390 l. 5 from below. Many recruits on joining the contingent of a Manṣabdar brought horses with them for which the Manṣabdar received from the treasury an allowance according to the following table —

	I	II	III	IV	V	VI	VII	VIII
	Arabs	Persian Horses	Mujannas Horses	Fuki Horses	Yabus	Tāzīs	Janglahs	Tātūs
Grain						54 d	45 d
Ghī						10 d	4 d
Suge						10 d	4 d
Grass						45 d	30 d	Not
Yaraq	70 d	60 d	40 d	30 d	20 d	12 d	7½ d	spec. fied
Saddle &c	60 d	50 d	20 d	16 d	10 d	10 d	10 d
Shoes	7 d	6 d	4 d	2 d	2 d	2 d	—
Groom	63 d	63 d	60 d	60 d	45 d	45 d	45 d
Original Allowance	479 d	408 d	358 d	298 d	239 d	188 d	145½ d
1st Increase	81 d	67 d	72 d	52 d	41 d	22 d	29½ d	Not
2nd D tto	80 d	75 d	30 d	30 d	40 d	30 d	30 d	spec. fied
3rd D tto	80 d	80 d	80 d	80 d	80 d	80 d	40 d
Total monthly cost in dams	790 d	680 d	660 d	480 d	400 d	320 d	240 d	160 d

The allowance of sugar or molasses according to Abu l Faḥl ceases from Class IV but as he goes on mentioning it in the inferior classes, I have made brackets. Ghī and molasses were generally given together vide p. 142.

[¹ Qand + siyah is probably gur. H—P.]

[² See footnote 4 p. 244—P.]

3 Elephants The branded elephants of the army are divided into seven classes Mast, Shergīr, Sāda, Manjhola, Karha, Phandurkiya, and Mokal, elephants, but there are no subdivisions, as in His Majesty's elephant stables [vide p 131, l 27]

The monthly allowance for Mast elephants is 1,320 dāms [33 Rupees] Daily allowance of grain, $2\frac{1}{2}$ māns No elephant has more than three servants, a Mahāwat, a Bho,ī, and a Meth, of whom the first gets 120 d, and the two last 90 d An increase of 120 d was given From the beginning, elephants were branded, but now certain differences are made

Shergīr elephants Monthly cost, 1,100 d, which is 220 d less than the former Grain, 2 m per diem, which makes 180 d less per mensem, also 15 d less for the Mahāwat and the Bho,ī His Majesty increased the allowance by 110 d

Sāda elephants Monthly cost, 800 d, which is 300 d less than the preceding Grain $1\frac{1}{2}$ m per diem, which gives 180 d less per month Besides 30 d less for the Meth, and 15 d less for the Mahāwat and the Bho,ī An increase of 50 d was sanctioned

Manjhola elephants Monthly cost, 600 d Grain 1 m The decrease is the same as in the preceding, but an additional allowance of 90 d was sanctioned

Karha elephants Monthly cost, 420 d, grain, 30 s Hence there is a decrease of 30 d on this account, and of 15 d for the Mahāwat No Bho,ī is allowed The additional grant is 60 d

Phandurkiya elephants Monthly cost, 300 d Grain, 15 s per diem, which gives a decrease of 135 d per mensem Only one servant is allowed at 60 d per month An additional grant of 105 d was sanctioned

Mokal elephants were formerly not counted Now they are considered worthy of entering the classes Monthly allowance, 280 d

In all payments on account of elephants, dāms are taken, not rupees, so that there is no possibility of fluctuation

4 Camels Monthly cost, 240 d Grain 6 s, grass, 1 d, furniture, 20 d, the driver, 60 d An addition of 58 d was sanctioned, and when the value of the Rupee was fixed at 40 dāms, 20 d more were allowed

5 Oxen Monthly allowance, 120 d Grain, 4 s, grass, 1 d, furniture, 6 d Additional grant, 38 d At the time when the value of the rupee was raised, 10 d more were given

6 Oxen for the waggons For each waggon, the monthly expenditure is 600 d, viz 480 d for four oxen, 120 d for grease, repairs, and additional comforts

Elephants and waggons are only allowed to Manşabdârs, and to those who bring good horses and camels, and middling oxen to be branded

Ā. in 3

THE MANSABDĀRS ¹

Wise inquirers follow out the same principles, and the people of the present age do not differ in opinion from those of ancient times. They all agree that if that which is numerous be not pervaded by a principle of harmony, the dust of disturbances will not settle down, and the troubles of lawlessness will not cease to rise. It is so with the elements, as long as the unifying principle is absent, they are dead, and incapable of exhibiting the wonders of the kingdoms of nature. Even animals form unions among themselves, and avoid wilful violence, hence they live comfortably and watch over their advantages and disadvantages. But men, from the wickedness of their passions, stand much more in need of a just leader round whom they may rally, in fact, their social existence depends upon their being ruled by a monarch, for the extraordinary wickedness of men and their inclination to that which is evil teach their passions and lusts new ways of perversity, and even cause them to look upon committing bloodshed and doing harm as a religious command ². To disperse this cloud of ignorance, God chooses one, whom he guides with perfect help and daily increasing favour. That man will quell the strife among men by his experience, intrepidity, and magnanimity, and thus infuse into them new vigour.

But as the strength of one man is scarcely adequate to such an arduous

¹ The Arabians say mansab in Persia and India the word is pronounced mansab. It means a post, an office hence mansabdar an officer, but the word is generally restricted to high officials.

madans for converting with the sword. This, he said, was inhuman. And yet, he allowed the suttee undertaking, he selects, guided by the light of his knowledge, some excellent men to help him, appointing at the same time servants for them. For this cause did His Majesty establish the ranks of the Mansabdars, from the Dahbāshī (Commander of Ten) to the Dah Hazārī (Commander of Ten Thousand), limiting, however, all commands above Five Thousand to his august sons.

The deep-sighted saw a sign and inquirers got a hint from above when they found the value of the letters of God's holy name,¹ they read in it glad tidings for the present illustrious reign and considered it a most auspicious omen. The number of Mansabs is sixty six, the same as the value of the letters in the name of Allāh, which is an announcement of eternal bliss.

In selecting his officers His Majesty is assisted by his knowledge of the spirit of the age, a knowledge which sheds a peculiar light on the jewel of his wisdom. His Majesty sees through some men at the first glance,² and confers upon them high rank. Sometimes he increases the mansab of a servant, but decreases his contingent. He also fixes the number of the beasts of burden. The monthly grants made to the Mansabdars vary according to the condition of their contingents. An officer whose contingent comes up to his mansab, is put into the first class of his rank, if his contingent is one half and upwards of the fixed number, he is put into the second class, the third class contains those contingents which are still less, as is shown in the table below.

Yūzbāshīs (Commanders of One Hundred) are of eleven classes. The first class contains such as furnish one hundred troopers. Their monthly salary is 700 Rupees. The eleventh class contains such as have no troops of their own, in accordance with the statement made above, that Dakhīlī troops are nowadays preferred. This class gets 500 Rupees. The nine intermediate classes have monthly allowances decreasing from 700 Rupees by 20 Rupees for every ten troopers which they furnish less.

In the live stock accounts of the Du bistīs, the fixed number of Turkī and Jangla horses, and of elephants, is not enforced. For Commanders of Thirty and Twenty, four horses are reckoned generally Mujannas, rarely

¹ Jaldlāh. This curious word is according to Bahar i Ajām an abbreviation of the phrase Jalāl jaldlū-h "May His glory shine forth." It is then used in the sense of God, thus the dual jaldlatayn saying Allāh! Allāh!; and khāt-m-i jaldla saying the word Allāh 125 000 times. Similarly here the 66 mansabs correspond to the value of the letters of Jaldlāh, i.e. $41 = 1 + 30 + 30 + 5 = 66$. Abū i Fazl makes much of the coincidence for Akbar's name was Jaldlū d Dīn and Akbar was a divinity. Perhaps I should not say coincidence because of the sixty six mansabs only one half existed.

² Abū i Fazl often praises Akbar as a good physiognomist. Badaonī says Akbar learnt the art from the Jogis.

Yābūs, and Dahbāshīs are excused the Turkī horse, though their salaries remain as before

NOTE BY THE TRANSLATOR ON THE MANŠABS

The sixty six Mansabs, detailed by Abū 'l Fazl in the following table, appear to be the result of a minute classification rather than a representation of the Mansabs which actually existed at the time of Akbar. The table may represent Akbar's plan, but the list of grandees, as given by Abū 'l Fazl himself in the 30th Ā'in of this Book only mentions thirty-three—the three commands of the three Princes from 10,000 to 7,000; and thirty commands of the Mansabdārs, namely commands of 5,000, 4,500, 4,000, 3,500, 3,000, 2,500, 2,000, 1,500, 1,250, 1,000, 900 ?, 800, 700, 600, 500, 400, 350, 300 ?, 250, 200, 150, 120, 100, 80, 60, 50, 40, 30, 20, 10 On the last thirty commands, two are somewhat doubtful (the commands of 900 and 300), as not given in all MSS. of the Ā'in, though the List of Grandees of Shāh Jahān's time (Pādīshāhnāma, II, p 717) mentions a command of 900 It does not specify a command of 300, because no Mansabs under 500 are enumerated in that list.

Abū 'l-Fazl specifies below the names of all of Akbar's Commanders up to the Mansabdārs of 500, he then gives the names of the Commanders of 500 to 200, who were living, when he made the list Of the Commands below 200, he merely gives the numbers of those that were alive, viz .— of Commanders of

150	53
120	1
100 (Yūzbāshīs)	250
80	91
60	204
50	16
40	260
30	39
20	250
10	224

in all, 1,388 commanders from 150 to 10 The number of the higher Mansabdārs from 5,000 to 200 is 412, of which about 150 may have been dead, when Abū 'l Fazl made his list

As Abū 'l Fazl's List (Ā'in 30), according to the testimony of Nizām 'l Ĥarawī is a complete list¹ it is certain that of the 66 Manšabs of the following table, only 33 existed in reality. The first eighteen of these 33 are commands down to 500, which corresponds to the List of Shāh-jahān's grantees in the Pādīshāhnāma, which likewise gives 18 commands to 500.

The commands as detailed in the Pādīshāhnāma are —Four commands of the princes (Dārā Shikoh, 20,000, Shāh Shujāʿ, 15,000, Aurangzeb, 15,000, Murād Baksh, 12,000) and commands of 9,000, 7,000, 6,000, 5,000, 4,000, 3,000, 2,500, 2,000, 1,500, 1,000, 900, 800, 700, 600, 500.

From the fact that Abū 'l Fazl only gives names up to commanders of 200, and the Pādīshāhnāma up to 500, we may conclude that, at Akbar's time, Mansabs under 200, and at Shāh-jahān's time, Mansabs under 500, did not entitle the holder to the title of Amīr. To judge from Nizām's Ṭabaqāt and the Maʿāsir : Rahīmī, Mansabdārs from the Hazāri (Commander of 1,000) were, at Akbar's time, styled umarāʾ : kībār, or umarā : ʿizām, great Amīrs, and I am not quite sure whether the title of Amīr is not restricted to Mansabdārs from the Hazāris upwards. Nizām does restrict his phrases ba-martaba yī ʿimārat rasīd, or dar jarga (or silk, or zumra)-yī umarā muntaẓim gashī, to commanders from Hazāris.

The title Amīr * 'l-umarā (the Amīr of the Amīrs, principal Amīr), which from its meaning would seem to be applicable to one at the time, seems to have been held by several simultaneously. Nizām gives his title to Adham Khān, Khizr Khwāja Khān, Mir Muhammad Khān Atkah, Muzaffar Khān, Qutb 'd Dīn Muhammad Khān, and to the three commanders in chief, Bayrām Khān, Munʿim Khān, and Mirzā 'Abd 'r Raḥīm, the three latter being styled Khān Khānān ¹ or Khān Khānān o Sipahsālār.

In the Pādīshāhnāma, however, the title of Amīr * 'l Umarā is restricted to the first living grandee ('Alī Mardān Khān).

It is noticeable that Nizām only mentions commanders of 5,000, 4,000, 3,000, 2,500, 2,000, 1,500, and 1,000—for lower Mansabs he does not specify names. Abū 'l Fazl gives three intermediate Mansabs of 4,500, 3,500, and 1,250, but as he only gives five names for these three ranks we may conclude that these Mansabs were unusual. This agrees also with the salaries of the commanders, for if we leave out the commands of 4,500, 3,500 and 1,250, we have, according to Ā'in 30, twelve steps from 5,000 to 500 and the monthly salary of a commander of 500 (Rs 2,500) is the twelfth part of the salary of a commander of 5,000 (Rs 30,000). The Pādīshāhnāma gives fourteen steps between the commanders of 7,000 and 500, and fixes the salary of a commander of 7,000 at one kror of dāms per annum, or 250,000 Rs, stating at the same time that the salaries decrease in proportion. The Persian Dictionary, entitled Gh̄iyās 'l lughāt, states that the salary of a commander of 5,000 is one kror, or 250,000 Rs, and that the salary of a Pansadī, or commander of 500, is 20,000 Rs per annum, the $12\frac{1}{2}$ th part of the former.

¹ For Khān : Khānān the Khān of the Khāns. In such titles the Persian Izfat is left out.

It would thus appear that the salaries of the Mansabdārs, as given by Abū 'l Fazl in the following table, are somewhat higher than those given in the Pādīshāhnāma and the Gh̄iyās, whatever may have been the source of the latter.

The salaries appear to be unusually high, but they would be considerably reduced if each Mansabdār had to keep up the establishment of horses, elephants, camels, carts, etc., which Abū 'l Fazl specifies for each rank. Taking the preceding Ā'in and the table in the note as a guide, the establishment of horses, etc., mentioned in the following table, would amount, for a commander of 5,000 (monthly salary 30,000 R) to 10,637 R.

1,000 (" " 8,200 R) to 3,015½ R

100 (" " 700 R) to 313 R

The three classes which Abū 'l Fazl mentions for each Mansab differ very slightly, and cannot refer to p 249, l 23.

A commander of 5,000 was not necessarily at the head of a contingent of 5,000 men. In fact, the numbers rarely even approach the number expressed by the title of a Mansabdār. Thus Nizām says of Todar Mall and Qutb 'd Dīn Muhammad Khān, as if it was something worth mentioning, that the former had 4,000 cavalry, and the latter 5,000 naukars, or servants, i.e., soldiers, though Todar Mall was a commander of 4,000 (Nizām says 5,000), and Qutb 'd Dīn a commander of 5,000. Of 'Abdul majīd Āsaf Khān, a commander of 3,000 (vide Ā'in 30, No 49), Nizām says, "he reached a point when he had 20,000." In the Pādīshāhnāma, where more details are given regarding the number of men under each commander, we find that of the 115 commanders of 500 under Shāhjahān, only six had contingents of 500, whilst the last had only 50 troopers. This also explains the use of the word زات zāt after the titles of Mansabdars, as panj hazārī yī zāt sihhazār suwār, "a commander of 5,000, personally (zāt, or by rank), and in actual command of 3,000 cavalry." Sometimes we meet with another phrase, the meaning of which will be explained below, as Shāyista Khān panj hazārī, panj hazār suwār-i duaspā sihaspī, "Shāyista Khān, a commander of 5,000, contingent 5,000 cavalry, with two horses, with three horses." A trooper is called duaspa, if he has two horses, and sahaspa, if three, in order to change horses during elqhārs or forced marches. But keeping duaspa sahaspa troopers was a distinction, as in the Pādīshāhnāma only the senior Manṣabdārs of some ranks are so designated, viz., 8 (out of 20) Panjhazārīs, 1 Chahārhazārī, 2 Sihhazārī, 2 Duhazārī, 2 Hazār o pañsādī; 1 Hazārī, and 1 Haftesādī.

The higher Manṣabdārs were mostly governors of Ṣūbas. The governors were at first called sipahsālārs, towards the end of Akbar's reign we find them called Hākīms, and afterwards Sāhib Ṣūbah, or Ṣūbah-dārs, and still later merely Ṣūbas. The other Manṣabdārs held Jāgīrs, which after the times of Akbar were frequently changed. The Manṣabdārs are also called ta'īnāliyān (appointed), whilst the troops of their contingents are called tābīnāt (followers),¹ hence tābīnbāshī, the Manṣabdār himself, or his Bakhshī (pay master, colonel).

The contingents of the Manṣabdārs, which formed the greater part of the army, were mustered at stated times, and paid from the general or the local treasuries, vide Ā'īns 6, 7, 8. Akbar had much trouble with these musters, as fraudulent practices were quite common. The reform of the army dates from the time when Shāhbāz Khān (vide pp 148, 197) was appointed Mīr Bakhshī. The following passage from Badā'onī (II, p 190) is interesting —

"The whole country, with the exception of the Khālīṣa lands (domains), was held by the Amīrs as jāgīr, and as they were wicked and rebellious, and spent large sums on their stores and workshops, and amassed wealth, they had no leisure to look after the troops or take an interest in the people. In cases of emergency, they came themselves with some of their slaves and Moghul attendants to the scene of the war, but really useful soldiers there were none. Shāhbāz Khān,² the Mīr Bakhshī, introduced the custom and rule of the dāgh o mahallī, which had been the rule of 'Ala' 'd Dīn Khuljī,³ and afterwards the law under Sher Shāh. It was settled that every Amīr should commence as a commander of twenty (bīsī), and be ready with his followers to mount guard and ,⁴ as had been ordered, and when, according to the rule, he had brought the horses of his twenty troopers to be branded, he was then to be made a Sadī, or commander of 100 or more. They were likewise to keep elephants, horses, and camels, in proportion to their Mansabs, according to the same rule. When they had brought to the musters their new contingent complete they were to be promoted according to their merits and circumstances to the post of Hazārī, Duhazārī, and even Panjhazārī, which is the highest Mansab, but if they did not do well at the musters they were to be put down. But notwithstanding this new regulation, the condition of the soldiers got worse, because the Amirs did what they liked, for they put most of their own servants and mounted attendants into soldiers' clothes (libās-i sipahī), brought them to the musters, and performed everything according to their duties. But when they got their jagirs, they gave leave to their mounted attendants, and when a new emergency arose, they mustered as many 'borrowed' soldiers as were required, and sent them away again, when they had served their purpose. Hence while the income and expenditure of the Mansabdar remained in statu quo, 'dust fell into the platter of the helpless soldier,' so much so, that he was no longer fit for anything. But from all sides there came a lot of low tradespeople, weavers, and cotton-cleaners (naddaf), carpenters, and greengrocers, Hindu and Musalman, and brought borrowed horses, got them branded, and were appointed to a Mansab, or were made Krorīs (vide p 13, l 7 from below), or Ahadis, or Dakhīls to some one (vide p 231), and when a few days afterwards no trace was to be found of the imaginary horse and the visionary saddle, they had to perform their duties on foot. Many times it happened at the musters, before the emperor himself in the Diwān khāna-yi khāṣṣ, that they were weighed in their clothes, with their hands and feet tied, when they were found to weigh from 2½ to 3 man, more or less (¹) and after inquiry, it was found that all were hired and that their very clothes and saddles were borrowed articles. His Majesty then used to say, 'With my eyes thus open I must give these men pay, that they may have something to live on.' After some time had passed away, His Majesty divided the Ahadis into du aspa, yakaspa (having one horse), and nīmaspa (having half a share in a horse), in which latter case two troopers kept one horse together, and shared the stipulated salary, which amounted to six rupees ¹.

¹ مستاران, pl. of مستار, from مستار the Indian pronunciation of تا'ین.

Weigh well these facts, but put no question!

These were things of daily occurrence, ² but notwithstanding

¹ So according to one MS. The passage is not quite clear.

² Here follows a sentence which I do not know how to translate.

all this, His Majesty's good luck overcame all enemies, so that large numbers of soldiers were not so very necessary, and the Amirs had no longer to suffer from the inconvenient reluctance of their servants "

Hence the repeated musters which Akbar held, both of men and of animals, carts, etc., the minuteness of some of the regulations recorded in the Ā'in, and the heavy fines imposed on neglectful servants (pp 226-7, note) The carefulness with which Akbar entered into details (laqrat), in order to understand the whole (wahdat)—an unusual thing for rulers of former times—is the secret of his success ¹

We have not sufficient data to form an exact estimate of the strength of Akbar's army We may, however, quote a statement in the Pādīshāhnāma regarding the strength of Shāhjahān's army, vide Pādīshāhn II, p 715

"The paid army of the present reign consists of 200,000 cavalry, according to the rule of branding the fourth part, as has been mentioned above This is exclusive of the soldiers that are allowed to the Fawjdars, Kroris, and tax collectors, for the administration of the Parganas These 200 000 cavalry are made up as follows —

8,000 Mansabdars

7,000 mounted Ahadī and mounted Barqandāz

185,000 cavalry, consisting of the contingents (tābīnān) of the princes, the chief grandees, and the other Mansabdārs

"Besides these 200,000 cavalry, there are 40,000 foot, musketeers, artillery, and rocket bearers Of these 40 000, 10 000 accompany the emperor, and the remaining 30,000 ² are in the subas and the forts "

The "Rule of branding the fourth part" is described among the events of the year 1056 as follows (II, p 506) —

"The following law was made during the present reign (Shāhjahān) If a Mansabdar holds a jagir in the same sūba, in which he holds his mansab, he has to muster one third of the force indicated by his rank ³ Accordingly a Sī Hazārī yī zāt sih hazār suwār (a commander of 3,000, personal rank, contingent 3 000 cavalry) has to muster (bring to the brand) 1 000 cavalry But if he holds an appointment in another sūba, he has only to muster a fourth part Accordingly, a Chahār hazārī chahār hazār suwār (a commander of 4 000, contingent, 4,000) has only to muster 1,000 cavalry

¹ Vide p 11, note

² The edition of the Pādīshāhnāma has wrongly 3 000

³ Laterally he has to bring his followers (troopers) to the brand (daqrh) according to the third part

“ At the time the Imperial army was ordered to take Balkh and Samarqand [1055], His Majesty, on account of the distance of those countries, gave the order that as long as the expedition should last, each Mansabdār should only muster one fifth. Accordingly a Panjhazārī panj hazār suwār (a commander of 5,000, contingent, 5,000) mustered only 1,000, viz., 300 sihaspa troopers, 600 du-aspa troopers, 100 yak-aspa troopers [i.e., 1,000 men with 2,200 horses], provided the income (hāṣīl) of his jagir was fixed at 12 months, or 250 sihaspa troopers, 500 du-aspa troopers, and 250 yak aspa troopers [i.e., 1,000 men with 2,000 horses] provided the income of his jagir was fixed at 11 months, or 800 du-aspa troopers, and 200 yak aspa troopers [i.e., 1,000 men and 1,800 horses], if the income of his jagir was fixed at 10 months, or 600 du-aspa troopers and 400 yak aspa, if at 9 months, or 450 du-aspa and 550 yak-aspa troopers, if at 8 months, or 250 du aspa and 750 yak aspa troopers, if at 7 months, or 100 du-aspa and 900 yak-aspa troopers, if at 6 months, or 1,000 yak aspa, if at 5 months.

‘ But if the troopers to a mansab had all been fixed as si-aspa du aspa [in other words, if the commander was not a Panj hazārī, panj hazār suwār, but a Panj hazārī panj hazār suwār i du aspa si aspa] he musters, as his proportion of duaspa and sihaspa troopers, double the number which he would have to muster, if his mansab had been as in the preceding. Accordingly, a Panj hazārī panj hazār tamām du-aspa si aspa (a commander of 5,000, contingent only du-aspa and si-aspa) would muster 600 troopers with three horses, 1,200 troopers with two horses, and 200 troopers with one horse each [i.e., 2,000 men with 4,400 horses], provided the income of his jagir be fixed at 12 months and so on.”

From this important passage, it is clear that one fourth of that number of troopers, which is indicated by the title of a Mansabdār, was the average strength of the contingents at the time of Shahjahān. Thus if a commander of 1,000 troopers had the title of Hazārī hazār suwār, the strength of his contingent was $\frac{1,000}{4} = 250$ men with 650 horses, viz., 75 si aspa, 150 du-aspa and 25 yak aspa, and if his title was Hazārī hazār suwār-i du aspa si aspa, the strength of his contingent was 500 men with 1,300 horses viz., 150 si-aspa, 300 du aspa, and 50 yak aspa, if the income of his jagir was drawn by him for every month of the year. The above passage also indicates that the proportions of si-aspa, and du aspa, and yak aspa troopers was for all mansabs as 300 600 100, or as 3 6 1.

As the author of the Padīshāhnāma does not mention the restriction as to the number of months for which the Mansabdārs drew the income, we may assume that the difference in strength of the contingents mentioned after the name of each grandee depended on the value of their jāgirs

From an incidental remark (Pādīshāhnāma, I, p 113), we see that the pay of a commander of sihaspa du-aspa troopers was double the pay allowed to a commander of yak aspas. This agrees with the fact that the former had double the number of men and horses of the latter

The strength also of Āwrangzeb's army, on a statement by Bernier, was conjectured to have been 200,000 cavalry, vide Elphinstone's History, second edition, p 546, last line

Akbar's army must have been smaller. It is impossible to compute the strength of the contingents, which was continually fluctuating, and depended rather on emergencies. We can, however, guess at the strength of Akbar's standing army. At the end of Ā'in 30, Abū 'l Fazl states that there were alive at the time he wrote the Ā'in

250 Commanders of 100 (Yūzbāshīs)

204 " " 60 "

260 " " 40 "

250 " " 20 "

224 " " 10 "

As these numbers are very uniform, the regular army could not have been larger than 250×100 , or 25,000 men (troopers, musketeers, and artillery). The Imperial stables contained 12,000 horses (vide p 132, l 6 from below) which were under the immediate charge of Mirzā 'Abd' r Rahīm Khān Khānān, Akbar's Commander in Chief. Hence there may have been about 12,000 standing cavalry. The rest were matchlock-bearers and artillery. In Ā'in 6, Abū 'l Fazl states that there were 12,000 matchlock bearers. The number of Ahadīs, of which Shāhjahān had 7,000, cannot have been very large. Many of them were on staff employ in the various offices, store-houses, Imperial workshops, others were employed as adjutants and carriers of important orders. They were, at Akbar's time, gentlemen rather than common soldiers, as they had to buy their own horse on joining. Badā'onī mentions an Ahadī of the name of Khwaja Ibrahim Husayn as one of his friends (II, p 394). The number of Mansabdars, which under Shāhjahān amounted to 8,000, was also much less. Of the 415 Mansabdars whose names are given in Ā'in 30, about 150 were dead when Abū 'l Fazl wrote it,¹ so that there would be about

¹ It is not stated in Nizām al-Tabaqāt which does not go beyond

Table showing the Establishments and Salaries of the Manşabdârs¹

Number.	COM- MANDERS OF	HORSES.					ELEPHANTS.					BEASTS OF BURDEN AND CARTS.			MONTHLY SALARIES
		Siraqi.	Mujanna.	Turki.	Yâbo.	Tâzi.	Jangla.	Sbergir.	Sâda.	Manhola.	Karha.	Phandurkiya.	Qatâre of Camels.	Qatâre of Mules.	Carts.	Classes.
																1st Rs.	2nd Rs.	3rd Rs.
1	10,000	68	68	136	136	136	136	40	60	40	40	20	160	40	320	50,000	—	—
2	8,000	54	54	108	108	108	108	35	50	36	34	15	130	34	260	50,000	—	—
3	7,000	49	49	98	98	98	98	30	42	20	27	12	110	27	220	45,000	—	—
4	5,000	34	34	68	68	68	68	20	30	20	20	10	80	20	160	30,000	29,000	28,000
5	200
6
7
8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30 31 32
33 34 35
36 37
38
39 40
41 42
43
44
45
46
47 48
49

¹ For differences in reading I must refer the reader to my Text edition, p. 185.

Number	COM MANDERS OF	HORSES						ELEPHANTS					BEASTS OF BURDEN AND CARTS			MONTHLY SALARIES
		Giraj	Mujannas	Turaj	Yabu	Tazi	Jangla	Sbergir	Sida	Manjholo	Karba	Pbandurkya	Qatara of Camels	Qatara of Mules	Carts	Classes
																1st Rs	2nd Rs	3rd Rs
50	500	4	6	8	8	4	—	—	—	—	—	10	—	15	2 500	2 300	2,100
51	400	3	4	5	5	—	—	—	—	—	—	5	—	12	2,000	1 751	1 500
52	350	3	4	4	4	—	—	—	—	—	—	4	—	11	1 450	1,305	1,350
53	300	3	3	3	3	—	—	—	—	—	—	3	—	10	1,400	1,250	1,200
54	250	3	3	3	3	—	—	—	—	—	—	3	—	8	1,150	1,100	1,000
55	200	3	3	3	3	—	—	—	—	—	—	3	—	7	975	950	900
56	150	3	3	3	3	—	—	—	—	—	—	3	—	6	875	850	800
57	125	3	3	3	3	—	—	—	—	—	—	3	—	5	780	760	750
58	120	2	2	2	2	—	—	—	—	—	—	2	—	5	745	740	730
59	100	2	2	2	2	—	—	—	—	—	—	2	—	5	700	600	600
60	80	2	2	2	2	—	—	—	—	—	—	2	—	3	410	380	300
61	60	1	1	1	1	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	—	2	301	280	200
62	50	1	1	1	1	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	—	2	250	240	230
63	40	1	1	1	1	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	—	1	223	200	185
64	30	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	185	165	155
65	20	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	135	125	115
66	10	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	100	82½	75

250 higher Mansabdars, to which we have to add 1,388 lower Mansabdars, from the Commanders of 150 downwards, hence altogether about 1,600 Mansabdars

But Akbar's Mansabdars, on the whole, had larger contingents, especially more horses, than the Mansabdars of the following reigns, during which the brevet ranks (zat) were multiplied.

In the beginning of Akbar's reign, Mansabdars had even to furnish men with four horses (chahār aspa). A Dahbāshī, or Commander of ten, had to furnish 10 men with 25 horses, but in later times (vide Ā^{ms} 5) the Chahār-aspas were discontinued, and a Dahbāshī furnished 10 men with 18 horses. As the other ranks had to furnish horses in proportion, one of Akbar's Hazāris would have had to bring 1,800 horses, whilst a Hazārī at the time of Shāhjahān only furnished 650

Of non commissioned officers a Mirdaha is mentioned, vide note 1, p 116. The pay of a Mirdaha of matchlock bearers varied from 7½ to 6½ R per mensem. Common matchlock bearers received from 6½ to 2½ R. As they were standing (household) troops, Abū 'l Fazl has put them into the first book of this work (Ā^{ms} 36 to 40), and, generally, the reader will have to bear in mind that the second book, relating to the army, treats chiefly of the contingents of the Mansabdars

Badā'onī, in the above extract, p. 253, speaks of a libās : sipahī, or soldier's uniform (armour ?)

The distinctions conferred by the emperor on the Mansabdars consisted in certain flags (vide p. 52, l. 6 from below), and the gharyāl or gong (vide in the beginning of the fourth book, Ā'in : Gharyāl)

Ā'in 4

THE AHADĪS

There are many brave and worthy persons whom His Majesty does not appoint to a Man'ab, but whom he frees from being under the orders of any one. Such persons belong to the immediate servants of His Majesty, and are dignified by their independence. They go through the school of learning their duties, and have their knowledge tested. As it is the aim of His Majesty to confer a spiritual meaning on that which is external, he calls such persons Ahadīs (from ahad, one). They are thus reminded of the unity of God.

A new regulation regarding rank was given.

For the sake of the convenience of the Ahadīs, a separate Diwān and a paymaster were appointed, and one of the great Amirs is their chief. A fit person has also been selected to introduce to His Majesty such as are candidates for Ahadīshīps. Without partiality or accepting bribes, he takes daily several before His Majesty, who examines them. When they have been approved of, they pass through the Yād-dāshī, the Ta'liqa, the descriptive roll, and accounts [vide Ā'in 10]. The paymaster then takes security and introduces the candidate a second time to His Majesty, who generally increases his pay from an eighth to three fourths, or even to more than six sevenths¹. Many Ahadīs have indeed more than 500 Rupees *per mensem*². He then gets the number nine as his brand [vide Ā'in 7]. In the beginning, when their rank was first established, some Ahadīs mustered eight horses, but now the limit is five. On his sar khat [vide Ā'in 11] each receives a farmāncha (rank and pay certificate), on which year after year the treasurer makes payments.

Ahadīs are mustered every four months when on a certificate signed by the Diwān and the Bakhshī which is called nowadays Tashīha,³ the clerk of the treasury writes out a receipt, to be countersigned by the principal grandees. This the treasurer keeps, and pays the claim. Before the period (of four months) is over, he gets one month's salary in advance. In the course of the year, he receives cash for ten months, after deducting from it one twentieth of the sum, the total stoppage being made on account of his horses and other expenses. On joining the service, an Ahadī generally finds his own horse, but afterwards he gets it from the Government, and if the certificate of the inspectors, which is called Saqāfnāma,¹ explains the reason why the horse is not forthcoming he is held indemnified for his dead horse, but does not receive the money for keeping a horse until he gets a new one. But if he has no Saqāfnāma to show, he is not allowed anything from the time of the last muster. Those who are in want of horses are continually taken before His Majesty, who gives away many horses as presents or as part of the pay, one half being reckoned as irmās money,² and the other half being deducted in four instalments at the subsequent four musters, or if the Ahadī be in debt, in eight instalments.

¹ Or as we would say by 75 or even 85½ per cent. Vide note 4 p. 88.

² This agrees with a statement which I have seen in some historian of Akbar a reign that a senior Ahadī was promoted to a Yād-dāshīshīp as the next step. Vide p. 20 note 1.

³ The Tashīha corresponds therefore to a 'life certificate'. Arabic Infinitives II take in modern Persian a final h, thus ta'liqa [vide below, Ā'in 10] ta'khfifa [vide p. 101, note 1] etc.

A'in §

OTHER KINDS OF TROOPERS

As I have said something about the Mansabdārs and the Ahadīs, I shall give a few details regarding the third class of troopers.

The horse dealer fixes the quality of the horses, which are carefully inspected by the Bakhshis. The description of the man is then taken down in writing. If a trooper has more than one horse they add to his establishment a camel or an ox, for which he gets half the allowance usually given to troopers of a superior class, or if this be not given he gets an addition of two-fifths.

A Yak aspa trooper is paid according to the following rates. If his horse be an Ṣirāqī, he gets 30 R per mensem, if mujannas, 25 R, if Turkī, 20 R, if a Yābū, 18 R, if a Tāzī, 15 R, if a Jangla, 12 R.

The revenue collectors of domain lands got formerly 25 R, but now only 15 R.

Troopers of this kind mustered formerly up to four horses, but now the order is not to exceed three.

¹ From sagac he fell.

² irmās = irmā + s.

Every Dah-bāshī had to muster 2 chahār-aspā, 3 si-aspā, 3 du-aspā, and 2 yak-aspā troopers [i.e., 10 troopers with 25 horses], and the other Mansabdārs in the same proportion. But now a Dah bāshī's contingent consists of 3 si-aspā, 4 du-aspā, and 3 yak-aspā troopers [i.e., 10 troopers with 18 horses]

Ā'in 6

THE INFANTRY

As I have said something about the Cavalry, I shall make a few remarks on foot soldiers. They are of various kinds, and perform remarkable duties. His Majesty has made suitable regulations for their several ranks, and guides great and small in the most satisfactory manner.

The writer of these ¹ is the Awāra-nawīs. Inasmuch as they are of importance, they are counted as belonging to the infantry. There are several classes of them. The first class gets 500 dāms, the second, 400 d, the third, 300 d, the fourth, 240 d.

The Bandūq-chīs, or Matchlock bearers

There are 12,000 Imperial Matchlock bearers. Attached to this service is an experienced Butūlchī, an honest treasurer, and an active Darogha. A few Bandūq-chīs are selected for these offices, the others hold the following ranks. Some are distinguished by their experience and zeal, and are therefore appointed over a certain number of others, so that uniformity may pervade the whole, and the duties be performed with propriety and understanding. The pay of these [non-commissioned] officers is of four grades, first, 300 d, second, 280 d, third, 270 d, fourth 260 d.

Common Bandūq-chīs are divided into five classes, and each class into three subdivisions. First class, 250, 240, and 230 d. Second class, 220, 210, 200 d. Third class, 190, 180, and 170 d. Fourth class, 160, 150, and 140 d. Fifth class, 130, 120 and 110 d.

The Darbāns, or Porters

A thousand of these active men are employed to guard the palace. The pay of the Mirdākas is five fold, 200, 160, 140, 130, and 120 d. Common Darbāns have from 100 to 120 d.

The Khīdmātīyyas

The Khīdmātīyyas also belong to the infantry. They guard the environs of the palace and see that certain orders are carried out. Panjāhīs to Bisfis have 200 d, and a Dah bāshī gets 180 and 140 d. The others get 120, 110, and 100 d.

¹ The text has a word which does not suit.

The caste to which they belong was notorious for highway robbery and theft, former rulers were not able to keep them in check. The effective orders of His Majesty have led them to honesty, they are now famous for their trustworthiness. They were formerly called Māncīs. Their chief has received the title of Khidmat Raī. Being near the person of His Majesty, he lives in affluence. His men are called Khidmatuyyas ¹

The Mewras ²

They are natives of Mewar, and are famous as runners. They bring from great distances with zeal anything that may be required. They are excellent spies, and will perform the most intricate duties. There are likewise one thousand of them, ready to carry out orders. Their wages are the same as the preceding.

The Shamsherbāz, or Gladiators

There are several kinds of them, each performing astonishing feats. In fighting they show much swiftness and agility, and join courage to skill in stooping down and rising up again. Some of them use shields in fighting, others use cudgels. The latter are called Lakraut. Others again use no means of defence, and fight with one hand only, these are called yak hath. The former class come chiefly from the Eastern districts and use a somewhat smaller shield, which they call chirtoa. Those who come from the southern districts make their shields large enough to conceal a horseman. This kind of shield they call tiloa.

Another class goes by the name of Pharānts. They use a shield not quite so large as to conceal a man, but a gaz broad.

Some again are called Banānts. They use a long sword, the handle of which is more than a gaz long, and seizing it with both hands, they perform extraordinary feats of skill.

The class which goes by the name of Bankūlis are likewise famous. They use a peculiar sword which, though bent towards the point, is straight near the handle. But they do not make use of a shield. The skill which they exhibit passes all description. Others make various kinds of daggers and knives and perform with them the most extraordinary feats. Each class of these men has a different name, they also ¹ They are called in the Tuzuk-i-Jahangiri Piyadaha-yi-Khidmatuyya. The name of their chief under Jahāngir was Raī Mān. He once picked up the young Shāh Shujā'at who had fallen from an upper window to the ground. Tuzuk-i-Jahangiri p. 303.

² Among the innovations made by Akbar are the Dāk Mewras of whom some were stationed at every place. Ashfi Khān I, p. 243. Hence the Mewras were chiefly postmen.

differ in their performances. But it is really impossible to give a mere description of them. nor would mere listening to my descriptions be sufficient.

There are more than a hundred thousand of them. At Court one thousand of them are always in readiness. Their Sadī (commander of one hundred) holds the rank of an Ahadī and even a higher one. Their salaries vary from 80 to 600 d.

The Pahlucans or Wrestlers

There are many Persian and Turanī wrestlers and boxers at Court, as also stone-throwers, athletes of Hindustan, clever Māls from Gujrat and many other kinds of fighting men. Their pay varies from 70 to 450 d. Every day two well-matched men fight with each other. Many presents are made to them on such occasions. The following belong to the best wrestlers of the age—Mirza Khan of Gulan, Muhammad Qulī of Tabriz, to whom His Majesty has given the name of Sher hamla or Lion attacker, Šadiq of Bukhara, ʿAlī of Tabriz, Murad of Turkistan, Muhammad ʿAlī of Turan, Fulad of Tabriz, Qasim of Tabriz, Mirza Kuhna suwar of Tabriz, Shah Qulī of Kurdistan, Hilal of Abyssinia, Sadhu Dayal, ʿAlī, Sī Ram, Kanhva, Mangol, Ganesh, Ānba, Nanka, Balbhadra, Bajrath.

The Chelas or Slaves¹

His Majesty from religious motives dislikes the name banda or slave, for he believes that mastership belongs to no one but God. He therefore calls this class of men Chelas, which Hindi term signifies a faithful disciple.² Through His Majesty's kindness many of them have chosen the road to happiness.³

Various meanings attach to the term slave.⁴ First that which people in general mean by a slave. Some men obtain power over such as do not belong to their sect and sell and buy them. The wise look upon this as abominable. Secondly he is called a slave who leaves the path of selfishness and chooses the road of spiritual obedience.⁵ Thirdly one s

[¹ Chela, H. disciple, etc.—P.]

² The word Chela is the same as the Arab murīd a disciple who places implicit belief in his murāḥ d or p r the head of the sect. And many of His Majesty's special disciples, in 991 called themselves chelas in imitation of the use of this term among Jogis.—Baldoni II p. 325.

³ The author of the pretty Taḡkura, entitled Kaḥ mātī sh-Sāḥarā which contains

⁴ Inasmuch as such a man blindly follows his p r child Fourthly, one who kills a man in order to inherit his property Fifthly, a robber who repents and attaches himself to the man whom he had robbed Sixthly, a murderer whose guilt has been atoned by payment of money, in which case the murderer becomes the slave of the man who releases him Seventhly, he who cheerfully and freely prefers to live as a slave

The pay of Chelas varies from 1 R to 1 d per diem His Majesty has divided them into several sections, and has handed them over to active and experienced people who give them instruction in several things Thus they acquire knowledge, elevate their position, and learn to perform their duties with propriety

His Majesty, who encourages everything which is excellent and knows the value of talent, honours people of various classes with appointments in the ranks of the army, and raises them from the position of a common soldier to the dignity of a grandee

The Kuhārs, or Pālkī bearers

They form a class of foot-servants peculiar to India They carry heavy loads on their shoulders, and travel through mountains and valleys
 With their pālkīs, singhāsans, chaudols, and dūtīs, they walk so evenly that the man inside is not inconvenienced by any jolting There are many in this country, but the best come from the Dakhīn and Bengal
 At Court, several thousand of them are kept The pay of a head bearer varies from 192 to 384 d Common bearers get from 120 to 160 d

Dākhūlī troops

A fixed number of these troops are handed over to the Mansabdārs, but they are paid by the State His Majesty has ordered to designate these infantry soldiers in the descriptive rolls as nīma suwārān, or half troopers

The fourth part of Dākhūlī troops are matchlock bearers, the others carry bows

Carpenters, workers in iron, water carriers, pioneers, belong to this class

A non commissioned officer of the matchlock bearers receives 160 d or 4 R, common matchlock bearers get 140 d The Mirdahas of the archers get from 120 to 180 d, common archers from 100 to 120 d

I could say much more on this subject, but I must content myself with having described the principal classes I have also given some details in speaking of the several workshops and offices of the Household

REGULATIONS REGARDING THE BRANDING OF ANIMALS

When His Majesty had fixed the ranks of the army, and inquired into the quality of the horses, he ordered that upright Batikchis should make out descriptive rolls of the soldiers and write down their peculiar marks. Their ages, the names of their fathers, dwelling places, and race, were to be registered. A Darogha also was appointed, whose duty it is to see that the men are not unnecessarily detained. They were to perform their duties without taking bribes or asking for remunerations.

Every one who wishes to join the army is taken before His Majesty, in whose presence his rank is fixed, after which the clerks make out the Ta'sūqa [vide Ā'in 10]

Dākhiṭi troops are admitted on the signature of the Mansabdars

His Majesty has also appointed five experienced officers who have to look after the condition of the men, their horses, and the stipulated amount of pay. His Majesty has the men assembled in an open place, and receives the several descriptive rolls, when the men with their horses are handed over to the above five officers. The amount of their pay is then entered at the bottom of the descriptive rolls, and is countersigned by those officers, which serves as a proof, and prevents fraudulent alterations. Each roll is then handed over to the inspecting Darogha. He takes them in the manner described above [vide Ā'in 4] to His Majesty, who orders the pay to be increased or decreased. His Majesty discerns the value of a man by the lineaments of his forehead, and can therefore increase or decrease his pay. He also distinguishes a tradesman by the look of his face from a soldier, so much so that experienced people are astonished, and refer His Majesty's power of discernment to 'hidden knowledge'. When the roll is thus certified, it is also signed by the Wāqī'a Nāicīs (Ā'in 10), the Mīr 'Arz, and the officer commanding the guards. On the strength of this certificate, the Darogha of the dāgh (brand) marks the horses.

When the brand was first introduced it was made in the shape of the head of the letter sīn (i.e. like this ) and was put on the right side of the neck of the horse. For some time, it was made in shape of two alifs intersecting at right angles, the heads of the alif being made heavy as in this figure , and put on the right thigh. For some time again, it was made like a bow with the string taken off. At last, numerals were introduced, which plan best frustrates fraudulent practices. They make iron numerals, by which all indistinctness is avoided. These new signs are likewise put on the right thigh. Formerly, each horse on being mustered for the first time, was marked with a 1, the second time with a 2, and so on, but now His Majesty has ordered that separate numerals should be used for the horses of the princes, the Mansabdārs, the governors of the provinces, and all other dignitaries attached to the Court.

The carefulness with which the system of marking horses was attended to resulted at once in truthful reports regarding dead horses, for when a soldier, after the introduction of the system of repeated marks (vide next Ā'in) brought a horse which had been exchanged, he would demand his pay from the time he had last received his pay, whilst the Bakhshi commenced to count from the day he brought his (exchanged) horse. But since the present mark was introduced, the rule was made that each horse with which, instead of with his old one, a trooper came to the muster, should be described, and should get the same mark as the dead one, the Bakhshis, at the subsequent musters held for repeating the marks, were to inspect it and go by the brand. Horses answering the description in the rolls were even hired and substituted for the old ones, but as the mark was not forthcoming, the deception was detected, and the soldiers thus learnt to be honest.

Ā'in 8

ON THE REPETITION OF THE MARK

The servants (Mansabdārs) of His Majesty have their horses every year newly marked, and thus maintain the efficiency of the army, as by their endeavours unprincipled people learn to choose the path of honesty. If a Mansabdar delays bringing his men to the muster, one tenth of his jāgir (aqṭāṣ)¹ is withheld. Formerly, when the mark was repeated, they put the number on the muster of the horse, marking for example, a horse with a 2 when it was mustered the second time, and so on, but now, as each class of soldiers had a particular mark the mark is merely repeated at the subsequent musters. In the case of Ahadis, the former custom was retained. Some Bitikchis, and near servants of His Majesty, who have no leisure to look after jāgirs receive their monthly salaries in cash, and muster their horses every eighteen months. Grandees whose jāgīrs are very remote, do not bring their horses to muster before twelve years have elapsed, but when six years have elapsed since the last muster, one-tenth of their income is retrenched. And if a Mansabdar has been promoted to a higher Mansab, and three years have elapsed since he last presented his horses at muster, he receives a personal (دانت) increase of salary, but draws the allowance for the increased number of his men after the first muster. His old and his new men then get their assignments. If at the renewal of the mark at subsequent musters, any soldier brings a superior horse in exchange for his old one, he is taken before His Majesty, who inspects and accepts it.

¹ Properly iqṭāṣ Inf. IV, of qaṣṣā but in India the word is mostly pronounced iqṭāṣ.

Ā'in 9

RULES ABOUT MOUNTING GUARD

Mounting guard is called in Hindi chauki. There are three kinds of guards. The four divisions of the army have been divided into seven parts, each of which is appointed for one day, under the superintendence of a trustworthy Mansabdar. Another, fully acquainted with all ceremonies at Court, is appointed as Mir ʿArz. All orders of His Majesty are made known through these two officers (the Mir ʿArz, and the commander of the Palace). They are day and night in attendance about the palace, ready for any orders His Majesty may issue. In the evening, the Imperial Qur (vide p. 116) is taken to the State hall. The mounting guards stand on the right, the ranks of the guards to be relieved are drawn up on the other side. His Majesty generally inspects the guards himself, and takes notice of the presence or absence of the soldiers. Both ranks salute His Majesty. If His Majesty be prevented by more important affairs from attending, one of the princes is ordered to inspect the guards. From predilection and a desire to teach soldiers their duties, as also from a regard to general efficiency, His Majesty pays much attention to the guards. If any one is absent without having a proper excuse, or from laziness, he is fined one week's pay, or receives a suitable reprimand.

The Imperial army has been divided into twelve parts, each of which mounts guard for the space of one month. This gives all troops, whether near or far, an opportunity to come to Court, and to partake of the liberality of His Majesty. But those who are stationed at the frontiers, or told off for any important duty, merely send in reports of their exact condition, and continue to perform His Majesty's special orders. On the first of every solar month, the guards are drawn up to salute His Majesty, as is usual on weekly parades, and are then distinguished by royal marks of favour.

The Imperial army has also been divided into twelve other divisions, each of which is selected in turn, to come to Court for one year and do duty near the person of His Majesty.

A¹in 10

REGULATIONS REGARDING THE WĀQI‘A-NAWIS¹

Keeping records is an excellent thing for a government, it is even necessary for every rank of society. Though a trace of this office may have existed in ancient times, its higher objects were but recognized in the present reign. His Majesty has appointed fourteen zealous, experienced, and impartial clerks, two of whom do daily duty in rotation, so that the turn of each comes after a fortnight.² Some other suitable men are selected as supernumeraries, each of whom is appointed for one day, and if any of the fourteen be detained by an important business, this additional person acts for him. Hence they are called kotal (supernumeraries).

Their duty is to write down the orders and the doings of His Majesty and whatever the heads of the departments report, what His Majesty eats and drinks, when he sleeps and when he rises, the etiquette in the State hall, the time His Majesty spends in the Harem, when he goes to the general and private assemblies, the nature of hunting parties, the slaying of animals,³ when he marches, and when he halts, the acts of His Majesty as the spiritual guide of the nation, vows made to him, his remarks (vide Fifth Book), what books he has read out to him, what alms he bestows, what presents he makes, the daily and monthly exercises⁴ which he imposes on himself, appointments to mansabs, contingents of troops, salaries, jagirs, Irmās money (vide above, p. 260, note 2), sayūrqhāls (rent free land), the increase or decrease of

¹ From wāqī‘a an event and nawīs a writer. Instead of wāqī‘a-nawīs we also find wāqī‘a-nawīf

²

³ Akbar wished to restrict the slaying of animals. vide above p. 200 l. 9
⁴ Especially fasts

taxes, contracts, sales, money transfers, peshkash (tribute receipts), dispatch, the issue of orders, the papers which are signed by His Majesty, the arrival of reports, the minutes thereon, the arrivals of courtiers, their departures, the fixing¹ of periods, the inspection of the guards, battles, victories and peace, obituaries of well known persons, animal fights and the bettings on them, the dying of horses, capital punishments, pardons granted by His Majesty, the proceedings of the general assemblies, marriages, births, chawgān games (vide Āⁱⁿ 29), chaupar nard, chess, card games, etc., extraordinary phenomena, the harvests of the year, the reports on events

After the diary has been corrected by one of His Majesty's servants, it is laid before the emperor, and approved by him. The clerk then makes a copy of each report, signs it, and hands it over to those who require it as a voucher, when it is also signed by the Parwānchī, by the Mir ^{Arz} and by that person who laid it before His Majesty. The report in this state is called yād-dāsh, or memorandum.

Besides, there are several copyists who write a good hand and a lucid style. They receive yād-dāsh when completed, keep it with themselves, and make a proper abridgement of it. After signing it, they return this instead of the yād-dāsh, when the abridgement is signed and sealed by the Wāqī^sa-nāwīs and the Risāla-dār,² the Mir ^{Arz}, and the Dārogha. The abridgement, thus completed, is called Ta^sliqa, and the writer is called Ta^sliqa-nawīs.

The Ta^sliqa is then signed, as stated above, and sealed by the ministers of state.

His Majesty's object is that every duty be properly performed, that there be no undue increase, or decrease in any department, that dishonest people be removed, and trustworthy people be held in esteem, and that active servants may work without fear, and negligent and forgetful men be held in check.

Āⁱⁿ 11

ON SANADS

Every money matter will be satisfactorily settled, when the parties express their minds clearly, then take a pen and write down the

¹ Ta^sliqa mudlat, the fixing of periodical inspections. opp. be ta^sliqā amadan to come at times not appointed beforehand, unexpectedly.

² The text has risāla which stands for risāla-dār as in later times, Saba for Saba-dār.

For Mir ^{Arz} we find in the early historians Arz.

statement in legible handwriting. Every written statement of accounts is called a sanad. All classes of men adopt such a practice.

The sanad is the voucher which relieves the treasurer of all responsibility, and on which people receive payment of their claims. Honest experienced officers, upon whose forehead the stamp of correctness shines, write the agreement upon loose pages and leaves, so that the transaction cannot be forgotten. These loose sheets into which all sanads are entered are called the Daftar.²

His Majesty has made himself acquainted with this department and brought it into proper working order. He has appointed clever, honest, incorruptible, experienced writers, and entrusts the daftar to impartial officers, who are under his immediate control.

The Daftar of the empire is divided into three parts —

1 The *Abwab*¹ l māl or entries referring to the revenue of the country. This part of the Daftar explains the revenue of the empire, details any increase or decrease, and specifies every other source of income (as presents, etc.)

2 The *Arbāb*² 't tahāuīl. This part explains the manner in which the sums for the Household have been expended, it contains the debits and credits entered on account of the cashkeepers employed at Court, and lastly, contains the accounts of daily expenditure, etc., for things bought or sold.

3 The *Tawjīh*³. This part contains all entries referring to the pay of the army, and shows the manner in which the pay is given out.

Some sanads are merely sealed with the imperial seal. Other sanads are first signed and sealed by the ministers of State, and are afterwards laid before His Majesty for signature. Many sanads, however, are only signed and sealed by the grandees of the Court. This will be explained in the following.

The Farmān : sabī

Farmān : sabīs are issued for three purposes —

1 For appointments to a Mansab, to the Vakilship, to the post of Sipāh sālār (governor of a province and Commander in Chief) to the

¹ In the last century often refer to this system of keeping all documents

tutorship of the princes, to the rank of Amīr ^u ʿl umarā (vide p 250), to a Nāhiyafī, or districtship, to the post of Vazīr, or Finance Minister, to the Baklshīshīp (Paymaster and Adjutant General), to the post of a ṣadr, or a judge

2 For appointments to jāgīrs without military service, ¹ for taking charge of a newly conquered territory, sometimes ²

3 For conferring Sayurghāls (vide *Ā*² in 19), for grants on account of daily subsistence allowance, and for grants for beneficent purposes

When the Taʿlīqa has been made out, the Dīwān : Jāgīr (who keeps the Jagir accounts) pays the stipulated grant. If the jagir is given for military services, with the order of bringing horses to the muster, the grant is once more sent to the Baklshīs for inspection, when the following words are written either on the back or the corner of the paper—klāsa, o mardum barāward numāyand, lārgarun : in shughl chūhra naicīsī kunand (this is special, the estimate for the salary may be made out. The proper officers are to prepare the descriptive rolls) When the horses are then branded at the time of the muster, the Baklshī general takes the Taʿlīqa keeps it, and hands instead of it a writing specifying the amount of the monthly salary, duly signed and sealed

This paper, which the Baklshī grants instead of the Taʿlīqa, is called Sarklat

The Sarklats are entered in the daftars of all Sub-Baklshīs, and are distinguished by particular marks. The Dīwān then keeps the Sarklat with himself prepares an account of the annual and monthly salary due on it and reports the matter to His Majesty. If His Majesty gives the order to confer a jagir on the person specified in the Sarklat, the following words are entered on the top of the report Taʿlīqa yi tan qalamī numāyand (they are to write out a Taʿlīqa yi tan (certificate of salary)) This order suffices for the clerks, they keep the order, and make out a draft to that effect. The draft is then inspected by the Dīwān who verifies it by writing on it the words sabt numāyand (ordered to be entered). The mark of the daftar and the seal of the Dīwān the Baklshī and the Accountant the Dīwān, are put on the draft in order, when the Imperial grant is written on the outside. The draft thus completed is sent for signature to the Diwān.

¹ Jāgīrs to which no military service attaches, appear to be called bedjāh o makāffī i.e. the holder had nothing to do with the army and the musters, at which the Mansabīllars drew the ṣawār of the taxes of the several ṣawār on his ṣawār

² The text has ṣab (sometimes ṣab) La ṣawār : malk (malk ?) dīdān—which I do not understand.

The Sāhib-i Tawjīh, or military accountant, keeps the former Taʿlīqa with himself, writes its details on the Farmān, and seals and signs it. It is then inspected by the Mustaufī, and is signed and sealed by him. Afterwards the Nāzir and the Bakhshīs do so likewise, when it is sealed by the Diwān, his accountant, and the Vakīl of the State.

If His Majesty's order specifies a cash payment the farmān is made out in the same manner, but is generally called barāt (cheque). A statement of accounts of the transaction is appended at the bottom of it. After the Nāzir, the Diwān-i Buyūtāt signs it, and when it has passed through the hands of the Bakhshīs and the Diwān, it is sealed and signed by the Khān Sāmān. The receipts and expenditure of the Imperial workshops, the deposits and payments of salaries to the workmen (of whom some draw their pay on [military] descriptive rolls, and others according to the services performed by them, as the men engaged in the Imperial elephant and horse stables, and in the waggon department) are all made by barāts. The accountant of each workshop (or stable) writes out annually two barāts, one for the six months from Farwardīn (February-March) to Shahrīvar, and the other from Mīhr (September) to Isfandiyārmuz. He writes down the allowances on account of grain, grass, etc., both in shape of cash and stores, and the salaries of the workmen, and signs the statement. The Diwān-i Buyūtāt inspects them, passes the order for payment, inquires into the increase or decrease, if any, and writes on the margin az tahwīl-i falānī barat nawīsand, 'Let a barāt be made out showing the amount to be deposited with such and such a Mushrif.' The Mushrif of the workshop or stable then takes it, writes out an order and the receipt, and seals and signs it. In all cash payments, one fourth is deducted, as another sanad is given for this amount. The Diwān-i Buyūtāt then gives the order to have it entered. The Mushrif does so, signs and seals the barāt and the receipt. It then passes through the hands of the military accountant, the Nāzir, the Diwān-i Buyūtāt, the Diwān-i Kul, the Khān Sāmān, the Mushrif of the Diwān, and the Vakīl who sign and seal it. In every case the estimate is sent along with it, so that there may be no mistake. When it has been laid before His Majesty, the Mushrif writes out the receipt, which is then in the same manner entered into the several *daftar*s. The mode of payment also is detailed on the back of it, viz., one fourth is to be paid in gold (ashrafīs), one half in silver (rūpīs), and one part in copper (dāms), according to the fixed values of the coins.

Abd^u 'n-Nabī and Sultān Khwāja were Sadrs (vide note to Āⁱⁿ 19), they used to put their seals opposite to that of the Vakil. In the middle of that fold is the place where that person puts his seal who comes nearest in rank to the Vakil, as Atka Khān did at the time of Munṣim Khān, and Adham Khān. The Mir Mal, the Khan Sāmān, the Parwānchī, etc., seal on the second fold, but in such a manner that a smaller part of their seals goes to the first fold. The seals of the Diwān, and the Bakhshī do not go beyond the edge of the second fold, whilst the Diwān 1 juz, the Bakhshī y 1 juz, and the Diwān 1 buyūtāt put their seals on the third fold. The Mustawfī puts his seal on the fourth, and the Sāhib-i Tawjīh on the fifth fold. The seal of His Majesty is put above the Tughrā lines on the top of the Farmān, where the princes also put their seals in Taṣṭiqas.

Āⁱⁿ 13

THE FARMĀN I BAYĀZĪ

Some matters connected with the Government do not admit of delay, or must not to be known to every one. Such an order receives only the Imperial seal, and is called a Farmān i bayāzī.¹ The farman is folded up, and two edges are made to meet, when a knot of paper is put over them, which is sealed up in such manner that the contents cannot be seen. The sealing wax is made of the gum² of the Kunār, the Bar, the Pīpal, and other trees. Like wax, it gets warm when exposed to fire, but gets afterwards cool and hard. When thus sealed the farman is put into a golden cover, for His Majesty looks upon the use of external signs of grandeur as an act of divine worship. Such farmans are carried by Mansabdars, Ahadis, or common foot soldiers, to the parties concerned.

When an officer receives such an order he proceeds a proper distance to meet it, performs various acts of obeisance, puts it on the crown of his head, makes the syda, and rewards the messenger according to the favour conferred upon himself, or according to his circumstances. According to His Majesty's wishes, the bags in which reports are sent, are secured in the same manner as a Farmān i bayāzī, so that no alterations are possible. In consequence of this, much trouble is avoided, and dishonest practices are put a stop to.

¹ That is a blank farman.

² Lak. The author probably means 'sap. It is from the exudations from slits made overnight in the bark of the bar and the pipal tree that the best bird lime is made.—P.]

His Majesty's only object¹ is to teach propriety in transactions, else mutual esteem will never increase among men from the nature of their mercantile affairs

This regulation brought unprincipled usurers to the proper path, and thus prevented much impropriety

Ā'in 16

ON DONATIONS

His Majesty, from his knowledge of man's nature, gives donations in various ways. It looks as if he lends but in his heart, he makes a present; or he calls the donation a loan, but never asks it back. The far and near, the rich and poor, share His Majesty's liberality. He gives away elephants, horses, and other valuable articles. The Bakhshis read out daily the names of the guards and other soldiers, mentioning such first as have never received anything. His Majesty gives them horses. When a soldier has received a horse, he is not recommended to His Majesty for the space of a year for any other donation.

Ā'in 17

ON ALMS

His Majesty bestows upon the needy money and necessaries, winning the hearts of all in public or private. Many enjoy daily, monthly, or yearly allowances, which they receive without being kept waiting. It is impossible for me to detail the sums which some people receive in consequence of representations having been made of their circumstances by such as stand near the throne, and it would take up too much time to describe the presents made daily to beggars, or the eating houses which have been established for the poor².

There is a treasurer always waiting³ at Court, and every beggar whom His Majesty sees is sure to find relief.

Ā'in 18

THE CEREMONY OF WEIGHING HIS MAJESTY

From reasons of auspiciousness and as an opportunity of bestowing presents upon the poor, His Majesty is weighed twice a year. Various articles are put into the scales.

¹ It is needless to remind the reader that charging interest on loans is against the Muhammadan law. But Akbar was a Hindu in such matters.

² Vide p. 210 l. 19

³ Vide p. 15 l. 1

On the first day of the month of Ābān [15th October], which is the solar anniversary of the emperor, His Majesty is weighed twelve times against the following articles—gold, quicksilver, silk, perfumes, copper, rūh-i tūtīya, drugs, ghāī, iron, rice-milk, seven kinds of grain, salt, the order of these articles being determined by their costliness. According to the number of years His Majesty has lived, there is given away an equal number of sheep, goats, fowls, to people that breed these animals. A great number of small animals are also set at liberty.

His Majesty is weighed a second time on the 5th of Rajab,¹ against eight articles, viz., silver, tin, cloth, lead, fruits, mustard oil, and vegetables. On both occasions the festival of Sālgīrah (birthday) is celebrated, when donations, or grants of pardon, are bestowed upon people of all ranks.

The Imperial princes, sons, and grandsons of His Majesty are weighed once in every solar year. They are for the first time weighed when two years old, but only against one thing. Every year, however, a new additional thing is put on the scales. When grown up, they are generally weighed against seven or eight things, but not against more than twelve. Animals are set free as usual.

A separate treasurer and an accountant are appointed for this purpose, so that the expenditure may be made with every propriety.²

¹ The birthday of the emperor was of importance for the Harem, as there the string was kept, which numbered as many knots as the emperor numbered years, hence also sālgīrah (or sālgīraā, as the word is pronounced all over India) "the year's knot", or birthday.

² Tying knots, or bits of string, or ribbon to the tombs of saints is considered by barren women as a means of obtaining a son, and the tomb of Salīm-i Chusāī in Fathpūr Sikri, in whose house Jahāngīr was born, is even nowadays visited by Hindu and Musalman women, who tie bits of string to the marble trellis surrounding the tomb. Similar vows are even placed on Akbar's tomb in Sikandra, near Āgra.

Akbar's regulation, as given in the above Ā'in, appears to have been continued under Jahāngīr. Shāhjahān made some alterations, in as far as he was weighed on each feast first against gold and silver and then against other articles. The articles themselves were given away to the courtiers, or to pious men and beggars, as a means of keeping the royal as are worthy of grants, and a large number receive the assistance they desire

When His Majesty commenced to inquire into this department, it was discovered that the former *Sadr*s had been guilty of bribery and dishonest practices. He therefore appointed, at the recommendation of near friends, Shaykh 'Abd^u 'n Nabī to this important office. The lands which were then held by Afghans and Chaudris were taken away, and became domain lands (khālīṣā),¹ whilst all others that held grants were referred to the Shaykhī who inquired into, and certified, their grants. After some time it was reported that those who held grants had not the lands in one and the same place, whereby the weak whose grounds lay near khālīṣa lands or near the jāgirs of Mansabdar's, were exposed to vexations, and were encroached upon by unprincipled men. His Majesty then ordered that they should get lands on one spot, which they might choose. This order proved beneficial for both parties. The officers of the government, on receiving this order, told off certain villages for this purpose, those who were weak were protected, and the encroachments of the unprincipled were put a stop to.

But when Time, according to his custom, commenced to tear the veil of secrets, rumours also regarding this Sadr ['Abd^u 'n Nabī] came to the ears of His Majesty. An order was therefore given that all those who held more than five hundred biḡhas should lay their farmāns personally before His Majesty, and in default, should lose their lands. As, however, the practices of these grant holders did not come up to the wise counsels of His Majesty, the order was passed that the excess of all lands above one hundred biḡhas, if left unspecified in the farmāns, should be reduced to two-fifths of it, three-fifths of the excess being annexed to the domain lands. Irānī and Tūranī women alone were excepted from this rule.

As it was reported that impudent, avaricious people used to leave their old grounds and take possession of new places, it was ordered that every one who should leave his place, should lose one fourth of his lands and receive a new grant.

Again, when His Majesty discovered that the Qāzis were in the habit of taking bribes from the grant-holders, he resolved, with the view of obtaining God's favour, to place no further reliance on these men [the Qāzis] who wear a turban as a sign of respectability, but are bad at heart, and who wear long sleeves, but fall short in sense. He examined into the whole matter, and dismissed all Qāzis, except those who had been appointed during the *Sadr*s'hip of Sultan Khwaja. The Irānī and Tūranī women also were convicted of fraud, and the order was passed that every excess of land above one hundred bighas held by them should be inquired into, whether it was correctly held or not

¹ This is the Indian pronunciation for the Arabic and Persian khālīṣa.

During the Sadrship of 'Aziz' 'd Dawla [Mir Fathu 'llāh of Shiraz] the following order was given —If any one held a Suyūrghāl together with a partner, and the farmān contained no reference to the share possessed by each partner, the Sadr should, in the event of one of the partners dying, proceed without further inquiry to a division, the share of the deceased partner lapsing to the Crown, and remaining domain land till the heirs should personally apply to His Majesty. The new Sadr was at the same time prevented from granting, without previous reference to His Majesty, more than fifteen bighas

On account of the general peace and security in the empire, the grant holders commenced to lay out their lands in gardens and thereby derived so much profit, that it tempted the greediness of the Government officers, who had certain notions of how much was sufficient for Suyūrghāl holders, to demand revenue taxes, but this displeased His Majesty, who commanded that such profits should not be interfered with

Again, when it was found out that holders of one hundred bighas and even less were guilty of bribery, the order was given that Mir Sadr Jahān should bring these people before His Majesty, and afterwards it was determined that the Şadr with the concurrence of the writer of this work should either increase or decrease the grants. The rule now followed is this, that all Suyūrghāl land should consist of one-half of tilled land, and of one-half of land capable of cultivation, if the latter half be not so (i.e., if the whole be tilled land), one fourth of the whole should be taken away and a new grant be issued for the remainder

The revenue derived from each bigha varies in the several districts, but is never less than one rupee

His Majesty, with the view of teaching wisdom and promoting true piety, pays much attention to this department, and appoints disinterested men as Sadrs of districts and Sadr of the realm

Note by the Translator on the Sadrs of Akbar's reign

In this Ā'in—one of the most interesting in the whole work—the Chaghatā'i word suyūrghāl is translated by the Arabic madad l-ma'āsh, in Persian madad-i ma'āsh, for which we often find in MSS madad o ma'āsh. The latter term signifies "assistance of livelihood", and, like its equivalent milk, or property, it denotes lands given for benevolent purposes, as specified by Abū 'l Faẓl. Such lands were hereditary, and differ for thus reason from jāqīr or suyūl lands, which were conferred for a specified time on Mansabdars in lieu of salaries

This Ā'in proves that Akbar considerably interfered with suyūrghāl lands, arbitrarily resuming whatever lands he liked, and increasing the domain, or khālīṣa,¹ lands to the ruin of many a Muhammadan (Afghān) family. He also completely broke the power of the Sadr, whose dignity, especially before the Moghul dynasty, had been very great. It was the Sadr, or as he was generally styled, Ṣadr-i Jahān, whose edict legalized the julūs, or accession, of a new king. During the reign of Akbar also, he ranked as the fourth officer of the empire (vide end of Ā'in 30). Their power was immense. They were the highest law-officers, and had the powers which Administrators General have among us, they were in charge of all lands devoted to ecclesiastical and benevolent purposes, and possessed an almost unlimited authority of conferring such lands independently of the king. They were also the highest ecclesiastical law-officers, and might exercise the powers of High Inquirators. Thus 'Abdū'n Nabī, during his Ṣadrship, ordered two men to be killed for heresy (vide p 186, l 7, from below)

In the times before the Moghuls, the terms idrārūt, taẓāyf, mīlk, in'ām : dehā, in'ām-i zamīnhā, etc, occur for the word suyūrghāl (or suyūrgāl, or suglurghāl, as some dictionaries spell it)

Among the former kings, 'Alau'd Dīn : Khiljī is notorious for the disregard with which he cancelled the grants of former rulers. He resumed the greater part of the madad : ma'āsh tenures, and made them domain lands. He also lowered the dignity of the Sadr by appointing his keybearer to this high office (Tārīkh-i Fīrūzshāhī, p 353). Qutbū'd Dīn Mubarakshah, however, during the four years and four months of his reign, reinstated many whom 'Alau'd Dīn had deprived (T F, p 382). Fīrūz Shah is still more praised for his liberality in conferring lands (T F, p 558).

That Sher Shāh has often been accused by Moghul Historians for his bounty in conferring lands, has been mentioned above (p 256, note), and this may have been one of the reasons why Akbar showed such an unexpected severity towards the grant holders of his time.

Each Subā had a Sadr : yuz, or provincial Sadr, who was under the orders of the Chief Sadr (Sadr : Jahān, or Sadr : kul, or Sadr : Sudur).

As in every other department, bribery was extensively carried on in the offices of the Sadr. The land specified in the farmān of a holder rarely corresponded in extent to the land which he actually held, or the language of the farmān was ambiguously worded to enable the holder to take possession of as much as he could and keep it, as long as he bribed the Qāzīs and provincial *Sadr*s. Hence Akbar had every reason, after repeated inquiries, to cancel grants conferred by former rulers. The religious views of the emperor (vide p. 176) and the hatred which he showed to the ʿUlamā, most of whom held lands, furnished him with a personal, and therefore stronger, reason to resume their grants, and drive them away to Bhallar in Sind, or to Bengal, the climate of which in those days was as notorious as, in later days, that of Gombroon. After the fall of ʿAbdū 'n-Nabī—a man whom Akbar used once to honour by holding the slippers before his feet—Sultān Khwāja, a member of the Divine Faith (vide p. 214), was appointed as Sadr, and the *Sadr*s after him were so limited in conferring lands independently of Akbar, and had so few grants to look after, as to tempt Badaonī to indulge in sarcastical remarks. The following were Akbar's *Sadr*s —

¹ Regarding the turning out of Atamghā and Madad : ma'āsh holders vide Elliot's Glossary under Atamghā p 18.

1 Shaykh Gadā'ī, a Shīʿah, appointed at the recommendation of Bayrām Khān, till 968

2 Khwāja Muhammad Ṣālih, till 971

3 Shaykh ʿAbdū 'n-Nabī, till 986

4 Sultān Khwāja, till his death in 993

5 Amīr Fathū 'llāh of Shirāz, till 997

6 Ṣadr Jahān, whose name coincides with the title of his office

Abū 'i-Fazl also mentions a Sadr Mawlanū ʿAbdū 'l Baqī, but I do not know when he held office

I extract a few short passages from Badaonī

Page 29 Shaykh Gadā'ī cancelled the Madad i maʿash lands, and took away the legacies¹ of the Khinzūdas (Afghāns) and gave a Suyūrghāl to any one that would bear up with humiliating treatment, but not otherwise. Nevertheless, in comparison with the present time, when obstacles are raised to the possession of every jarīb of ground, nay, even less, you may call the Shaykh an ʿĀlambakhsh (one who gives away a world)

Page 52 After Shaykh Gadā'ī, Khājagi Muhammad Ṣālih was, in 968 appointed Sadr, but he did not possess such extensive powers in conferring lands as madad i maʿash, because he was dependent on the Diwāns

Page 71 In 972, or perhaps more correctly in 971, Shaykh ʿAbdū 'n-Nabī was appointed Sadr. In giving away lands, he was to consult Muzaffar Khan after the Shaykh acquired such absolute powers that he conferred on deserving people whole worlds of subsistence allowances, lands, and pensions, so much so that if you place the grants of all former kings of Hindūstān in one scale, and those of the Shaykh into the other, his scale would weigh more. But several years later the scale went up, as it had been under former kings, and matters took an adverse turn.

¹ augūt For har read bārah

Page 204 In 983, His Majesty gave the order that the Ayimas of the whole empire should not be let off by the kroris of each Pergana, unless they brought the farmāns in which their grants, subsistence allowances and pensions were described, to the Sadr for inspection and verification. For this reason a large number of worthy people, from the eastern districts up to Bhakkar on the Indus, came to Court. If any of them had a powerful protector in one of the grantees or near friends of His Majesty, he could manage to have his affair settled, but those who were destitute of such recommendations had to bribe Sayyid 'Abd^u'r-Rasūl, the Shaykh's head man or make presents to his farrāshes, darbāns (porters), ayces (grooms), and mihtars (sweepers), "in order to get their blanket out of the mire." Unless, however, they had either strong recommendations, or had recourse to bribery, they were utterly ruined. Many of the Ayimas, without obtaining their object, died from the heat caused by the crowding of the multitudes. Though a report of this came to the ears of His Majesty, no one dared to take these unfortunate people before the emperor. And when the Shaykh in all his pride and haughtiness, sat upon his masnad (cushion), and influential grantees introduced to him, in his office, scientific or pious men, the Shaykh received them in his filthy way, paid respect to no one,¹ and after much asking, begging, and exaggerating he allowed, for example, a teacher of the Hudāya (a book on law) and other college books 100 Bighas, more or less, and though such a man might have been for a long time in possession of more extensive lands, the Shaykh took them away. But to men of no renown, to low fellows, even to Hindus, he gave primitive lands as marks² of personal favour. Hence science and scientific men fell in estimation. At no time had a Sadr for so long a time exercised more tyrannical powers.

The fate of 'Abd^u'n Nabī has been related above. Akbar gave him money for the poor of Makkah, and sent him on a pilgrimage. When he came back, he was called to account for the money, was put in prison, and murdered "by some scoundrel" in 992.

¹ Badaoni says that even in the State hall when before the time of prayer he washed his hands and feet, he took care to spurt water on the grantees standing near him.

² For batafisi in the text (p. 205) one MS. of Badaoni reads zamin-i-batāfisi, ka-tafāfisi as khud midad.

The next Sadr was Sultan Khwaja Matters relating to suyūrghals now took a very different course Akbar had rejected the Islam, and the new şadr, who had just returned from Makkah,¹ became a member of the Divine Faith The systematic persecution of the learned and the lawyers had commenced, and His Majesty inquired personally into all grants (vide p 199, second para) The lands were now steadily withdrawn, and according to Badā'onī, who had managed to get 1,000 bighas, at first to the great disgust of 'Abd' n Nabī, many a Muhammadan family was impoverished or utterly ruined

In 993, Fath'ullah of Shīrāz (vide p 34) was appointed Şadr As the Suyūrghāl duties, and with them the dignity of the Sadr, had dwindled down to nothing Fath'ullah, though Sadr, could be spared for missions to the Dakhin, Bad, p 343

"His Shīrāzī servant Kamāl officiated for him during his absence, and looked after these lacklands of Ayima dars,² who had a few spots here and there, for the dignity of the Sadr had approached its kamāl (perfection) Fath'ullah had not even the power of conferring five bighas, in fact he was an imaginary Sadr, as all lands had been withdrawn And yet, the lands which had been withdrawn became the dwelling places of wild animals, and thus belonged neither to the Ayima dars nor to farmers However, of all these oppressions, there is at least a record left in the books of the Şadr, though of the office of the Sadr the name only is left

Page 368 Fath'ullah [the Sadr himself] laid before His Majesty a bag containing the sum of Rs 1,000, which his collector by means of oppression or under the pretext that an Ayima dar was not forthcoming or dead, had squeezed out of the widows and unfortunate orphans of the Pargana of Basāwar [which was his jaḡir] and said "My collectors have this much collected from the Ayima dars as a kifayat (i.e., because the collectors thought the Suyūrghāl holders had more than sufficient to live upon)" But the emperor allowed him to keep the sum for himself

The next Sadr, Şadr Jahan was a member of the Divine Faith Though appointed Sadr immediately after the death of Fath'ullah, Badā'onī continues calling him Muftī yī mamālīk i mahrusa, the Muftī of the empire, which had been his title before. Perhaps it was no longer necessary to have a separate officer for the Sadrshīp Şadr Jahan continued to serve under Jahāngīr.

¹ The same happened afterwards to Mirza Āzīz Koka In fact several examples are on record that devout pilgrims returned so disappointed and fleeced from Makkah

A great portion of the Suyūrghal lands is specified by Abū 'l Fazl in the geographical tables of the Third Book

Ā'in 20

ON THE CARRIAGES, ETC, INVENTED BY HIS MAJESTY

His Majesty has invented an extraordinary carriage, which has proved a source of much comfort for various people. When this carriage is used for travelling, or for carrying loads, it may be employed for grinding corn.¹

His Majesty also invented a large cart, which is drawn by one elephant. It is made sufficiently large so as to hold several bath rooms, and thus serves as a travelling bath. It is also easily drawn by cattle.

Camels and horses also are used for pulling carriages, and thus contribute to the comfort of mankind. Finely built carriages are called bahals,² if used on even ground several may sit together and travel on.

Water wheels and carts have also been so constructed that water may be fetched from far, low places. Two oxen may pull four such wheels at the same time, or one ox two.

Another machine exists which conveys water from a well, and moves at the same time a millstone.

Ā'in 21

THE TEN SER TAX (DAHSERI)

His Majesty takes from each bīgha of tilled land ten sers of grain as a royalty. Store-houses have been constructed in every district. They supply the animals belonging to the State with food, which is never bought in the bazars. These stores prove at the same time of great use for the people, for poor cultivators may receive grain for sowing purposes, or people may buy cheap grain at the time of famines. But the stores are only used to supply necessities. They are also used for benevolent purposes, for His Majesty has established in his empire many houses.³

¹ This was according to Nizam's Tabaqāt, an invention of Fath' Allah of Shiraz (vide p. 39 note). Nizam says, He constructed a millstone which was placed on a cart. It turned itself and ground corn. He also invented a looking glass which whether seen near or at a distance showed all sorts of curious figures. Also a wheel which cleaned at once twelve barrels. The last mentioned wheel also is ascribed by Abū 'l Fazl to Akbar, vide Book I, Ā'in 38 p. 122.

² Regarding English carriages (rāh-s angrezi) brought to India under Jahāngīr vide Tuzuk, pp. 167, 168.

³ Vide pp. 210 and 211.

for the poor, where indigent people may get something to eat. He also appoints everywhere experienced people to look after these store-houses, and selects for this purpose active Dārogahs and clever writers, who watch the receipts and charges.

A^{*in} 22

ON FEASTS

HIS Majesty inquires into the excellent customs of past ages, and without looking to the men of the past in particular, he takes up that which is proper, though he have to pay a high price for it. He bestows his fostering care upon men of various classes, and seeks for occasions to make presents. Thus, when His Majesty was informed of the feasts of the Jamsheds, and the festivals of the Parsi priests, he adopted them, and used them as opportunities of conferring benefits. The following are the most important feasts. 1 The New Year's Day feast ¹ It commences on the day when the Sun in his splendour moves to Aries and lasts till the nineteenth day of the month (Farwardin). Two days of this period are considered great festivals, when much money and numerous other things are given away as presents, the first day of the month of Farwardin, and the nineteenth, which is the time of the Sharaf. Again, His Majesty followed the custom of the ancient Pārsis, who held banquets on those days the names of which coincided with the name of a month ² The following are the days which have the same name as a month. 19th Farwardin, 3rd Urdibihisht, 6th Khurdād, 13th Tir, 7th Amurdād, 4th Shahrivar, 16th Mihr, 10th Ābān, 9th Āzar, 8th, 15th, 23rd Day, 2nd, Bahman, 5th Isfandārmuz. Feasts are actually and ideally held on each of these days. People in their happiness raise the strain of inward joy. In the beginning of each pahr the naqqāras (vide p. 51, l. 1) are beaten, when the singers and musicians fall in. On the first of the above feasts coloured lamps are used for three nights, on the second for one night, and the joy is general.

I have given a few particulars in the first book (Ā^{*in} 18)

A^{*in} 23

THE KHUSHROZ OR DAY OF FANCY BĀZĀRS

On the third feast of every month, His Majesty holds a large assembly for the purpose of inquiring into the many wonderful things

¹ Badaoni generally calls this day Nawruz : Jahli, vide p. 183, note 2

² Thus Ābān was the name of the eighth month (October–November), but the tenth day also of every month had the same name

found in this world. The merchants of the age are eager to attend, and lay out articles from all countries. The people of His Majesty's Harem come, and the women of other men also are invited, and buying and selling is quite general. His Majesty uses such days to select any articles which he wishes to buy, or to fix the price of things, and thus add to his knowledge. The secrets of the empire, the character of the people, the good and bad qualities of each office and workshop, will then appear. His Majesty gives to such days the name of Khushrūz, or the joyful day as they are a source of much enjoyment.

After the fancy bāzārs for women, bāzārs for the men are held. Merchants of all countries then sell their wares. His Majesty watches the transactions, and such as are admitted to Court indulge in the pleasure of buying. Bāzār people, on such occasions, may lay their grievances before His Majesty, without being prevented by the mace bearers, and may use the opportunity of laying out their stores, in order to explain their circumstances. For those who are good, the dawn of success rises, whilst wicked bāzār people are called to account.

His Majesty has appointed for this purpose a separate treasurer and an accountant, so that the sellers may get paid without delay. The profit made by tradesmen on such occasions is very great.¹

Ā'in 24

REGULATIONS REGARDING MARRIAGES

Every care bestowed upon this wonderful tie between men is a means of preserving the stability of the human race, and ensuring the progress of the world, it is a preventive against the outbreak of evil passions, and leads to the establishment of homes. Hence His Majesty, who is benign, watches over great and small, and imbues men with notions of the spiritual union and the equality of essence which is the basis of marriage. He abhors marriages which take place between children before the age of puberty. They bring forth no fruit, and His Majesty thinks them even hurtful, for afterwards, when such a man reaches manhood, they dislike having connexion and their marriages are void.

Here in India, where a man cannot see the girl whom he is betrothed, there are peculiar obstacles, but His Majesty requires the consent of the bride and bridegroom, and the consent of the parents, are absolutely necessary in marriage.

¹ Regarding these fancy bāzārs see above Bādshāh's Amalgarāh c. 23.

for the poor, where indigent people may get something to eat. He also appoints everywhere experienced people to look after these store houses, and selects for this purpose active Dārogahs and clever writers, who watch the receipts and charges.

Ā'in 22

ON FEASTS

His Majesty inquires into the excellent customs of past ages, and without looking to the men of the past in particular, he takes up that which is proper, though he have to pay a high price for it. He bestows his fostering care upon men of various classes, and seeks for occasions to make presents. Thus, when His Majesty was informed of the feasts of the Jamsheds, and the festivals of the Parsī priests, he adopted them, and used them as opportunities of conferring benefits. The following are the most important feasts. 1 The New Year's Day feast ¹ It commences on the day when the Sun in his splendour moves to Aries and lasts till the nineteenth day of the month (Farwardīn). Two days of this period are considered great festivals, when much money and numerous other things are given away as presents, the first day of the month of Farwardīn, and the nineteenth, which is the time of the Sharaf. Again, His Majesty followed the custom of the ancient Parsīs, who held banquets on those days the names of which coincided with the name of a month ² The following are the days which have the same name as a month: 19th Farwardīn, 3rd Urdībihisht, 6th Khūrdād, 13th Tir, 7th Amurdād, 4th Shahrīvar, 16th Mīhr, 10th Ābān, 9th Āzar, 8th, 15th, 23rd Day, 2nd, Bahman, 5th Isfandārmuz. Feasts are actually and ideally held on each of these days. People in their happiness raise the strain of inward joy. In the beginning of each pahr the naqqāras (vide p 51, l 1) are beaten, when the singers and musicians fall in. On the first of the above feasts coloured lamps are used for three nights, on the second for one night, and the joy is general.

I have given a few particulars in the first book (Ā'in 18)

Ā'in 23

THE KHUSHROZ OR DAY OF FANCY BĀZĀRS

On the third feast day of every month, His Majesty holds a large assembly for the purpose of inquiring into the many wonderful things

¹ Badāoni generally calls this day Nawrūz & Jahli, vide p 183 note 2

² Thus Ābān was the name of the eighth month (October–November), but the tenth day also of every month had the same name

found in this world. The merchants of the age are eager to attend, and lay out articles from all countries. The people of His Majesty's Harem come, and the women of other men also are invited, and buying and selling is quite general. His Majesty uses such days to select any articles which he wishes to buy, or to fix the price of things, and thus add to his knowledge. The secrets of the empire, the character of the people, the good and bad qualities of each office and workshop, will then appear. His Majesty gives to such days the name of Khushriz, or the joyful day as they are a source of much enjoyment.

After the fancy bāzārs for women, bāzārs for the men are held. Merchants of all countries then sell their wares. His Majesty watches the transactions, and such as are admitted to Court indulge in the pleasure of buying. Bazar people, on such occasions, may lay their grievances before His Majesty, without being prevented by the mace bearers, and may use the opportunity of laying out their stores, in order to explain their circumstances. For those who are good, the dawn of success rises, whilst wicked bāzār people are called to account.

His Majesty has appointed for this purpose a separate treasurer and an accountant, so that the sellers may get paid without delay. The profit made by tradesmen on such occasions is very great.¹

A⁴in 24

REGULATIONS REGARDING MARRIAGES

Every care bestowed upon this wonderful tie between men is a means of preserving the stability of the human race, and ensuring the progress of the world, it is a preventive against the outbreak of evil passions, and leads to the establishment of homes. Hence His Majesty, inasmuch as he is benign, watches over great and small, and imbues men with his notions of the spiritual union and the equality of essence which he sees in marriage. He abhors marriages which take place between man and woman before the age of puberty. They bring forth no fruit, and His Majesty thinks them even hurtful, for afterwards, when such a couple ripens into manhood, they dislike having connexion, and their home is desolate.

Here in India, where a man cannot see the woman to whom he is betrothed, there are peculiar obstacles, but His Majesty maintains that the consent of the bride and bridegroom, and the permission of the parents, are absolutely necessary in marriage contracts.

¹ Regarding these fancy Bazar's vide above Badaoni's remarks on p 213, l 4

Marriage between near relations His Majesty thinks highly improper He says, "The fact that, in ancient times (1) even, a girl was not given to her twin brother¹ ought to silence those who are fond of historical proofs. Marriage between first cousins, however, does not strike the bigoted followers of Muhammad's religion as wrong, for the beginning of a religion resembles, in this regard, the beginning of the creation of mankind

His Majesty disapproves of high dowries, for as they are rarely ever paid, they are mere sham, but he admits that the fixing of high dowries is a preventive against rash divorces Nor does His Majesty approve of every one marrying more than one wife, for this ruins a man's health, and disturbs the peace of the home He censures old women that take young husbands, and says that doing so is against all modesty

He has also appointed two sober and sensible men, one of whom inquires into the circumstances of the bridegroom, and the other into those of the bride These two officers have the title of Tu^āi begī, or masters of marriages In many cases, the duties are performed by one and the same officer His Majesty also takes a tax from both parties, to enable them to show their gratitude The payment of this tax is looked upon as auspicious Mansabdars commanding from five to one thousand, pay 10 Muhrs, do from one thousand to five hundred, 4 M, do to Commanders of one hundred, 2 M, do to Commanders of forty, 1 M, do to Commanders of ten, 4 R The latter fee is also paid by rich people The middle classes pay 1 R, and common people 1 *dām*² In demanding this tax, the officers have to pay regard to the circumstances of the father of the bride

Ā^āin 25

REGULATIONS REGARDING EDUCATION

In every country, but especially in Hindūstān, boys are kept for years at school, where they learn the consonants and vowels A great portion of the life of the students is wasted by making them read many books His Majesty orders that every school boy should first learn to write the letters of the Alphabet, and also learn to trace their several forms³ He ought to learn the shape and name of each letter, which may be done in two days, when the boy should proceed to write the joined letters. They may be practised for a week, after which the boy should learn some prose and poetry by heart, and then commit to memory some verses to the praise of God or moral sentences, each written separately. Care is to be taken that he learns to understand everything himself, but the teacher may assist him a little. He then ought for some time to be daily practised in writing a hemistich or a verse, and will soon acquire a current hand. The teacher ought especially to look after five things: knowledge of the letters, meanings of words, the hemistich, the verse, the former lesson. If this method of teaching be adopted, a boy will learn in a month or even in a day, what it took others years to understand, so much so that people will get quite astonished. Every boy ought to read books on morals, arithmetic, the notation peculiar to arithmetic, agriculture, mensuration, geometry, astronomy, physiognomy, household matters, the rules of government, medicine, logic, the tabiṣī, riyāzī and ilāhī, sciences,¹ and history, all of which may be gradually acquired.

[¹ — و سرزبان ندی حنان رود آنکه در باستان دختر برادر]

² The sons and daughters of common people were not allowed to marry unless they came to the office of the kotwāl and were stared at by the kotwāl's men who had to take down their respective ages and you may imagine what advantages and fine opportunities the officers thus had especially the people of the kotwāl and the khānā yz talāi (?) and their other low assistants outside Bal II, p 391 Vide also Third Book

³ Boys in the East generally learn to write by running their pens over the characters of the copyists (qat'as)

In studying Sanscrit, students ought to learn the Bayakaran, Niya, Bedanta, and Patanjali. No one should be allowed to neglect those things which the present time requires.

These regulations shed a new light on schools, and cast a bright lustre over Madrasas.

A⁴ in 26

THE ADMIRALTY

This department is of great use for the successful operations of the army, and for the benefit of the country in general, it furnishes means of obtaining things of value, provides for agriculture, and His Majesty's household. His Majesty, in fostering this source of power, keeps four objects in view, and looks upon promoting the efficiency of this department as an act of divine worship.

First—The fitting out of strong boats, capable of carrying elephants. Some are made in such a manner as to be of use in sieges and for the conquest of strong forts. Experienced officers look upon ships as if they were houses and dromedaries, and use them as excellent means of conquest. So especially in Turkey, Zanzibar, and Europe. In every part of His stick to his feet, and when he is quite senseless and exhausted, the hunters come from the ambush and kill him. Or they take him alive, and tame him.

¹ This is the three-fold division of sciences. Ilāhī or dirāsā, sciences comprise every thing connected with theology and the means of acquiring a knowledge of God. Riyāzī sciences treat of quantity and comprise mathematics, astronomy, music, mechanics. Tabiṣī sciences comprehend physical sciences.

Some dictionaries call the last class of sciences tabiṣī instead of tabiṣī.

His Majesty, from his straightforwardness, dislikes having recourse to such tricks, and prefers with bows or matchlocks openly to attack this brute, which destroys so many lives.

Another method—An intrepid experienced hunter gets on the back of a male buffalo and makes it attack the tiger. The buffalo will quickly catch the tiger on its horns, and toss it violently upwards so that it dies. It is impossible to describe the excitement of this manner of hunting the tiger. One does not know what to admire more, the courage of the rider, or his skill in standing firm on the slippery back of the buffalo.

One day, notice was given that a man-eating tiger had made its appearance in the district of Bārī. His Majesty got on the elephant Nāhir Khān, and went into the jungle. The brute was stirred up, and striking its claws into the forehead of the huge animal it pulled its head close down to the ground, when the tiger was killed by the men. This occurrence astonished the most intrepid and experienced hunters.

On another occasion, His Majesty hunted near Toḍa. The tiger had stretched one of the party to the ground. His Majesty aimed at the brute, killed it, and thus saved the life of the man.

Once during a *qamargha*¹ chase, a large tiger was stirred up. The animal attacked His Majesty, when he shot it in time through the head and killed it.

Once a tiger struck his claws into a man. All who witnessed it despaired of his life. His Majesty shot the tiger through the body and released the unfortunate man.

A remarkable scene took place in the forest of Mathura. Shujaʿat Khān (vide *Ā*¹ in 30, No 51), who had advanced very far, got suddenly timid. His Majesty remained standing where he was, and looked furiously at the tiger. The brute cowered² down before that divine glance, and turned right about trembling all over. In a short time it was killed.³

The feats of His Majesty are too numerous to be imagined, much less can a Hindustani, as I am, describe them in a dignified style.

He slays lions,⁴ but would not hurt an ant.

He girds himself for the fray, but the lion⁴ drops his claws from fear.⁴

¹ Qamargha is a chase for which drivers are employed. [The game is apparently enclosed in a living ring.—P.]

² This is one of Akbar's miracles.

³ Sker, tiger.—P.]

⁴ These two verses are taken from Fayṣi's Ḥal Daman, vide p. 113, note 1.

2 Elephant-catching

There are several modes of hunting elephants

1. *Kheda*¹ The hunters are both on horseback and on foot. They go during summer to the grazing places of this wonderful animal, and commence to beat drums and blow pipes, the noise of which makes the elephants quite frightened. They commence to rush about, till from their heaviness and exertions no strength is left in them. They are then sure to run under a tree for shade, when some experienced hunters throw a rope made of hemp or bark round their feet or necks, and thus tie them to the trees. They are afterwards led off in company with some trained elephants, and gradually get tame. One-fourth of the value of an elephant thus caught is given to the hunters as wages.

2. Chor kheda They take a tame female elephant to the grazing place of wild elephants, the driver stretching himself on the back of the elephant, without moving or giving any other sign of his presence. The elephants then commence to fight, when the driver manages to secure one by throwing a rope round the foot.

3. *Gād*² A deep pit is constructed in a place frequented by elephants, which is covered up with grass. As soon as the elephants come near it the hunters from their ambush commence to make a great noise. The elephants get confused, and losing their habitual cautiousness, they fall rapidly and noisily into the hole. They are then starved and kept without water, when they soon get tame.

4. Bār They dig a ditch round the resting place of elephants, leaving only one road open, before which they put up a door, which is fastened with ropes. The door is left open, but closes when the rope is cut. The hunters then put both inside and outside the door such food as elephants like. The elephants eat it up greedily, their voraciousness makes them forget all cautiousness, and without fear they enter at the door. A fearless hunter, who has been lying concealed, then cuts the rope, and the door closes. The elephants start up, and in their fury try to break the door. They are all in commotion. The hunters then kindle fires and make much noise. The elephants run about till they get tired, and no strength is left in them. Tame females are then brought to the place, by whose means the wild elephants are caught. They soon get tame.

From times of old, people have enjoyed elephant hunts by any of the above modes. His Majesty has invented a new manner, which admits of remarkable finesse. In fact, all excellent modes of hunting are inventions of His Majesty. A wild herd of elephants is surrounded on three sides by drivers, one side alone being left open. At it several female elephants are stationed. From all sides, male elephants will approach to cover the females. The latter then go gradually into an enclosure, whither the males follow. They are now caught as shown above.¹

¹ Hence our elephant kheddas
² For gā or garā l. a p t.—P]

3 Leopard² Hunting

Leopards, when wild, select three places. In one part of the country they hunt, in another part they rest and sleep, and in a third district they play and amuse themselves. They mostly sleep on the top of a hill. The shade of a tree is sufficient for the leopard. He rubs himself against the trunk. Round about the tree they deposit their excrements, which are called in Hindī ālhar.

Formerly, hunters used to make deep holes and cover them with grass. These pits were called odī. The leopards on coming near them, fell down to the bottom, but they often broke their feet or legs, or managed by jumping to get out again. Nor could you catch more than one in each pit. . . . method, which has astonished the . . . a pit only two or three gaz deep, and . . . h closes when the leopard falls into the hole. The animal is thus never hurt. Sometimes more than one go into the trap. On one occasion no less than seven leopards were caught. At the time of their heat, which takes place in winter, a female leopard had been walking about on the field, and six male leopards were after her. Accidentally she fell into a pit, and her male companions, unwilling to let her off, dropped in one after the other—a nice scene, indeed.

His Majesty also catches leopards by tiring them out, which is very interesting to look at.

¹ A large number of people had surrounded the whole jungle outside of which on . . . put on a tree as a seat for theams had been put upon which two hundred male elephants with at the . . . two

² Yuz the chūdi or hunting leopard — 1

Another method is to fasten nooses to the foot of the above mentioned tree. When the animal comes to scratch itself, it gets entangled.

His Majesty generally hunts leopards thirty or forty kos from Āgra, especially in the districts of Barī Sumawālī, Alapūr, Sunnām, Bhatīnda, Bhatnir, Paṭan in the Panjab, Fathpur Jhinjhanū, Nagor, Mirath Jodhpūr, Jaisalmir, Amrsarnāyīn, but several other more remote spots have been selected as hunting grounds. His Majesty used often to go to the first mentioned places, take out the leopards that had fallen into a pit, and hand them over to the keepers. He would often travel over great distances, and was perhaps just on the point of resting a little, but before he had done so, good news were brought from some hunting ground, when he hastened away on a fleet courser.

In former times people managed to train a newly caught leopard for the chase in the space of three months, or if they exerted themselves, in two months. From the attention which His Majesty pays to this animal, leopards are now trained in an excellent manner in the short space of eighteen days. Old and active keepers were surprised at such results, and extolled the charm of His Majesty's knowledge. From good motives and from a desire to add splendour to his court, His Majesty used to take it upon himself to keep and train leopards, astonishing the most experienced by his success.

A rather remarkable case is the following. Once a leopard had been caught and without previous training on a mere hunt by His Majesty, it brought in the prey like trained leopards. Those who were present had their eyes opened to truth and experienced the blessing of prostrating themselves in belief on His Majesty.¹

Attracted by the wonderful influence of the loving heart of His Majesty, a leopard once followed the imperial suite without collar or chain, and like a sensible human being obeyed every command and at every leopard chase enjoyed it very much to have its skill brought to the test.

There are two hundred keepers in charge of the khūsa leopards. A proper system of training has been laid down.

Aⁿ 28

THE FOOD ALLOWED TO LEOPARDS THE WAGES OF THE KEEPERS

First class leopards get 5 s of meat every day, second class 4½ s, third class 4 s, fourth class, 3¾ s, fifth class 3½ s, sixth class 3¼ s,

¹ Two more miracles of Akbar's seventh class, 3 s , eighth class, 2½ s The meat is given in a lump , and as on Sundays no animals are killed,¹ double the daily portion is given on Saturdays

Formerly every six months, but now annually, four seers of butter and one tenth of a ser of brimstone are given as ointment, which prevents itch Four men also were appointed to train and look after each leopard , but now there are three men told off for such leopards as sit on horses when taken to the hunting ground, and only two for such as sit on carts and on doolies The wages of the keepers vary from 30 R to 5 R per mensem , but they have at the same time to look after the cattle which draw the leopard carts The servants who look after the cattle are divided into seniors and juniors, each class being subdivided into five divisions The seniors get 300 d , 260 d , 220 d , 200 d , and 180 d , which is the lowest allowance , the juniors get 160 d , 140 d , 120 d , 110 d , and 100 d For the sake of show, the leopards get brocaded saddle cloths,² chains studded with jewels, and coarse blankets, and *Gushkānī*³ carpets to sit on Grandees of the court also are appointed to superintend the keepers of each leopard , they are to take care that the animals are nicely dressed, and that new ones are added to the establishment Each leopard has a name which indicates some of his qualities Every ten leopards form a Misl or Taraf (set) , they are also divided according to their rank as follows One thousand⁴ leopards are kept in His Majesty s park, and an interesting encampment they form The three first sets are lkhāṣa , they are kept at Court together with two other sets For their conveyance two litters (mihaffa) are hung over the back of an elephant, one litter on each side On each litter one leopard sits, looking out for a prey Litters are also put on camels, horses, and mules Carts even are made for the leopards, and are drawn by horses or cattle , or they are made to sit on horses , and sometimes they are carried by men in doolies The best leopard which His Majesty has goes by the name of Samand mānik , he is carried on a chau-dol and proceeds with much pomp His servants fully equipped, run at his side, the naqqāra (a large drum) is beaten in front, and sometimes he is carried by two men on horseback, the two ends of the pole of the chau dol resting on the necks of their horses. Formerly two horses were kept for every leopard, but now three horses are given to two leopards. Others have a dooly, or a cart drawn by four oxen. Many travel along on one and the same dooly. A tame, trained leopard has the dooly carried by three men, others by two.

Skill exhibited by hunting leopards

Leopards will go against the wind, and thus they get scent of a prey, or come to hear its voice. They then plan an attack, and give the hunters notice where the prey is¹. The hunters keep the animal near themselves and proceed to catch the prey. This is done in three ways.

1 Ūparghāṭī The hunters let off the leopard to the right from the place where the deer² was seen. The leopard swiftly seizes it with his claws. 2 Righnī The leopard lies concealed, and is shown the deer² from a distance. The collar is then taken off, when the leopard, with perfect skill, will dash off, jumping from ambush to ambush till he catches the deer². 3 Muhārī The leopard is put in an ambush, having the wind towards himself. The cart is then taken away to the opposite direction. This perplexes the deer,² when the leopard will suddenly make his way near it and catch it.

It is impossible to describe the wonderful feats of this animal, language fails to express his skill and cunning. Thus he will raise up the dust with his forefeet and hind legs, in order to conceal himself, or he will lie down so flat, that you cannot distinguish him from the surface of the ground.

Formerly a leopard would not kill more than three deer² at one and the same chase, but now he will hunt as many as twelve.

His Majesty has also invented a method called chairmandal. The hunters lie in ambush near a place frequented by deer,² and commence the chase from this place as if it was a qamargha hunt (in which drivers are used). The leopards are then let off in all directions, and many deer² are thus caught.

The men employed to train and keep the imperial leopards receive presents on all occasions when the animals exhibit skill, as an encouragement to further exertions. A special present has been fixed for each animal, but I cannot specify this.

Once from the kindness shown by His Majesty, a deer² made friendship with a leopard. They lived together and enjoyed each other's company. The most remarkable thing was this, that the leopard when let off against other deer,¹ would pounce upon them as any other leopard.

[¹ The translation of this passage is doubtful — P.]

[² Āhā gazelle — P.]

In former times leopards were never allowed to remain loose towards the close of the day, for people were afraid of their stubbornness and anxiety to run away. But now, in consequence of the practical rules made by His Majesty, they are let loose in the evenings and yet remain obedient. Formerly, leopards were also kept blindfolded,² except at the time of the chase, for the leopards used to get brisk and run about as if mad. But nowadays they are kept without covers for their heads. The grandees of the court are allowed to bet on forty Mūsa leopards, whoever wins takes the amount of his bet from the others. If a leopard is first in bringing twenty deer, his *Dorīya*³ gets five rupees from his equals. The grandee in charge of the Mūsa leopards, Sayyid Ahmad of Bīrha⁴ gets one muhr from each bet, by which he makes a good deal of money. As often as a grandee lays before His Majesty twenty pair of deer horns⁵ he takes an Ashrafī from each of his equals. So also do the Tarafdars and *Qarāwals*⁶ bet, in fact every one shows his zeal in trying to get as many deer¹ as possible. The skins of the deer¹ are often given to poor people as part of money presents.

It is remarkable that His Majesty can at once tell by seeing a hide to what hunting ground the deer¹ belonged.

His Majesty, in fulfilment of a vow made by him before the birth of the eldest prince, never hunts on Fridays.⁷

*The Suyāh qosh*¹

His Majesty is very fond of using this plucky little animal for hunting purposes. In former times it would attack a hare or a fox, but now it kills black deer². It eats daily 1 s of meat. Each has a separate keeper, who gets 100 d per mensem.

Dogs

His Majesty likes this animal very much for his excellent qualities, and imports dogs from all countries. Excellent dogs come from Kabul especially from the Hazara district [north of Rawūl Pindi]. They even ornament dogs, and give them names³. Dogs will attack every kind of animals and more remarkable still they will attack a tiger. Several also will join and hunt down the enemy. Khāsa dogs get daily 2 s of meat, others get 1½ s. There is one keeper for every two *Tāvī*⁴ (hunting) dogs, their wages are 100 d per mensem⁵.

Hunting Deer⁶ with Deer

This timid animal also may be tamed and trained. They put a net⁷ over his horns, and let it off against wild deer⁸ which from fear will fight with them. During the struggle, the horn, or the foot, or the ears of the wild deer will get entangled in the net, the hunters who have been lying in ambush, will then run up to it, and catch it. The deer thus caught

¹ Jahangir's self denial was not great, for when the prince was sick, Jahangir was fifty years of age!

² Or black ear the Persian translation of the Turkish qara qolag whence our Felis caracul.

[The Deccan ...]

³ ... etc

⁴ ...

to

of

Pe

⁵ ... of thick gut —]

passes through a course of instruction, and gets tame. If the net¹ should break, or the deer get tired during the struggle, it will return to the keeper, who either puts a new net² on it, or sends out a fresh deer³.

Sultān Firūz i Khiljī used to indulge in this sport, but His Majesty reduced this manner of hunting to a proper system.

Sometimes it happens that a wild deer will carry on the struggle from morning till evening, defeating as many as four tamed deer, but at last it will succumb to the fifth. Deer are nowadays rendered so perfectly obedient as to hunt at night, of their own accord they will return to their keepers, should the net break, or the wild deer run away, on hearing the call, they will discontinue a fight, come back, and then again engage, if ordered to do so.

In former times deer were never let loose at night time, for people were afraid, lest they should run away. Hence they attached a heavy ball to one of their feet, when the deer were let loose.

Many stories are related of the sagacity and faithfulness of trained deer.

Only lately a deer created much sensation. It had run away from Iahābīd, and after bravely crossing rivers and plains, returned to the Panjab, its home, and rejoined its former keeper.

In former times, two persons at most enjoyed together the pleasures of deer hunting. They would even, from fear of the timidity of the deer, alter the style of their dress, and lie concealed among shrubs. Nor would they employ other than wild deer, they caught them somehow, and taught them to hunt. His Majesty has introduced a new way, according to which more than two hundred may at the same time go deer hunting. They drive slowly about forty cattle towards a place where deer are, the hunters are thus concealed, and when arrived enjoy the chase.

There are nowadays also deer studs, the deer born in captivity are employed as hunting deer.

The keepers will also bend forward and allow the trained deer to jump on them from behind. Wild deer, on seeing this, will think that they are in the act of copulation, and come near to fight. This way of hunting is disapproved of by His Majesty, who uses female deer as a means of making wild deer fight.

• Once a deer caught a leopard, whose foot had got entangled in the net¹. Both were brought together from Gujrāt, as mentioned above (?).

Ghantāhera is the name given to the following mode of hunting. The hunter takes a shield, or a basket, the concave¹ side being turned from him. He then lights a lamp, which being put in the concavity of the shield, will conceal him, and commences to ring bells. Other hunters lie at the same time in wait. The light of the lamp, and the sound of the bells, will attract the animals towards the place, when they are shot by the hunters in ambush. The sound of musical instruments will so enchant deer that they are easily caught, or sometimes hunters will charm them with a song, and when the deer approach will rise up and cruelly slay them. From a long time His Majesty has disapproved of these two methods.

[¹ Dim, probably a noose of thick gut.—P.]

[² Āhū gazelle.—P.]

Thāngī The hunter manages to get opposite a wild deer, and bareheaded, from a distance, he commences to throw himself into odd attitudes. The deer then mistakes him for a mad man, and from curiosity will approach him. At this moment the hunters come from the ambush and kill it.

Baukāra The hunters lie in ambush, against the scent, at a good distance from each other. Some others drive the deer towards them, each of the drivers swinging a white sheet above his head. The deer naturally will take fright, and run towards the hunters in ambush, who kill them.

Dadāvan Two good shots, dressed in green, place themselves as before, and have the deer driven towards themselves. This manner of hunting yields much amusement, as the deer get quite perplexed.

Ajāra The hunters tie green twigs round their bodies from head to foot, and similarly conceal their bows and arrows. They then move boldly to a place where deer generally pass, and enjoy the chase. Or they make ropes of deer skin, and attach them to trees or let them hang down from poles all round about the place where wild deer sleep. They then lay down some nooses at a place situate against the wind. When the hunters show themselves from the side, the deer are compelled to run towards the spot where the nooses lie and thus get caught. Sometimes the hunter will take his place behind a tree and imitate the voice of deer. As soon as deer approach him he kills them. Or, they tie a female deer to a place in a plain or they let a trained deer go to the pasture place of wild deer. The latter will soon come near it, and get entangled with their feet.

Thāngī The hunter² walks about bareheaded as if mad, his clothes are stained all over with pān juice, and the man himself acts as if he were wounded. Wild animals and others will soon gather round him waiting for his death, but their greediness and desire lead them to destruction.

[¹ Wazhgun The concave side towards him?—P.]

[² The text has dar khāna-yi zin in the hollow of a saddle (!)] gets a quantity of meat weighing 7 dams, the jurra, 6 d; the bahrī, lāchīn,¹ and khela, 5 d, the bāsha, 3 d, the chappak bāsha, shikara, chappak shikara, besra, dhōī, etc., 2 d. Towards the close of every day, they are fed on sparrows, of which the bāz, jurra, and bahrī, get each seven, the lāchīn, five, the bāsha, three, others, two. Charghs and logars get at the same time meat. Shunqārs, shāhbāzes, burkats, get one ser. On the hunting grounds they feed them on the game they take.

Prices of Falcons

From eagerness to purchase, and from inexperience, people pay high sums for falcons. His Majesty allows dealers every reasonable profit but from motives of equity, he has limited the prices. The dealers are to get their gain, but buyers ought not to be cheated. In purchasing falcons people should see to which of the following three classes birds belong. First, khāna-kurīz birds, they have moulted whilst in charge of experienced trainers, and have got new feathers. Second, chūz birds they have not yet moulted. Third, Tarīnāk birds, they have moulted before they were captured. First class, a superior bāz costs 12 muhrs, second grade do, 9 M, third do, 6 M. Second class, first, 10 M, second, 7 M, third, 4 M. A third class bāz is somewhat cheaper than second class ones.

Jurras First class, 8, 5, 2, 1 M. Second class, 6, 4, 1½, 1 M, 5 R.

Bāshas First class, 3, 2, 1 M, 4 R. Second class, 2, 1 M, 5 R.

Shāhīns of both kinds, 3, 2, 1 M.

Bahrīs, 2, 1½, 1 M. Young Bahrīs ² a little less.

Khelas, 1½, 1, ½ M.

Charghs, 2½ R, 2, 1½ R.

Chappak bāshas, 1 R, ½, ¼ R.

Shikaras, 1½ R, 1, ½ R.

Besras, 2 R, 1½, 1 R.

Chappak shikarās, laqars, jhagars, turmatīs, relīs, 1 R, ½, ¼ R. Their prices are not classified.

His Majesty rewards the Mīr Shikārs (superintendents ³ of the chase) according to their ranks, with suitable presents. There are also fixed donations for each game brought in, varying from 1 M to 1 d. If the falcons bring down the game alive or dead, attention is paid to the skill which it exhibited and to the size of the quarry. The man who keeps the falcon gets one half of the allowance. If His Majesty hunts himself, fifty

[¹ Lachin is the Turki name of the Shahīn —P]

[² Bahrī bachcha peregrine falcon —P]

[³ Mīr shikār is a term applied to any bird catcher, assistant falconer etc —P] percent of the donation is stopped. If birds are received by the Imperial aviary¹ as pshkash (tribute), the Qushbegi (Superintendent of the Aviary)¹ gets for every bāz: $1\frac{1}{2}$ R, and the accountant $\frac{1}{2}$ R. For jurras, the Qushbegi gets 1 R, the accountant, $\frac{1}{2}$ R, for bāshas, the former receives $\frac{1}{2}$ R, the latter, $\frac{1}{2}$ R, for every lāchīn, chārgāh, chārgāhela, lāhela, bahrī-bachcha, the former gets $\frac{1}{2}$ R, the latter $\frac{1}{16}$ R, for every chhappak, bāsha, dhōī, etc., the former receives $\frac{1}{16}$, the other $\frac{1}{16}$ R (sūki)

The minimum number of bāz and shāhīn falcons, kept at Court is forty, of jurras, thirty, of bāshas, one hundred, of bahrīs, chārgās, twenty, of lagars, and shikaras, ten

Waterfowl

Hunting waterfowl affords much amusement. A rather curious way of catching them is the following. They make an artificial bird of the skin of a waterfowl with the wings, the beak, and the tail on it. Two holes are made in the skin for looking through. The body is hollow. The hunter puts his head into it, and stands in the water up to his neck. He then gets carefully near the birds, and pulls them one after the other below the water. But sometimes they are cunning and fly away.

In Kashmir they teach bāz falcons to seize the birds whilst swimming about, and to return with them to the boat of the hunter. Or the hawk will keep a waterfowl down, and sit on it [till the man in the boat comes].

Another method is to let water buffaloes go into the water, between which the hunter conceals himself, and thus catches the birds.

*Durrāj*² catching. There are various methods. Some get a young one and train it till it obeys every call. It will fight with other birds. They put it into a cage, and place hair nets³ round about it. At the signal of the fowler, the bird commences to sing⁴ when wild ones come near it either from friendship or a desire to fight and get entangled in the snare.

*Bodnas*⁵. The hunter makes a claypot with a narrow neck and, at night time, blows into it, which produces a noise like an owl's cry. The bodnas frightened by the noise, come together. Another man then lights a bundle of straw, and swings it about so that the eyes of the birds get dazzled. The fowlers thereupon seize the birds and put them into cages.

Lagars. They resemble chārgās, in body they are as large jurras. They hang nets⁶ (about the body of a trained lagar) and put birds⁷

[¹ Mews.—P.]

[² The durrāj is the francolin or black partridge. Abū 'l Faḡl was evidently not a sportsman and probably meant the red-legged partridge the chakor of India and the kabī of Persia.—P.]

[³ Hair nooses.—P.]

[⁴ I.e. utter its challenging call.—P.]

[⁵ Bāz used in Persia is the Common Quail.—P.]

feathers into its claws. It is then allowed to fly up. The birds think that it has got hold of prey, and when they get entangled in the nets¹ they commence to fight, and fall to the ground.

Ghaughā,ī They fasten together on a cross stick an owl and a ghaughā,ī,² and hang hair nets¹ round about them. The owl will soon get restless, the birds think that the owl wishes to fight, and commence to cry out. Other ghaughā,īs and owls will come to their assistance, and get entangled in the nets¹.

Frogs

Frogs also may be trained to catch sparrows. This looks very funny.

His Majesty, from curiosity, likes to see spiders fight³ and amuses himself in watching the attempts of the flies to escape, their jumps, and combats with their enemy.

I am in the power of love and if I have thousands of wishes it is no crime,

And if my passionate heart has an (unlawful) desire, it is no crime.

And in truth, His Majesty's fondness for leopards is an example of the power of love,⁴ and an instance of his wonderful insight.

It would take me too long to give more details. It is impossible to enumerate all particulars, hence it is better to go to another subject.

Ā'in 29

ON AMUSEMENTS

His Majesty devises means of amusement and makes his pleasures a means of testing the character of men.

There are several kinds of amusements, of which I shall give a few details.

[¹ Dām a noose. The nooses are attached to the claws. A hawk so prepared is called in the Panjab a bārek (u zau). For Plate and description, vide Journ As Soc Beng vol iii 190—P 4.

*The game of Chaugān (hockey)*¹

Superficial observers look upon this game as a mere amusement, and consider it mere play, but men of more exalted views see in it a means of learning promptitude and decision. It tests the value of a man, and strengthens bonds of friendship. Strong men learn in playing this game the art of riding, and the animals learn to perform feats of agility and to obey the reins. Hence His Majesty is very fond of this game. Externally, the game adds to the splendour of the Court, but viewed from a higher point, it reveals concealed talents.

When His Majesty goes to the maydān (open field) in order to play this game, he selects an opponent and some active and clever players, who are only filled with one thought, namely, to show their skill against the opponent of His Majesty. From motives of kindness, His Majesty never orders any one to be a player, but chooses the pairs by the cast of the die. There are not more than ten players, but many more keep themselves in readiness. When one gharī (20 minutes) has passed, two players take rest, and two others supply their place.

The game itself is played in two ways. The first way is to get hold of the ball with the crooked end of the chaugān stick, and to move it slowly from the middle to the *hāl*². This manner is called in Hindi rol. The other way consists in taking deliberate aim, and forcibly hitting the ball with the chaugān stick out of the middle, the player then gallops after it, quicker than the others and throws the ball back. This mode is called bela and may be performed in various ways. The player may either strike the ball with the stick in his right hand, and send it to the right forwards or backwards, or he may do so with his left hand, or he may send the ball in front of the horse to the right or to the left. The ball may be thrown in the same direction from behind the feet of the horse or from below its body or the rider may spit³ it when the ball is in front of the horse, or he may lift himself upon the back leather³ of the horse, and propel the ball from between the feet of the animal.

His Majesty is unrivalled for the skill which he shows in the various ways of hitting the ball, he often manages to strike the ball while in the air, and astonishes all. When a ball is driven to the hal, they beat the naqqāra, so that all that are far and near may hear it. In order to increase the excitement, betting is allowed. The players win from each other, and he who brought the ball to the hal wins most. If a ball be caught in the air, and passes, or is made to pass, beyond the limit (mīl), the game is looked upon as burd (drawn). At such times the players will engage in a regular fight about the ball, and perform admirable feats of skill.

¹ There is scarcely a Muhammadan Historian that does not allude to this game. Babar says it is played all over Thibet. In the East of India the people of Munnipore (Assam) are looked upon as clever hockey players. Vide Vignia's Travels in Cashmir II, p. 289.

His Majesty also plays at chaugān in dark nights, which caused much astonishment even among clever players. The balls which are used at night, are set on fire.¹ For this purpose, palās wood is used, which is very light, and burns for a long time. For the sake of adding splendour to the games, which is necessary in worldly matters, His Majesty has knobs of gold and silver fixed to the tops of the chaugān sticks. If one of them breaks, any player that gets hold of the pieces may keep them.

It is impossible to describe the excellency of this game. Ignorant as I am, I can say but little about it.

¶ Ishqbāzī (pigeon flying)

His Majesty calls pigeon flying Ishqbāzī (love play). This occupation affords the ordinary run of people a dull kind of amusement, but His Majesty, in his wisdom, makes it a study. He even uses the occupation as a way of reducing unsettled worldly minded men to obedience, and avails himself of it as a means productive of harmony and friendship. The amusement which His Majesty derives from the tumbling and flying of the pigeons reminds one of the ecstasy and transport of enthusiastic dervishes, he praises God for the wonders of creation. It is therefore from higher motives that he pays so much attention to this amusement.

The pigeons of the present age have reached a high state of perfection. Presents of pigeons are sent by the kings of Iran and Turan, but merchants also bring very excellent ones in large numbers.

When His Majesty was very young, he was fond of this amusement, but afterwards when he grew older and wiser, he discontinued pigeon flying altogether. But since then, on mature consideration, he has again taken it up.

A well trained pigeon of bluish colour, formerly belonging to the Khan 1

¹ In the year of 974 (July 1566) the emperor returned (from Jaunpur) to a which he flying. He Bad II.

² 4
 The town of Marichin was subsequently deserted.

A^czam Kokaltāsh (ʿAziz, Akbar's foster brother), fell into His Majesty's hands. From the care which was bestowed upon it by His Majesty, it has since become the chief of the imperial pigeons, and is known under the name of Mohana. From it descended several excellent pigeons as Ashkī (the weeper), Parizād (the fairy), Almās (the diamond), and Shāh ʿūdī (Aloe Royal). Among their progeny again there are the choicest pigeons in the whole world, which have brought the trained pigeons of ʿUmar Shaykh Mirza (father of Babar), Sultān Husayn Mirzā (vide p. 107, note 6) into oblivion. Such improvement, in fact, has been made in the art of training, as to astonish the amateurs of Iran and Tūrān who had to learn the art from the beginning.

In former times pigeons of all kinds were allowed to couple, but His Majesty thinks equality in gracefulness and performance a necessary condition in coupling, and has thus bred choice pigeons. The custom is to keep a male and a female pigeon, if not acquainted with each other, for five or six days together, when they become so familiar that, even after a long separation, they will again recognize each other. The hen generally lays her eggs from eight to twelve days after coupling, or more if she be small or sickly. Pigeons couple in Māhrmāh (September–October), and separate in Farvardīn (February–March). A hen lays two eggs, but sometimes only one. The cock will sit upon the eggs by daytime, and the hen during the night, and thus they keep them warm and soft. In winter they hatch for twenty one days, but if the air be warm, they only take seventeen or eighteen. For about six days, the pigeons feed their young ones with falah, which means grain reduced to pap in the crops of the old ones. Afterwards they feed them from the grain in their crops, which they bring up before it is fully digested. Thus they continue for about a month, and as soon as they see that the young ones can pick up their own grain the old ones will go away. Eggs, or even young ones, are sometimes given to other pigeons to take care of. Home bred young ones are trained. Some are kept in a tor (?) till they get stronger, and get acquainted with the place. As soon as these two things have been attained, the pigeons only get one third or one fourth of their daily allowance of food. When they have got a little accustomed to hunger, they are gradually allowed to take flights. They take daily about forty hawās (air), i. e., forty flights. At this period the trainers pay no regard to what is called charkh and bā-ī (vide below). Of feathers, they count ten, and if eight of them have fallen out, the keepers no longer allow the pigeons to fly, but keep them at rest (lhwābānīdan). After two months, the pigeons get new feathers, and become very strong. They are then again let off. This is the best time for showing their skill. As soon as the pigeons learn to perform the bāzī and the charḳḳh, they are sent to His Majesty for inspection, and are kept for four months in readiness, to exhibit their skill. Charḳḳh is a lusty movement ending with the pigeon throwing itself over in a full circle. If this circular turn be not completely carried out, the movement is called kiḳf (shoulder), and is held in no esteem. Bāzī is the same as muḳallaq wing of a pigeon blackened, when the erroneousness of that opinion became evident. Some pigeons get confused during the bāzī and charḳḳh, and come stupefied to the ground. This is called gulūla, and is disliked. Sometimes pigeons hurt themselves and fall down, but often they get all right again when they come near the ground, and taking courage and collecting their strength they fly up again. A pigeon of the ḳḳhāsa pigeon cots will perform fifteen charḳḳhs and seventy bāzīs, a feat which will certainly astonish the spectators. In former times, they let eleven or twenty-one pigeons fly at a time, but nowadays they let off as many as one hundred and one. From the attention which His Majesty has bestowed upon pigeons, they are now so carefully trained as to be let fly at night, even to great heights.

At the time of departure and the breaking of the camp, the pigeons will follow, the cots being carried by bearers (kaḳḳār). Sometimes they will alight and take rest for a while, and then rise again.

It would be difficult to count the pigeons at Court, but there are more than twenty thousand. Five hundred of them are ḳḳhāsa. They have a great reputation, and remarkable stories are told of their skill.

Pigeon trainers of former times, in order to determine the value of a pigeon, used to twist the foot,¹ or looked to the slit of the eyes, or the openings on the top of the bill, but they failed to discover more signs of the value of a breed. His Majesty has discovered many more, and the fixing the value of a pigeon, in former times a matter of great difficulty, has now become very former trainers a

the eight claws,

comparison of these signs has led to many additional means of fixing the value of a pigeon. Secondly His Majesty looks to the variety and the colour of the annular protuberances on the feet of pigeons. A book has been made in which the systematic order of these signs has been laid down. According to them, His Majesty distinguishes ten classes, for each of which separate aviaries have been constructed. The price of pigeons in the first house has not been limited. Many a poor man anxious to make his way has found in the training of superior pigeons a means of getting rich. A pair of second class pigeons has a value of 3 R, third class, 2½ R, fourth class, 2 R, fifth class, 1½ R, sixth class, 1 R, seventh class, ¾ R, eighth class, ½ R, ninth and tenth classes ¼ R.

[¹ Ba ḳḳḳḳān ḳḳḳḳ Can this mean the angle made by the feet?—P.]

[² Du ḳḳḳḳm bīlā u ḳḳḳḳn—P.]

When inspections are held, the stock of Mohana first pass in review, then the young ones of Ashlī. Though the latter belong to the former, they are now separately counted. Then come the four zirihī pigeons, they are the stock of a pigeon which belonged to Hāji 'Alī, of Samarqand, which coupled with an 'Udī hen, of which I do not know the owner, their stock has become famous. The precedence of all other pigeons is determined by their age or the time they were bought.

The Colours of Khūsu Pigeons

Magasī (flea bitten), zirihī (steelblue), amīrī (?), zamīrī (a colour between zirihī and amīrī, His Majesty invented this name), chīnī (porcelain blue), nofī (grey like naphtha), shafaqī violet), 'ūdī (aloe-wood coloured), surmaī (dark grey, like powder of antimony), *kishmishī*¹ (dark brown, like currants¹), *halwā*² (light brown, like halwā sweetmeat), sandalī (light brown, like sandalwood), ḡarī (brown), nabāfī (greyish white), dūghī (bluish white, like sour milk), ucushī (of the same colour as the gum called ucushī), jīlānī (chīlanī ?), *kūra*³ (brown, like a new earthen pot ?), nīlufarī (bluish white), azraq (a colour between yellow and brown, His Majesty applies this name in this sense), ātashī (black brown), shaftalū (peach coloured), gul & gaz coloured (?), yellow, lāgharī (yellowish, like native paper), zāgh (grey like a crow), aqarī (a colour between white and brown), muharraqī (a dirty black), lāhīrī (a colour between greenish and 'ūdī), ābī (water coloured),² surmag (a name invented by His Majesty to express a colour between surmaī and magasī)

Pigeons of these colours have often different names, as gulsar (whose head resembles a flower), dumqlāza (stumptail), yalrang (of one colour), halqūmī safīd (white throat), parsafīd (white wing), lalla (big head), gha-ghazh (wild cluck), *nūgh*³ (name of an aquatic bird), ḡābarī (?); ālpar (red wing ?), kalta par (short wing), *māhdum*⁴ (moontail),

¹ كيشميشه Sultana FAIS DE.—P]
² ماء آبی a cormorant.—P]

³ It is blue.—P]

⁴ ماهدم with white on the tail.—P]

lawzdār (ring bearer); maricārīd sar (pearl head), mash'ala-dum (torch tail), etc.

Some trainers of the present age gave pigeons such names as indicate their colours. His Majesty rather calls them according to their qualities, as bughur (1), qarapilk (with black eyelids), abyārī, palangnīgārī, rekhta pilk

There are also many pigeons which do not perform charkhā and bā'is, but are distinguished by their colours, or by peculiar tricks. Thus the *Koḳah*¹ pigeon, the voice of which sounds like the call to prayer. 2 The Bagha, which utters a peculiar voice in the morning to wake up people. 3 The Luqqan,² which struts about proudly, wagging its head, neck, and tail. 4 The *Lotan*³. They turn it about; and let it off on the ground, when it will go through all the motions which a half killed fowl goes through. Some pigeons will do so when the keeper strikes his hand against the ground, and others will show the same restlessness when on leaving the cage their beak is made to touch the ground. 5 The Khernī. The cock shows a remarkable attachment to the hen. Though he fly up so high as to be no longer visible, if the hen be exposed in a cage, he will get restless and drop down instantly to join her. This is very remarkable. Some of them come down with both wings spread, others close one, some close both, or they change alternately the wing which they close in flying. 6 The Rath pigeon is chiefly used for carrying letters, though any other kind may be trained to bring letters even from great distances. 7 The Nishāwarī pigeon will fly up, and follow its cage to whatever place it be taken. It will fly out of sight, and stay away for a day or two, when it comes down and remains in its cage. 8 The parpā (having feet covered with feathers) will inhale air (?) and act as if it sighed.

Some pigeons are merely kept for the beauty of their plumage, the colours of which receive peculiar names. Thus some are called shīrāzī, shūstarī, kāshānī, jogūya, reza dahan, magasī, and *qumrī*⁴. Wild pigeons are called gola. If some of them are caught, they will be joined by a thousand others, they soon get domesticated. They return daily to the fields, and get on their return salt water to drink. This makes them vomit the grain which they had eaten on the fields. The grain is collected and given as food to other pigeons.

People say that pigeons will but rarely live above thirty years

[¹ Can this be for kolka a species of green pigeon which has a call like the human voice, vide Jerdon No 778 —P]

[² Laqā laqa etc the fantail pigeon —P]

[³ Loḳan the ground tumbler —P]

[⁴ Qumrī a white dove —P]

17

18

Four seers of grain will be sufficient for one hundred of such pigeons as are made to fly, but for other pigeons five seers are required, or seven and a half if they pair. But flying pigeons get millet, not mixed with other grain, the others get a mixture of the seven kinds of grain, viz, rice, *dāl*¹ : nukhud (gram), *mūng dal*¹ (millet), larar, lahdara, juwār (vide p 66). Though most servants of His Majesty keep pigeons and show much skill in training them, there are a few that have risen to eminence, as Qul'Alī of Bukhara, Masti of Samarqand, Mullāzada, Pur, Mulla Ahmad Chand, Muqbil Khān Chela, Khawaja Sandal Chela, Mumin of Harat, 'Abd^u 'I Latif of Bukharā, Hajī Qasim of Balkh, Habīb of Shahīsabz, Sikandar Chela, Maltū, Maqsūd of Samarqand, Khawaja Phul, Chela Hiranand.

The servants attached to the pigeon houses draw their pay on the list of the army. The pay of a foot soldier varies from 2 R to 48 R per mensem.

The game of Chaupar

From times of old, the people of Hindustān have been fond of this game. It is played with sixteen pieces of the same shape, but every four of them must have the same colour. The pieces all move in the same direction. The players use three dice. Four of the six sides of each dice are greater than the remaining two, the four long sides being marked with one, two, five, and six dots respectively. The players draw two sets of two parallel lines, of which one set bisects the other at right angles. These parallel lines are of equal length. The small square which is formed by the intersection of the two sets in the centre of the figure is left as it is, but the four rectangles adjoining the sides of the square are each divided into twenty four equal spaces in three rows, each of eight equal spaces, as shown in Pl XVII, Fig 17. The game is generally played by four players, of whom two play against the other two. Each player has four pieces, of which he puts two in the sixth and seventh spaces of the middle row of the parallelogram before him, and the other two in the seventh and eighth spaces of the right row. The left row remains empty. Each player moves his pieces, according to his throw, in the outer row, always keeping to the right, till he arrives at the outer left row of the parallelogram, from which he started, and from there he moves to the middle row. When arrived at the latter place, he is pukhta (ripe) and from here, he must throw for each of his pieces the exact number which will carry them to the empty square in the centre of the figure. He is now rasīda, or arrived.

When a player is pukhta or rasīda, he may commence to play from the beginning, which leads to amusing combinations. As long as a player keeps two of his pieces together, the adversary cannot throw them out. If a player throws a double six, he can move two pieces over twelve spaces, provided the two pieces stand together on one field, but he is allowed to move them only six fields onwards should he prefer doing so. A similar rule holds for double fives, etc. A throw consisting of a six, a five, and a one, is called khām (raw), and in this case, two pieces, provided they are together on the same field, may each be moved six fields forwards, and every single piece twelve fields. If a player throws three sixes, and three of his four pieces happen to stand on one field, he may move each of them over twelve fields. A similar rule holds, if a player throw three twos, or three ones. There are many other rules for particular cases. If a player has brought his four pieces into the central square, he throws, when his turn comes, for his companion, to get him out too. Formerly the custom was that when a piece had come to the last row, and ¹ His Majesty thinks it proper to do so from the very eighth field. If the throws of two players are the same as the throw of the preceding players, His Majesty counts them as qāyim, or standing. Formerly he did not allow such equal throws. If the four pieces of an opponent are pukhta, and he yet lose his bet, the other players are entitled to double the amount of the bet. Should any of the players leave the game for some reason he may appoint anyone to play for him, but he will have to be responsible for the betting of his substitute. Of all winnings, the substitute is entitled to two per cent, if a player loses a bet, his substitute has to pay one per cent. If a player drops one of his pieces, or any of the players be late or inattentive, he is fined one rupee. But a fine of a muhur is exacted if any one prompts the other, or moves his pieces over too many fields, or tries to get two throws.

[¹ Pulse of mūng — P]

Formerly many grandees took part in this game, there were often as many as two hundred players, and no one was allowed to go home before he had finished sixteen games, which in some cases lasted three months. If any of them lost his patience and got restless, he had to drink a cup of wine.

Superficially considered, all this is mere play, but His Majesty has higher aims, he weighs the talents of a man, and teaches kindness.

The game of Chandāl Mandal

This game was invented by His Majesty. The figure, or board, which is required, consists of sixteen parallelograms, arranged in a circular form round a centre. Each parallelogram is divided into twenty four fields, every eight of which form a row, vide Pl XVII Fig 18. The number of pieces is sixty four, and four dice are used of which the four longer sides are marked with one, two, ten, and twelve points respectively. The number of players is sixteen. Each gets four pieces, which are placed in the middle. As in Chaupar, the pieces are moved to the right, and pass through the whole circle. The player who is out first, is entitled to receive the stipulated amount from the other fifteen players, the second that is out, from fourteen players, and so on. The first player, therefore, wins most, and the last loses most, the other players both lose and win. His Majesty plays this game in several ways, one way in which the pieces are moved as if the fields were squares of a chess board, is very often played. I shall give a few particulars and directions how to play the different kinds of this game.

¹ The MSS have a khanayī hashtum pāyān shavad hashtim; khan shudan āmad gaddad, which words are not clear to me.

First kind, no piece can throw out another piece, but moves on by itself. Second way, single pieces may be thrown out. Each player whose piece has thus been thrown out, commences again from his starting point. Third way, at each throw two pieces are moved at a time, either with or without the permission of throwing out pieces. Fourth way, the preceding rule is applied to three or four pieces at a time. Fifth way, the dice are thrown four times, and four pieces are moved at each throw. These different ways may, moreover, be varied by some players playing to the right, others to the left, or all in the same direction. Sixth way, a player is out when he comes to the place from which the player opposite to him commenced to play, moving from the middle row of his opponent into the empty space in the centre of the board. Or the game ends when each player arrives at the place from which his left hand neighbour commenced to play. Seventh way, each player puts his pieces before himself, and has three throws. At the first throw, he moves two of his pieces, at the second, one of his own pieces and one belonging to his right hand neighbour, at the third throw, he moves any piece of his own, and allows his left hand neighbour to move one of his pieces. In this way of playing, no player throws out the pieces of his neighbours, and when the game is in full swing he allows each piece which happens to come into the row in which he is, to move according to his own throw, as a sort of compliment to a guest. Eighth way, two pieces when together may throw out another set of two pieces, but single pieces do not throw out each other. Ninth way, four pieces together may throw out three together, three together, sets of two, and two together, single ones, but single pieces do not throw out each other. Tenth way, each player moves his pieces according to the number of points which he throws, but at the same time, the player who sits opposite to him moves his pieces according to the number of points on the reverse side of the dice, whilst the two players to the right and left of the player who threw the dice, move their pieces according to the number of points to the right and left sides of the dice Eleventh way, the players use five dice and four pieces. Each player, in his turn, throws the five dice, and moves his pieces according to the sum of the two highest points of his throw. The next highest point is taken by his vis-a-vis, and the two lowest points by his right and left hand neighbours. Twelfth way, the players have each five dice and five pieces. At every throw, he gives the points of one die to his right hand neighbour, and uses the others for himself. Sometimes the thrower mentions beforehand the names of four players to whom he wishes to give the points of four dice, he himself taking the points of the fifth die. And when a player requires only a few points, to get pukhta, he must give the remaining points to those near whom the dice fall.

The game may also be played by fifteen or less players, the figure being lessened accordingly. So also may the number of the dice be increased or decreased.

Cards

This is a well-known game. His Majesty has made some alterations in the cards. Ancient sages took the number twelve as the basis, and made the suit to consist of twelve cards, but they forgot that the twelve kings should be of twelve different kinds. His Majesty plays with the following suits of cards. 1st, Ashwapati, the lord of horses. The highest card represents a king on horseback, resembling the king of Delhi, with the umbrella (chatr), the standard (salam), and other imperial ensigns. The second highest card of the same suit represents a vazir on horseback, and after this card come ten others of the same suit with pictures of horses, from one to ten. 2nd Gaypati the king whose power lies in the number of his elephants, as the ruler of Orisah. The other eleven cards represent as before, the vazir, and elephants from ten to one. 3rd, Narpati a king whose power lies in his infantry, as is the case with the rulers of Bijapur. The card represents a king sitting on his throne in imperial splendour, the vazir sits on a footstool (sandalī), and the ten cards completing this suit have foot soldiers, from one to ten. 4th, Gadhipati. The card shows a man sitting on a throne over a fort. the vazir sits on a sandalī over a fort, and the remaining ten cards have forts from one to ten, as before. 5th, Dhanpati, the lord of treasures. The first card of this suit shows a man, sitting on a throne, and gold and silver heaps, the vazir sits upon a sandalī, as if he took account of the Treasury, and the remaining cards show jars full of gold and silver, from one to ten 6th, Dalpatī, the hero of battle The first card of this suit shows a king in armour, sitting on his throne and surrounded by warriors on coats of mail The vazir sits on a sandalī and wears a jayba (breast armour), the ten other cards show individuals clad in armour 7th, Nawapatī, the lord of the fleet The card shows a man sitting on a throne in a ship, the vazir sits, as usual, on a şandalī, and the other ten cards have boats from one to ten 8th, Tīpatī, a queen sitting on the throne, surrounded by her maids The second card shows a woman as vazir on a şandalī, and the other ten cards have pictures of women, from one to ten 9th, Surapatī, the king of the divinities (deota) also called Indar, on a throne The vazir sits on a şandalī, and the ten other cards have pictures of divinities from one to ten 10th, Asrpatī, the lord of genii (deo) The card represents Sulaymān, son of Dā'ūd, on the throne The vazir sits on a sandalī, and the other ten cards have genii 11th, Banpatī, the king of wild beasts The card represents a tiger (sher) with some other animals The vazir is drawn in the shape of a leopard (palang) and the other ten cards are pictures of wild beasts, as usual from one to ten 12th, Āhipatī, the king of snakes The first card shows a serpent mounted on a dragon, whilst the vazir is a serpent riding on another serpent of the same kind The remaining ten cards show serpents, from one to ten

The first six of these twelve suits are called bīshbar (powerful), and the six last, lambar (weak)

His Majesty has also made some suitable alterations in the cards Thus the Dhanpatī, or lord of treasures, is represented as a man distributing money The vazir sits on a şandalī, and inspects the Treasury, but the ten other cards of this suit are representations of the ten classes of workmen employed in the Treasury, viz, the jeweller, the melter, the piece cutter (mitallas sār), the weighman, the coiner, the muhr counter, the bitākhī (writer) of dhan pieces (vide p 31, No 17), the bitākhī of man pieces (vide p 31, No 20), the dealer, the qursgar (vide p 24, No 15) His Majesty had also the king of assignments painted on the cards, who inspects farmāns, grants, and the leaves of the daftar (vide p 270), the vazir sits on a şandalī with the daftar before him, the other cards show officers employed in the Financial Department, as the paper maker, the mustar maker (vide p 55, note 1), the clerk who makes the entries in the daftar, the illuminator (musawwir), the naqqāsh (who ornaments the pages), the jadval lash (who draws blue and gold lines on the pages), the farmān

writer, the mujallid (bookbinder), the *rangrez*¹ (who stains the paper with different colours) The Pādīshāh : qīmāsh also, or king of manufacturers, is painted in great state, looking at different things, as Thibetan yaks, silk, silken stuffs The vazīr sits near him on a ṣandalī, inquiring into former proceedings The other ten cards represent beasts of burden Again, the Pādīshāh : Chang, or lord of the lyre, is painted sitting on a throne, and listening to music, the vazīr sits before him, inquiring into the circumstances of the performers, of whom pictures are given on the remaining cards Next, the Pādīshāh : zar : safīd, or king of silver, who is painted distributing rupees and other silver coins, the vazīr sits on a ṣandalī, and makes inquiries regarding donations On the other cards, the workmen of the silver mint are depicted, as before those of the gold mint Then comes the Pādīshāh : Shamsher, or king of the sword, who is painted trying the steel of a sword The vazīr sits upon a ṣandalī, and inspects the arsenal, the other cards contain pictures of armourers, polishers, etc After him comes the Pādīshāh : Tāj,² or king of the diadem He confers royal insignia, and the sandalī upon which the vazīr sits, is the last of the insignia The ten other cards contain pictures of workmen, as tailors, quilters, etc Lastly, the Pādīshāh : Ghulāmān, or king of the slaves, sits on an elephant, and the vazīr on a cart The other cards are representations of servants, some of whom sit, some lie on the ground in worship, some are drunk, others sober, etc

Besides these ordinary games of cards His Majesty also plays chess, four handed and two-handed His chief object is to test the value of men, and to establish harmony and good fellow feeling at Court

Āⁱⁿ 30

THE GRANDEES OF THE EMPIRE³

At first I intended in speaking of the Grandees of the Court, to record the deeds which raised them to their exalted positions to describe their qualities, and to say something of their experience. But I am unwilling to bestow mere praise, in fact it does not become the encomiast of His Majesty to praise others, and I should act against my sense of truthfulness, were I but to mention that which is praiseworthy and to pass in silence over that which cannot be approved of. I shall therefore merely record, in form of a table, their names and the titles which have been conferred upon them.

I Commanders of Ten Thousand

- 1 Shāhzāda Sultan Salim, eldest son of His Majesty

II Commanders of Eight Thousand

- 2 Shāhzāda Sultan Murād, second son of His Majesty

III Commanders of Seven Thousand

- 3 Shāhzāda Sultan Dānyal, third son of His Majesty

Akbar had five sons —

- 1 Hasan { twins, born 3rd Rabi' I, 972 They only lived one month }
 2 Husayn {
 3 Sultān Salim [Jahangīr]
 4 Sultan Murad
 5 Sultan Danyāl

Of daughters, I find three mentioned—(a) Shāhzāda Khānum, born three months after Salim, in 977 (b) Shukr^a'n Nisā Begum, who in 1001 was married to Mirzā Shāhrukh (No 7, below, p 326), and (c) Ārām Bānū Begum, both born after Sultan Danyal. Regarding the death of the last Begum, vide Tuzuk, p 386.

Of Akbar's wives the following are mentioned¹ —1 Sultān Ruqayyah Begum (a daughter of Mirzā Hindal), who died 84 years old, 7th Jumāda I, 1035 (Tuzuk, p 401). She was Akbar's first wife (zan-i kalān), but had no child by him. She tended Shāhjahān Nūr Jahān (Jahangīr's wife), also stayed with her after the murder of Sher Afkan. 2 Sultān Salima Begum. She was a daughter of Gulrukh⁽¹⁾ Begum² (a daughter of Bābar).

Commanders of Five Thousand though they were appointed in 1001 and 1003 respectively, is, a short time before the Ā² in was completed.

¹ The biographical notes on her in the Tuzuk are as follows:—
 "She was a daughter of Gulrukh Begum, a daughter of Bābar, and was married to Akbar in the year 1001."
 "She was a daughter of Gulrukh Begum, a daughter of Bābar, and was married to Akbar in the year 1001."
 "She was a daughter of Gulrukh Begum, a daughter of Bābar, and was married to Akbar in the year 1001."

¹ vide Additional notes

² Regarding her, vide Jour As Soc Bengal for 1862, p. 136, note.

and Mirzā Nur^u 'd Dīn Muhammad Humāyūn had destined her for Bayrām Khan, who married her in the beginning of Akbar's reign. After the death of Bayrām, Akbar, in 968, married her. She died 10th Zi Qa'ada, 1021. As a poetess, she is known under the name Makhfi (concealed), and must not be confounded with Zeb^u'n Nisā¹ (a daughter of Awrangzeb's) who has the same poetical name. 3 The daughter of Rāja Bihārī Mal and sister of Raja Bhagawān Das. Akbar married her in 968, at Sābhar. 4 The beautiful wife of Abd^u l-Wāsī, married in 970 (vide Bad II, 61). 5 Bibī Dawlat Shād, mother of (b) and (c), vide Tuzuk, p. 16. 6 A daughter of 'Abd^u 'llah Khān Mughul (964). 7 A daughter of Mirān Mubarak Shah of Khandes, vide p. 13, note 1.

Sultān Salīm. Title as Emperor, Jahāngīr. Title after death, Jannatmakānī. Born at Fathpūr Sikrī, on Wednesday, 17th Rabi' I, 997, or 18th Shahrīwar of the 14th year of Akbar's Era. He was called Salīm because he was born in the house of Shaykh Salīm i Chishtī. Akbar used to call him Shaykhū Bābā (vide Tuzuk, p. 1). For his wives and children, vide below, No. 4. Jahangīr died on the 28th Safar 1037 (28th October, 1627) near Rājor on the Kashmīr frontier. Vide my article on Jahāngīr in the Calcutta Review for October, 1869.

Sultan Murad, Akbar's fourth son, was born on Thursday, 3rd Muharram, 978, and died of delirium tremens in 1006, at Jalnāpūr in Barar (Tuzuk, p. 15, Akbarnāma II, p. 443, Khafī Khān, p. 212). He was nicknamed Pahārī (Bad II, 378). He was sabzrang (of a livid² complexion), thin and tall (Tuzuk). A daughter of his was married to Prince Parwīz, Jahangīr's son (Tuzuk, p. 38).

Sultan Danyal was born at Ajmīr, on the 10th Jumāda I, 979, and died of delirium tremens, A. H. 1013. Khafī Khān, I, p. 232, says the news of his death reached Akbar in the beginning of 1014. He was called Dānyāl in remembrance of Shaykh Danyal, a follower of Mu^ḥin i Chishtī, to whose tomb at Ajmīr Akbar, in the beginning of his reign, often made pilgrimages. Danyāl married, in the beginning of 1002, the daughter of Qulij Khān (No. 42), and towards the end of 1006, Janān Begum, a daughter of Mirza 'Abd^u 'r-Rahīm Khān Khānān (Khafī Khān, p. 213), and was betrothed to a daughter of Ibrahim 'Adhshāh of Bijlāpūr, but he died before the marriage was consummated. He had three sons — 1 Tahmūras, who was married to Sultān Bahar Begum, a daughter of Jahāngīr. 2 Bayasanghar (بایسنگر). 3 Hoshang, who was married to Hoshmand

¹ Her charming Diwan was lithographed at Lucknow, A. H. 1284. She was the eldest daughter of Awrangzeb, and was born in A. H. 1048.

[² Sallow?—P.]

Bānū Begum, a daughter of Khusraw. Besides, he had four daughters, whose names are not mentioned. One of them, Bulāqī Begum, was married to Mirzā Wālī (Tuz, p 272). Ṭahmūras and Hoshang were killed by Āṣaf Khān after the death of Janāngīr (vide Proceedings Asiatic Society of Bengal, for August, 1869). Nothing appears to be known regarding the fate of Bayasanghar. Vide Calcutta Review for October, 1869.

Danyal is represented as well built, good looking, fond of horses and elephants, and clever in composing Hindustāni poems.

IV Commanders of Five Thousand

4 Sultan Khusraw, eldest son of Prince Salim [Jahāngīr]

Jahāngīr's wives (Tuzuk, p 84, and Preface, p 6). A daughter of Raja Bhagwān Dās, married in 993, gave birth, in 994, to Sultān^u 'n Nisā Begum [Khāfi Khān, Sultan Begum], and in 995 to Prince Khusraw. She poisoned herself with opium in a fit of madness apparently brought on by the behaviour of Khusraw and her younger brother Madhū Singh, in 1011 (Khāfi Khān, p 227). 2 A daughter of Rāy Ray Singh, son of Ray Kalyan Mal of Bikānūr, married 19th Rajab 994, Bad II, p 353. She is not mentioned in the Tuzuk among Jahāngīr's wives. 3 A daughter of Oday Singh [Moth Rāja], son of Rāja Māldeo, married in 994. The Tuzuk (p 5) calls her Jagat Gosāyini. She is the mother of Shāhjahān, and died in 1028 (Tuzuk, p 268). 4 A daughter of Khawāja Hasan, the uncle of Zayn Khan Koka. She is the mother of Prince Parwiz. She died 15th Tīr, 1007. 5 A daughter of Rāja Keshū Dās Rāthor. She is the mother of Bahār Banū Begum (born 23rd Shahrīwar 998). 6 and 7 The mothers of Jahāndār and Shahryār. 8 A daughter of 'Alī Ray, ruler of little Tibet (Bad, II, 376), married in 999. 9 A daughter of Jagat Singh, eldest son of Rāja Mān Singh (Tuzuk, p 68). 10 Mihr^u 'n Nisā Khānum, the widow of Sher Afkan. On her marriage with Jahāngīr she received the title of Nūr Mahall, and was later called Nūr Jahan (Tuz, p 156). Jahāngīr does not appear to have had children by Nūr Jahan.

Jahāngīr's children 1 Sultan Khusraw 2 Sultān Parwiz 3 Sultan Khurram (Shahjahān) 4 Sultan Jahāndār 5 Sultān Shahryār. Two daughters are mentioned — (a) Sultān^u 'n Nisā Begum, (b) Sultān Bahār Banū Begum. There were "several children" after Parwiz, but the Tuzuk (p 8) does not give their names. They appear to have died soon after their birth.

Sultān Khusraw was born on the 24th Amurdad 995 (Tuzuk Preface); but Khāfi Khān says 997. He was married to a daughter of Azam Khān.

Koka His sons—1 Baland Akhtar, who died when young, Tuzuk p 73 2 Dawar Bakhsh (also called Bulāqī),¹ whose daughter, Hoshmand Bānū Begum, was married to Hoshang son of Dānyāl 3 Garshasp

Khusraw died on the 18th Isfandi-yārmuz, 1031 He lies buried in the Khusraw Gardens in Allahabad Dāwar Bakhsh was proclaimed Emperor by Āsaf Khān after the death of Jahāngīr but at an order of Shāhjahān he was killed, together with his brother Garshasp, by Āsaf Khān

Sultān Parwīz, born 19th Ābān, 997 He was married to a daughter of Mirzā Rustam i Ṣafawī (No 9) and had a son who died when young (Tuz, p 282) A daughter of Parwīz was married to Dārā Shikoh Parwīz died of delirium tremens in 1036

Sultān Khurram (Shāhjahān) was born at Lāhor on the 30th Rabi^c I, 1000 A H Regarding his family, vide Proceedings As Soc Bengal for August, 1869, p 219 He was Akbar's favourite

Sultān Jahāndār had no children He and Sultān Shahryār were born about the same time, a few months before Akbar's death (Tuz, Preface, p 17) Shahryār was married, in the 16th year of Jahāngīr, to Mihr^a n Nisā, the daughter of Nūr Jahān by Sher Afkan, and had a daughter by her, Arzānī Begum (Tuzuk, p 370) The Iqbāl-nāma (p 306) calls her زردلی سگم From his want of abilities he got the nickname Nāshudānī (fit for nothing) Khusraw, Parwīz, and Jahandar died before their father

Shahryār, at the instigation of Nur Jahān, proclaimed himself Emperor of Lāhor a few days after the death of Jahāngīr He was killed either at the order of Dawar Bakhsh or of Āsaf Khān, vide Proceedings As Soc Bengal for August, 1869, p 218

5 Mirza Sulayman, son of Khān Mirzā, son of Sultān Mahmud, son of Abū Sa^cid

6 Mirza Ibrahim, son of Mirza Sulayman (No 5)

Mirzā Sulaymān was born in 920, and died at Lahor in 997 He is generally called Wālī yi Badakhshān As grandson of Abū Sa^cid Mirzā, he is the sixth descendant from Timūr Ābu Sa^cid killed Sultan Muhammad of Badakhshan, the last of a series of kings who traced their descent to Alexander the Great, and took possession of Badakhshan, which after his death fell to his son, Sultan Mahmūd, who had three sons, Bīyasanghar Mirza, Ṣah Mirzā,² Khān Mirzā When Mahmūd died, Amir Khusraw

¹ The MSS spell this name دای and دای

² The Maṣādir 'i Umarā calls the second son Mirza Mas^cud

Khan, one of his nobles, blinded Bāyasanghar, killed the second prince, and ruled as usurper. He submitted to Bābar in 910. When Babar took Qandāhar, in 912, from Shāh Beg Arghūn, he sent Khān Mirzā as governor to Badakhshān. Mirzā Sulaymān is the son of this Khān Mirzā ¹

After the death of Khān Mirzā, Badakhshan was governed for Babar by Prince Humayūn, Sultan Uways (Mirza Sulaymān's father in law), Prince Hindal, and lastly, by Mirzā Sulayman who held Badakhshan till 17 Jumādā II, 948 when he had to surrender himself and his son, Mirza Ibrahim, to Prince Kamrān. They were released by Humayūn in 952 and took again possession of Badakhshan. When Humayūn had taken Kābul, he made war upon and defeated Mirzā Sulayman who once in possession of his country, had refused to submit, but when the return of Kamrān from Sind obliged Humayūn to go to Kabul he reinstated the Mirza, who held Badakhshān till 983. Bent on making conquests, he invaded in 967 Balkh but had to return. His son Mirza Ibrahim, was killed in battle ²

In the eighth year when Mirzā Muhammad Hakīm's (Akbar's brother) mother had been killed by Shah Abū 'l Maʿanī Mirza S went to Kābul, and had Abū 'l Maʿālī hanged, he then married his own daughter to M M Hakīm and appointed Umed ʿAlī a Badakhshān noble, M M Hakīm's Vakīl (970). But M M Hakīm did not go on well with Mirza S, Sulayman, who returned next year to Kābul with hostile intentions, but M M Hakīm fled and asked Akbar for assistance, so that Mirza S, though he had taken Jalalabād, had to return to Badakhshān. He returned to Kabul in 973, when Akbar's troops had left that country, but retreated on being promised tribute.

Mirza Sulayman's wife was Khurram Begum of the Qibchak tribe. She was clever and had her husband so much in her power, that he did nothing without her advice. Her enemy was Muhtaram Khānum, the widow of Prince Kāmran. M Sulayman wanted to marry her, but Khurram Begum got her married against her will to Mirzā Ibrahim, by whom she had a son Mirza Shahrukh (No 7). When Mirzā Ibrahim fell in the war with Balkh Khurram Begum wanted to send the Khānum to her father, Shah Muhammad of Kashghar, but she refused to go. As soon as Shahrukh had grown up, his mother and some Badakhshi nobles excited him to rebel against his grandfather M Sulaymān. This he did,

¹ The Maʿānī says Khān Mirzā died in 917 but this is impossible as Mirza Sulayman was born in 920 the Tarīkh of his birth being the word میرزا

² Hence he never was a grandee of Akbar's Court and has been put on the list according to the rules of etiquette.

alternately rebelling and again making peace Khurram Begum then died Shāhrukh took away those parts of Badakhshān which his father had held, and found so many adherents, that M Sulaymān, pretending to go on a pilgrimage to Makkah, left Badakhshān for Kabul, and crossing the Nilāb went to India (983) Khān Jahān, governor of the Panjab, received orders to invade Badakhshān, but was suddenly ordered to go to Bengal, as Munṣim Khān had died and Mirza Sulaymān did not care for the governorship of Bengal, which Akbar had given him

M Sulaymān then went to Ismaʿil II of Persia When the death of that monarch deprived him of the assistance which he had just received, he went to Muzaffar Husayn Mirza (No 8) at Qandahār, and then to M M Hakīm at Kābul Not succeeding in raising disturbances in Kabul, he made for the frontier of Badakhshān, and luckily finding some adherents, he managed to get from his grandson the territory between Tāqūn and the Hindū Kush Soon after Muhtaram Khān died Being again pressed by Shāhrukh, M Sulaymān applied for help to 'Abd^u 'Ilāh Khān Uzbek, king of Tūrān, who had long wished to annex Badakhshān He invaded and took the country in 992, Shāhrukh fled to Hundūstān, and M Sulaymān to Kābul As he could not recover Badakhshān, and being rendered destitute by the death of M M Hakīm, he followed the example of his grandson, and repaired to the court of Akbar, who made him a Commander of six thousand

A few years later he died, at Lāhor, at the age of seventy-seven

7 Mirzā Shāhrukh, son of Mirzā Ibrāhīm

Vide Nos 5 and 6 Akbar, in 1001, gave him his daughter Shukrⁿ Ni'ā Begum, and made him governor of Mālwa, and he distinguished himself in the conquest of the Dakhn Towards the end of Akbar's reign, he was made a Commander of seven thousand, and was continued in his Manṣab by Jahāngir

He died at Ujain in 1016 His wife, Kābulī Begum, was a daughter of Mirzā Muhammad Hakīm She wanted to take his body to Madinah, but was robbed by the Badawīs, and after handing over the body to some "scoundrels" she went to Baṣra, and then to Shīrāz In 1022, Shah 'Abbas married her to Mirzā Ṣūltān 'Alī, his uncle, whom he had blinded, but the Begum did not like her new husband

Shāhrukh's Children —1 Hasan and Husayn, twins Hasan fled with Khusraw and was imprisoned by Jahāngir 2 Badi'z Zamān (or Mirzā Fathpūrī), "a bundle of wicked bones," murdered by his brothers in Patan (Gujrāt) 3 Mirzā Shujā'ī rose to honours under Shāhjahān, who called him Najabat Khān 4 Mirzā Muhammad Zamān He held a town in Badakhshān, and fell against the Uzbaks 5 Mirzā Sultān, a favourite of Jahāngīr. He had many wives, and Jahāngīr would have given him his own daughter in marriage if he had not perjured himself in trying to conceal the number of his wives. He fell into disgrace, and was appointed governor of Ghāzīpūr, where he died. 6 Mirzā Mughul, who did not distinguish himself either. The Tuzuk (p. 65) says that after the death of Shāhrukh, Jahāngīr took charge of four of his sons and three of his daughters, "whom Akbar had not known." "Shāhrukh, though twenty years in India, could not speak a word of Hindī."

8 Mirzā Muzaffar Husayn, son of Bahrām Mirzā, son of Shāh Ismā'īl I Ṣafawī

In 965, Shāh Tahmāsp of Persia (930 to 984) conquered Qandahār, which was given, together with Dāwar and Garmsīr as far as the river Hirmand, to Sultān Husayn Mirzā,¹ his nephew. Sultān Husayn M died in 984, when Shāh Ismā'īl II (984 to 985) was king of Persia, and left five children, Muhammad Husayn Mirzā, Muzaffar Husayn Mirzā, Rustām Mirzā, Abū Sa'īd Mirzā, and Sanjar Mirzā. The first was killed by Shāh Ismā'īl Īrān. The other four in Qandahār had also been doomed, but the arrival of the news of the sudden death of the Shāh saved their lives. The new Shāh Khudābanda, gave Qandahār to Muzaffar Husayn Mirzā, and Dāwar as far as the Hirmand to Rustām Mirzā, who was accompanied by his two younger brothers, their vakil being Hamza Beg 'Abd' 'llah, or Kor Hamza, an old servant of their father. The arbitrary behaviour of the Vakil caused Muzaffar Husayn Mirzā to take up arms against him, and after some alternate fighting and peace making, Muzaffar had the Vakil murdered. This led to fights between Muzaffar and Mirzā Rustām who, however, returned to Dāwar.

Not long after the invasion of Khurāsān by the Uzbaks under Dūn Muhammad Sultān and Bāqī Sultān (a sister's son of 'Abd' 'llah Khān of Tūrān) took place, and the Qandahār territory being continually exposed to incursions, the country was unsettled. Most of the Qizilbāsh grandees fell in the everlasting fights, and the Shāh of Persia promised assistance, but rendered none, Mirzā Rustām who had gone to Hindūstān, was appointed by Akbar Governor of Lāhor, and kept Qandahār in anxiety, and Muzaffar hesitatingly resolved to hand over Qandahār to Akbar, though 'Abd' 'llah Khān of Tūrān advised him not to join the Chaghatā'i kings (the Mughuls of India). At that time Qarā Beg (an old servant of Muzaffar's father, who had fled to India, and was appointed Farrāshbegī by Akbar) returned to Qandahar and prevailed upon Muzaffar's mother and eldest son to bring about the annexation of Qandahar to India.

[¹ Son of Bahrām Mirzā vide 95—P]

Akbar sent Shah Beg Khan Arghun Governor of Bangash to take prompt possession of Qandahar and though as in all his undertakings Muzaffar wavered at the last moment and had recourse to trickery he was obliged by the firm and prudent behaviour of Beg Khan in 1003 to go to Akbar. He received the title of Farzand (son) was made a Commander of five thousand and received Sambhal as Jagir which is worth more than all Qandahar.

But the ryots of his jagir preferred complaints against his grasping collectors and Muzaffar annoyed at this applied to go to Makkah. No sooner had Akbar granted this request than Muzaffar repented. He was reinstated but as new complaints were preferred Akbar took away the jagir and paid him a salary in cash (1000). Muzaffar then went to Makkah but returned after reaching the first stage which displeased Akbar so much that he refused to have anything to do with him.

Muzaffar found everything in India bad and sometimes resolved to go to Persia and sometimes to Makkah. From grief and disappointment and a bodily hurt he died in 1008.

His daughter called Qandalar Mahall was in 1018 married to Shahjahan and gave birth in 1020 to Nawab Parhez Banu Begum.

Three sons of his remained in India Bahram Mirza Haydar Mirza (who rose to dignity under Shahjahan and died in 1041) and Isma'il Mirza. The Ma'asir mentions two other sons Almas Mirza and Tahmas Mirza.

Muzaffar's younger brothers Mirza Abu Sa'id and Mirza Sanjar died in 1005. They held commands of Three hundred and fifty (vide Nos 271 and 272).

9 Mirza Rustam.—He is the younger but more talented brother of the preceding. As the revenue of Dawar was insufficient for him and his two younger brothers he made war on Malik Mahmud ruler of Sistan. Muzaffar Husayn assisted him at first but having married Malik Mahmud's daughter he turned against Rustam. This caused a rupture between the brothers. Assisted by Lalla (guardian) Hamza Beg M Rustam invaded Qandahar but without result. During the invasion of the Uzbaks into Khur san he conquered the town of Farah and bravely held his own. Some time after he again attacked Malik Mahmud. The latter wished to settle matters amicably. During an interview Rustam seized him and killed him when Jalal'ud Din Mahmud's son took up arms. Rustam was defeated and hearing that his brother Muzaffar had occupied Dawar, he quickly took the town of Qalat. Being once absent on a hunting expedition, he nearly lost the town, and though he took revenge on the conspirators who had also killed his mother he felt himself so insecure, that he resolved to join Akbar. Accompanied by his brother, Sanjar Mirza, and his four sons Murād, Shahrūkh, Hasan, and Ibrahim, he went in 1001 to India. Akbar made him a Panjharī, and gave him Multan as jagir, "which is more than Qandahar." His inferiors being too oppressive, Akbar, in 1003, wished to give him Chitor, but recalled him from Sarhind, gave him Pathān as tuyul, and sent him together with Āsaf Khān against Raja Bāsū. But as they did not get on well together, Akbar called M. Rustam to court, appointing Jagat Singh, son of Raja Mān Singh, in his stead. In 1006, M. Rustam got Raysin as jagir. He then served under Prince Danyal in the Dakhin. In 1021, Jahāngir appointed him Governor of That'hah, but recalled him as he ill treated the Arghūns. After the marriage of his daughter with Prince Parwiz, Jahāngir made him Shash-hazārī, and appointed him Governor of Allahābad. He held the fort against 'Abd'illah Khān, whom Shāh-jahan, after taking possession of Bengal and Bihar, had sent against Allahābad, and forced 'Abd'illah to retire to Jhosi. In the 21st year, he was appointed Governor of Bihār, but was pensioned off as too old by Shāh-jahan at 120,000 Rs per annum, and retired to Āgra. In the sixth year, M. Rustam married his daughter to Prince Dāra Shikoh. He died, in 1051, at Āgra, 72 years old.

As a poet he is known under the takhallus of Fidā'ī. He was a man of the world and understood the spirit of the age. All his sons held subsequently posts of distinction.

His first son Murād got from Jahāngir the title of Ikfāt Khān. He was married to a daughter of 'Abd'ur Rahīm Khān Khānān. Murād's son, Mirza Mukarram Khān, also distinguished himself, he died in 1080.

His third son Mirzā Hasan i Safawī, a Hazār o pansadī under Jahāngir, was Governor of Kūch, died 1059. Hasan's son, Mirzā Safshikan, was Fawjdar of Jessore in Bengal, retired, and died in 1073. Safshikan's son, Sayf'ud Din i Safawī, accepted the title of Khān under Awrangzeb.

10 Bayram Khān, the fifth in descent from Mir 'Alī Shukr Beg Bahārli

Bahārli is the name of a principal clan of the Qarāqūlu Turks. During the time of their ascendancy under Qarā Yūsuf, and his sons Qarā Sikandar and Mirzā Jahān Shah, rulers of 'Iraq, 'Arab and Āzarbāyjan, 'Alī Shukr Beg held Daynūr, Hamadan, and Kurdistan, "which tracts are still called the territory of 'Alī Shukr " His son Pīr 'Alī Beg stayed some time with Sultān Mahmūd Mirzā, and attacked afterwards the Governor of Shiraz, but was defeated. He was killed by some of the Amīrs of Sultān Ḥusayn Mirzā. Pīr 'Alī Beg's son, in the reign of Shāh Ismā'īl I Ṣafawī, left 'Irāq, settled in Badakhshān, and entered the service of Amīr Khusraw Shāh (vide p 324, last line) at Qunduz. He then joined, with his son Sayf 'Alī Beg, Bābar's army, as Amīr Khusraw had been deposed. Sayf 'Alī Beg is Bayrām's father.

Bayrām Khān was born at Badakhshān. After the death of his father he went to Balkh to study. When sixteen years old, he entered Humāyūn's army, fought in the battle of Qanawj (10th Muḥarram, 947), and fled to the Raja of Lakhnor (Sambhal). Sher Shah met Bayrām in Malwa, and tried to win him over. But Bayrām fled from Barhāmpūr with Abū 'l Qāsim, governor of Gwāliyār, to Gujrat. They were surprised, on the road, by an ambassador of Sher Shāh who had just returned from Gujrat. Abū 'l Qāsim, a man of imposing stature, being mistaken for Bayrām, the latter stepped forward and said in a manly voice, "I am Bayrām." "No," said Abū 'l Qāsim, "he is my attendant, and brave and faithful as he is, he wishes to sacrifice himself for me. So let him off." Abū 'l Qāsim was then killed, and Bayrām escaped to Sultan Mahmūd of Gujrat. Under the pretext of sailing for Makkah, Bayrām embarked at Sūrat for Sindh. He joined Humayūn on the 7th Muḥarram, 950, when the Emperor, after passing through the territory of Raja Maldeo, was pressed by the Arghūns at Jon. On the march to Persia, he proved the most faithful attendant. The King of Persia also liked him, and made him a Khān. On Humayūn's return, Bayrām was sent on a mission to Prince Kamrān. When Humayūn marched to Kabul, he took Qandahār by force and treachery from the Qizilbāshes, and making Bayrām governor of the district, he informed the Shāh that he had done so as Bayrām was "a faithful servant of both." Subsequently rumours regarding Bayrām's duplicity reached Humayūn, but when in 961, the Emperor returned to Qandahār, the rumours turned out false.

The conquest of India may justly be ascribed to Bayrām. He gained the battle of Māchhiwāra, and received Sambhal as jāgīr. In 963, he was appointed atāliq (guardian) of Prince Akbar, with whom he went to the Panjab against Sikandar Khān. On Akbar's accession (2nd Rabī 'II, 963) at Kalanūr, he was appointed Wakīl and Khān Khānān, and received the title of Khān Bābā. On the second of Shawwāl, 964, shortly after the surrender of Mānkot, when Akbar returned to Lāhor, an imperial elephant ran against Bayrām's tent, and Bayrām blamed Atgah Khān

(No 15), who never had been his friend, for this accident. The Atgah, after arrival at Lāhor, went with his whole family to Bayram, and attested his innocence by an oath upon the Qurʿān.¹ In 965, Bayrām married Salma Sultān Begum (p 321, note), and soon after the estrangement commenced between Akbar and him. Badāoni (II, p 36) attributes the fall of Bayrām to the ill treatment of Pīr Muhammad (No 20) and the influence of Adham Khān and his mother Māhum Anagah (Akbar's nurse), Siddiq Muhammad Khān, Shāhāb^u 'd Dīn Ahmad, etc., who effectually complained of the wretchedness of their jāgirs, and the emptiness of the Treasury, whilst Bayrām Khān's friends lived in affluence. The Tabaqāt-i Akbarī says that no less than twenty five of Bayram's friends reached the dignity of Panjazaris—rather a proof of Bayrām's gift of selecting proper men. Bayram's fall is known from the Histories. "Akbar's trick resembles exactly that which Sultan Abū Sa'īd I Mughul adopted towards his minister Amīr Chaubān" (Bad.)

On hearing the news that Akbar had assumed the reigns of the government, Bayrām left Āgra, and sent his friends who had advised him to go to Akbar, to Court. He himself went under the pretext of going to Makkah to Mewāt and Nāgor, from where he returned his insignia, which reached Akbar at Jhujhar, for Akbar was on his way to the Panjāb, which Bayrām, as it was said, wished to invade. The insignia were conferred on Pīr Muhammad Khān, Bayram's old protege, and he was ordered to see him embark for Makkah. Bayrām felt much irritated at this, and finding the road to Gujrat occupied by Raja Maldeo, his enemy, he proceeded to Bikanir to his friend Kalyān Mal

¹ So Bad II 19. The story of the oath is given in the Atgah.

The author of the Saadat-i Akbarī states that Abū 'I Fazl does not show much friendliness to Bayrām, whilst Erskine (Elphinstone p. 495, note) represents Abū 'I Fazl as "Bayrām's warm panegyrist."

(No 93) But unable to restrain himself any longer, he entrusted his property, his family, and his young son 'Abdu 'r Rahīm (No 29) to Sher Muhammad Dīwana, his adopted son and jāgīr holder of Tabarhinda, and broke out in open rebellion. At Dīpālpūr, on his way to the Panjab, he heard that Dīwana had squandered the property left in his charge, had insulted his family, and had sent Muzaffar 'Alī (whom Bayrām had dispatched to Dīwana to settle matters) to Court a prisoner. Mortified at this, Bayram resolved to take Jāhndhar. Akbar now moved against him, but before he reached him, he heard that Bayrām had been defeated¹ by Atgah Khān (No 15). Bayrām fled to Fort Tilwara on the banks of the Bivāh, followed by Akbar. Fighting ensued. In the very beginning, Sultān Husayn Jalair was killed, and when his head was brought to Bayram,² he was so sorry that he sent to Akbar and asked forgiveness. This was granted, and Bayrām, accompanied by the principal grandees, went to Akbar's tent, and was pardoned. After staying for two days longer with Mun'im Khān, he received a sum of money, and was sent to Makkah. The whole camp made a collection (chandoḡh) Hājī Muhammad of Sistān (No 55) accompanied Bayrām over Nagor to Patan (Nahrwāla) in Gujrāt, where he was hospitably received by Mūsa Khān Fūladī, the governor. On Friday, 14th Jumāda I, 968, while alighting from a boat after a trip on the Sahansa Lang Tank, Bayrām was stabbed by a Lohānī Afghān of the name of Mubarak, whose father had been killed in the battle of Māchhīwara. "With an Allāh" Akbar on his lips, he died." The motive of Mubārak Khān is said to have merely been revenge. Another reason is mentioned. The Kashmirī wife of Salīm Shah with her daughter had attached herself to Bayram's suite, in order to go to Hijāz, and it had been settled that Bayrām's son should be betrothed to her, which annoyed the Afghāns. Some beggars lifted up Bayrām's body, and took it to the tomb of Shaykh Husam^u 'd Dīn. Seventeen years later the body was interred in holy ground at Mashhad.

Akbar took charge of 'Abdu 'r Rahīm, Bayram's son (vide No 29), and married soon after Salma Sultān Begum, Bayrām's widow.

For Bayrām, we often find the spelling Bayram بیرام. Firishta generally calls him Bayrām Khān Turkman. Bayrām was a Shi'ah, and a poet of no mean pretensions (vide Badāoni III, p 190).

¹ Near کراچور (or کراچور) in the Parganah دکنار [Bad. دکنار Mā'ānir, دکنار Sawānīh] near Jāhndhar. For کراچور Bad. III 40) نورجور Firishta says (Lucknow edit. p. 249) the fight took place outside of Māchhīwara.

² The Mā'ānir mentions this fact without giving the source.

11 Mun^ṣim Khān, son of Bayrām¹ Beg

Nothing appears to be known of the circumstances of his father Mun^ṣim Khān was a grandee of Humāvūn's Court, as was also his brother Fazil Beg. When Humayun, on his flight to Persia, was hard pressed by Mirzā Shāh Husayn of Thathah, one grandee after another went quietly away. M and Fazil Beg also were on the point of doing so, when Humāyūn made them prisoners, as he had done from motives of prudence and policy with several other nobles. M did not, however, accompany Humayun to Persia. He rejoined him immediately on his return, and rose at once to high dignity. He rejected the governership of Qandahār, which was given to Bayram Khān. In 961, he was appointed atāliq of Prince Akbar, and when Humāyūn invaded India, M was left as governor of Kabul in charge of Mirzā Muhammad Hakīm, Akbar's brother, then about a year old. In Kābul M remained till Bayrām fell into disgrace. He joined Akbar, in Zi Hujja, 967, at Lūdhiana, where Akbar encamped on his expedition against Bayrām. M was then appointed Khān, Khānān and Vakil.

In the seventh year of Akbar's reign, when Adham Khān (No 19) killed Atgah Khān (No 15), Mun^ṣim who had been the instigator, fled twice from Court, but was caught the second time in Saror (Sirkar of Qanawj) by the collector of the district, and was brought in by Sayyid Mahmūd Khān of Bārha (No 75). Akbar restored M to his former honours.

Mun^ṣim Khān's son, Ghanī Khān, whom his father had left in charge of Kabul, caused disturbances from want of tact. Māh Jūjak Begum, Prince M Muhammad Hakīm's mother, advised by Fazil Beg and his son 'Abdu 'l Fath, who hated Ghanī Khān, closed the doors of Kābul when Ghanī Khān was once temporarily absent at Faliz. Ghanī Khān, not finding adherents to oppose her, went to India. Māh Jūjak Begum then appointed Fazil Beg as Vakil and 'Abdu 'l Fath as Nā'ib, but being dissatisfied with them, she killed them both at the advice of Shāh Walī, one of her nobles. On account of these disturbances, Akbar, in the eighth year, sent M to Kābul. Thinking he could rely on the Kābuls, M left before his contingent was quite ready. He was attacked near Jalalabad by Māh Jujak Begum (who in the meantime had killed Shāh Walī and had taken up, apparently criminally, with Haydar Qāsim Koh bar, whom she had made Vakil) and defeated. M fled to the Ghakhars, and ashamed and hesitating he joined Akbar, who appointed him Commander of the Fort of Āgra.

¹ Some MSS read Mīrām, but Bayrām is the preferable reading.

In the 12th year, after the defeat and death of Khān Zamān (No 13) M was appointed to his jāgīrs in Jaunpūr (Bad II, 101), and then concluded peace with Sulaymān Kararānī of Bengal, who promised to read the Khuṭba and strike coins in Akbar's name

In 982, Akbar, at M's request, went with a flotilla from Āgra to Bihār, and took Hājīpūr and Patna from Dā'ūd, Sulaymān's son. M was then appointed Governor of Bihār, and was ordered to follow Dā'ūd into Bengal. M moved to Tānda (opposite Gaur, on the right side of the Ganges) to settle political matters, and left the pursuit to Muhammad Qulī Khān Barlās (No 31). But as the latter soon after died, M, at the advice of Tolar Mal, left Tānda, and followed up Dā'ūd, who after his defeat at سجھور submitted at Katak. In Ṣafar 983, M returned, and though his army had terribly suffered from epidemics on the march through Southern Bengal, he quartered them against the advice of his friends at Gaur, where M soon after died of fever.

The great bridge of Jaunpūr was built by Munṣim Khān in 981. Its ṭarīkh is سراط المسقم. M's son Ghanī Khān went to 'Ādilshāh of Bijapūr, where he died.

12 Tardī Beg Khān, of Turkistān

A noble of Humāyūn's Court. After the conquest of Gujrāt, he was made Governor of Chamīānīr (Pāwangarh). On Mirzā 'Askari's defeat by Sultān Bahadur, Tardī Beg also succumbed to him, and retreated to Humāyūn. During the emperor's flight from Irāq, Tardī Beg distinguished himself as one of the most faithless¹ companions. When passing through the territory of Rāja Māldeo, he even refused Humāyūn a horse, and at Amarkoṭ, he declined to assist the emperor with a portion of the wealth he had collected while at court. Hence Rāy Parsād advised H to imprison some of his nobles and take away part of their property by force. H, however, returned afterwards most of it. In Qindahār, Tardī Beg left the emperor and joined Mirzā 'Askari. But Mirzā 'Askari put most of them on the rack, and forced also Tardī Beg to give him a large sum as ransom.

On Humāyūn's return from 'Iraq, Tardī Beg asked pardon for his former faithlessness, was restored to favour, and was sent, in 955, after the death of Mirzā Ulugh Beg, son of Mirzā Sultān, to Dāwar. During the conquest of India, T distinguished himself and received Mewāt as jāgīr In 963, when Humāyūn died (7th Rabi' I), T read the khutba in Akbar's name, and sent the crown insignia with M Abū 'I Qasim, son of Prince Kamrān, to Akbar in the Panjāb Akbar made T a Commander of Five Thousand, and appointed him governor of Dihlī T drove away Hajī Khan, an officer of Sher Shah, from Narnaul. On Hemu's approach, after some unsuccessful fighting, T too rashly evacuated Dihlī, and joined Akbar at Sarhind Bayrām Khan, who did not like T from envy and sectarian motives, accused him, and obtaining from Akbar "a sort of permission" (Bad II, 14) had him murdered (end of 963) Akbar was displeased Bayram's hasty act was one of the chief causes of the distrust with which the Chaghātā'ī nobles looked upon him Tardi Beg was a Sunnī

¹ Elphinstone p 452 note says Tardī Beg was one of the most faithful followers of Humāyūn a statement which is contradicted by all native historians.

13 Khan Zaman 1 Shaybani

His father Haydar Sultan Uzbek 1 Shaybani had been made an Amur in the Jam war with the Qizilbāshes When Humayun returned from Persia, Haydar joined him, together with his two sons 'Alī Qulī Khan [Khan Zaman] and Bahadur Khān (No 22), and distinguished himself in the conquest of Qandahār On the march to Kabul, an epidemic broke out in Humayūn's camp, during which Haydar Sultan died

'Alī Qulī Khan distinguished himself in Kabul and in the conquest of Hindustan, was made Āmir and sent to the Du,ab and Sambhal, where he defeated the Afghāns At the time of Akbar's accession, 'Alī Qulī Khan fought with Shādi Khan, an Afghan noble, but when he heard that Hemū had gone to Dihlī, he thought fighting with this new enemy more important, but before 'Alī Qulī arrived at Dihlī, Tardi Beg (No 12) had been defeated, and A returned from Meerut to Akbar at Sarhind 'Alī Qulī was sent in advance with 10,000 troopers, met Hemū near Panīpat and defeated him Though Akbar and Bayram were near, they took no part in this battle 'Alī Qulī received the title of Khān Zamān Next to Bayram, the restoration of the Mughul Dynasty may be justly ascribed to him Khan Zamān then got Sambhal again as jāgīr, cleared the whole north of India up to Lakhnau of the Afghāns, and acquired an immense fortune by plunder In 964, he held Jaunpūr as Qā'im maqām for Sikandar, after the latter had surrendered Mānket In the third year of Akbar's reign, Khan Zamān became the talk of the whole country in consequence of a love scandal with Shāham Beg, a page of Humāyūn, and as he refused to send the boy back to Court, Akbar took away some of Khān Zaman's tuyūl's, which led him to rebel Bayrām from generosity did not interfere, but when Pīr Muhammad, Khān Zamān's enemy, had been appointed Vakil, he took away, in the 4th year, the whole of his mahalls, and had him appointed commander against the Afghāns who threatened the Jaunpūr District. Pīr Muhammad had also Bury Ṣāli thrown from the walls of Firūzabād whom Khān Zamān had sent to him to settle matters. Khān Zamān now thought it was high time to send away Shaham Beg and went to Jaunpūr, and drove away the Afghāns. Upon the fall of Bayram they appeared again under Sher Shāh son of Ṣādli with a large army and 500 elephants. Khān Zamān, however, defeated them in the streets of Jaunpūr, and carried off immense plunder and numerous elephants which he retained for himself.

In Zi Qāda of the 6th year Akbar moved personally against him, but at Karah (on the Ganges) Khān Zamān and his brother Bahādūr submitted and delivered the booty and the elephants. They were pardoned and sent again to Jaunpūr. Soon after, he defeated the Afghāns, who had attacked him in a fortified position near the Son.

In the 10th year, Khān Zamān rebelled again in concert with the Uzbaks, and attacked the Tuvūldārs of the province. As soon as an imperial army marched against him, he went to Ghāzīpūr, and Akbar on arrival at Jaunpur sent Muṣṣim Khān against him. Being a friend of Khān Zamān he induced him to submit which he did. But a body of imperial troops under Muṣṣizzā'ī Mulk and Raja Todar Mal, having been defeated by Bahadur and Iskandar Uzbek (No 48) the rebellion continued, though repeated attempts were made to bring about a conciliation. Having at last sworn to be faithful, Khān Zamān was left in possession of his jagirs, and Akbar returned to Āgra. But when the emperor, on the 3rd Jumādī I, 974, marched against M. Muhammad Hakim, Khān Zamān rebelled again, read the Khutba at Jaunpur in M. Muhammad Hakim's name, and marched against Shergarh (Qanawj). Akbar was now resolved no longer to pardon, he left the Panjāb, 12th Ramazan 974, and Āgra on the 26th Shawwāl. At Sakit, east of Āgra, Akbar heard that Khān Zamān had fled from Shergarh to Manikpur where Bahadur was, and from there marching along the Ganges had bridged the river near the frontier of Singror (Nawabganj), between Manikpur and Allahabad. Akbar sent a detachment of 6000 troopers under Muhammad Quli Khan Barlas and Todar Mal to Audh to oppose Iskandar Khān Uzbek, and marched over Rāy Bareli to Manikpur, crossed the Ganges with about 900 men, and slept at night near the banks of the river, at a short distance from Khān Zamān's camp, who must have gone from Nawabganj back again on the right side of the river to Karah. Next morning 1st Zi Hija, 974, Akbar with some reinforcements attacked Khan Zamān Bahādur was captured, and brought to Akbar, and he had scarcely been dispatched, when Khān Zaman's head was brought in. He had been half killed by an elephant whose driver was called Somnāt, when a soldier cut off his head, for Akbar had promised a muhr for every Mughul's head. But another soldier snatched away the head and took it to Akbar. The fight took place dar Sarsa ya Sakrawāl (in Badaoni Mungarwāl), 'which place has since been called Fathpur'. The Trig S maps show a small village Fathpūr about 10 or 12 miles south east of Karah, not far from the river.

On the same day, though the heat was terrible, Akbar started for and reached Allahabad.

Khān Zamān as a poet styled himself Sultan (vide Proceedings Asiatic Society September, 1868) Zamāniyā (now a station on the E. I. Railway) was founded by him. Though an Uzbek, Khān Zaman, from his long residence in Persia was a staunch Shī'ah. Khān Zaman must not be confounded with No. 124.

14 'Abd^u 'llah Khan Uzbek.

A noble of Humayūn's Court. After the defeat of Hemu, he received the title of Shuja'at Khān, got Kalpi as tuyul, and served under Adham Khan (No. 19) in Gujrat. When Bāz Bahādur, after the death of Pīr Muhammad, had taken possession of Mālwa 'Abd^u 'llah was made a Panjhazāri, and was sent to Mālwa with almost unlimited authority. He re-conquered the province and "reigned in Mandū like a king". Akbar found it necessary to move against him. 'Abd^u 'llah, after some unsuccessful fighting, fled to Gujrat, pursued by Qasim Khān of Nishapūr (No. 40). Leaving his wives in the hands of his enemies, he fled with his young son to Changiz Khan, an officer of Sultān Mahmud of Gujrat. Hakim 'Ayn^u 'l Mulk was dispatched to Changiz with the request to deliver up 'Abd^u 'llah, or to dismiss him. Changiz Khān did the latter. 'Abd^u 'llah again appeared in Malwa, and was hotly pursued by Shahab^u 'd Dīn Ahmad Jihān (No. 26), who nearly captured him. With great difficulties he eluded his pursuers, and managed to reach Jaunpūr, where he died a natural death during the rebellion of Khān Zaman (No. 13).

15 Shams^u 'd Dīn Muhammad Atga Khan.

Son of Mir Yār Muhammad of Ghazni, a simple farmer. Shams^u 'd Dīn, when about twenty years old, once dreamed that he held the moon under his arm, which dream was justified by the unparalleled luck which he owed to a little deed of kindness. Shams^u 'd Dīn entered Prince Kāmran's service as a common soldier, and was present in the fatal battle of Qanawj (10th Muharram, 947) Humāyūn, after the defeat, crossed the river "on an elephant", and dismounted on the other side, where a soldier who had escaped death in the current, stretched out his hand to assist the emperor to jump on the high bank. This soldier was Shams^u 'd Dīn. Humāyūn attached him to his service, and subsequently appointed his wife wet nurse (angā) to Prince Akbar at Amarkot, conferring upon her the title of Jā Jī Anagā. Shams^u 'd Dīn remained with the young prince whilst Humāyūn was in Persia, and received after the emperor's restoration the title of Atgā (foster father) Khān. Humāyūn sent him to Hisār, which Sirkar had been set aside for Prince Akbar's maintenance.

After Akbar's accession, Atgā Khān was dispatched to Kabul to bring to India the Empress mother and the other Begums. Soon after, on the march from Mankot to Lahor, the elephant affair took place, which has been related under Bayrām Khān, p. 331. He held Khushāb in the Panjab as jagir, and received, after Bayrām's fall, the insignia of that chief. He was also appointed Governor of the Panjab. He defeated Bayrām Khān near Jalundhar, before Akbar could come up, for which victory Akbar honoured him with the title of A'zam Khān. In the sixth year, he came from Lāhor to the Court, and acted as Vakil either in supersession of Munṣim Khān or by "usurpation", at which Akbar connived. Munṣim Khān and Shahāb Khān (No. 26) felt much annoyed at this, and instigated Adham (vide No. 19) to kill Atgā Khān,¹ 12th Ramazan, 969.

For Atgā Khān's brothers vide Nos. 16, 28, 63, and for his sons, Nos. 18 and 21. The family is often called in Histories *Atgā Khāyl*² "the foster father battalion".

16 Khān: Kalan Mūr Muhammad, elder brother of Atgā Khān.

He served under Kāmran and Humāyūn, and rose to high dignity during the reign of Akbar. Whilst Governor of the Panjab, where most of the Atgās (Atgā Khāyl) had jagirs, he distinguished himself in the war with the Ghakkars, the extirpation of Sultan Ādam, and in keeping down Kamāl Khān. In the ninth year he assisted Mirzā Muhammad Hakīm against Mirza Sulaymān (No. 5), restored him to the throne of Kābul, settled the country, and sent back the imperial troops under

¹ He stabbed at the Atgā, and ordered one of his own servants, an Uzbek, of the name of Khusham Beg, to kill him. Baddāoni (p. 52) and Elphinstone (p. 502, l. 1) say that Adham himself killed Atgā.

² Khāyl troop tribe etc.—P]

by some Afghans, but Muhammad Amin Diwana and Bābā Zambūr managed to remove the child and his mother from the scene of plunder and bring them to Ahmadābād, fighting on the road with the Afghān robbers. From Ahmadābād, M 'Abd' r Rahīm was taken to Akbar (969), who, notwithstanding the insinuations of malicious courtiers, took charge of him. He gave him the title of Mīrzā Khān, and married him subsequently to Mah Bānū, sister of M 'Aziz Koka (No 21).

In 981, M 'Abd' r Rahīm accompanied Akbar on his forced march to Patan (p 313). In 984 M 'A was appointed to Gujrat, Vazir Khān having the management of the province. In the 25th year, he was made Mīr 'Arz, and three years later, atāliq to Prince Salim. Soon after, he was sent against Sultan Muzaffar of Gujrāt. Muzaffar, during the first Gujrati war, had fallen into the hands of Akbar's officers. He was committed to the charge of Mun'im Khān (No 11), and after his death, to the care of Shah Mansur the Diwan (No 122). But Muzaffar managed, in the 23rd year, to escape, and took refuge with the Kathis of Jūnagarh, little noticed or cared for by Akbar's officers. But when Iṣṭimād Khān was sent to Gujrat to relieve Shihab' d Dīn (No 26), the servants of the latter joined Muzaffar, and the Gujrāt rebellion commenced. Muzaffar took Ahmadābād, and recruited, with the treasures that fell into his hands (vide Qutb' d Dīn, No 28), an army of 40,000 troopers. Mīrzā 'Abd' r Rahīm had only 10,000 troopers to oppose him, and though his officers advised him to wait for the arrival of Qulij Khān and the Malwa contingent, Dawlat Khān Lodi (No 309), M 'A's Mīr Shamsheer, remanded him not to spoil his laurels and claims to the *Khān Khānān*ship. M 'A then attacked Muzaffar, and defeated him in the remarkable battle of Sarkich, three kos from Ahmadābād. On the arrival of the Malwa contingent, M 'A defeated Muzaffar a second time near Nādot. Muzaffar concealed himself in Rajpīpla.

For these two victories Akbar made M 'A a Commander of Five Thousand, and gave him the coveted title of Khān Khānān. For this reason historians generally call him Mirza Khān Khānān.

When Gujrat was finally conquered, M Khān Khānān gave his whole property to his soldiers, even his inkstand, which was given to a soldier who came last and said he had not received anything. The internal affairs of Gujrāt being settled, Qulij Khān was left in the province, and M 'A rejoined the Court.

In the 34th year he presented to Akbar a copy of his Persian translation of Babar's Chaghatai Memoirs (Wāqī'āt-i Bābarī)¹

¹ vide p. 105, last line.

Towards the end of the same year, he was appointed Vakīl and received Jaunpūr as tuyūl, but in 999 his jagīr was transferred to Multan, and he received orders to take Thatha (Sind) Passing by the Fort of Sahwān,¹ he took the Fort of Lakhī, "which was considered the key of the country, just as Gaḍhī is in Bengal and Bārahmūla in Kashmir" After a great deal of fighting Mirza Jānī Beg (No 47), ruler of Thatha, made peace, which M 'A, being hard pressed for provisions, willingly accepted Sahwān was to be handed over to Akbar, M Jānī Beg was to visit the emperor after the rains, and Mirzā Īrīch, M 'A's eldest son, was to marry Jānī Beg's daughter But as M Jānī Beg, after the rains, delayed to carry out the stipulations, M 'A moved to Thatha and prepared himself to take it by assault, when M Jānī Beg submitted and accompanied M 'A to Court² Thus Sindh was annexed

When Sultān Murād assembled at Bahrōch (Broach) his troops for the conquest of the Dakhīn, Akbar dispatched M 'A to his assistance, giving him Bhūlsa as jagīr After delaying there for some time, M 'A went to Ujain, which annoyed the Prince, though M 'A wrote him that Raja 'Alī Khān,³ of Khāndes was on the point of joining the Imperialists and that he would come with him When M 'A at last joined headquarters at Fort Chāndor, 30 kos from Ahmadnagar, he was slighted by the Prince, and, in consequence of it, he hesitated to take an active part in the operations, leaving the command of his detachment chiefly in the hands of M Shahrukḥ (No 7) Only on one occasion after Murād's departure from Ahmadnagar, he took a prominent part in the war Muṣṭamīd⁴ 'd Dawla Suhayl Khān (Briggs II, 274, III, 308) threatened Prince Murad, who had been persuaded by his officers not to engage with him M 'A, Rāja 'Alī Khān, and M Shāhrukḥ, therefore, took it upon themselves to fight the enemy Moving in Jumada II, 1005, from Shahpūr, M 'A met Suhayl near the town of Ashtī, 12 kos from Pathrī The fight was unusually severe Raja 'Alī Khān with five or six of his principal officers and five hundred troopers were killed (Briggs IV, 324) The night put an end to the engagement, but each party, believing itself victorious, remained under arms When next morning, M 'A's troopers went to the river [near Sūpā, Fīrīshā] to get water, they were attacked by 25,000 of the enemy's horse Dawlat Khān, who commanded

¹ Also called Siwastān, on the right bank of the Indus Lakhī (Lakkee) lies a little south of Sahwān

² The conquest of Sindh forms the subject of a Masnawī by Mulla Shikabī, whom Abū' Faḍl mentions below among the poets of Akbar's age

³ Khānī Khān calls him Rājā 'Alī Khān.

M 'A's avantguard, said to him, "It is dying a useless death to fall fighting with but 600 troopers against such odds" "Do you forget Dīhli?", asked M 'A "If we keep up," replied Dawlat Khān, "against such odds, we have discovered a hundred Dīhlīs, and if we die, matters rest with God" Qāsim of Barha¹ and several other Sayyids were near, and on hearing M 'A's resolution to fight, he said, "Well, let us fight as Hindūstānīs, nothing is left but death, but ask the Khān Khānān what he means to do" Dawlat Khān returned, and said to M 'A "Their numbers are immense, and victory rests with heaven, point out a place where we can find you, should we be defeated" "Under the corpses," said M 'A Thereupon they charged the flank of the enemy and routed them After this signal victory, M 'A distributed 75 lacs of rupees among his soldiers At the request of the Prince, M 'A was soon after recalled (1006)

In the same year Mah Bānū, M 'A's wife, died

In the 44th year Prince Dānyāl was appointed to the Dakhīn, and M 'A was ordered to join the Prince, and besiege Ahmadnagar The town, as is known from the histories, was taken after a siege of 4 months and 4 days² M 'A then joined the Court, bringing with him Bahādur ibn Ibrāhīm, who had been set up as Nizām Shāh Dānyāl was appointed governor of the newly conquered territory, which was called by Akbar Dāndes,³ and married to Jānā Begum, M 'A's daughter The Khān Khānān was also ordered to repair to Ahmadnagar, to keep down a party that had made the son of Shāh 'Alī, uncle of Murtaza, Nizām Shāh

After the death of Akbar, matters in the Dakhīn did not improve In the 3rd year of Jahāngīr (1017), M 'A promised to bring the war to a close in two years if he received a sufficient number of troops Shāhzāda Parwīz, under the Atāshīq ship of Āsaf Khān, Mān Singh, Khān Jahān Lodi, and others, were appointed to assist M 'A He took the Prince in the rains from Burhānpūr to Balāghāt, but in consequence of the usual duplicity and rancour displayed by the Amīrs, the imperial army suffered from want of provisions and loss of cattle, and M 'A was compelled to conclude a treaty dishonourable for Jahāngīr, who appointed

¹ The Sayyids of Barha considered it their privilege to fight in the Harāul or van. Vide No 75

² Abū 'I Faḥl and the Lucknow edition of Fīrūshā call the eunuch who murdered Chānd Bibī عبد الله or عبد. Briggs has Hamīd Khān. For Ashang Khān, which Briggs gives, all copies of the Akbarnāma and the Maḥāṣir have Ashang Khān. The Lucknow Ed of Fīrūshā has Ashang Khān. The differences, moreover, between Abū 'I Faḥl and Fīrūshā in details are very remarkable.

³ A combination of the words Dāndes and Khāndes

Khān Jahān Lodī as his successor, and sent Mahābat Khān, subsequently M 'A's enemy, to bring the unsuccessful commander to Court

In the 5th year, M 'A received Kālpi and Qanawj as tu nūl, with orders to crush the rebels in those districts (vide p 341, note) Some time afterwards, M 'A was again sent to the Dakhīn, as matters there had not improved, but he did not gain any advantage either

In the 11th year (1025) Jahāngīr, at last, dispatched Prince Khurram, to whom he had given the title of Shāh¹ Jahāngīr himself fixed his residence at Mandu in Mālwa, in order to be nearer the scene of war, while Shāh Khurram selected Burhānpūr as Head Quarters Here the Prince also married the daughter of Shāhnawāz Khan, M 'A's son 'Ādil Shāh and Qutb^u 'l Mulk sent tribute and submitted, and Jahāngīr bestowed upon 'Ādil Shāh the title of Farzand (son), and 'Ambar Malik handed over the keys of Ahmadnagar and other Forts, together with the Parganas of Bālāghāt, which he had conquered Shāh Khurram then appointed M 'A Sūbahdār of Khāndes, Barār, and Ahmadnagar, whilst Shāhnawāz Khān was appointed to Bālāghat Leaving 30,000 horse and 7,000 artillery in the Dakhīn, Shah Khurram joined his father at Mandū, where new honours awaited him²

In the 15th year, Malik 'Ambar "broke" the treaty, and fell upon the Thānadārs of the Mughuls Darāb Khān, M 'A's second son, retreated from Balāghāt to Balapūr, and driven from there, he went to Burhanpūr where he and his father were besieged On Shāhjahān's approach, the besiegers dispersed

In the 17th year (1031) Shāh 'Abbās of Persia attacked Qandahar, and Shāhjahān and 'Abdu'r Rahim were called to Court to take command against the Persians, but before they joined, Prince Parwīz, through Nūr Jahān's influence, had been appointed heir apparent, and Mahābat Khān had been raised to the dignity of Khān Khānān Shāhjahān rebelled, returned with M 'A to Mandū, and then moved to Burhānpūr On the march thither, Shāhjahān intercepted a letter which M 'A had secretly written to Mahābat Khān, whereupon he imprisoned him and his son Darāb Khān, and sent him to Fort Āsīr, but released them soon after on parole. Parwiz and Mahābat Khān had, in the meantime, arrived at the Narbadda to capture Shāhjahān. Bavrām Beg, an officer of Shāhjahān's, had for this reason removed all boats to the left side of the river, and successfully prevented the imperials from crossing. At M 'A's advice, Shāhjahān proposed, at this time, an armistice. He made M 'A swear upon the Qur'ān not to betray him, and sent him as ambassador to Parwiz. Mahābat Khān, knowing that the fords would not now be so carefully watched as before, effected a crossing, and M 'A, forgetful of his oath, joined Prince Parwiz, and did not return to Shāhjahān, who now fled from Burhānpūr, marching through Talīgāna to Orisa and Bengal. Mahābat and M 'A followed him up a short distance beyond the Tapti. M 'A wrote to Rāja Bhīm, a principal courtier of the Dawlatshāhī party, to tell Shāhjahān, that he (M 'A) would do every thing in his power to detain the imperial army, if the prince would allow his sons to join him. Rāja Bhīm replied that the prince had still from five to six thousand followers, and that he would kill M 'A's sons should it come to a fight. Shāhjahān then moved into Bengal and Bihār, of which he made Darāb Khān, who had evidently attached himself to the prince, Governor. Mahābat Khān had in the meantime returned to Allahabad to oppose Shāhjahān, and had placed M 'A, who looked upon him with distrust, under surveillance.

¹ "Since the time of Timūr no Prince had received this title" Ma'ānir Shāhā Ahurram received subsequently the title of Shāhshāh which he retained as king, in conjunction with the titles of Shāh Quds, Shāh and Aslā Hazrat (امیر حضرت) The last title had also been used by Sulaymān i Karārān, King of Bengal Awrangzeb, in imitation of it, adopted the title of Aslā Shāhshāh

² He received the title of Shāhshāh and was made a Sikāhārī, or Commander of Thirty Thousand, personal (brevet) rank, and a contingent of 20,000 (as asī wa asāfa, i.e., his former contingent plus an increase in troops) He was also allowed a bandāh (vide p. 318).

In the 21st year, Jahāngīr ordered Mahābat Khān to send M 'A to court, where he was reinstated in his titles and honours. He afterwards retired to his jagīr at Lāhor, when Mahābat Khān followed him and sent him back to Dihli. Soon after the failure of his scheme of retaining possession of Jahāngīr's person, and the return of the monarch from Kabul Mahābat Khān had to fly. Nūr Jahan now appointed M 'A to follow up Mahābat, and contributed herself twelve lacs of rupees to the expedition. But before the necessary preparations had been completed, M 'A fell ill at Lahor, and on his arrival at Dihli, he died at the age of seventy two, in the end of Jahāngīr's 21st year (1036). The words Khān Sipahsālār kū (where is the Khān Commander?) are the tārīkh of his death.

M 'A's great deeds are the conquests of Gujrāt and Sind and the defeat of Suhayl Khān of Bijapūr. During Jahāngīr's reign, he did nothing remarkable, nor was he treated with the respect which he had enjoyed during the lifetime of Akbar, though he was allowed to retain his rank. For nearly thirty years he had been serving in the Dakhīn

Every grandee, and even the princes, accused him of secret friendship with the rulers of the Dakhin, and 'Abd 'l Fazl, on one occasion, gave his fatawa that M 'A was a rebel Under Jahāngīr, he was the open friend of Malik 'Ambar, and Muhammad Ma'sūm, one of his servants, once informed the emperor that he would find Malik 'Ambar's correspondence in the possession of 'Abd' r Rahīm of Lakhnau (No 197), who was much attached to M 'A Mahābat Khān was appointed to inquire into this, but 'Abd' r Rahīm of Lakhnau would not betray his friend People said, M 'A's motto was, "people should hurt their enemies under the mask of friendship," and all seem to have been inclined to blame him for maliciousness and faithlessness He used to get daily reports from his newswriters whom he had posted at various stations He read their reports at night, and tore them up But he was also proverbial for his liberality and love of letters The *Mā'ātur : Rahīmī*¹ is a splendid testimony of his generosity, it shows that he was the Mæcenas of Akbar's age People, by a happy comparison, called him Mir 'Alī Sher (vide p 107, note 6) M 'A wrote Persian, Turkish, Arabic, and Hindi with great fluency As poet he wrote under the name of Rahīm

..... M 'A was a Sunni, but people

..... People said, he was the son of a slave girl, but he appears to have been a Rajpūt He grew up with M 'A's sons, and was as pious as he was courageous He fell with his son Fīrūz Khān and 40 attendants in a fight with Mahabat Khān who had imprisoned his master M 'A built him a tomb in Delhi, which is now called Nīla Burj, near Humayun's tomb (Ā'ar' 's sanādīd)

M 'A outlived his four sons

1 Mīrzā Irich (or Iry), Shahnawaz Khān Bahādur (No 255) When young he used to be called Khān Khunān : jauān He distinguished himself by his courage In the 40th year of Akbar he was made a Commander of 400 In the 47th year, after a fight² with Malik 'Ambar who got wounded, he received the title of Bahādur During the reign of Jahāngīr he was called Shahnawaz Khān (vide Tuzuk, p 95), and was made a Commander of Five Thousand He died in 1028, from excessive drinking (Vide Tuzuk, p 270)

¹ Called Mā'ātur : Rahīmī in allusion to his name M 'Abd' r Rahīm Vide Elliot's Index (1st edition) p 377

² Wherever Shi'as are in the minority, they practise if necessary, taqiyya (i.e. fear caution) i.e. they do as if they were Sunnis A Shi'ah may even vilify his own sect if his personal safety requires it

[³ Near Nander — B.]

Two of his sons are mentioned in the Pādīshāhnāma 1 Mirzā Khān He was Fawjdar of Kāngrah, and retired "foolishly" from public life in Rabi^c II, 1046 But he was re-employed and was a Commander of Three Thousand in 1055 (Pādīshāhnāma II, pp 483, 723) 2 Lashkar-shikan Khān He got in 1047 a present of 4,000 R., and received an appointment in Bengal

Historians call Shahnavāz Khān generally Shahnawāz Khān ; Jahāngīrī, to distinguish him from Shahnavaz Khān ; Şafawī, a grandee of Shāhjahan

2 Mirzā Dārāb Dārāb-Khān He has been mentioned above (p 337) When Shāhjahan made him Governor of Bengal, he retained his wife, a son and a daughter, and a son of Shahnavaz Khān as hostages (yarghamāl) When the prince after the fight near the Tons (Benares) had again to go to the Dakhin, he wrote to Dārāb Khān to move to Gaḍhī (N W entrance of Bengal) and join him Dārāb wrote him that he could not come, being besieged by the zamindars of the place He fell at last into the hands of Parwiz and Mahābat Khān, and as Jahāngīr had "no objections", Mahābat executed him (1035), wrapped his head in a table cloth, and sent it to his father M Ḥ A as a present of a "melon" A short time before ḤAbd^{us} Ḥllah Khān had killed Darab's son and a son of Shahnavāz Khān

3 Mirzā Rahmān Dād His mother belonged to the Sandahas of Amarkot Though very dissolute, he was the most liked by his father He died, at Bālapūr, about the same time as his eldest brother Vide Tuzuk, p 315 No one dared to inform his father of the event, till people sent at last the famous saint Ḥazrat ḤIsa of Sindh to M Ḥ A on a visit of condolence

4 Mirzā Amr^u Ḥllah He grew up without education and died when young

Ḥ0 Raja Man Singh son of Bhagwan Das

He was born at Amber, and is the son of Raja Bhagwan Das (No 27) European historians say that he was the adopted son of Raja Bh D, but Muhammadan historians do not allude to this circumstance, perhaps because Hindus make absolutely no difference between a real and an adopted son He is also known under the title of Mirzā Rāja, and Akbar bestowed upon him the title of Farzand (son)

He joined Akbar with Bihari Mal (p 329) In 984 he was appointed against Rānā Kika, and gained, in 985¹ the great battle near Goganda 2

[1 Corrected in No 109 —B]

2 The best account of this battle is to be found in Badaoni who was an eye-witness Bad. II 230 to 237 The whole is left out in Briggs

Rāja Rāmsāh of Gwāliyār was killed with his sons, whilst the Rānī himself in the melee was wounded by Man Singh Akbar, however, felt annoyed, because M S did not follow up his victory, and so recalled him

When Bhagwān Dās was appointed governor of the Panjab, M S commanded the districts along the Indūs In the year 993, Prince M Muhammad Hakīm died, and M S was sent to Kābul to keep the country in order He rejoined Akbar near the Indus with M Muhammad Hakīm's sons (M Afrasyāb and M Kayqubād) but was soon after sent back to Kābul, where he chastised the Rāushanis who, like other Afghān tribes, were given to predatory incursions After the death of Rāja Bir Bar, in the war with the Yūsufzā'is, M S was appointed to the command of the army in Kabul, in supercession of Zayn Khān Koka (No 34) and Hakīm Abū 'I Fath He was also put in charge of Zabulistan, as Bhagwan Das had a fit of madness (p 358) In the 32nd year, M S was recalled in consequence of loud complaints of the people against the Rajputs and M S's indifference to the Kabulis and was appointed Governor of Bihār, to which province the tuyūls of the Kachhwahas had been transferred

After the death of Bhagwan Dās in 998, M S, who hitherto had the title of Kūwar, received from Akbar the title of Raja and a Command of Five Thousand In Bihar he punished several refractory Zamindars, as Pūran Mal and Raja Sangram, and received their tribute

The principal events in Mān Singh's life from 997 to 1015 are given in Stewart's History of Bengal (pp 114 to 121)¹ In the 35th year, M S invaded Orisa by way of Jhārkand (Chuttīā Nagpūr) The result of this expedition was the cession of Pūri In the 37th year, when the Afghāns under Khwāja Sulaymān and Khwāja 'Usmān attacked Pūri, M S again invaded Orisa, and re-annexed, in 1000 that province to the Dillī empire In the 39th year, M S continued his conquests in Bhāṭī (the eastern portions of the Sundarban), and built, in the following year, Akbarnagar, or Rajmahall, at a place which Sher Shah, before him, had selected as a convenient spot, as also Salimnagar, the Fort of Sherpur Murcha (Mymensing) The whole of Eastern Bengal on the right side of the Brahmaputra was likewise annexed In the 41st year, M S married the sister of Lachmī Narāṣin, Rāja of Kūch Bihar, who had declared himself a vassal of the Mughul empire. In the same year, M S fell dangerously ill at Ghoraghat, when the Afghans attacked him. They were soon after driven back by Himmat Singh, one of M S's sons,¹ into the Sundarban. In the 42nd year, M S had to send a detachment under Hijaz Khan into Kūch Bihar for the protection of Lachma Nara'in. In the 44th year M S, at Akbar's request, joined the Dakhin war. Thinking that the Afghans, in consequence of the death of their leader the rich 'Isa of Ghoraghat, would remain quiet, M S appointed his son Jagat Singh (No 160) his deputy, and joined Prince Salim at Ajmir. Jagat Singh died after a short time, and was succeeded by Maha Singh, a grandson of M S. The Afghans under 'Usman used this opportunity, defeated, in the 45th year, the imperials near Bhadrak in Orisa, and occupied a great portion of Bengal. M S then hastened back over Rahtas, and defeated the Afghans near Sherpur 'Atai, a town of the Sirkar of Sharifabad, which extended from Bardwan to Fath Singh, S of Murshibabad. After this victory, which obliged 'Usman to retreat to Orisa, M S paid a visit to the emperor, who promoted him to a (full) command of Seven Thousand. Hitherto Five Thousand had been the limit of promotion. It is noticeable that Akbar in raising M S to a command of Seven Thousand, placed a Hindū above every Muhammadan officer, though, soon after, M Shahrukh (vide p 326) and M. 'Aziz Koka (No 21) were raised to the same dignity.

¹ The name of ' Sayyid Khān (سید خان) which occurs several times in Stewart's l. c., should be corrected to Sa'id Khān (سعد خان) the same grandee whose biography was given above (p 351) Such as take an interest in the History of Bengal and Orisa should make use of the Akbarnāma, which contains many new facts and details not given in Stewart

M S remained in Bengal till 1013, when the sickness of the emperor induced him to resign his appointment in order to be in the capital. The part which he played at the time of Akbar's death is known from the histories. Jahangir thought it prudent to overlook the conspiracy which the Raja had made, and sent him to Bengal. But soon after (1015), he was recalled and ordered to quell disturbances in Rohtas (Bihar), after which he joined the Emperor. In the 3rd year of Jahangir's reign, he was permitted to go to his home, where he raised levies, in order to serve with M. 'Abd' 'r Ralim (No 29) in the Dakhin war.

M S died a natural death in the 9th year of J's reign, whilst in the Dakhin. Sixty of his fifteen hundred wives burned themselves on the funeral pile. At the time of his death, only one of his numerous sons was alive. Bha'o Singh regarding whose succession to the title, vide Tuzuk i Jahangiri, p 130.

The ground on which the Taj at Āgra stands, belonged to Man Singh

¹ He died in 1605

31. Muhammad Quli Khān Barlās, a descendant of the Barmaqs (1) ¹ He served under Humāyūn, and held Multān as jāgīr. In the beginning of Akbar's reign, he conveyed, together with Shams^u 'd Dīn Atga (No 15) the princesses from Kābul to India. His tuyūl was subsequently transferred to Nāgor. For a short time he was also Governor of Mālwa.

In the 12th year, he was sent against Iskandar Khān Uzbek (vide No 48) in Audh. After the death of Khān Zamān, Iskandar fled to Bengal, and Audh was given to Muhammad Quli Khān as jāgīr.

He subsequently served under Mun^{im} Khān in Bihār and Bengal. In the 19th year when Dā^{ud} had withdrawn to Sāt^gāw (Hūglī) Mun^{im} Khān dispatched M Q Kh to follow up the Afghans, whilst he remained with Rāja Todar Mal in Jānda to settle financial matters. When M Q Khān arrived at Sāt^gāw Dā^{ud} withdrew to Orisa, to which country neither M Q Khān nor his officers had much inclination to go. From Sāt^gāw M Q Khān invaded the district of Jesar (Jesore), where Şarmadī, a friend of Dā^{ud}'s, had rebelled, but the imperialists met with no success, and returned to Sāt^gāw. Mun^{im} Khān at last ordered Todar Mal to join M G Khān, and subsequently both moved into Orisa. Soon after passing the frontier M Q Khān died at Mednapūr (Midnapore), Ramazan, 982. He seems to have died a natural death, though some accused one of his eunuchs of foul play.

His son, Mirzū Farīdūn Barlās (No 227) He served under M 'Abd^u 'r Rahim (No 29) in Sīnd, and accompanied in 1001, Janū Beg (No 47) to Court. He was a Commander of Five Hundred. Under Jahāngīr, he was rapidly promoted, and held, in the 8th year, a command of Two Thousand, when he served under Prince Khurram against Rīna Amr Singh. He died during the expedition.

His son Mihr 'Alī Barlās was made by Jahāngīr a Commander of One Thousand.

32 Tarson Khan, sister's son of Shah Muhammad Sayf^u 'l Mulk.

In Histories he is called Tarson Muhammad Khān Sayf^u 'l Mulk had been an independent ruler in Gharjistan (a part of Khurasān), but he had to submit to Şahmasp (A H 940)

Tarson Khān was in the service of Bayrām Khān (No 10), and joined Akbar when Bayrām fell into disgrace. Akbar sent him, together with Hāji Muhammad Sistani (No 55), to see Bayrām on his way to Makkah, as far as Nāgor, then the frontier of the empire. T Kh was subsequently promoted to the post of a Commander of Five Thousand, and was for some time Governor of Bhakkar (vide No 107), and then of Patan in Gujrāt. In the 21st year he served in Rājputānā, vide No 44. In the 23rd year he was made Fawjdār of Jaunpūr, at the same time that Mullā Muhammad Yazdī (vide p 198) was appointed Qāziy^u 'l Quzāt and Sadr of the Sirkār. When the Jaunpūr Rebellion broke out, T Kh with other faithful Amīrs moved to Bihār against Bahādūr Khān and 'Arab Khān, who were joined by Ma'sūm Khān Farankhūdī (No 157). In the 27th year he served under M 'Aziz Koka in Bihār. When the Qāqshāls (No 50) left Ma'sūm Khān and joined the Imperialists, M 'Aziz sent T Kh to Ghoraghāt, where most of the Qāqshāls had jāgirs. T Kh stayed at Tājpur (Dinagepore), settling matters, when Ma'sūm Khān came with a large army from Bhatī (بھٹی),¹ and plundered Western Bengal, approaching even the environs of Tānda, he also sent a detachment against T Kh, who was besieged in the fort of Tājpur. The siege was raised by a corps sent by Shāhbāz Khān Kambū (No 80) from Patna, and T Kh was thus enabled to join Shāhbāz and drive away the rebels from Upper Bengal. Ma'sūm fled again to Bhatī, and Shahbaz and T Kh planned an expedition against 'Isa, who had afforded Ma'sūm shelter. They crossed the Ganges at Khīzrpūr, which stands on the frontier of Bhatī, took Sunnārgāw, plundered Baktarāpur (?), where 'Isa used to live, and nearly caught Ma'sūm. At this juncture, 'Isa returned from an expedition to Kūch Bihār, and attacked the Imperialists near Bhowāl (N of Dacca). The Imperialists had entrenched themselves near the Brahmaputra, and the fighting was continued for a long time both by land and on the river. At one time T Kh with a small detachment came too near a position held by the enemy, and was attacked by Ma'sūm Khān and wounded. Immediately afterwards he was caught and killed by Ma'sūm (992). For a relation of his, vide No 400.

33 Qiyā Khān Gung

Qiyā is a Turkish word and means zeb, ornament. Gung, if it is the Persian word, means "dumb". He served under Humāyūn and held Kol Jalali. On the approach of Hemu, he joined Tardi Beg (No 12) in Delhi, and retreated with him. After Hemū's defeat, Qiyā was sent to Āgra, and was raised to the dignity of a Commander of Five Thousand. Several parganas in Gwāliar having been given to him as tuyūl. Qiyā held the Fort for a long time, wished ² to hand it over for a consideration to Rājā Ramsah, whose ancestors had held Gwāliar, when Qiyā Khān arrived, and after defeating the Rājā, prepared himself to besiege Bhil Khān. When Akbar, in 966, came to Āgra, he sent a detachment to assist Qiyā, and Bhil Khān submitted.

He was a friend of Bayram, but was the first that left him and joined Akbar.

A few years later, Qiyā Khān joined Khān Zamān's rebellion, but repented and was pardoned, at the request of Mun'im Khān.

After the first conquest of Bengal, Q Kh was sent to Orisa, to settle matters. He remained in Orisa and Bengal during the Bengal rebellion, and when, in the 25th year, the Imperialists withdrew from that country, Qutlū Khān seized upon Orisa, and besieged Qiyā Khān in some fort. Deserted by his soldiers, Q Kh was killed (989).²

Tardī Khān (No 101), his son, was a Commander of Fifteen Hundred. He accompanied Prince Danyāl to the Dakhīn, but fell later in disgrace. In the 49th year he was restored and promoted to a command of Two Thousand Five Hundred, and got a present of 5 lacs of Rupees.

V Commanders of Four Thousand Five Hundred

34 Zayn Khān,¹ son of Khawāja Maqsūd of Harat

His father, Khawāja Maqsūd 'Alī, was a servant of Akbar's mother. The name of his mother was Pīcha Jān Anaga, she was one of Akbar's nurses. On Humayun's flight to Persia, Maqsūd was always near the howdah of Akbar's mother, and remained attached to her in all her misfortunes. His brother was Khawāja Hasan (Zayn Khān's uncle), whose daughter married Prince Salīm. She is the mother of Prince Parwīz.

In 993, Mirza Muhammad Hakim, Akbar's brother, had died, and Akbar crossed the Indus for Zabulistan. Zayn Khān was at that time a Commander of Two Thousand and Five Hundred, and was sent against the Yusufzā,¹⁵ This tribe, says 'Abu l Faḡl, had formerly been in Qarabagh and Qandahār, and had invaded Kabul, where a great number of them were killed by M. Ulugh Beg. The remainder settled at Lamghanat, and subsequently at Ishtaghar. For the last one hundred years they had held the territory of Bajor,² and were notorious robbers. In Bajor, there was also a tribe of the name of Sultānī, who traced their descent to a daughter of Sultan Sikandar. The Yūsufzā's deprived them treacherously of their district, a few of the Sultānides, however, remained in Bajor from attachment to their old country.

On a former occasion, when Akbar had moved against M. Muhammad Hakim, the chiefs of the Yūsufzā's submitted, and one of them, Kalu, went with Akbar to Āgra and was hospitably treated. He fled, however, but was caught by Shams' d Dīn Khafī (No 159) near Āṭak, and was sent back, and although Akbar continued to treat him kindly, he fled again and stirred up his countrymen.

Zayn Khān moved into the District of Bajor² (north of Pashawar), and punished the Yūsufzā's. Several chiefs asked for pardon. After this he erected a fort in Jakdara, in the middle of the country, and defeated the enemies in twenty three fights. He had at last 60 aṣk

¹ As he was Akbar's foster brother, he is generally called in histories, Zayn Khān Koka.

[² Or Bijūr (?).—P.]

for reinforcements, and Akbar sent to him Rāja Bīr Bar and Hakīm Abū 'l Fath with some troops. Zayn Khān asked them to attack the Afghāns whilst he would occupy the conquered districts, or he would attack the enemies and they should hold the district. But Bīr Bar and Hakīm Abū 'l Fath, who were no friends of Zayn Khān, proposed that they should attack the Yūsufzā'is together and then go back. Z Kh said it would not do to return without better results from a country which had cost so many sacrifices, else, the best thing they could do, was to return the same way they had come. But to this they would not listen, and returned by another road (over کراکړ). Z Kh paid no attention to their insubordination and joined them, chiefly because he was afraid they would denounce him at Court. As soon as the Afghāns saw the Imperialists returning, they attacked them in every narrow valley. On passing the Girewa¹ Balandrī (گریره بلدري), Z Kh who commanded the rear (chandāwal), was so severely attacked that he had to face them. Arrows and stones were showered from all sides on the Imperialists, the soldiers got bewildered, and the horses ran into the train of elephants. Many lives were lost. Z Kh, unable to prevent a rout, rushed among the Afghāns seeking death, when Jānish Bahādūr (No 235) got hold of the reins of his horse, and led him by force out of the mōlee. In the greatest disorder the Imperialists reached the next station, when the mere rumour of an approach of the Afghāns dispersed the soldiers. In the darkness of night most of them lost their way, and several detachments entered the valleys occupied by the Afghāns. Their enemies being engaged in plundering, they were at first safe, but next day were all cut off. This was the occasion when Bīr Bar with 500 officers fell (vide p 214).

In the 31st year (994), Z Kh operated successfully against the Mahmands and Ghorīs near Pashāwar, who under their chief Jalāl 'd-Dīn Rawshani had committed numerous predations. In the next year, Z Kh was made governor of Zābulistan vice Mān Singh, and moved, in the 33rd year, against the Yūsufzā'is. After eight months' fighting they submitted, but Z Kh insisted on occupying their territory. He followed the same policy as before, and erected a large Fort on the banks of the river Pajkora² (پاجکورا), where their district commences. During the festival of the 'Īd : Qurbānī (Baqr 'Īd, in Zī Hijjah), he surprised the Afghāns and took possession of the whole district, erecting a fort wherever

¹ Girewa means a Hill

² Or Panjkora

he thought necessary, and leaving in each a sufficient number of soldiers ¹
(Vide No 46)

In the 35th year he was sent to punish several rebellious zamīndārs in the Himalayas. Most of them, as Raja Budī (Badhī) Chand of Nagarkot (vide p 349), Rāy Pertab of Mānkot, Raja Parisrām of Mount Jamū, Rāja Basū of Mau, Rāy Balhadhr of Lakhimpūr, etc., submitted and accompanied Z Kh to Court, though they had an army of 10,000 horse and a lac of foot soldiers.

After having been made, in the 36th year, a Commander of Four Thousand, Z Kh was allowed an salām and a naggāra (vide p 52), and was appointed, in the following year, governor of the districts beyond the Indus up to the Hindukush, when new opportunities offered for punishing the mountaineers.

In the 41st year he was made a Commander of Five Thousand and governor of Kābul, vice Qulij Khān. In the same year, Prince Salim fell in love with Z Kh's daughter, and married her soon after, though Akbar was displeased (vide p 288, l. 1, from below). With the death of Jalāl Khān Rawshānī the disturbances in Zabulstān came to an end, and Z Kh was ordered to Lahor, from where Akbar, on his return from Burhanpūr, called him to Āgra.

Z Kh died in 1010, partly from excessive drinking. He played on several instruments, and composed poems. As Sa'īd Khān (No 25) for his eunuchs, and Qulij Khān (No 42) for his horses, so was Z Kh famous for his elephants.

A son of his, Shukr^u 'Ullah (No 373), vide below, was a Commander of Two Hundred. The Ma'āyir mentions another son, Mughul Khān, who served under Jahāngir and Shahjahan (vide Padīshāhn II, p 641) and died 19th Rama'ān, 1067. He commanded for some time Fort Odgir in the Dakhin where the author of the Ma'āyir later found an inscription referring to his appointment. For a second daughter, vide p 346.

For Zayn Khān's brother, vide No 38.

35 Murzā Yusuf Khān, son of Mir Ahmad i Razawī

He was a real Sayyid of Mashhad, and was much liked by Akbar. In the 30th year he was a Commander of Two Thousand and Five Hundred ¹ Such forts were called TĀḌās, now the common word for a police station.

* TĀḌās means a corps of cavalry, matchlockmen, and archers, stationed within an enclosure. Their duty is to guard the roads, to hold the places surrounding the TĀḌās, and to dispatch provisions (rasād) to the next TĀḌās. " Padīshāhn I, p. 167.

How old the use of the word TĀḌās is, may be seen from the fact that it occurs frequently on Tribeni and Sātgāw inscriptions of the eighth and ninth centuries of the Hijrah.

When Shahbaz Khan left Bihar for Bengal, M Yusuf Khan was sent from Audh to keep Bihar. In the 32nd year (995) when Qasim Khan (No 59) resigned, M Y was sent to Kashmir as ruler. He was much liked by the people of that country, conciliated Shams Chak, the claimant to the throne, and sent him to Court. In the 34th year (997) Akbar visited Kashmir, and issued several orders regarding the taxation of the country. In the districts of Mararaj and Kamraj i.e., the upper and lower districts on both sides of the Bahat river, he fixed the taxes at one fourth.

In Kashmir every piece of ground is called patta, though a patta originally is equal to 1 Bigha, 1 Biswa (Ilāhī) of Akbar. Two and a half pattas and a little more are equal to 1 Kashmīrī Bigha. Three kinds of grain pay taxes in Kashmir, and each village is assessed at some kharicars of shālī. A kharuār is equal to 3 mans, 8 seers of Akbar. The principal weight used in Kashmir is the tark, which is equal to 8 seers of Akbar (vide p 90 note 2). At the time of the Rabi crop, they take 2 tarks from each patta of wheat and vetches (māsh). The country having been recently annexed was assessed very lightly, at 22 lacs lharuārs, which was 2 lacs more than before the lharuār being reckoned at 16 dams. For this sum Akbar handed over Kashmir to M Y Kh.

In the 36th year, one of M Y Kh's Mutasaddis (revenue clerks) fled to Court, and stated that the revenue should be 50 per cent (dah pānzdah) higher, and the lharuār should be valued at 29 dams. M Y Kh informed Akbar that so high an assessment was an impossibility, but Akbar sent Qazī Nur'ullah and Qazī 'Alī to Kashmir to report on the revenue. As M Y Kh's people assumed a threatening attitude, Nur'ullah returned and Akbar sent Hasan Beg Shaykh 'Umarī (No 167) to Kashmir. On his arrival some of M Y Kh's people made a conspiracy, and stirred up the malcontents of the country, who collected under Yadgar, the son of M Y Kh's uncle. The disturbances became so serious that Qazī 'Alī and Hasan Beg returned to Hindustan, but the rebels blockaded the roads and killed Qazī 'Alī. Hasan Beg escaped, not without wounds. Yadgar then read the khutba in his name, and had dies prepared for striking coins. Several bad omens foreshadowed his speedy run. Without having any knowledge of this rebellion, Akbar revisited Kashmir, but when he was informed of the state of the country, he put M Y Kh under the charge of Abu 'l Fazl. Yadgar in vain tried to oppose Akbar at the frontier passes, and fled from Srinagar to Hirapur, where some of M Y Kh's men spread at night the rumour that Akbar had suddenly arrived. In the confusion which ensued, Yadgar fled outside of the camp.

accompanied by a servant of the name of Yūsuf His camp was plundered and M Y Kh's men got hold of Yūsuf, who had returned to get a horse or his master They tortured him, till he confessed where Yādgar was Soon after, they caught him and cut off his head.

As M Y Kh refused to remain in charge of Kashmir under the increased revenue, the country was made Lhālṣa, and Shams^u 'd Dīn Khafī (No 159) was appointed Governor with 3,000 troops Some time after, at Prince Salīm's request, M Y Kh was reinstated

In the 38th year, M Y Kh was appointed Dārogha of the Topkhāna, and received Jaunpūr as tuyūl, vice Qulij Khān (1002), but in the 41st year his jāgīr was transferred to Gujrat, to enable him to serve in the Dakhin In the following year, when Sādiq of Harāt (No 43) died, M Y Kh was appointed atāliq to Prince Murād, whom he joined in Balapūr (Barar) After the death of Prince Murād (p 322), M Y Kh distinguished himself, together with Abū 'l Faḡl, in the Dakhin wars, and later, under Prince Danyāl, in the conquest of Aḡmadābād, on which occasion M Y Kh is said to have been more energetic than other grandees.

After joining Akbar's Court at Burhānpūr, in the 46th year, M Y Kh went again to Prince Danyāl, who, in 1010, sent him to assist Abū 'l Faḡl and the Khān Khānān at Balāghat But soon after, he died of an abscess at Jalnāpūr,¹ in Jumāda II, of the same year His body was taken to Mash had

M Y Kh generally stayed at Sultanpūr, which he looked upon as his Indian home His contingent consisted exclusively of Rohilas, whose wages he paid monthly

His sons 1 Mīrzā Lashkarī Safshikan Khān (No 375) He was under Akbar Thānadār of Bir (East of Ahmadnagar), and got from Jahangīr the title of Safdar Khān, and a tuyūl in Bihār In the 5th year (of Jahangīr), he was promoted to the post of a Commander of 1,500, with 700 horse, and was made in the following year Sūbadār of Kashmir In the 8th year, he was removed from his office In the 21st year, when Mahābat Khān had fled, he was sent towards Dībli to intercept Mahābat's treasures which were known to have arrived from Bengal This he did In the beginning of Shāh Jahān's reign, he was made a Commander of 2,500, and 2,000 horse, received the title of Şafshikan Khān, and was again sent to Bir, where he remained for a long time. He withdrew at last from public life, got a pension of Rs 12,000 per annum, and lived at Lāhor. He died in 1055.

¹ My copy of the Tabaqāt as also another MS which I have seen, contains the following entry— At the time he was appointed to operate against Rājū, he died at Janna tabad in the Dal An, which is generally called Jalnāpūr It is difficult to say how these words have found their way into some MS of the Tabaqāt, which was finished in A.H 1001, or nine years before M. Y Khān's death

He was frank to a fault. Once he invited the Mansabdars of Kābul, and feasted them on pork, and when called to Court, to answer for his conduct, he gave Jahāngīr a lesson by saying that not only pork, but also wine was forbidden in the law. For this answer he fell into disgrace.

2 Mīrzā 'Ivaz (عوض) He was a good prose writer, and wrote a history of the world, entitled Chaman.

3 Mīrzā Aflāqūn "He lived with his brother." He was subsequently made Mutawallī of Sikandra (Akbar's tomb), where he died.

A relation of M Y Kh, Mir 'Abdu 'llah, was under Shāhjahān a Commander of 1,500 and 600 horse. He was for some time Governor of Fort Dharūr, E of Bir, mentioned above. He died in the 8th year of Shāhjahān.

VI Commanders of Four Thousand

36 Mahdī Qāsim Khān.

The Ṭabaqāt mentions him among the Commanders of Five Thousand. He served under M 'Askarī, Bābar's third son, whose foster brother he was. His brother was *Ghazanfar Koka*¹ (عصفر) Humāyūn, after the conquest of Gujrāt, had appointed 'Askarī to Ahmadābād. One night, when half drunk, M 'Askarī said, "I am king and the shadow of God", when Ghazanfar gently replied, "Thou art drunk, and hast lost thy senses," at which all who were present laughed. 'Askarī got enraged, and imprisoned Ghazanfar, but he escaped, went to Sulṭān Bahādur, king of Gujrāt, who had retreated to Fort Dū, and betrayed the plans of 'Askarī. Bahādur thereupon collected an army, marched to Ahmadābād and drove the Prince away (vide No 12).

Mahdī Qāsim Khān joined Humāyūn on his return from Persia, and was made in the beginning of Akbar's reign, a Commander of Four Thousand. In the 10th year, 'Abdu 'l Majīd Āṣaf Khān (No 49) had been ordered to pursue Khān Zamān (No 13), but entertaining doubts regarding his own safety, he fled to Garha (Jabalpūr). M Q Kh was, therefore, sent to Garha, after Akbar had, in 973, returned from Jaunpūr to Āgra, and was ordered to capture 'Abdu 'l Majīd. When M Q Kh arrived at Garha, 'Abd^u 'l Majid fled to Khān Zamān, but the wretched state of the country displeased M Q Kh so much, that without asking Akbar's permission, he left Garha and went to Makkah. From there he returned over Persia and Qandahār, and arrived, towards the end of the 13th year, at Rantanbhūr (which Akbar besieged), and asked to be forgiven, sending at the same time a fine batch of Persian horses as a present. Akbar pardoned him, restored him to his old rank, and gave him Lakhnau as tuyūl.

¹ Ghazanfar means a lion. Bodlioni (II p 125 l. 8) calls him Ghazanfar Bey. The Ed. Bibl. Indica Edition has, by mistake, Qhazanfar.

"Nothing else is known of him" (Ma'ārif) He had been dead for some time in 1001, when the Tabaqāt was completed. Husayn Khān Tukriya (No 53) was the son of his sister and his son in law.

He had a villa at Lāhor, which was called Bāgh-i Mahdī Qāsim Khān, vide Badāonī II, 90, 292, and Calcutta Review for October, 1869 (Jahāngir's Death)

37 Muzaffar Khān i Turbatī.

Turbat is the name of a tribe (ulūs) in Khurāsān. His full name is Khawāja Muzaffar 'Alī Khān i Turbatī. He was Bayrām's Diwān. Bayrām delegated him from Dipālpūr to Sher Muḥammad Diwāna (p 332), who sent him in chains to Akbar. Though several courtiers advised the Emperor to kill Muzaffar, he pardoned him, and made him 'Āmil (Collector) of the Pargana of Parsaror. Subsequently Akbar made him Diwān i Buyūtāt (Collector of the Imperial Stores, etc), and at last Diwān of the Empire, with the title of Muzaffar Khān (971). Raja Ṭoda Mal was then under him. According to Badāonī, the two quarrelled incessantly, though people said that the Rāja was a better financier than Muzaffar, whose accession to office was honoured by the short tārīkh م ۱۱۵، زایلیم (=971), or "Tyrant".

In the 11th year he abolished the Jam' i Raqmī. This is the name of the assessment of the Dihli empire, which had existed since the time of Bayram, but the rent roll showed an assessment very different from the actual state of things, "for, on account of the number of men (kaḡrat i mardum, i.e. Jāgīr holders) and the unsettled state (qalb-i wilāyat) of the country, the revenue was increased in name (ba-nām afzūda) for the sake of mere show (barā-yi mazīd i 'tibār)." This Jam' i Raqmī was now abolished (vide Third Book, Ā'in i Dahsāla), and Muzaffar prepared a rent roll according to his experience and the returns of Qanūngo. The new rent roll was called Jam' i Haṣil i Hāl, or the roll of the present actual income (vide p 352). As the Daḡh law (pp 265, 266, and p 252) did not then exist, Muzaffar Khān fixed the number of soldiers which the contingents of the Āmīrs and the Mulāzims (friends of the king) should contain, and the soldiers were divided into three classes¹

In the 12th year it was reported that Muza'ffar loved a boy of the name of Quṭb Akbar had the boy forcibly removed, whereupon Muza'ffar assumed the garb of a Faqīr, and went into the forest Akbar was thus obliged to recall him, and restored the beloved

In the 17th year a mania for Chaupar (p 315) had seized Akbar's Court Muza'ffar lost not only his gold muhurs but also his temper, and annoyed the Emperor so much that he was told to go to Makkah But he was recalled, and joined the Court at Sūrat, which Akbar then besieged In the 18th year (981), after having been for some time in Sārangpūr in Mālwa, he was appointed Vakīl of the Empire, with the title of *Jumlat*² 'i Mulk But he did several things which Akbar did not approve of, and when the Emperor returned from Patna from where he had dispatched a corps to take Rahtās in South Bihar, he ordered Muza'ffar to join the expedition, without allowing him first to pay his respects (vide Briggs II, 249) Like his companion, Khwāja Shams^u 'd Dīn Khāfi (No 159), M distinguished himself in the campaign, punished the rebels on several occasions, and took Hajīpūr, of which the Afghāns had again taken possession For these services, M was appointed, in the 20th year, Governor of Bihār, from Chausa to Garhī Soon after the taking of Hājīpūr, M was nearly caught by a party of Afghāns, who saw him reconnoitering the banks of the Ghandak

In the 22nd year, M returned to Court, where Shāh Mansūr (No 122) and Rāja Todar Mal continued, under his superintendence, their financial reforms

On the death of Khān Jahan (No 24) in 986, he was made Governor of Bengal

In the 25th year (988), Shāh Mansūr subjected the Amīrs of Bihar and Bengal to strict inquiries, and called on them to refund sums which they had spent without permission When he insisted on his

¹ The Muzaffar says he allowed the first class 48 000 dāms the second 32 000 d and the third 24 000 d per annum These numbers appear to be very large when compared with p 241 But what was the value of a dām in those days? In the 40th year of Akbar's reign the following pay regulation was introduced —

Mughal Afghan or Hindi
Sik aspas	1 000 d per mensem
Du aspas	800 d "
Yak aspas	600 d "
1st Class Rajputs	800 d "
2nd ditto ditto	600 d "

(Akbarnama) But at that time 40 dāms were equal to 1 Akbarshāhi Rupee which differed very little from our rupee demands, Ma^sūmī, Kābuli and several other grantees that held jagirs in Bihār, rebelled. Muzaffar imitated Shāh Mansūr's policy in Bengal, and when he commenced vigorously to collect outstandings, Babā Khan Qāqshāl and other Jagirdars of Bengal rebelled likewise. M defeated them on several occasions, but would not listen to proposals of peace. At last the Bihar rebels joined those of Bengal, and mustered a sufficient force to take the field against Muzaffar. Notwithstanding this, the rebels would have gladly come to terms and gone to Orissa, had not Muzaffar betrayed his weakness by moving to the Fort of Tanda, which, according to Badaonī, consisted of nothing but four old walls. The rebels thus emboldened demanded full pardon, permission to go to Makkah, and restoration of one-third of their property. At this juncture, Sharaf^u 'd Dīn Husayn (No 17) escaped from Muzaffar's custody, joined the rebels, and informed them of M's miserable condition. They moved, therefore, against Tanda, took it, captured M, and killed him (Rabī^u I, 988)¹

The Jamī^u Masjīd in Āgra was built by Muzaffar. I am told the Masjīd is now in ruins, which still go by the name of Nawab Muzaffar Khān lī Masjīd or Kālī Masjīd. The Ma^sasīr says it stood in the Katra Miyān Raqq, but this name does not appear to be now a days in use. The Masjīd now called the Jamī^u Masjīd of Āgra was built, in 1058, by Jahan Ārā Begum, Shahjahan's daughter, at a cost of five lacs of Rupees.

According to the Mir^{at} 'l Alam, his youngest daughter was married to Shah Fath^u 'llah of Shiraz.

38 Sayf Khan Koka, elder brother of Zavn Khan Koka (No 34)

His mother had only daughters, and when she was pregnant with Sayf Khan, her husband threatened to divorce her, should it again turn out to be a daughter. She complained of this to Akbar's mother, and Akbar, though then a child, told her husband that he would incur his displeasure if he should do so, 'be des' said he, "it shall be this time a fire boy". The mother looked upon Prince Akbar's words as a prophecy from heaven, and in course of time Sayf Khan was born.

Akbar was very fond of Sayf Khan and made him though quite young a Commander of Four Thousand. He distinguished himself by his bravery, especially in the 17th year, at the taking of Sūrat, where he was wounded by a bullet. In the beginning of the next year (981), he accompanied Akbar on his forced march from Āgra to Ahmadabad (p 343), and was killed bravely fighting with Mubarrasad Husayn Mirza.

¹ According to Badaonī (II, p 282) Muzaffar capitulated, left the fort and was then captured and slain.

How Akbar appreciated his services may be seen from the fact, that having heard that Sayf Khān was heavily involved, he paid, on his return to Āgra, every debt due by him

His two sons, Sher Afkan (355), and Amān^u 'llah (356) are mentioned below as Commanders of Two Hundred and Fifty

39 Rāja Toḍar Mal, a Khatri

He was born at Lāhor The Ma'āsir 'l Umarā does not record his services before the 18th year of Akbar's reign, but T M appears to have entered Akbar's service at a very early period In 971, he was employed under Muzaḥḥār (Bad II, 65), and in 972, he served under Akbar against Khān Zamān (vide No 61) He held the first important post in the 18th year, when after the conquest of Gujrāt he was left there to assess that province In the 19th year, after the conquest of Patna, he got an ʿalam and a nagqāra (Ā^ʿin 19), and was ordered to accompany Mun^ʿim Khān to Bengal He was the soul of the expedition In the battle with Da^ʿūd Khān i Kararānī, when Khān ʿĀlam (vide No 58) had been killed, and Mun^ʿim Khān's horse had run away, the Rāja held his ground bravely, and "not only was there no defeat, but an actual victory" "What harm," said Todar Mal, "if Khān ʿĀlam is dead what fear, if the Khān Khanān has run away, the empire is ours! After settling several financial matters in Bengal and Orisā Toḍar Mal went to Court, and was employed in revenue matters When Khan Jahān (No 24) went to Bengal, Todar Mal was ordered to accompany him He distinguished himself as before, in the defeat and capture of Da^ʿūd In the 21st year, he took the spoils of Bengal to Court, among them 300 to 400 elephants In the following year, he was again sent to Gujrāt, vice Vazīr Khān (No 41), who had given no satisfaction Whilst arranging at Aḥmadābād matters with Vazīr Khān, Muzaḥḥār Husayn, at the instigation of Mihr ʿAlī Kolabī, rebelled Vazīr Khān proposed to retreat to the Fort, but Todar Mal was ready to fight and defeated Muzaḥḥār in the 22nd year, near Dholqah which lies 12 kos from Ahmadabad Vazīr Khān would have been lost in this battle, if Toḍar Mal had not come to his assistance Muzaḥḥār, after his defeat, fled to Jūnagarh

In the same year Toḍar Mal was appointed Vazīr When Akbar left Ajmir for the Panjāb, the house idols of the Raja were lost, as mentioned on p 33, note

When the news of Muzaḥḥār's death (No 37) and the occupation of the whole of Bengal and Bihar by the rebels reached Akbar, he sent Todar Mal, Ṣādiq Khān, Tarson Khān etc, from Faṭhpūr Sikrī to Bihar Muḥibb ʿAlī (No 107), Governor of Rahtas and Muhammad Ma^ʿsūm hān : Faranḡhūdī (No 157) were appointed kumakīs, or auxiliaries. The latter joined the Rāja with 3,000 well equipped horse, evidently sent on rebellion. Todar Mal managed to keep him quiet, but he reported the matter to Court. The Bengal rebels, under Maʿsūm : Kābulī, the Qāqshāl, and Mirzā Sharaf 'd Dīn Husayn, with 30,000 horse, 100 elephants, and many ships and artillery, had collected near Mungīr, and Todar Mal, from fear of treachery among his auxiliaries, shut himself up in the Fort of Mungīr, instead of risking a general engagement. During the siege, two of his officers, Humayūn Farmīlī and Tarkhān Dīwāna, joined the rebels. Though suffering from want of provisions, Todar Mal held himself bravely, especially as he received timely remittances from Court. After the siege had lasted for some time, Bābā Khan Qāqshāl died, and Jabāri, son of Majnūn Khan Qāqshāl desired to leave. The rebel army dispersed, Maʿsūm : Kabulī went to South Bihār, and ʿArab Bahādūr wished to surprise Patna, and take possession of the Imperial treasury, which Pahār Khān (perhaps No 407) had safely lodged in the Fort of that town. After sending Maʿsūm : Faranḡhūdī to Patna, to assist Pahār Khān, Todar Mal, and Sādiq Khān followed Maʿsūm : Kabulī to Bihār. Maʿsūm made a fruitless attempt to defeat ʿArab Bahādūr in a sudden night attack, but was obliged to retreat, finding a ready asylum with ʿĪsā Khān, Zamīndār of Oḡṣā. Todar Mal was thus enabled to report to Akbar that South Bihār, as far as Garhī, was re-annexed to the Dihlī empire.

In the 27th year (990) Todar Mal was made Divān, or rather Valīl. During this year he introduced his financial reforms which have made him so famous. The third book of the Āʿīn contains his new rent roll, or Asl : Jamʿ : Tūmār, which superseded Muzaffar's assessment (p 373). His regulations regarding the coinage have been alluded to above and others may be found in the Akbarnama.

The most important reform introduced by Todar Mal is the change in the language and the character used for the revenue accounts. Formerly they had been kept in Hindī by Hindu Muharrirs. Todar Mal ordered that all government accounts should henceforth be written in Persian. He thus forced his co-religionists to learn the court language of their rulers—a circumstance which may well compare to the introduction of the English language in the courts of India. The study of Persian therefore became necessary for its pecuniary advantages.

Todar Mal's order, and Akbar's generous policy of allowing Hindūs to compete for the highest honours—we saw on p 363 that Man Singh was the first Commander of Seven Thousand—explain two facts, first, that before the end of the 18th century the Hindūs had almost become the Persian teachers of the Muhammadans, secondly, that a new dialect could arise in upper India, the Urdū, which without the Hindūs as receiving medium, never could have been called into existence. Whether we attach more influence to Ṭoḍar Mal's order or to Akbar's policy, which once initiated, his successors, willing or not, had to follow, one fact should be borne in mind that before the times of Akbar, the Hindūs, as a rule, did not study Persian, and stood therefore politically below their Muhammadan rulers.

In the 29th year, Akbar honoured him by paying him a visit. In the 32nd year, a Khatri, from private hatred, wounded Ṭ M on a march at night time. The man was at once cut down.

When Bīr Bar (No 85) had been killed in the war with the Yūsufzā'is, Ṭ M was ordered to accompany Mān Singh, who had been appointed commander-in chief. In the 34th year, when Akbar went to Kashmir, Ṭ M. was left in charge of Lāhor. Soon after, he applied for leave to go to the banks of the Ganges, as he was old and wished to die. Akbar let him go, but he recalled him from Hardwār, and told him that looking after his duties was more virtuous than sitting on the banks of the Ganges. Ṭ M unwillingly returned, but died soon after, on the 11th day of the year 998 (vide No 27, p 353).

Though often accused of headstrongness and bigotry by contemporaneous historians, Ṭodar Mal's fame, as general and financier, has outlived the deeds of most of Akbar's grandees, together with Abū 'l Fazl and Man Singh, he is best known to the people of India at the present day.

His son Dharū (No 190) was a Commander of Seven Hundred, and was killed during the Sindh expedition, while serving under Khān Khānān (p 335). People say that he used to shoe his horses with golden shoes.

The name Todar Mal is often spelt in MSS with the Hindi T. d. and r, which explains the spelling "Torel Mall", which we find in old histories. Under Shāhjahān also there lived a distinguished courtier of the name "Ṭoḍar Mal".

The *Tafriḥ 'l Imārat*¹ says Ṭodar Mal's father died when Ṭ M was quite young, and that the widow was in great distress. Ṭ M, at an early age, showed much clearness and common sense, and received an appointment as writer, from which humble position he rose to the greatest honours

40 Muhammed Qasim Khan, of Nishapur

The Muṣāwir calls him Qasim Muhammad Khan, and has put his name under the letter Q, but Abū 'l Fazl Bada'oni, and the Ṭabaqāt give his name in the above order

He was a rich landowner of Nishāpūr, and fled after the invasion of the Uzbaks to India, where he served under Bayram Khan. He distinguished himself in the war with Sikandar Sūr, and served as Harawal, or leader of the van, under Khan Zaman (No 13) in the battle with Hemu. Immediately after, but still in the first year of Akbar's reign, he was sent against Hajī Khan, who had defeated Rana Uday Sing of Malwar, and taken possession of Nagor and Ajmir. Hajī Khan was an old servant of Sher Khan and was distinguished for his wisdom and bravery. On the appearance of the Imperialists, however, Hajī Khan's army dispersed, and he himself withdrew to Gujrat. M Q Kh thus took possession of Nagor and Ajmir, which for a long time remained the south western frontier of Akbar's empire.

In the 5th year he left Bayram's party, and joined the Chaghṭai nobles. He commanded the left wing of Shams'ud Dīn Atga's corps in the fight in which Bayram was defeated (p 332). After the victory, he received Multan as jagir.

He was next sent to Sarangpur in Malwa, where, in the 9th year, he was visited by Akbar on his sudden hunting expedition to that province, the object of which was to get hold of 'Abd'illah Khan Uzbek (No 14). M Q Kh assisted in the pursuit.

According to the Ṭabaqāt M Q Kh died soon after at Sarangpur.

41 Vazir Khan, brother of 'Abd'ul Majid, Āsaf Khan (I), of Harat (No 49)

When Vazir Khan escaped with his brother (vide below, No 49) from Bahadur Khan (No 21) he fled to Kara, and obtained subsequently through the mediation of Muzaffar Khan (No 37), free pardon for himself and Āsaf Khan.

In the 21st year when 'Aziz Koka (p 344) had incurred Akbar's displeasure V Kh was sent to Gujrat to govern in 'Aziz's name, and when that chief had been called to Court, he was appointed governor (sipahsalār) of the province. But he did not distinguish himself, and Akbar, in the 22nd year, sent Ṭoḍar Mal (No 39) to Gujrat, to take the administration out of V Kh's hands. It happened that about the same time, Mihr 'Alī Gulābī, a friend of M Ibrāhīm Ḥusayn, rebelled and set up as king Muzaḥfir Ḥusayn Ibrāhīm's young son, whom he had brought from the Dakḥn. As mentioned above, the rebellion was crushed through Toḍar Mal's bravery. When the Rāja left, Mihr 'Alī appeared again, and V Kh, most of whose soldiers had joined the rebel, shut himself up in the fort of Ahmadābād. In one of the assaults, Mihr 'Alī was killed by a bullet, and Muzaḥfir Husayn Mirzā, from timidity, raised the siege. Notwithstanding this success, matters in Gujrāt did not improve, and oppressions became so numerous, that Akbar deposed V. Kh and called him to Court.

In the 25th year, Akbar appointed him vazīr in the place of Shāh Mansūr of Shīrāz (No 122), and soon after governor of Audh.

In the 27th year, when M 'Azīz (No 21) had been sent to Bihār, V Kh was ordered to join him with his contingent, and as after the flight of Ma'sūm Khān sickness obliged 'Azīz to return to Bihār, he left V Kh in charge of the province, till a new Sūbadār should be appointed. V Kh made use of the opportunity, and moved against Qutlū Khān, ruler of Orisā, whom he defeated (vide p 356). Qutlū, in the following (29th) year, sent tribute, and was left in possession of Orisā. V Kh returned to Tānda and applied himself, with the assistance of Ṣādiq Khān (No 43) and Shāhbāz Khān-i Kambū (No 80) to financial matters.

In the 31st year, Akbar ordered that each sūba should, in future, be ruled by two Amīrs, and Vazīr Khān was appointed Sūbadār of Bengal, with Muḥibb 'Alī Khān (No 107) as assistant. In the following year, 995, V Kh died.

Shāhbāz Khān, who was Baḥshī of Bengal, allowed Mirzā Muhammad Sālīḥ, V Kh's son, to take command of his father's contingent. But M M Ṣālīḥ showed much inclination to rebel, and Akbar sent Mīr Murād (282, or 380) to bring him and his contingent to Court. On the route, at Fathpūr Hanswah, he behaved so rebelliously, that Mīr Murād imprisoned him with the assistance of the jāgīrdārs of the district, and took him fettered to Akbar. He was kept imprisoned for some time.

42 Qulij Khān

He is called Andajānī, from Andajān, a province of Farghāna, south of the Sayhūn. His ancestors had been for many years serving under the Timūrides. His grandfather was a noble at Sulṭān Husayn Mirzā Bāyqarā's court.

The principal facts of his life have been mentioned on p 35, note 2. In mentioning his appointment to Sūrat, the "iron fort", which Akbar, in the 17th year, conquered in one month and seventeen days, Abū 'l Fazl says that the Fort had been built in 947 (A D 1540-41), by Safar Āghā, alias Khudāwand Khān, a Turkish slave of Sultān Mahmūd of Gujrāt. The tarikḥ of its construction is characteristic (metre long Ramal)

سد بود برسه و حاج فیرنگی این سای

“ May this structure prove a barrier for the chest and the life of the Firingi ”¹

Qulij Khān died at the age of eighty, on the 10th Ramazān 1022 (end of A D 1613),² at Peshāwar. He was at his death a Commander of Six Thousand, Five Thousand horse.

The Ma‘āwir and Badā'onī (III, p 188) say that he belonged to the tribe of حاجی قربانی Jānī Qurbānī (?), but for the latter word the MSS have different readings, as Qurbānī Farbānī, Faryūnī, etc.

The Ma‘āwir copies from the Zakhīrat Ikḥawānīn the following story which is said to have taken place in A H 1000, when Jaunpūr was Q.'s jagir. “ Q was building a house, when the working men in digging came to a cupolalike structure. Q and several other respectable men were called, and they remained on the spot till the newly discovered building was fully dug out. It had a door with an immense lock attached to it weighing one man. When forced open, an old man made his appearance, who asked the bystanders in Sanscrit, whether Ram Chandr's avatār (incarnation) had taken place, whether he had got back his Sitā, whether Krishnā's avatār had taken place at Mathurā, and, lastly, whether Muhammad had appeared in Arabia. On receiving affirmative answers to these questions, the old man further wished to know, whether the Ganges still flowed. This also being affirmed, he expressed a wish to be taken out. Q then put up seven tents, joined to each other, in each of which the sage remained for a day. On the 8th day he came out, and said prayers according to the way of Muhammadans. In sleep and eating he differed from other men, he spoke to no one, and died after six months "

¹ The numbers added give 947. The last yā though somewhat irregular, cannot be left out.

² So according to the Tuzuk-e-Jahāngiri (ed. Sayyid Ahmad, p 123, l 1).

Qulij K7ān's sons 1 Mirzā Sayfū 'llah (No 292) 2 Mirzā Chīn Qulij (No 293) regarding whom vide below

43 Sādiq Khan, son of Bāqir of Harāt

Other historians call him Şādiq Muhammad Khān¹ His father, Muhammad Baqir, had been vazīr to Qarā Khān Turkmān, ruler of Khurāsān Qarā had rebelled against Shāh Tadmāsp, and fled to India Sadiq entered Bayrām's service as Rilābdār (spur holder),² and got soon after a mansab and was made, after Bayrām's death, an Amīr Badā'onī (II, 220) alludes to his services under Humāyūn in Qandahār, and the Ṭabaqāt says that he had been since his youth in Akbar's service

After the conquest of Patna, Akbar returned by boat to Jaunpūr On the road, in crossing the river at Chausā, a valuable elephant perished through S's carelessness Akbar confiscated his jāgīr, excluded him from Court, and told him to go to Bhath (Bhath Ghorā, or Banda Rewa), to get another elephant After passing over "the heights and the low places" of fortune, Şadiq, in the 20th year, returned to Court with 100 elephants, and was restored to favour He was made governor of Garha, vice Rāi Sarjan (No 96) In the 22nd year (935), Ş, with several other grandees, was ordered to punish Rāja Madhukar, should he not submit peacefully Passing the confines of Narwar, Ş saw that kindness would not do, he therefore took the fort of Karhara (كهره), and cutting down the jungle, advanced to the river Dastharā, close to which Ūndchhalay, Madhukar's residence A fight ensued Madhukar was wounded and fled with his son Ram Sah Another son of his Horal Deo (Mā'ā'ir, Horal Rao), and about 200 Rajpūts were killed S remained encamped in the Raja's territory Driven to extremities, Madhukar sent Ram Chand (No 248), a relation of his to Akbar at Bahira, and asked and obtained pardon On the 3rd Ramazan, 986, Şādiq with the penitent Raja arrived at Court

Soon after Ş's amlās were transferred to the Eastern Districts of the empire, so that he might take part in the suppression of the revolt in Bengal In the 27th year, during the temporary absence of 'Aziz Koka

(No 21), Şadıq and Muhibb ʿAlī Khān (No 107), defeated Khabīṣa,¹ one of Maʿsum's officers, on the Ghandak near Hajipūr, and sent his head to Akbar. In the beginning of the 28th year, he paid his respects at Court, but was immediately ordered to rejoin Mirza Koka, who had again left for Bihar.

In the beginning of the 29th year, he was ordered to move to Vazīr Khān (No 41), who at a place six kos from Bardwān was treating with Qutlū.² Through S's skill, a sort of peace was concluded, which confirmed Qutlū in the possession of Orisā. S then returned to his tuyūl at Patna.

When Shāhbāz Khān (No 80) returned from his expedition to Bhatī, the tuyūldārs of Bengal and Bihār were ordered to move to him. S, however, was no friend of Shāhbāz. The mutual dislike rose to the highest pitch, when once S's elephant ran against Shāhbāz, who believed the accident premeditated, and Akbar sent Khwaja Sulayman (No 327) to Bengal to settle their differences. One was to remain in Bengal, the other to go to Bihār, but S, in the 30th year, left Bengal without permission, and went to Court, where he was not admitted. But when Shāhbāz went from Bihar to Bengal, S went again to Court, and was appointed governor of Multān.

When the Rawshānis in the District of Mount Terah (سراد), "which lies west of Pashāwar, and is 32 kos long, and 12 kos broad," commenced disturbances, S, in the 33rd year, was ordered to bring them to obedience, which he did with much tact and firmness. After the return of Zayn Khān (No 34) from Bijor, S was sent there, to subjugate the Yūsafzāīs.

In the 36th year, Prince Mūrād was sent from Malwa to Gujrat, and as Ismaʿīl Qulī Khān (No 46) had not given satisfaction as Vakīl, S was appointed atāliq to the Prince,³ whom in the 40th year he accompanied to the Dakhīn. Shāhbāz Khān being one of the auxiliaries, the old enmity broke out again. After the siege of Ahmadnagar had been raised, S distinguished himself in protecting the frontiers of Barar.

In the beginning of the 41st year he was made a Commander of Five Thousand. In the same year he defeated Sarawar Khān, and made much

¹ Khabīṣa (کھابیس) was a Mughul, and had risen by bravery under Maʿsum: Kābuli from a humble position to the post of a Commander. In Bada'uni (Ed. Bibl. Indica p. 310) he is called Khabīṣa Bahādūr (کھابیس) and Khastā (کھاست) in my MS. of the Ṭabaqāt, where moreover the event, according to the erroneous chronology of that history, is put in the 28th year.

² The spelling Qutlu is perhaps preferable to Qatlu if this name is a shortened form of Qutluḡ.

³ From several passages in the Albarnāma it is clear that atāliq (pr. a tutor) means the same as lakī or Vazīr. The imperial princes kept up Courts of their own and appointed their Vazīrs, their Divāns, Bakhshīs etc. The appointment of the Vakīl however appears to have rested with the emperor.

(vide p 386), R got leave to go home In the following year, he went again to Court In the 48th year he served under Prince Salīm against the Rānā of Udarpūr

At the death of the emperor, R was a Commander of Four Thousand Jahāngīr, on his accession, made him a Commander of Five Thousand. When the emperor set out for the Panjāb to pursue *Kh*usraw, R was put in charge of the travelling harem, but on the road he left without order and went to Bīkānīr In the second year, when Jahāngīr returned from Kabul, R, at the advice of Sharīf *Kh*ān, presented himself before the emperor with a fūta round his neck, to show his willingness to suffer punishment for his crimes, and was again pardoned He died in 1021

His sons 1 Dalpat (No 252) He was a Commander of Five Hundred In the 36th year, he served in the Sindh war, but was looked upon as a coward In the 45th year, when Akbar was in the Dakhn, Muẓaffar Husayn Mirzā, in consequence of his differences with *Kh*hwājagī Fath^u 'llah had fled, and Dalpat, under the pretext of following him up, had gone to Bīkānīr and created disturbances In the 46th year, his father brought him to his senses D asked to be pardoned, and was ordered again to come to Court

In the third year of Jahāngīr's reign (1017), he appears to have offended the emperor, but at the request of *Kh*ān Jahan Lodī he was pardoned After the death of his father, D came from the Dakhn to Court, was appointed successor, and got the title of Rāy although his younger brother (by another mother), Sūr Singh, claimed the right of succession, which Ray Singh had promised him from affection to his mother Sur Singh, however, disgusted Jahāngīr by the bold way in which he preferred his claim

D was then ordered to join M Rustam i Safawī (No 8) the governor of Sindh In the 8th year, it was reported to Jahangīr that Sūr Singh had attacked and defeated his brother, who in consequence had created disturbances in Hisār Hāshim, the Fawjdar of the Sarkar caught him and sent him fettered to court, where he was executed as a warning to others

For Dalpat's son Mahes Dās, and grandson Ratan, vide Padīshāhnama, pp 635 723, 684, 729

2 Sūr Singh After the death of his brother he rose to favour In Histories he is generally called Rāo Sur Singh a title which he received from Shahjahan He died in 1040 He had two sons Karan and Satr Sal the former of whom inherited the title of Rāo (vide Padīshāhnama II, p 727)

VII Commanders of Three Thousand Five Hundred

45 Shah Quli Mahram 1 Bahārlu

He was in Bayrām's service, and distinguished himself in the war with Hemū. It was Shāh Quli that attacked Hemū's elephant, though he did not know who his opponent was. The driver, however, made him a sign, and he led the elephant with Hemū, whose eye had been pierced by an arrow, from the battle field, and brought the wounded commander to Akbar.¹ Soon after, before the end of the first year, Sh Q served with Muhammad Qāsim Khān (No 40) against Hājī Khān in Nāgor and Ajmir.

In the third year, it was brought to Akbar's notice, that Sh Q was passionately attached to a dancing boy of the name of Qabul Khān, and as the emperor had the boy forcibly removed,² Sh Q dressed as a Jogī, and went into the forests. Bayrām traced him with much trouble, and brought him back to court, where the boy was restored to him.

Like Babā Zambūr, he remained faithful to Bayrām to the last, and was pardoned together with his master in Tilwāra (p 332)

After Bayrām's death, he was rapidly promoted and made an Amīr. In the 20th year, when Khān Jahān (No 24) was sent from the Panjāb to Bengal, Sh Q was appointed Governor of the Panjāb, rising higher and higher in Akbar's favour.

It is said that the Emperor, from goodwill towards him, admitted him to his female apartments. After the first time he had been allowed to enter the Harem, he went home, and had his testicles removed (majbub). From the circumstances, he was everywhere called Mahram,³ i.e., one who is admitted to the Harem and knows its secrets.

In the 34th year, Akbar, after his return from Zabulstān, crossed the Bahat (Jhelum) near Rasūlpūr, and encamped at Hailān. During his stay there, he mounted a female elephant, and was immediately attacked by a masī male elephant. Akbar was thrown down and sustained severe contusions. A rumour of his death spread over the whole country, in some provinces even disturbances broke out. The Rājputs of Shaykhāwat, especially, plundered the districts from Mewāt to Rewāri, and in the

¹ " Before the end of the first year Pir Muhammad was dispatched against Hājī Khan in Alwar and as he withdrew the imperialists took possession of the Sarkar of Alwar as far as Deoli Sajari [or Sackari] the birth place of Hemu and performed many brave deeds. They also caught Hemu's father alive and brought him to Pir Muhammad who asked him to embrace Islam. As he would not he was killed by him. After gathering his spoils Pir M. returned to Akbar. Saidnāh from the Akbarnāma

² For similar examples vide p. 335 which also happened in the third year and No 37.

p 374

³ Or Mahram.

35th year, Akbar had to send Sh Q against them. He soon restored order.

In the 41st year, he was made a commander of Four Thousand, and soon after of Five Thousand. The Tabaqāt says that in 1001 he had been a commander of Three Thousand for thirty years.

He died at Āgra in 1010. At Nārnaul, where he chiefly lived, he erected splendid buildings, and dug large tanks. When he felt death approaching, he gave the soldiers of his contingent two years' pay in advance, and left, besides, many legacies. As he had no heirs, his remaining property lapsed to the state (Tuzuk, p. 22).

46 Ismā'īl Qalī Khān, brother of Khān Jahan (No. 24)

He must not be confounded with No. 72. He was caught in the battle near Jālundhar (p. 317). He joined Akbar's service with his brother, under whom he mostly served. When his brother had died in Bengal, he came with the immense property he had left behind him to Court, and was favourably received. In the 30th year, he was sent against the Balūchīs (vide No. 44). On his arrival in Balūchistān the people soon submitted, and their chiefs, Ghazī Khān Wajhiya and Ibrāhīm Khān, repaired to Court, and were allowed to retain the country. In the 31st year, when Bhagwān Dās (No. 27), on account of his madness, had not been allowed to go to Zābulstān, I Q was sent there instead. But he committed certain improprieties and fell into disgrace, and was ordered to go from Bhakkar to Makkah. He begged hard to be forgiven, but he was not allowed to see the Emperor, and was sent against the Yūsufzā'īs.

At that time epidemics were raging in Bijor, and the chiefs of the Yūsufzā'īs came forward and submitted to I Q, whilst Zayn Khān (No. 34), governor of Zābulstān pressed hard upon Jalāla Rawshanī, who had left Terah and entered Bijor. Zayn Khān therefore entered the district, determined to use the opportunity to wipe off the disgrace of his former defeat. The arrival of Šadiq Khān (No. 43), however, who had been sent from Court, to occupy the district, and capture Jalāla, annoyed I Q still more, as he thought that that duty might have been left to him as Thanadar of the district. I Q forgot himself so far as to allow Jalāla to escape. He then went to Court, where he was severely reprimanded for his conduct.

In the 33rd year, he was made Governor of Gujrāt. In the 36th year, when Prince Murād had been made Governor of Mālwa, I Q was appointed his ata'iq or Vakil, but he gave no satisfaction, and was called to Court, Šadiq Khān having been appointed in his stead.

In the 39th year, he was sent to Kālpi, to look after his jāgr. In the 42nd year (1005), he was made a Commander of Four Thousand

He was given to luxury, and spent large sums on carpets, vessels, dress, etc. He kept 1,200 women, and was so jealous of them, that when ever he went to Court, he put his seal over the strings attached to their night drawers. The women resented this and other annoyances, made a conspiracy, and poisoned him.

Three sons of his are mentioned below—1 Ibrahīm Qulī (No 322), a commander of Three Hundred. 2 Salīm Qulī (No 357), and 3, Khālī Qulī (No 358), both commanders of Two Hundred. They do not appear to have distinguished themselves.

VII Commanders of Three Thousand

47 Mīrza Janī Beg, ruler of Thatha

He belonged to the Arghūn clan, and therefore traced his descent to Chingiz Khān. Abū'l Fazl in the Akbarnāma gives his tree as follows —

Chingiz Khān
Tūli Khān .
Hulāgū Khān (the brother	Of his ancestors Atkū Timūr had been
[of Mangū	killed in the war with Tuqtamish Khān , and [Qāān)	the Emperor Timūr took care of Shankal Beg, Abāgh (or, Abāghā) Khān ,	and made him a Tarkhān (vide the note at
[d 663	the end of this biography)
Arghūn Khān , d 690	Mīrzā 'Abd'ul 'Alī, fourth ancestor of
	M. Janī Beg, had risen to high dignities
Four generations inter	under Sultān Mahmūd, son of M. Abū Sā'id, [vening	and received the government of Bukhārā. He
Atkū Timūr	was treacherously killed, together with his five eldest sons, by Shaybānī Khān Uzbek,
Shankal Beg Tarkhān	only his sixth son, M. Muhammad 'Isā escaped.
	The Arghūn clan in Bukhārā, being
Several generations not	thus left without a head, emigrated to Khurā-
[known	sān, where they attached themselves to Mīr
'Abd'ul Khālīq Tarkhān	Zū 'l Nūn Beg Arghūn, who was the Amīr 'l-
	Umarā and Sīpāsālar of Sultan Husāin Mīrzā.
Mīrzā 'Abd'ul 'Alī	He also was atāliq and father in law to Prince
[Tarkhān	Badī'uz Zamān Mīrzā, and held Qandahār as

M Muhammad 'I'sā jāgīr. When the prince's career ended, his | [Tarkhān, d 975 two sons, Badī's's Zamān and Muzaffar Mirzā,
 M. Muhammad Bāqī proclaimed themselves kings of K̄hurāsān
 | [Tarkhān, d 993 Anarchy prevailed, and matters grew worse,
 Mirzā Pāyanda Muham when Shaybān Khān invaded the country.
 | mad Tarkhān Zū 'l Nūn Beg fell in battle against him
 Mirzā Jānī Beg Tarkhān

Mirzā Ghāzī Beg Tarkhān

Shujā's Beg, better known as Shāh Beg, Zū 'l Nūn's son, held Qandahār during the absence of his father, and succeeded him in the government. He was bent on conquest. In 890, he took Fort Sewe from Jām Nizām 'd Dīn (generally called in Histories Jām Nandā), king of Sindh. He continued to interfere, as related by Abū 'l Faḡl below in the Third Book, (Ṣūba of Sindh), and managed, at last, in 929, to conquer the country, thus compensating himself for the loss of Qandahār, which had been occupied by Bābar. A short time before his death, which took place in 930,¹ he invaded Multān, then in the hands of the Langāhs.

Shāh Beg Arghūn was succeeded by his son Mirzā Shāh Husayn Arghūn, who took Multān from Sulṭān Husayn Langāh (vide Third Book, Ṣūba of Multān). M. Shah Husayn Arghūn was afflicted with a peculiar fever, which only left him when he was on the river Indus. He therefore ~~used to travel~~ ^{had to travel} down the Indus for six months of the year, and upwards by his foster brother, Sulṭān Mahamud, ^{governor of Herat}, ^{proposed} posed him, but he had at last to come to terms, and ceded a large part of Sindh to M 'Isa. On Shāh Husayn's death, in 963, the whole country fell to 'Isa.

In this manner the older branch of the Arghūns came to the throne of Thatha.

'Isa died in 975, and was succeeded by his son M. Muhammad Bāqī, who successfully crushed the revolt of his younger brother, M. Jan Bābā. M. Baqī, in 993, committed suicide during an attack of insanity, and as his son, M. Pāyanda Muhammad, was also subject to fits of madness, the government passed into the hands of M. Jānī Beg, the son of M. Pāyanda.

¹ Shāh Beg was a learned man like his renowned opponent Babar. He wrote a Commentary to the well known Arabic grammar Kāfiya (شرح کافیة) and commentaries to the Maqālāt (شرح معالجات) and the Ṣāqā'id i Nasafi (شرح عقاید نسافی).

Akbar had often felt annoyed that, notwithstanding his frequent stays in the Panjab, M Jānī Beg had shown no anxiety to pay him a visit. In the 35th year therefore (999), when the Khān Khānān was ordered to invade Qandahār, he was told to send some one to M J. B., and draw his attention to this neglect, if no heed was paid, he was to invade Sindh on his return. Multān and Bhakkar being the tuyūl of the Khān Khānān, he did not move into Qandahār by way of Ghaznīn and Bangash, but chose a round about way through his jāgīr. In the meantime the conquest of Thatha had been determined upon at Court, and the Khān Khānān set out at once for Sindh (vide p 356, and Brigg's Firishṭa). After bravely defending the country, M J B had at last to yield. In the 38th year (1001), accompanied by the Khān Khānān, he paid his respects to Akbar at Lāhor, was made a Commander of Three Thousand, and received the Ṣūba of Multān as tuyūl, Sindh itself being assigned to M Shāhrukh (No 7). But before this arrangement was carried out, a report reached Akbar that the Arghūn clan, about 10,000 men, women, and children, moved up the river, to follow M J B to his new tuyūl, and that great distress had thereby been caused both among the emigrants and those who were left behind. Akbar felt that under such circumstances policy should yield to mercy, and M J. B was appointed to Sindh. Lāharī Bandar, however, became khālīṣa, and the Sarkār of Siwistan which had formerly paid pīshkash, was parcelled out among several grantees.

In the 42nd year, M J B was promoted to a command of Three Thousand and Five Hundred. He was much liked by Akbar for his character, religious views (vide p 218-9), pleasing manners, and practical wisdom. It is perhaps for this reason that Abū 'l Fazl has placed him first among the Commanders of Three Thousand, though names much more renowned follow. From his youth, M J B had been fond of wine, but had not indulged in excesses, his habitual drinking, however, undermined his health, and brought on delirium (sarsām), of which he died, in 1008, at Burhanpūr in the Dakhīn, after the conquest of Āsīr.

A short time before his death, he offended Akbar by declaring that had he had an Āsīr, he would have held it for a hundred years.

M J B was fond of poetry, he was himself a poet and wrote under the takhallus of *Halīmī*¹

¹ Here follows in the Ma'asir 'l Umara a description of the poet.

Mirzā Ghāzī Beg, son of M Jānī Beg At the death of his father, he was only 17 years old, and though not at Court, Akbar conferred Sindh on him He was opposed by Mirzā ʿIsa Tarkhān, son of Mirzā Jān Bābā (brother of M Muhammad Baqī, grandfather of M Jānu Beg), but Khusraw Khān Chirgis, an old servant of the Arghūns and Vakīl to his father, espoused his cause, and M ʿIsa Tarkhān fled from Sindh The army which M Ghāzī Beg and Khusraw Khān had at their disposal, seems to have made them inclined to rebel against Akbar, but the Emperor sent promptly Saʿīd Khān (No 25) and his son Saʿd^u ʿllāh¹ to Bhakkar, and M Ghāzī Beg came to Court, and was confirmed in the government of Sindh

After the accession of Jahāngīr, M Ghāzī Beg received Multān in addition to Sindh, was made a Commander of Seven Thousand, and was sent to relieve Qandahār (Tuzuk, pp 33, 72, 109), which had been besieged by Ḥusayn Khān Shamlū, the Persian Governor of Harāt He also received the title of Farzand (son) Shāh ʿAbbās of Persia often tried to win him over, and sent him several *khislat*s

He died suddenly at the age of twenty five in 1018,² the word Ghāzī being the Tārīkh of his death Suspicion attaches to Luṭf^u ʿllāh, his Vakīl and son of Khusraw Khān Chirgis who appears to have been treated unkindly M Ghāzī does not appear to have had children

Like his father, he was a poet He wrote under the takhalluṣ of Vaqārī, which he had bought of a Qandahar poet He played nearly every instrument Poets like Ṭalibī of Āmul, Mulla Murshīd i Yazdjirdī, Mīr Niʿmat^u ʿllāh Vācī, Mullā Asad Qissa Khwān, and especially Fughfūrī of Gilān enjoyed his liberality The last left him, because his verses were too often used for dakhl (vide p 108 note 8) In his private life, M. Ghāzī was dissolute Not only was he given to wine, but he required every night a virgin, girls from all places were brought to him, and the women of the town of Thatha are said to have been so debauched, that every bad woman, even long after his death, claimed relationship with the Mirzā

¹ Saʿd^u ʿllāh has been omitted to be mentioned on p 351 He received the title of Nawāzish Khān in 1020 vide Tuzuk pp 34 96

Note on the meaning of the title of "Tarkhān"

Abū 'l Fazl, in the Akbarnāma (38th year) has a valuable note regarding the meaning and the history of this ancient title. The title was hereditary, and but rarely given. Chingīz Khān conferred it on Qishlūq and Bātā for having given him correct information regarding the enemy. The title in this case, as in all others, implied that the holder was excused certain feudal services, chiefly attendance at Court (taklīf-i bār)¹ Chingīz Khān, moreover, did not take away from the two nobles the royal share of the plunder. Under Timūr, a Tarkhān had free access to every place of the palace, and could not be stopped by the macebearers, nor was he or his children liable to be punished for any crime, provided the number of his or their crimes did not exceed the number nine².

Some say, a Tarkhān had seven distinctions and privileges—1 a tabl, 2, a tumāntogh, 3, a naqqāra, 4, he can confer on two of his men a qushūn togh, or chatr togh,³ 5, his Qur (p. 116) was carried (qūr + ū nīz bardārānd). Among the Mughuls no one but the king was allowed to use a quiver. 6 He could enclose (qurq) a forest as his private hunting ground, and if any one entered the enclosure, he forfeited his personal liberty. 7 He was looked upon as the head of the clan to which he belonged. In the state hall the Amirs sat behind him to his right and left arranged in form of a bow (lamānwār).

When Tughlūq Timūr conferred this title upon an Amir,⁴ he put all financial matters (dād o sitad) as far as a Hazarī (?) in his charge, nor were his descendants, to the ninth generation, liable to be called to account, but should their crimes exceed the number nine, they were to be called to account. When a Tarkhān had to answer for blood shed by him (pādāsh-i lkhūn), he was placed on a silver white horse two years old, and a white cloth was put below the feet of the animal. His statement was made by a chief of the Barlas clan (vide p. 361 note), and the

[¹ Taklīf duty.—P.]

² Nine was looked upon as an important number by the Mughuls. Thus kings received

³ vide p. 52

⁴ The MSS call him برلوی or برلوی with every variety of diacritical points.

sentence was communicated to him by a chief of the Arkīwat (ارکوت) clan His neck vein was then opened, the two chiefs remaining at his side, and watching over him till he was dead The king was then led forth from the palace, and sat down to mourn over him

Khizr Khwāja in making Mir Khudādād a Tarkhān, added three new privileges 1 At the time of wedding feasts (tūī), when all grandees have to walk on foot, and only the yasāwal (chief mace bearer) of the king on horseback to keep back the crowds, the Tarkhān also proceeds on horseback 2 When during the feast the cup is handed to the king from the right side, another cup is at the same time handed to the Tarkhān from the left 3 The Tarkhān's seal is put on all orders, but the seal of the king is put to the beginning of the last line and below his

Abū 'l Fazl, in concluding these remarks, says that these distinctions are extraordinary enough, he believes it possible that a king may grant a virtuous man immunity for nine crimes, but he thinks it absurd to extend the immunity to nine generations

48 Iskandar Khan, a descendant of the Uzbek Kings

He distinguished himself under Humāyūn, who on his return to India made him a Khān After the restoration, he was made Governor of Āgra On Hemu's approach, he left Agra, and joined Tardī Beg at Dīhlī Both opposed Hemū, Iskandar commanding the left wing (juranghār) His wing defeated the right wing (burunghār) and the van (harawal) of Hemu, and hotly pursued them, killing many fugitives The battle was almost decided in favour of the Imperialists when Hemū with his whole force broke upon Tardī Beg, and put him to flight The victorious Iskandar was thus obliged to return He afterwards joined Akbar at Sarhind, fought under Khān Zaman (No 13) against Hemu, and received after the battle for his bravery the title of Khān 'Ālam before Sikandar Khān Sūr, and fortified himself in Lāhor, leaving the country to the Afghāns, Akbar appointed Iskandar to move to Sīyālkoṭ and assist Khizr Khwāja.

As Khizr Khwāja Khan,¹ the Governor of the Panjab, had retreated

Afterwards he received Audh as tuyūl "From want of occupation," he rebelled in the tenth year Akbar ordered Ashraf Khān (No 74) to bring him to Court but Isk joined Khān Zamān (No 13) Together with Bahādur Khān (No 22), he occupied Khāyrahād (Audh), and attacked Mir Mu^{izz} 'l Mulk (No 61) Bahādur ultimately defeated the Imperialists, but Isk had in the first fight been defeated and fled to the north of Audh.

When in the 12th year Khān Zaman and Bahadur again rebelled, Isk in concert with them occupied Audh He was attacked by Muḥammad Qulī Khān Barlās (No 31), and besieged in Avadh When Isk heard that Khān Zamān and Bahādar had been defeated and killed, he made proposals of peace, and managed during the negotiation to escape by boat with his family to Gorākhpūr, which then belonged to Sulaymān, king of Bengal He appears to have attached himself to the Bengal Court, and accompanied, in 975, Bayazid, Sulaymān's son, over Jhārkand to Orīsa After Sulayman's return from the conquest of Orīsa,¹ Isk's presence in Bengal was looked upon as dangerous, as Sulaymān wished at all hazards to be at peace with Akbar, and the Afghāns waited for a favourable opportunity to kill Iskandar He escaped in time and applied to Mun^{im} Khān, who promised to speak for him At his request, Isk was pardoned He received the Sarkar of Lak^{chnau} as tuyūl, and died there in the following year (980)

49 Asaf Khān 'Abd' 'l Majid (of Hirāt), a descendant of Shaykh Abū Bakr i Taybādī

His brother Vazir Khān has been mentioned above (No 41) Shaykh Zayn' 'd Dīn Abū Bakr i Taybādī² was a saint (sāhib kamāl) at the time of Tīmūr When Tīmūr, in 782, set out for the conquest of Hirāt, which was in the hands of Malik Ghiyas 'd Dīn, he sent, on his arrival at upon Akbar to pardon him Sikandar sent his son 'Abd' r Rahman with some elephants as pishkash and was allowed by Akbar to occupy Bihār as tuyūl (vide p 335) Mankot surrendered on the 27th Ramaḥān 9th 1 Sikandar died two years later

It is difficult to say why Ab' i Faḥl had not entered Khizr Khān in the List of Grandees His name is given in the Tabaqat Similarly Khwa & M^{...} — q d M o c i —

11001 A II 191 His biography is given in Jamī's Arḥāt i Uns Taybād belongs to Jam i Khurasān

Tāybād, a messenger to the Shaykh, to ask him why he had not paid his respects to the conqueror of the world "What have I," replied the Shaykh, "to do with Timūr?" Timūr, struck with this answer, went himself to the Shaykh, and upbraided him for not having advised Malik Ghīyās "I have indeed done so," said the Shaykh, "but he would not listen, and God has now appointed you over him. However, I now advise you, too, to be just, and if you likewise do not listen, God will appoint another over you." Timūr afterwards said that he had seen many dervishes, every one of them had said something from selfish motives, but not so Shaykh Abū Bakr, who had said nothing with reference to himself.

Khawāja 'Abd' l Majid was a Grandee of Humāyūn, whom he served as Diwan. On Akbar's accession, he also performed military duties. When the Emperor moved to the Panjāb, to crush Bayrām's rebellion, 'Abd' l Majid received the title of Āsaf Khān, regarding which vide the note after this biographical notice. Subsequently Āsaf was appointed Governor of Dihli, received a flag and a drum, and was made a Commander of Three Thousand. When Fattū, a servant of 'Adh, made overtures to surrender Fort Chanāḍh (Chunar), Ā, in concert with Shaykh Muhammad Ghaws, took possession of it, and was appointed Governor of Kara Manḱpūr on the Ganges. About the same time, Ghazī Khān Tannūrī, an Afghan noble who had for a time been in Akbar's services, fled to Bhath Ghorā, and stirred up the Zamindārs against Akbar. Ā, in the 7th year, sent a message to Rāja Rām Chand, the ruler of Bhath, to pay tribute to Akbar, and surrender the enemies. But the Rāja prepared for resistance. Ā marched against the Rāja, defeated him and executed Ghazī Khān. The Rāja, after his defeat, shut himself up in Bāndhū¹ but obtained Abbar's pardon by timely submission chiefly through the influence of several Rāja's at Court. Ā then left the Rāja in peace, but the spoils which he had collected and the strong contingent which he had at his disposal (vide p 251, l 29), made him desirous of further warfare and he planned the famous expedition against Gadha Katangah² or Gondwānah, south of Bhath, which was then governed by Durgawatī,¹ the heroine of Central India. Her heroic defence and suicide, and the death of her son, Bir Sah, at the conquest of Chaurāgaḍh (about 70 miles west of Jabalpur) are well known. The immense spoils which Ā carried off, led him temporarily into rebellion, and of the 1 000 elephants which he had captured, he only sent 200 to Court. But when Khān Zaman (No 13), in the 10th year, rebelled and besieged Majnūn Qāqshāl (No 50) in Māmkpūr, Ā came with 5,000 troopers to his relief, presented himself before Akbar, who had marched against Khān Zaman, and handed over the remainder of the Gaḍha spoils. He thereby regained Akbar's confidence and was appointed to follow up the rebels. At this juncture the imperial Mutasaddis, whom Ā before had handsomely bribed, reported, from envy, his former unwillingness to hand over the spoils, and exaggerated his wealth. Hypocritical friends mentioned this to Ā, and afraid of his personal safety, he fled to Gaḍha (Safar, 973).

Akbar looked upon his flight as very suspicious, and appointed Mahdī Qasīm Khān (No 36) to Gaḍha. Ā then left Central India "with a sorrowful heart", and joined, together with his brother (No 41), Khān Zaman at Jaunpur. But he soon saw that Khān Zaman only wanted his wealth and watched for a favourable moment to kill him. Ā therefore made use of the first opportunity to escape. Khān Zaman had sent his brother Bahadur (No 22) against the Afghans, and Ā was to accompany him. Vazir Khān, whom Khān Zaman had detained, managed likewise to escape, and was on the road to Māmkpūr, which Ā had appointed as place of rendezvous. No sooner had Ā escaped than Bahādūr followed him up, defeated his men, and took Ā prisoner. Bahadur's men immediately dispersed in search of plunder, when suddenly Vazir Khān fell over Bahādūr. Bahadur made some one a sign to kill Ā, who sat fettered on an elephant, and Ā had just received a wound in his hand and nose, when Vazir in time saved his life, and carried him away. Both reached in 973, Karah, and asked Muzaffar Khān (No 37) to intercede for them with the emperor. When Muzaffar, in 974, was called by the emperor to the Panjāb, he took Vazir with him, and obtained full pardon for the two brothers. Ā was ordered to join Majnūn Qāqshāl at Karā-Manikpūr. His bravery in the last struggle with Khān Zaman induced Akbar, in 975, to give him Piyag as tuyūl, vice Hājī Muhammad Sīstānī (No 55), to enable him to recruit a contingent for the expedition against ¹ Capt Sleeman in his 'History of the Gurha Mandala Rājās' Journal A.S. Bengal vol. vi, p 627 spells her name Durghoutee. He calls her son Bir Nardān. Vide also Badd onā ii 66.

Rana Uday Singh Ā was sent in advance (manqalā) In the middle of Rabi¹ I 975, Akbar left Āgra for Chitor The Rana had commissioned Jay Mal who had formerly been in Mirtha to defend the fort, whilst he himself had withdrawn to the mountains During the siege, which lasted four months and seven days Ā distinguished himself, and when on the 25th Sha¹ban 975, the fort fell Ā was made Governor of Chitor

Neither the Ma¹ā¹si¹r, nor the Tabaqat, mentions the year of his death He must have been dead in 981, because the title of Āsaf Khan was bestowed upon another noble¹

Note on the Title of " Āsaf Khān "

Āsaf was the name of the Vazir of Sulayman (Solomon), who like his master is proverbial in the East for his wisdom. During the reign of Akbar three grandees received this title Badaoni, to avoid confusion numbers them Āsaf Khan I, II, and III They are —

‘Abdu l Majid Āsaf Khan I, d before 981 (No 49)

Khwaja Mirza Ghiyas^u d Din ‘Alī Āsaf Khan II, d 989 (No 126)

Mirza Ja¹far Beg Āsaf Khan III (No 98)

The three Āsaf^s were Diwans or Mir Bahshis The third was nephew to the second as the following tree will show —

Āgha Mulla Dawatdar

Jahangir conferred the title of ‘Āsaf Khan (IV) on Abū l Hasan elder brother of Nūr Jahan and father of Mumtaz Mahall (or Taj Bibi Shahjahan's wife) whose mother was a daughter of Āsaf Khan II During the reign of Shahjahan when titles containing the word *Dawla*² were

¹ Stewart (History of Bengal p 120) says ‘Abdu l Majid Āsaf Khan officiated in revived, Āsaf Khān was changed to Āsaf 'd Dawla, and this title was conferred on Āsaf 'd-Dawla Jumlat 'l Mulk Asadjang (Shāhjahān-Awraṅ zeb), a relation of Āsaf Khān IV. Under Ahmad Shāh, lastly, we find Āsaf 'd Dawla Amīr 'l Mamālīk, whose name like that of his father, Nizām 'l Mulk Asaf Jah occurs so often in later Indian History

50 Majnun Khān : Qāqshāl.¹

He was a grandee of Humāyūn, and held Narnau¹ as jāgīr. When Humāyūn fled to Persia, Hājī Khān besieged Nārnaul, but allowed Majnūn Khān to march away unmolested, chiefly at the request of Rājā Bihārī Mal, who, at that time, was with Hājī Khān (vide p 347)

On Akbar's accession, he was made Jāgirdar of Mānūkpūr, then the east frontier of the Empire. He remained there till after the death of Khān Zamān (No 13), bravely defending Akbar's cause. In the 14th year, he besieged Kālūjar. This fort was in the hands of Rājā Rām Chand, ruler of Bhat, who during the Afghan troubles had bought it for a heavy sum, from Biḷī Khān, the adopted son of Pahār Khān. When, during the siege, the Rājā heard of the fall of Chitor and Rantanbhūr, he surrendered Kālūjar to M (29th Safar, 997). Akbar appointed M Commander of the Fort, in addition to his other duties.

In the 17th year (980), he accompanied Munṣim Khān (No 11) on his expedition to Gotakhpūr. At the same time the Gujrātī war had commenced, and as Bābā Khān Qāqshāl * had words with Shāhbāz Khān (No 80), the Mīr Tozak, regarding certain arrangements, he was reproved by Akbar. But the rumour spread in Munṣim's army that Bābā Khān Jabāri (Majnūn's son), Mirzā Muhammad, and other Qāqshāls, had killed Shāhbāz Khān, and joined the rebellion of the Mīrzas in Gujrāt, and that Akbar had therefore ordered Munṣim to imprison Majnūn. In consequence of these false rumours, M and others of his clan withdrew from Munṣim, who in vain tried to convince them of the absurdity of the rumours, but with Dawla. This is very likely the reason why Akbar conferred the title of Āzād 'd Dawla on Mir Fath 'līsh of Shirāz who had come from the Dakhin.

himself by his faithlessness.

[Khān's chance *—P]

when M soon after heard that Bābā Khān and Jabārī had been rewarded by Akbar for their brave behaviour in the Gujrāti war, he was ashamed of his hastiness, and rejoined Munṣim who, in the meantime, had taken Gorākhpūr

M. accompanied Munṣim on his Bengal expedition. When, in 982, Daūd, retired to Orisā, and Kālā Pahār,¹ Sulaymān Manklī and Bābū Manklī had gone to Ghorāghat, Munṣim sent M against them. M conquered the greater part of Northern Bengal, and carried off immense spoils. On the death of Sulaymān Manklī, the acknowledged ruler of Ghorāghāt, a great number of the principal Afghān nobles were caught, and M with the view of securing peace, married the daughter of Sulayman Manklī to his son Jabārī. He also parcelled out the whole country among his clan. But Babū Manklī and Kālā Pahār had taken refuge in Kūch Bihar, and when Munṣim was in Katak, they were joined by the sons of Jalāl 'd Dīn Sūr, and fell upon the Qāqshāls. The latter, without fighting, cowardly returned to Tānḍa, and waited for Munṣim, who, on his return from Orisā, sent them with reinforcements to Ghorāghat. The Qaqshāls re-occupied the district. Majnun died soon after at Ghorāghāt.

The Tabaqat says that he was a Commander of Five Thousand, and had a contingent of 5,000 troopers.

His son Jabārī,² distinguished himself by his zeal and devotion. The enforcing of the Dāgh law led him and his clan into rebellion. Jabārī then assumed the title of Khān Jahān. When the Qashāls left Maṣūm (p 344), Jabārī went to Court. Akbar imprisoned him, but pardoned him in the 39th year.

51 Shujaṣat Khān, Muqīm i ṣArab

He is the son of Tardī Beg's sister (No 12). Hūmayūn made Muqīm a Khān. On the emperor's flight to Persia, he joined Mirza ṣAskarī. When Hūmayūn took Qandahar on his return, Muqīm, like most old nobles, presented himself before the emperor with a sword hanging from his neck, and was for a short time confined. After his release, he remained with Mun^ṣim Khān (No 11) in Kābul, and followed him to India, when Akbar called Mun^ṣim to take Bayrām's place.

In the 9th year, Muqīm distinguished himself in the pursuit of 'Abd^u 'llāh Khān Uzbek (No 14), "the king of Māndū," and received the title of Shujā'at Khān, which Akbar had taken away from the rebellious 'Abd^u 'llāh.

In the beginning of the 15th year, Akbar honoured him by being his guest for a day.

In the 18th year, he accompanied the Emperor on his forced march to Ahmadābād (p 343). Once he slandered Mun^ṣim, and Akbar sent him to the Khān Khānan to do with him what he liked, but Mun^ṣim generously forgave him, and had him restored.

In the 22nd year, he was made a Commander of Three Thousand, and Governor and Commander in Chief of Malwah.

In 988, when troubles in Bihar and Bengal had broken out, Shujā'at Khān, at Akbar's order, left Sārangpūr for Fathpūr (Badā'onī II, 284). At the first stage, 'Iwaz Beg Barlas who complained of arrears of pay and harsh treatment of the men, created a tumult, made a man of the name Hājī Shihab Khān leader, fell upon Shujā'at's tent, and killed his son Qawim Khān¹. Shujā'at himself was mortally wounded. Some of his adherents, at last, managed to put the dying Sh on an elephant, and led him off to Sārangpūr. Though Sh had expired before they reached the town, they did not spread the news of his death, and thus kept the greater part of the soldiers together, and joined Akbar in Sārangpūr.

Akbar punished the rebels severely. According to p 294, Akbar once saved Shujā'at's life in the jungles.

From Badā'onī (II, 284), we learn that Qawim Khān was a young man, renowned for his musical talents.

Muqīm Khān (No 386) is Shujā'at Khān's second son. He was promoted under Akbar to a Commandership of seven hundred.

Qā'im Khān was the son of Muqīm Khān. Qā'im's son, Abd^u 'r Rāhīm, was under Jahāngīr a Commander of seven hundred and 400 horse, got the title of Tarbiyat Khān, and was made in the 5th year, Fawjdār of Alwar. Qā'im's daughter, Sūsha Bāmū, was received (3rd year) by Jahāngīr in his harem, and went by the title of Pādushāh Mahall. She adopted Miyān Joh, son of the above, Abd^u 'r Rāhīm. Miyān Joh was killed by Mahabat Khan when near the Bahat (Jhelam) he had taken possession of Jahāngir's person

¹ So the Mas'ākir and the Akbarnāma. Badā'onī (ii 284) has Qā'im Khān; but this is perhaps a mistake of the native editors of the Bibl. Indica.

No 52 Shah Budagh Khan, a descendant of Uyruqs¹ of Mīyānkāl Samarqand

The Turkish Budagh means "a branch of a tree" He distinguished himself under Humayun and was made by Akbar a Commander of Three Thousand

In the 10th year he accompanied Mīr Muḥizz^u I Mulk (No 61) against Bahādur (No 22) Though the imperialists were defeated, B Kh fought bravely, and was captured His son Ḥabdu 'l Matlab (No 83) ran away In the 12th year, B Kh went with Shihab^u 'd Dīn Ahmad (No 26) against Mirzas in Malwah received Sārangpūr as tuyūl, fought under ḤAziz Koka (No 21) in the battle of Patan (18th Ramazan 980), and was for a long time Governor of Mandu where he died The Tabaqāt says he had the title of Amīr^u 'l Umarā He was alive in 984, when he met Akbar at Mohini

Inside Fort Mandu, to the south, close to the walls he had erected a building, to which he gave the name of Nīlkanth, regarding the inscriptions on which the Maḥāsīn gives a few interesting particulars

53 Husayn Khān (Tukriya), sister's son of Mandi Qasim Khān (No 36)

'He is the Bayard and the Don Quixote of Akbar's reign' In his *jihād*s he was sans peur, and his private life sans reproche he surpassed all grandees by his faithfulness and attachment to his masters, but his contingent was never in order, he was always poor, though his servants, in consequence of his liberality, lived in affluence He slept on the ground because his Prophet had enjoyed no greater luxuries, and his motto in fight was "death or victory", and when people asked him why he did not invert the order and say "victory or death", he would reply, "O I I so long to be with the saints that have gone before"

He was the patron of the historian Badāoni² who served Husayn as almoner to his estate (Shamsabād and Patyali)

¹ There were two tribes of the Qarā Turks called أیمان or ایمان aymāq They were renowned in India as horsemen Hence ایمان as the word is generally spelt by Afghani Historians means a kind of superior cavalry vide Tuzuk, p 147 l 17 How this Turkish word lost its original meaning in India may be seen from p 57 l 1 of the second volume of my 4th text where Abu 'l Faḥr applies the word to Rajput cavalry of the Rathor clan The word is pronounced aymāq in India

The meaning of Mīyān Kāl is still unclear to me To judge from Abu 'l Faḥr's phrase it must be the name of the head or founder of a clan The adjective Mīyān Kāl occurs frequently Two *Mīyān Kāl*s may be found below among the list of learned men (Qazī Ḥabdu 's-Samīḥ) and the poets (Qāsim i Kāhī)

² Vide my Essay on Badāoni and his Works in J.A.S. Bengal for 1860 p 120

Husayn Khān was not only sister's son, but also son in law to Mahdī Qāsim Khān (No 36) He was in Bayram's service In the second year, after the conquest of Mānkoṭ, Akbar made him Governor of Lāhor, where he remained four months and four days When Akbar in Ṣafar 965, marched to Dihli, he appointed H Kh Governor of the Panjāb During his incumbency, he showed himself a zealous Sunni As the Christians did with the Jews, he ordered the Hindūs as unbelievers to wear a patch (Hind tukrā) near the shoulders, and thus got the nickname of Tukriya "Patcher"

Like Shāh Qulī Khān Mahram (No 45), he stuck to Bayrām to the last, and did not meet Akbar at Jhūjhar, but after Bayrām had been pardoned, he entered Akbar's service When Mahdī Qāsim Khān, from dislike to Gaḍha, went by way of the Dakhin to Makkah, H Kh accompanied 'um a short distance on the road On his return, he reached Satwās in Malwah, when the rebellion of the Mirzās broke out, and in concert with Muqarrīb Khān, the tuyūldār of that place, he tried to fortify himself in Satwās But Maqarrīb lost heart and fled, and H Kh was forced to leave the Fort, and asked Ibrāhīm Husayn Mirzā for an interview Though urged to join the Mirza, H Kh remained faithful to Akbar

In the 12th year, when Akbar moved against Khān Zamān, H Kh was to take a command, but his contingent was not ready In the 13th year his jāgīr was transferred from Lakhnau, where he and Badā onī had been for about a year, to Kanto Gola¹ His exacting behaviour towards Hindūs and his religious expeditions against their temples annoyed Akbar very much In the 19th year, when the Emperor went to Bihār, H Kh was again absent, and when Akbar returned after the conquest of Hājipur, he confiscated H's jāgīr, but on satisfying himself of his harmlessness, he pardoned him, restored his jāgīr, and told him to get his contingent ready His manā, however, again overpowered him He made an expedition against Basantpūr in Kamāon, which was proverbially rich, and got wounded by a bullet in the shoulder Akbar was almost convinced that he had gone into rebellion, and sent Sādiq Khān (No 43) to him to bring him by force to Court H Kh there fore left Garh Muktesar, with the view of going to Munṣim Khān, through whose influence he hoped to obtain pardon. But he was caught at Bārha, and was taken to Faṭhpūr Sīkri, where in the same year (983) he died of his wounds

¹ Elliot (Index p 235 First Edition) has by mistake Lakhnor (on the Ramganga) instead of Lakhnau (in Audh) and he calls Husayn Khān a Kashmiri This must be an oversight

The Ṭabaqāt says, he was a Commander of Two Thousand; but according to the Akbarnāma, he had since the 12th year been a Commander of Three Thousand.

His son, Yūsuf Khān, was a grandee of Jahāngīr. He served in the Dakhn in the corps of 'Azīz Koka (No 21), who, in the 5th year, had been sent with 10,000 men to reinforce Prince Parwīz, the Khān Khānān, and Mān Singh, because on account of the duplicity of the Khān Khānān (Tuzuk p. 88) the imperialists were in the greatest distress (vide pp 344 and 357). Yūsuf's son, 'Izzat Khān, served under Shāhjahān, (Pādīshāh. II, 121).

54. Murād Khān, son of Amīr Khān Mughul Beg

His full name is Muhammad Murād Khān. In the 9th year he served under Āsaf Khān (No. 48) in Gaḍha Katanga. In the 12th year, he got a jāgīr in Malwa, and fought under Shihāb^u 'd-Dīn Ahmad against the Mirzās. After the Mirzās had returned to Gujrāt, M. got Ujjain as tuyūl.

In the 13th year, the Mirzās invaded Mālwa from Khandesh, and Murād Khān, together with Mir 'Azīz^u 'llah, the Dīwān of Mālwa, having received the news two days before the arrival of the enemies, shut themselves up in Ujjain, determined to hold it for Akbar. The Emperor sent Qulij Khān (No 42) to their relief, when the Mirzās retreated to Mandū. Followed up by Qulij and Murād they retreated at last across the Narbaddah.

In the 17th year, the Mirzās broke out in Gujrāt, and the jāgīrdars of Malwa assembled under the command of M 'Azīz Koka (No 21). Murād held a command in the left wing, and took part, though not very actively, in the confused battle near Patan (Ramazān, 980).

In 982, he was attached to Munṣim's expedition to Bengal. He conquered for Akbar the district of Fathābād, Sarkar Bogla (S.E Bengal), and was made Governor of Jalesar (Jellalore) in Orīsā, after Dā'ūd had made peace with Munṣim.

When in 983, after Munṣim's death, Dā'ūd fell upon Nazar Bahādur, Akbar's Governor of Bhadrak (Orīsā), and treacherously killed him, Murād wisely retreated to Ṭānda¹.

Subsequently M. was again appointed to Fathābād, where he was when the Bengal rebellion broke out. Murād at Fathābād Qiyā Khān in

¹ As Munṣim left Ṭhanahdar in Bhadrak and Jalesar, Dā'ūd must have been most Orisa Mirza Najat at Satgaw were almost the only officers of Akbar's Bengal corps that did not take part in the great military revolt of 988. Qiya was killed by Qutlu (p 366) and Murad died at Fathabad immediately after the first outbreak of the revolt in 988 before the veil of his loyalty was rent.

After his death Mukand the principal Zamundar of Fathabad invited Murad's sons to a feast and treacherously murdered them.

Vide No 369

55 Haji Muhammed Khan of Sistan

He was in the service of Bayram who was much attached to him. In 961 when Bayram held Qandahar rumours of treason reached Humayun. The Emperor went from Kabul to Qandahar and personally investigated the matter but finding Bayram innocent he went back taking Haji Muhammad with him who during the investigation had been constantly referred to as inclined to rebellion¹.

After the conquest of Hindustan H M at Bayram's request was made a Khan and was rapidly promoted.

In the 1st year of Akbar's reign H M was ordered to accompany Khizr Khwaja n (p 365 note 2) on his expedition against Sikandar Sur Tardi Beg's (No 12) defeat by Hemu had a bad effect on the Emperor's cause and Mulla 'Abdullah Makhdum 1 Mulk who though in Akbar's service was said to be devoted to the interests of the Afghan's represented to Sikandar that he should use this favourable opportunity and leave the Sawaliks. As related above Khizr Khwaja moved against Sikandar leaving H M in charge at Lahor. Being convinced of Makhdum's treason H M tortured him and forced him to give up sums of money which he had concealed.

In 966 Bayram fell out with Pir Muhammad (No 20) and deprived him of his office and emoluments which were given to H M. When Bayram fell into disgrace he sent H M with several other Amirs to Dihli with expressions of his humility and desire to be pardoned. But H M soon saw that all was lost. He did not receive permission to go back to Bayram. After Bayram had been pardoned (p 318) H M and Muhammad Tarsu Khan (No 32) accompanied him on his way to Hijaz as far as Nagor then the frontier of the Empire. Once on the road Bayram charged H M with faithlessness when the latter gently reminded him that he had at least never drawn his sword against his master.

¹ Haji Muhammad is the same to whom Easkine's remark refers quoted by Elphinstone (Fifth Edition) p 40 note.

H M was present in almost every campaign, and was promoted to the post of Sih hazārī. In the 12th year, when Akbar set out for the conquest of Chitor, he sent H M and Shihāb^u 'd Dīn Ahmad (No 26) from Gagrūn against the sons of Sulṭān Muhammad Mīrzā, who had fled from Sambhal and raised a revolt in Mālwah. H M then received the Sarkār of Mandū as jāgīr.

In the 20th year, H M accompanied Munṣim Khān on his expedition to Bengal and Orisā, and got wounded in the battle of Takarōī (20th Zi Qa^ʿda, 982). He then accompanied the Khān Khānān to Gaur, where soon after Munṣim's death he, too, died of malaria (983).

Note on the Battle of Takarōī, or Mughulmārī, in Orisā

This battle is one of the most important battles fought by Akbar's generals. It crushed the Afghāns, and decided the possession of Bengal and Upper Orisā. The MSS of the Akbarnāma and the Ma^ʿāzīr have تاکروہی Takarohī, and تکروٹی Takarōī. My copy of the Sawānīḥ has the former spelling. A few copies of the Akbarnāma have نکروہی Nakrohī. In Badā'onī and the Ṭabaqāt the battle of Takarōī is called the battle of باجھورہ (vide p 334) which may be Bajhorah, Bachhorah, Bajhorh, or Bachhorh. Stewart's account of Munṣim's Orisā expedition (5th Section), differs in many particulars from the Akbarnama and the Ṭabaqāt. He places the battle in the environs of Katak, which is impossible, and his "Bukhtore" is a blunder for بچھوٹا ba chuttū ā, "in Chittua," the final ālf having assumed the shape of a re, and the ح that of چ. The Lucknow lithograph of the Akbarnama, which challenges in corruptness the worst possible Indian MS, has ba chitor, "in Chitor."

The Akbarnāma, unfortunately, gives but few geographical details. Todar Mal moved from Bardwān over Madāran¹ into the Pargana of Chittuā (چھوٹا), where he was subsequently joined by Munṣim. Dā^ʿud had taken up a strong position at ہرپور, Harpūr or Haripūr "which lies intermediate (barzakhe) between Bengal and Orisā." The same phrase (barzakhe), in other passages of the Akbarnāma, is applied to Chittuā itself. Dā^ʿud's object was to prevent the Imperialists from entering Orisā into which led but few other roads, "but Ilyas Khān Langah showed the victorious army an easier road" and Munṣim entered the country, and thus turned Dā'ud's position. The battle then takes place (20th Zi Qaḍda, 982, or A D, 3rd March, 1575). After the battle Toḍar Mal leads the pursuit and reaches with his corps the town of Bhadrak. Not long after, he writes to Munṣim to come and join him, as Dā'ūd had collected his troops near Kaṭak, and the whole army moves to Kaṭak where a peace was concluded, which confirmed Dā'ūd in the possession of Katak.

Now from the facts that the battle took place soon after the Imperialists had left Chittuā, which lies a little EEN of Midnāpur (Midnapore), and that after the victory Rāja Toḍar Mal, in a pursuit of several days, pushed as far as Bhadrak, I was led to conclude that the battle must have taken place near Jalesar (Jellasore) and probably north of it, as Abū 'l Fazl would have mentioned the occupation of so large a town. On consulting the large Trigonometrical Map of Orisā lately published, I found on the road from Midnāpur to Jalesar the village of Mogulmaree¹ (Mughulmarī, i.e., Mughul's Fight) and about seven miles southwards half way between Mughulmarī and Jalesar, and two miles from the left bank of the Soobanreeka river, the village of Tookaroe.

According to the map the latitude of Mughulmarī is 22°, and that of Tookaroe, 21° 53' nearly.

There can be no doubt that this Tookaroe is the تکاروی, Takarōi, of the Akbarnāma.

The battle extended over a large ground. Bada'oni (II p 195, l 3) speaks of three four kor, i.e. about six miles, and thus the distance of Takarōi from Mughulmarī is accounted for.

I can give no satisfactory explanation of the name تکاروی, by which the battle is called in the Tabaqāt and Bada'oni. (II, 194 l 2). It looks as if the name contained the word chaur which occurs so often in the names of Parganas in the Jalesar and Balesar districts.

In Bada'oni (Edit Bibl Indica, p 196) and the Tabaqāt, it is said that Toḍar Mal in his pursuit reached کل کل گھا Kalkalghāl (?), not Bhadrak.

Last of Officers who died in 983, after their return from Orisā, at Gaur, of malaria

- | | | | |
|---|--|---|----------------------------------|
| 1 | Munṣim Khan , Khan Khanān ,
(18th Rajab) Vid. p 334 | 2 | Hajī Khān Sīstānī (No 55) |
| | | 3 | Havdar Khan (No 66) |

¹ Another Mughulmarī lies in the Bardwan district between Bardwan and Jahānābad (Hughli district) on the old high road from Bardwān over M-daran to Midnāpur.

4	Mirzā Qulī Khān , his brother	10	Hāshim Khān
5	Ashraf Khān (No 74)	11	Muhsin Khān
6	Muḥsin ^u 'd Dīn Ahmad (No 128)	12	Qunduz Khān
7	Laḥī Khān (No 209)	13	Abū'l Husayn
8	Hājī Yūsuf Khān (No 224)	14	Shāh Khalīl
9	Shāh Ṭāhīr (No 236)

56 Afzal Khān, Khāwja Sultan Ḥalī¹ -yī Turbatī

Regarding Turbatī vide No 37 He was Mushrif (accountant) of Humāyūn's Treasury, and was, in 956, promoted to the post of Mushrif : Buyūtāt (store accountant) In 957, when Mirzā Kāmran took Kābul, he imprisoned A Kh, and forced him to pay large sums of money On Humāyūn's return to India, A Kh was made Mīr Bahāshī, and got an Ḥalam He was together with Tardī Beg (No 12) in Dīblī when Humāyūn died In the battle with Hemū, he held a command in the centre (gol), and his detachment gave way during Hemū's charge A Kh, together with Fīr Muhammad (No 20) and Ashraf Khān (No 74), fled from the battlefield partly from hatred towards Tardī Beg—the old hatred of Khurāsānīs towards Uzlaks—and retreated to Akbar and Bayrām As related above, Tardī Beg was executed by Bayrām for this retreat, and A Kh and Ashraf Khān were convicted of malice and imprisoned But both escaped and went to Makkah They returned in the 5th year, when Bayrām had lost his power and were favourably received at Court A Kh was made a Commander of three thousand

"Nothing else is known of him" Ma'āṣir

57 Shahbeg Khān, son of Irbahun Beg Harik (?)²

He is sometimes called Beg Khān (p 327) He was an Arghūn, hence his full name is Shāh Beg Khān Arghūn Under Jahāngīr he got the title of Khān Daurān

He was in the service of Mirzī Muhammad Hakīm of Kābul, Akbar's brother, and was Governor of Peshawar When after the Prince's death, Mān Singh in 993, crossed the Nīlah (p 362) for Kābul, Shāh Beg took M M Hakīm's two sons, Kay Qubāb and Afrāsiyab, to Akbar, and received a mansab Sh B distinguished himself in the war with the Yūsufzā'īs, and got Ahushāb as jājūr He then served under the Khān Khānān in Sindh, and was for his bravery promoted to a command of 2500 In the 39th year Akbar sent him to Qandahār (p 327), which,

¹ The word Ḥalī has been omitted in my text edition on p 224

² See the Ma'āṣir My MSS of the Ā'in have حرک which may be Harik Harmak Harbak etc Some MSS read clearly Harmak

Muzaffar Husayn had ceded. During the time of his Governorship Sh B succeeded in keeping down the notorious Kākar كاکر tribe. In the 42nd year, he was made a Commander of 3,500. In the 47th year, Ghazni was placed in his charge (vide No 63).

Immediately after the accession of Jahangir, Husayn Khān Shāmlu, the Persian Governor at Hirat, thinking Akbar's death would lead to disturbances, made war upon Sh B and besieged Qandahar, which he hoped to starve out. To vex him, Sh B gave every night feasts on the top of the castle before the very eyes of the enemies (Tuzuk, p 33). One day Husayn Khān sent an ambassador into the Fort, and Sh B, though provisions had got low, had every available store of grain spread out in the streets, in order to deceive the enemies. Not long after, Husayn Shāh received a reprimand from Shah 'Abbas for having besieged Qandahar "without orders", and Husayn Khān, without having effected anything, had to raise the siege.

When Jahangir in 1016 (18th Safar) visited Kābul,¹ Sh B paid his respects and was made a Commander of 5,000, and received the title of Khān Dowrān. He was also made Governor of Kābul (in addition to Qandahār), and was ordered to prepare a financial settlement for the whole of Afghānistan. After having held this office till the end of 1027 he complained of the fatigues incident to a residence in Kābul, horse-travelling and the drizzly state of the atmosphere of the country,² paid in the beginning of 1028 his respects at Court (Tuz, p 257), and was appointed Governor of Thatha.³ He resigned, however, in the same year (Tuz, p 275) and got the revenue of the Pargana of Khushāb assigned as pension (75,000 Rs).

Before he went to Thatha, he called on Āsaf to take leave and Āsaf recommended to him the brothers of Mulla Muhammad of Thatha, who had been a friend of Āsaf. Saāhbeg had heard before that the Mulla's brothers, in consequence of Āsaf's support, had never cared for the Governors of the province, hence he said to Āsaf, 'Certainly, I will take an interest in their welfare, if they are sensible (sarhūsāb), but if not, I shall slay them.' Āsaf got much annoyed at this, opposed him in everything, and indirectly forced him to resign.

Sh B was a frank Turk. When Akbar appointed him Governor of Qandahār, he conferred upon him an ʿalam and a naqqāra (p 52), but on receiving the insīma, he said to Farīd (No 99), "What is all this trash for? Would that His Majesty gave me an order regarding my mansab, and a jāgīr, to enable me to get better troopers for his service." On his return, in 1028, from Kābul, he paraded before Jahāngīr his contingent of 1,000 picked Mughul troopers, whose appearance and horses created much sensation.

He was much given to wine drinking. He drank, in fact, wine, cannabis, opium, and kūknār, mixed together, and called his beverage of four ingredients Chār Bughrā (p 63, l 2), which gave rise to his nickname Chār Bughrā Khur.

His sons 1 Mīrzā Shāh Muhammad Ghaznīn Khān, a well educated man. Jahāngīr, in 1028, made him a Commander of One Thousand, six hundred horse.

2 Yaʿqūb Beg, son in law to Mīrzā Jaʿfar Āsaf Khān (III), (No 98), a Commander of Seven Hundred, 350 horse. The Maʿāwī says, he was a fatalist (azalparast), and died obscure.

3 Asad Beg (Tuz, p 275) a Commander of Three Hundred, 50 horse. The Maʿāwī does not mention him.

The Tuzuk, p 34, mentions a Qasim Beg Khān, a relation of Sh B. This is perhaps the same as No 350.

Shāhbeg Khān Arghān must not be confounded with No 148.

58 Khān ʿAlam Chalma Beg,¹ son of Hamdam who was Mīrza Kāmran's foster brother.

Chalma Beg was Humāyūn's safarchī, or table attendant. Mīrzā Kāmran had, in 960, been blinded, and at the Indus asked for permission to go to Makkah. Before he left, Humāyūn, accompanied by some of his courtiers, paid him a visit, when the unfortunate prince after greeting his brother, quoted the verse —

“ کلاه گوشهٔ دیروش برولک ساند که سایه همیچو بو شاهي فکد برسر او ”
 “The fold of the poor man's turban touches the heaven, when a king like thee casts his shadow upon his head.”

And immediately afterwards he said the following verse extempore —

نرخانهٔ او بوجهٔ رسد جای سب اسب گرانوک حساسته وگر حکمترستم

¹ For Chalma the MSS of the Āʿin have at this place Harīr. In No 100 the same name occurs. The Maʿāwī and good MSS of the Āʿin have Chalmah. Turkish dictionaries give chalmah (حلمه) as the name of a good kind of chalma (حلمه) in that of daḡīr, a turban.

In the Edit. Bibl. Lidies of Ladā omī Khān ʿĀlīm is wrongly called خان instead of خان.

“ Whatever I receive at thy hands is kindness, be it the arrow of oppression or the dagger of cruelty ”

Humāyūn felt uncomfortable and tried to console him. He gave next day orders that any of Kāmran's old friends might accompany him free to Makkah, but as no one came forward, he turned to Chalmah Beg, and said, “ Will you go with him, or stay with me ? ” Chalmah Beg though he knew that Humāyūn was much attached to him, replied that he thought he should accompany the Prince in the “ gloomy days of need and the darkness of his solitude ” The Emperor approved of his resolution, and made liberal provisions for Kamran and his companion.

After Kamran's death, Chalmah Beg returned to India, and was favourably received by Akbar, who made him a Commander of 3,000 bestowing upon him the title of Khān ṢĀlam. He served under the emperor against the Mirzas in Gujrāt, and was present in the fight at Sarnāl (p 353, No 27)

In the 19th year, when Akbar moved against Da'ūd in Patna, Khān ṢĀlam commanded a corps, and passing up the river in boats toward the mouth of the Ghandak, effected a landing, though continually exposed to the volleys of the enemies. Akbar praised him much for his daring. In the same year he was attached to Munṣim's corps. In the battle of Takaroi (p 406), he commanded the harāwal (van). He charged the Afghāns, and allowing his corps to advance too far, he was soon hard pressed and gave way, when Munṣim sent him an angry order to fall back. But before his corps could be brought again into order, Gūjar Khān, Dā'ūd's best general, attacked the Imperialists with his line of elephants, which he had rendered fierce looking by means of black Yak tails (qutas) and skins of wild beasts attached to them. The horse of the Imperialists got frightened, nothing could make them stand and their ranks were utterly broken. Kh ṢĀ's horse got a sword cut, and reared, throwing him on the ground. He sprang up, and mounted again, but was immediately thrown over by an elephant, and killed by the Afghāns who rushed from all sides upon him (20th Zī Qaṣda, 982)

It is said that before the battle he had presentiment of his death and begged of his friends, not to forget to tell the Emperor that he had willingly sacrificed his life.

Kh ṢĀ was a poet and wrote under the Takhallus of Hamdamī (in allusion to the name of his father)

A brother of his, Muẓaffar, is mentioned below (No 301) among the Commanders of Three Hundred, where for اعظم, in my Text edition p 229, read ام

59 Qasim Khan Mir Bahr Chamanara (?) Khurasan ¹

He is the son of Mirza Dost's sister who was an old servant of the Timurides. When Mirza Kamran was in 954 besieged in Kabul Humayun had occupied Mount Aqabun which lies opposite the Fort of Kabul. Whilst the siege was going on Qasim Khan and his younger brother Khawajagi Muhammad Husayn (No 241) threw themselves down from a turret between the Ahanin Darwaza and the Qasim Barlas bastion and went over to Humayun who received them with distinction.

Soon after Akbar's accession Q Kh was made a Commander of Three Thousand. He superintended the building of the Fort of Agra which he completed after eight years at a cost of 7 lacs of tankas, or 35 lacs of rupees. The Fort stands on the banks of the Jamna river F of the town of Agra on the place of the old Fort which had much decayed. The breadth of the walls is 30 yards and the height from the foundation to the pinnacles 60 ga. It is built of red sandstone the stones being well joined together and fastened to each other by iron rings which pass through them. The foundation everywhere reaches water. ²

In the 23rd year Q was made Commander of Agra. In the beginning of Shahbin 990 (32nd year) he was ordered to conquer Kashmir a country which from its inaccessibility had never tempted the former kings of Dihli. Though six or seven roads lead into Kashmir the passes are all so narrow that a few old men might repel a large army. The then ruler of Kashmir was Yaqub Khan son of Yusuf Khan Chak. He had fortified a pass ³ but as his rule was disliked a portion of his men went over to Q whilst others raised a revolt in Srinagar. Thinking it more important to crush the revolt Yaqub left his fortified position and allowed Q to enter the country. No longer able to oppose the Imperialists he withdrew to the mountains and trusted to an active guerilla warfare.

¹ I am doubtful regarding the true meaning of the old title chama araya Khurasan or P ler of Khurasan. The M ⁴ r not knowing what to do with it has left it out. If Bahr means asim ral. If chama araya Kh be a gentile the words mean Admiral of the ler of Kh ra n h h com h.

happened in 1000

The Fort Balajur h not wh ch Et ot (In lex I rst I t p 009) lent lies with the Fort of Agra cannot be the old Fort of Agra because Badaoni (I 30th) clearly says that it was a lofty structure at the foot of the Fort of Gwalior not one of

but disappointed even in this hope, he submitted and became "a servant of Akbar" The Kashmiris, however, are famous for love of mischief and viciousness, and not a day passed without disturbances breaking out in some part of the country Q, tired of the incessant petty annoyances, resigned his appointment (vide No 35) In the 34th year he was made Governor of Kābul At that time a young man from Andajān (Farḡhāna) gave out that he was a son of Shāhruḥ¹ He met with some success in Badaḡhshān, but was defeated by the Turan Shāh The pretender then made friendship with the Zabulī Hazāras, and when Q, on one occasion had repaired to Court he entered Akbar's territory giving out that he was going to pay his respects to the Emperor But Hashim Beg Q's son, who officiated during the absence of his father, sent a detachment after the pretender, who now threw himself on the Hazāras But Hashim Beg followed him, and took him a prisoner to Kabul Q, on his return from India, let him off and even allowed him to enter his service The pretender, in the meantime, rearranged his old men, and when he had five hundred together, he waited for an opportunity to fall on Q At this juncture, Akbar ordered the pretender to repair to Court Accompanied by his ruffians, he entered at noon Q's sleeping apartments, when only a few females were present, and murdered his benefactor (1002) Hashim Beg soon arrived, and fired upon the pretender and his men In the melee, the murderer was killed

For Qasim's brother, vide No 241, and for his son, No 226

60 Baqī Khān (elder), brother of Adham Khān (No 19)

His mother is the same Māhum Anaga, mentioned on p 340 "From Badaoni (II, 340) we learn that Bāqī Khān died in the 30th year as Governor of Gaḍha Katanga" This is all the Ma'āzīr says of him

His full name is Muhammad Bāqī Khān Koka From Badaoni II, 81, we see that Baqī Khān took part in the war against Iskandar Khān and Bahādur Khān (972-3), and fought under Muḥizz'ul Mulk (No 61)

¹ In 1016 another false son of Mirza Shāhruḥ (p 326) created disturbances and asked n the battle of Khayrābād, in which Budāgh Khān (No 52) was captured. The battle was lost, chiefly because Bāqī Khān, Mahdī Qāsim Khān (No 36), and Husayn Khān Tukriya (No 53) had personal grievances—their Uzbek hatred—against Muḥizz^u 'l Mulk and Rāja Toḍar Mal.

61 Mīr Muḥizz^u 'l-Mulk, Mūsawī of Mashhad

He belongs to the Mūsawī Sayyids of Mashhad the Holy, who trace their descent to ʿAlī Mūsā Razā, the 8th Imām of the Shiʿahs. A branch of these Sayyids by a different mother is called Razawī.

In the 10th year, Akbar moved to Jaunpūr to punish Khān Zamān (No 13), who had dispatched his brother Bahādur and Iskandar Khān Uzbek (No 48) to the district of Saruār¹. Against them Akbar sent a strong detachment (vide No 60) under Muḥizz^u 'l Mulk Bahādur, on the approach of the Imperialists, had recourse to negotiations, and asked for pardon, stating that he was willing to give up all elephants. M M, however, desired war, and though he granted Bahādur an interview, he told him that his crimes could only be cleansed with blood. But he reported the matter to Akbar, who sent Lashkar Khān (No 90) and Rāja Toḍar Mal to him, to tell him that he might make peace with Bahādur, if he was satisfied with his good intentions. But here also the rancour of the Khurāsānis towards the Uzbaks decided matters, and Toḍar Mal only confirmed M M in his resolution². Although a few days later the news arrived that Akbar had pardoned Khān Zamān, because he sent his mother and his uncle Ibrāhīm Khān (No 64) to Court as guarantees of his loyalty, M M attacked Bahādur near Khayrābād. Muhammād Yar, son of Iskandar Khān's brother, who commanded the van of the rebels, fell in the first attack, and Iskandar who stood behind him, was carried along and fled from the field. The Imperialists, thinking that the battle was decided, commenced to plunder, when suddenly Bahādur, who had been lying in wait, fell upon M M's left wing and put it to flight. Not only was Budāgh Khān (No 52) taken prisoner but many soldiers went over to Bahādur. Flushed with victory, he attacked the ¹ Most MSS have سردار. The Edit Bibl Indica of Badaoni p 78 has سردار Sardar but again سردار on p 83. There is no doubt that the district got its name from the Sarw (سارو) Silver (آسروان آب سرو).

² Badaoni says Toḍar Mal's arrival was "naphth on Muḥizz^u 'l Mulk's fire". Through out his work Badaoni shows himself an admirer of Khān Zamān and his brother Bahādur. With Muḥizz^u 'l Mulk a Shiʿah of the Shiʿahs he has no patience. "Muḥizz^u 'l-Mulk's ideas" he says were "I and nobody else". he behaved as proudly as Firḥān and Shaddad for he is a the character of "I and nobody else". "AN" "Maahk" of you would centre, where the grandees either fled or would not fight from malice (vide No 60) Toḍar Mal's firmness was of no avail, and the day was lost

After the conquest of Bihār, M M got the Pargana of Āra (Arrah) as jāgīr In the 24th year, the nobles of Bihār under Maṣūm ḥ Kabuli, tuyūldār of Patna, rebelled They won over M M, and his younger brother Mīr ʿAlī Akbar (No 62), but both soon left the rebels, and M M went to Jaunpūr recruiting, evidently meditating revolt independently of the others In the 25th year, Akbar ordered Asad Khān Turkmān, jāqīrdār of Mānikpūr, to hasten to Jaunpūr and convey M M with all his suspicious adherents to Court Asad Khān succeeded in catching M M, and sent him by boat to the Emperor Near Itāwah, however, the boat "foundered", and M M lost his life

62 Mīr ʿAlī Akbar (younger), brother of the preceding

He generally served with his brother, and held the same rank In the 22nd year he presented Akbar, according to the Ṭabaqāt with a Mawlūd nāma, or History of the birth of the Emperor It was in the handwriting of Qāzī Ghīyāṣ 'd Dīn ḥ Jāmī, a man of learning, who had served under Humāyūn, and contained an account of the vision which Humāyūn had in the night Akbar was born The Emperor saw in his dream the new born babe, and was told to call his name Jalāl 'd Dīn Muhammad Akbar This Mawlūd nāma Akbar prized very much, and rewarded Mīr ʿAlī Akbar with a pargana¹ as inʿām

When his brother was sent to Bihār, M ʿA A was ordered to accompany him He established himself at Zamāniya, which "lies 6 kos from Ghāzīpūr (vide p 336), and rebelled like his brother in Jaunpūr After the death of his brother, Akbar ordered M ʿAzīz (No 21), who had been appointed to Bihār, to send M ʿA A fettered to Court Notwithstanding his protests that he was innocent, he was taken to the Emperor, who imprisoned him for life

63 Sharīf Khān, brother of Atga Khān (No 15)

He was born at Ghaznīn After Bayrām's fall, he held a tuyūl in the Panjāb, and generally served with his elder brother Mīr Muhammad Khān (No 16)

On the transfer of the Atga Khayl from the Panjāb, Sh was appointed to the Sarkār of Qannawj In the 21st year, when Akbar was at Mohini, he sent Sh, together with Qāzī Khān ḥ Badaḥshī (No 144), Mujāhd Khān, Subhān Qul Turk, against the Ranā He afterwards distinguished himself in the conquest of Kōbhalmir. In the 25th year, he was made atāliq to Prince Murād, and was in the same year sent to Mālwah as Governor Shuja'at Khān (No 51) having been killed. His son Baz Bahadur (No 188) was ordered to join his father from Gujrat. In the 28th year, he served against Muzaffar, and distinguished himself in the siege of Bahroch, which was held for Muzaffar by Chirkis, Rūmī and Nasirā, brother of Muzaffar's wife. The former having been killed, Nasirā escaped in the 7th month of the siege through the trench held by Sharif, and the Fort was taken. In the 30th year, he was sent with Shihab'ud Dīn (No 26) to the Dakhn, to assist Mirza 'Aziz (No 21).

¹ Called in the Mas̄dar (though it cannot be Nuddea in Bengal), in my copy of the Sawānīh, but Nadīnah in Sambhal appears to be meant.

In the 35th year he went from Malwah to Court, and was made in the 39th year Governor of Ghaznin, an appointment which he had long desired. There he remained till the 47th year, when Shah Beg (No 57) was sent there.

“ Nothing else is known of him ” Ma'āsir

His son, Baz Bahādur (No 188), held a jāgīr in Gujrāt, and was transferred to Mālwah as related above. He served in the siege of Āsir, and in the Ahmadnagar war. In the 46th year, he was caught by the Talingahs but was released when Abū 'l Fazl made peace, and the prisoners were exchanged.

IX — Commanders of Two Thousand and Five Hundred

61 Ibrahim Khān-i Shaybanī (uncle of Khān Zaman, No 13)

He served under Humayūn. After the conquest of Hindūstan Humayūn sent him with Shāh Abū 'l Ma'ālī to Lahor, to oppose Sikandar Sur, should he leave the Sawaliks. After the fall of Mānkot, he received the Pargana of Sarharpur,¹ near Jaunpur, as jāgīr, and remained with Khān Zaman. During Khān Zamān's first rebellion, Ibrāhīm Khān and Khān Zaman's mother repaired at Mun'im Khān's request to Court as hostages of his loyalty. Ibrahim appearing, as was customary, with a shroud and a sword round his neck, which were only taken off when the Emperor's pardon had been obtained.

In the 12th year, however, Khān Zamān again rebelled, and Ibrāhīm went with Iskandar (No 48) to Audh. When the latter had gone to Bengal, Ibrāhīm, at Mun'im's request, was pardoned, and remained with the Khān Khānān.

¹ It is difficult to reconcile this statement with Badā'uni II 23 where Sarharpur which lies 18 kos from Jaunpur, is mentioned as the jāgīr of Abdu'r Raḥman Sikandar Sūr's son who got it after the surrender of Mankot.

In the Tabaqāt, Ibr is called a Commander of Four Thousand

His son, Ismaʿīl Khān, held from Khān Zamān the town of Sandelah in Audh. In the 3rd year, Akbar gave this town to Sultan Husayn Khan Jalāʾir. Ismaʿīl opposed him with troops which he had got from Khan Zamān, but he was defeated and killed.

65 Khwaja Jalāl 'd Dīn Mahmūd Bujuq, of Khurasan

The MSS of the Āʿin have Muhammad, instead of Maʿmūd, which other histories have, and have besides a word after Muhammad which reads like الحق and حق. This should be no doubt حق bujuq, the scriptio defectiva of the Turkish حقوق bujuq, "having the nose cut," as given in the copy of the Maʿāʾir.

Jalāl 'd Dīn was in the service of M ^ʿAskari. He had sent him from Qandahār to Garmsīr, to collect taxes when Humāyūn passed through the district on his way to Persia. The Emperor called him, and Jalāl presented him with whatever he had with him of cash and property, for which service Humayun conferred on him the title of Mīr Sāmān, which in the circumstances was an empty distinction. On Humayūn's return from Persia, Jalāl joined the Emperor, and was ordered, in 959, to accompany the young Akbar to Ghaznīn, the tuyul of the Prince. His devotion to his master rendered him so confident of the Emperor's protection that he treated the grandees rudely, and incessantly annoyed them by satirical remarks. In fact, he had not a single friend.

Akbar on his accession made him a Commander of Two Thousand Five Hundred, and appointed him to Ghaznīn. His enemies used the opportunity and stirred up Munʿim Knān, who owed Jalāl an old grudge. Jalāl soon found his post in Ghaznīn so disagreeable that he determined to look for employment elsewhere. He had scarcely left Ghaznīn, when Munʿim called him to account. Though he had promised to spare his life, Munʿim imprisoned him, and had a short time after his eyes pierced. Jalāl's sight, however, had not been entirely destroyed, and he meditated a flight to India. Before he reached the frontier, Munʿim's men caught him and his son Jalāl 'd Dīn Masʿūd¹. Both were imprisoned and shortly afterwards murdered by Munʿim.

This double murder is the foulest blot on Munʿim's character, and takes us the more by surprise, as on all other occasions he showed himself generous and forbearing towards his enemies.

¹ He must not be confounded with the Jalāl 'd Dīn Masʿūd mentioned in Tuḥ v. 67 who 'ate opium like cheese out of the hands of his mother.

66 Haydar Muhammad Khān, Akhta Begi

He was an old servant of Humāyūn, and accompanied him to Persia. He gave the Emperor his horse, when, in the defeat near Balkh, Humāyūn's horse had been shot. On the march against Kāmran, who had left Kābul for Afghanistan, the imperialists came to the River Surkhāb, Haydar, with several other faithful Amirs, leading the van. They reached the river Siyah āb, which flows near the Surkhāb, before the army could come up. Kamran suddenly attacked them by night, but Haydar bravely held his ground. He accompanied the Emperor to Qandahār and to India, and was appointed to Bayānah (Bad I, 463), which was held by Ghāzi Khān Sūr, father of Ibrahim Khān. After the siege had lasted some time, Haydar allowed Ghāzi to capitulate, but soon after, he killed Ghāzi. Humāyūn was annoyed at this breach of faith, and said he would not let Haydar do so again.

After Akbar's accession, H was with Tardī Beg (No 12) in Dīhli, and fought under Khān Zaman (No 13) against Hemū. After the victory, he went for some reason to Kābul. At Mun'im's request he assisted Ghānī Khān (vide p 333) in Kābul. But they could not agree, and H was called to India. He accompanied Mun'im in the 8th year, on his expedition to Kābul and continued to serve under him in India.

In the 17th year, H served with Khān Kalān (No 16) in Gujrat. In the 19th year, he was, together with his brother Mirzā Qulī, attached to the Bengal Army, under Mun'im. Both died of fever, in 983, at Gaur (vide p 407).

A son of H is mentioned below (No 326)

Mirzā Qulī, or Mirzā Qulī Khān, Haydar's brother, distinguished himself under Humāyūn during the expedition to Badakhshān. When Kāmran, under the mask of friendship, suddenly attacked Humāyūn, M Q was wounded and thrown off his horse. His son, Dost Muhammad, saved him in time.

According to the Tabaqāt, M Q belonged to the principal grandees (umarā : kibār), a phrase which is never applied to grandees below the rank of Commanders of One Thousand. His name occurs also often in the Akbarnāma. It is, therefore, difficult to say why his name and that of his son have been left out by Abū 'l Fazl in this list.

67 Istimād Khān, of Gujrat

He must not be confounded with No 119

Istimād Khān was originally a Hindū servant of Sultān Mahmūd, king of Gujrat. He was "trusted" (istimād) by his master, who had allowed him to enter the harem, and had put him in charge of the women

It is said that, from gratitude, he used to eat camphor, and thus rendered himself impotent. He rose in the king's favour, and was at last made an Amir. In 961, after a reign of 18 years the king was foully murdered by a slave of the name of Burhan who besides killed twelve nobles. Iṣṭimād next morning collected a few faithful men, and killed Burhān. Sultān Mahmūd having died without issue, Iṣṭ raised Razi¹ 'l Mulk, under the title of Ahmad Shāh to the throne. Razi was a son of Sultān Ahmad, the founder of Ahmadābād, but as he was very young, the affairs of the state were entirely in Iṣṭ's hands. Five years later the young king left Ahmadābād and fled to Sayyid Mubārak of Bukhara² a principal courtier, but Iṣṭ followed him up, defeated him, and drove him away. Sultān Ahmad then thought it better to return to Iṣṭ, who now again reigned as before. On several occasions did the king try to get rid of his powerful minister, and Iṣṭ at last felt so insecure that he resolved to kill the king, which he soon afterwards did. Iṣṭ now raised a child of the name of Nathū (نصو) ³ to the throne, "who did not belong to the line of kings", but on introducing him to the grandees, Iṣṭ swore upon the Qur'an that Nathū was a son of Sultān Mahmūd, his mother when pregnant had been handed over to him by Sultān Mahmūd, to make her miscarry, but the child had been five months old, and he had not carried out the order. The Amirs had to believe the story, and Nathū was raised to the throne under the title of Sultān Muzaḥḥar.

This is the origin of Sultān Muzaḥḥar, who subsequently caused Akbar a generalis so much trouble (vide pp 344 354 355)

Iṣṭ was thus again at the head of the government, but the Amirs parcelled out the country among themselves, so that each was almost independent. The consequence was that incessant feuds broke out among them. Iṣṭ himself was involved in a war with Chingiz Khān, son of Iṣṭimād 'l Mulk, a Turkish slave. Chingiz maintained that Sultān Muzaḥḥar, if genuine, should be the head of the state, and as he was strengthened by the rebellious Mirzās, to whom he had afforded protection against Akbar, Iṣṭ saw no chance of opposing him, left the Sultān at last went to Dūngarpūr. Two nobles Alif Khān and Jhujhār Khān took Sultān Muzaḥḥar to him, went to Chingiz in Ahmadābād and killed him (Chingiz) soon after. The Mirzās seeing how distracted the country was took possession of Bahrūch and Sūrat. The general confusion only increased when Sultān Muzaḥḥar fled one day to Sher Khān Fūlādī and his party, and Iṣṭ retaliated by informing Sher Khān that Nathū was no prince at all. But Sher Khān's party attributed this to Iṣṭ's malice, and besieged him in Ahmadabad. Iṣṭ then fled to the Mirzās and soon after to Akbar, whose attention he drew to the wretched state of Gujrāt.

¹ Report of this distinguished Gujrātī noble vide the biography of his grandsons E. Hāmed (No. 75)

² Some MSS read Valā

When Akbar, in the 17th year, marched to Patan, Sher Khān's party had broken up. The Mirzās still held Babroch, and Sultān Muzaḥfar, who had left Sher Khān fell into the hands of Akbar's officers (vide No 361). Iṣṭmād and other Gujrātī nobles had in the meantime proclaimed Akbar's accession from the pulpits of the mosques and struck coins in his name. They now waited on the Emperor. Baroda, Champanūr, and Sūrat were given to Iṣṭ as tuyūl, the other Amirs were confirmed, and all charged themselves with the duty of driving away the Mirzās. But they delayed and did nothing, some of them, as Iṣṭmād's Mulk, even fled, and others who were attached to Akbar, took Iṣṭ and several grantees to the Emperor, apparently charging them with treason. Iṣṭ fell into disgrace, and was handed over to Shahbaz Khān (No 80) as prisoner.

In the 20th year Iṣṭ was released, and charged with the superintendence of the Imperial jewels and gold vessels. In the 22nd year, he was permitted to join the party who under Mir Abū Turāb (vide p 207) went to Makkah. On his return he received Patan as jagīr.

In the 28th year, on the removal of Shihāb 'd Dīn Ahmad (No 26), he was put in charge of Gūjrāt, and went there accompanied by several distinguished nobles though Akbar had been warned, for people remembered Iṣṭ's former inability to allay the factions in Gujrāt. No sooner had Shihāb handed over duties than his servants rebelled. Iṣṭ did nothing alleging that Shihāb was responsible for his men, but as Sultān Muzaḥfar had been successful in Katbīwar, Iṣṭ left Ahmadabad and went to Shihāb who on his way to Court had reached Karī, 20 kos from Ahmadābād. Muzaḥfar used the opportunity and took Ahmadabad, Shihāb's men joining his standard.

Shihāb and Iṣṭ then shut themselves up in Patan and had agreed to withdraw from Gujrāt, when they received some auxiliaries, chiefly a party of Gujrātīs who had left Muzaḥfar, to try their luck with the Imperialists. Iṣṭ paid them well, and sent them under the command of his son Sher Khān against Sher Khān Fūlādī, who was repulsed. In the meantime, Mir 'Abdū 'r Rahim (No 29) arrived. Leaving Iṣṭ at Patan, he marched with Shihāb against Muzaḥfar.

Iṣṭmād died at Patan in 995. The Tabaqat puts him among the Commanders of Four Thousand.

In Abū 'l Fazl's opinion, Gujratis are made up of cowardice, deceit, several good qualities, and meanness, and Iṣṭimād was the very type of a Gujrātī 68 Pāyanda Khān, Mughul, son of Hajī Muhammad Khān Koki's brother.

Hajī Muhammad and Shāh Muhammad, his brother, had been killed by Humāyun for treason on his return from Persia. Hajī Muhammad was a man of great daring, and his value when he was faithful, was often acknowledged by the Emperor

Payanda, in the 5th year of Akbar's reign came with Munṣim from Kabul, and was ordered to accompany Adham Khān (No 19) to Malwa. In the 19th year, he accompanied Munṣim to Bengal. In the 22nd year, he served under Bhagwān Dās against Rānā Partāb. In the Gujrāt war, he commanded M 'Abd' 'r Rahīm's (No 29) harāwal

In the 32nd year, he received Ghorāghāt as jagir, whither he went

This is all the Ma'āẓir says regarding Payanda

His full name was Muhammad Payanda. He had a son Walī Beg who is mentioned below (No 359)

From the Tuzuk, p 144, we see that Payanda died in 1024 A H, Jahangir, in 1017, had pensioned him off, as he was too old. Tuz, p 68

69 Jagannāth son of Raja Bihāri Mal (No 23)

He was a hostage in the hands of Sharaf' d Dīn Husayn (No 17, vide p 339). After some time he regained his freedom and was well received by Akbar. He generally served with Man Singh. In the 21st year, when Rānā Partāb of Maiwār opposed the Imperialists, Jagannāth during an engagement when other officers had given way, held his ground, and killed with his own hands the renowned champion Rām Dās, son of Jay Mal. In the 23rd year, he received a jagir in the Panjāb, and was, in the 25th year, attached to the van of the army which was to prevent Mirza Muhammad Hakīm from invading the Panjāb. In the 29th year, he again served against the Rānā. Later he accompanied Mirzā Yūsuf Khān (No 35) to Kashmīr. In the 34th year, he served under Prince Murād in Kābul, and accompanied him, in the 36th year, to Mālwa, of which the Prince had been appointed Governor. In the 43rd year, after several years' service in the Dakhīn he left Murād without orders, and was for some time excluded from Court. On Akbar's return from the Dakhīn J met the emperor at Rantanbhūr, his jagir, and was then again sent to the Dakhīn

In the 1st year of Jahāngir, he served under Prince Parwīz against

When Kābul was besieged, Ism and Khīzr Khwāja (vide p 394, note) attacked Sher ʿAlī, an officer of Mirza Kamran, who at the prince's order had followed up and plundered the Persian caravan (qāfi'a ywūkūyat) on its way to Charikan,¹ but as the roads were occupied by the Imperialists, Sher ʿAlī could not reach Kabul, and marched towards Ghaznī, when he was overtaken and defeated. Ism and Khīzr spoiled the plunderer, and went again to Humāyūn. A short time after, Ism and several other grandees left the emperor, because they resented the elevation of Qaracha Khan and followed Mirzā Kāmran to Badakhshān. Humāyūn followed them up and caught them together with Kāmran, Ism among them. Ism was, however, pardoned at Munʿim's request.

Ism accompanied the emperor on his march to India, and was sent, after the capture of Dīhli together with Shāh Abu 'l Maʿālī to Lāhor

“ Nothing else is known of him ” Maʿāṣir

73 Mir Babus (?), the Ighūr (Uighur ?)

The Ighurs are a well known Chaghtaï tribe. The correct name of this grandee is a matter of doubt, as every MS has a different lectio, vide my Text edition, p 224, note 6. The Maʿāṣir has left out the name of this grandee, nor do I find it in the List of the Ṭabaqāt

74 Ashraf Khan Mir Munshī, Muhammad Asghar of Sabzwār (?)

He was a Husaynī Sayyid of Mashhad (Maʿāṣir, Mirʿatū 'l ʿĀlam). The author of the Ṭabaqāt says he belonged to the ʿArabshāhī Sayyids, “ but people rarely make such fine distinctions ”. Abū 'l Fazl says, he was of Sabzwār, but in the opinion of the Maʿāṣir, this is an error of the copyists.

Ashraf Khān was a clever writer, exact in his style and a renowned calligrapher, perhaps the first of his age in writing the Taʿlīq and Nastaʿlīq character (pp 107-8). He also understood jafar, or witchcraft.²

Ashraf was in Humāyūn's service, and had received from him the post and title of Mir Munshī. After the conquest of Hindūstān, he was made Mir ʿArz and Mir Mal. At Akbar's accession, he was in Dīhli, and took part in the battle with Hemū (p 394, No 48). He was imprisoned by Bayrām but escaped and went to Makkah. He returned in 968, when Akbar was at Machhīwāra on his way to the Siwālīks where Bayrām

¹ So the Maʿāṣir. Our maps have Charikīr (lat. 35°, long 69°) which lies north of Kabul and has always been the centre of a large caravan trade. Istāʿī (استای) or استای lies half way between Kabul and Charikar. [Downson v, 225 has Chārikārān —B]

[² Jafar divination etc —P]

was He was well received and got a mansab In the 6th year, when the emperor returned from Malwa, he bestowed upon him the title of Ashraf Khān

In the 19th year, he went with Mun^{sim} to Bengal, was present in the battle of Takaroi, and died in the twentieth year (983)¹ at Gaur (vide p 407)

Ashraf was a poet of no mean pretensions

His son, Mir Abū 'l Muzaffar (No 240) held a Command of 500 In the 38th year, he was Governor of Awadh

Ashraf's grandsons, Husaynī and Burhān held inferior commands under Shahjahān

75 Sayyid Mahmūd of Barha (Kūndliwal)

"Sayyid Mahmūd was the first of the Bārha Sayyids that held office under the Timūrides" He was with Sikandar Sūr (Badā'onī II, 18) in Mānkot, but seeing that the cause of the Afghāns was hopeless, he left Sikandar and went over to Akbar He was a friend of Bayram, and served in the first year under 'Alī Qulī Khān Zaman (No 13) against Hemū In the second year, he took part in the expedition against Hājī Khān in Ajmir (vide Nos 40, 45) In the 3rd year, he conquered with Shah Qulī Mahram (No 45) Fort Jaitaran,² and served in the same year under Adham Kōla against the Bhadauriyahs of Hatkanth (vide p 341, l 8)

After Bayrām's fall, Sayyid Mahmūd got a jagir near Dīhli In the 7th year, he brought Mun^{sim} Khān to Court (vide p 333) In the 17th year, he served under the Khān : Kalan (No 16) and the emperor in Gujrat, was present in the battle of Sarnal, and followed up Mirza Ibrāhīm Husayn On every occasion he fought with much bravery Towards the end of the 18th year, he was sent with other Sayyids of Barha and Sayyid Muhammad of Amroha (No 140) against Raja Madhukar, who had invaded the territory between Sironj and Gvānyār S Mahmud drove him away, and died soon after, in the very end of 981

Sayyid Mahmūd was a man of rustic habits, and great personal courage and generosity Akbar's court admired his valour and chuckled at his boorishness and unadorned language, but he stood in high favour with the emperor Once on his return from the war with Madhukar he gave in the State hall a verbal account of his expedition in which his

¹ The Mir'at says in the tenth year (979) as stated on p 101 note 6 This is clearly a mistake of the author of the Mir'at

² The best MSS have حاس The name is doubtful Akbar passed it on one of his marches from Amir over Pan to Jalor

"I" occurred oftener than was deemed proper by the assembled Amīrs "You have gained the victory," interrupted Āsaf Khān, in order to give him a gentle hint, "because His Majesty's good fortune (iqbāl : pādīshāhī) accompanied you" Mistaking the word "Iqbal" for the name of a courtier, "Why do you tell an untruth?" replied Mahmūd, "Iqbal : Pādīshāhī did not accompany me I was there, and my brothers, we licked them with our sabres" The emperor smiled, and bestowed upon him praise and more substantial favours

But more malicious were the remarks of the Amīrs regarding his claim to be a Sayyid of pure blood Jahāngīr (Tuzuk, p. 366) also says that people doubt the claim of the Bārha family to be Sayyids Once Mahmūd was asked how many generations backwards the Sayyids of Bārha traced their descent Accidentally a fire was burning on the ground near the spot where Mahmūd stood Jumping into it, he exclaimed, "If I am a Sayyid, the fire will not hurt me, if I am no Sayyid, I shall get burnt" He stood for nearly an hour in the fire, and only left it at the earnest request of the bystanders "His velvet slippers showed, indeed, no trace of being singed"

For Sayyid Mahmūd's brother and sons, vide Nos. 91, 105, and 143

Note on the Sayyids of Bārha (Sādāt : Bārha)

In MSS. we find the spelling bārha, and barāh The lexico-graphist Bahār : Ajam (Tek Chand) in his grammatical treatise, entitled Jawahir 'l Hurīf, says that the names of Indian towns ending in h form adjectives in ī, as Tatta or Thatha, forms an adjective tatawī but of bārha no adjective is formed, and you say sādāt : bārha instead of sādāt : bārhawī

The name Bārha has been differently explained Whether the derivation from the Hindi numeral bārāh, 12, be correct or not, there is no doubt that the etymology was believed to be correct in the times of Akbar and Jahāngīr, for both the Tabaqāt and the Tuzuk derive the name from 12 villages in the Duāb (Muzaffarnagar District), which the Sayyids held It is also said that the Bārha family trace their origin to . . . , or genealogical . . . and passage from the Tuzuk, says that the personal courage of the Sayyids of Bārha—but nothing else—was the best proof that they were Sayyids. But they clung so firmly to this distinction, that some of them even placed the title of Sayyid before the titles which they received from the Mughul emperors as Sayyid Khān Jahān (Sayyid Abū 'i Muzaffar) and several others.

* From him are descended the most renowned Muslim families in Northern India the Bārha and Bāgrām Sayyids and in Khyrābād Futtelpur Huswā and many other places branches of the same stem are found C. A. Ellis of The Chronicles of Oudh Allahabad 1822 p. 99

But if their claim to be Sayyids was not firmly established, their bravery and valour had become a by word. Their place in battle was the van (harū'āl), they claimed to be the leaders of the onset, and every emperor from the times of Akbar gladly availed himself of the prestige of their name. They delighted in looking upon themselves as Hindustānis (vide p. 336). Their military fame completely threw to the background the renown of the Sayyids of Amrohah, of Mānikpūr, the Khānzādas of Mewāt and even families of royal blood as the Şafawīs.

The Sayyids of Barha are divided into four branches, whose names are 1 Tiknpurī, 2 Cha'banūrī or *Chattraurī*¹, 3 Kūndliūāl, 4 Jagnerī. The chief town of the first branch was Jānsath, of the second Sambalhara, of the third, Majhara, of the fourth Bidāuli on the Jamna. Of these four lines Muhammadan Historians perhaps accidentally, only mention two, viz, the Kūndliūāl (کوندلی وال) to which Sayyid Mahmud (No. 75) belonged, and the Tihanpūr (تھانپور) of which Sayyid Khān Jahān was a member.

The Histories of India do not appear to make mention of the Sayyids of Barha before the times of Akbar, but they must have held posts of some importance under the Sūrs, because the arrival of Sayyid Mahmud in Akbar's camp (p. 424) is recorded by all historians as an event of importance. He and other Sayyids were moreover at once appointed to high mansabs. The family boasts also traditionally of services rendered to Humayun, but this is at variance with Abu 'l Fazl's statement that Sayyid Mahmud was the first that served under a Timuride.

The political importance of the Sayyids declined from the reign of Muhammad, Shāh (1131 to 1161) who deposed the brothers Sayyid 'Abdu 'llah Khān and Sayyid Husayn 'Alī Khān, in whom the family reached the greatest height of their power. What a difference between the rustic and loyal Sayyid Mahmūd and Akbar, and the above two brothers who made four Timurides emperors, dethroned and killed two and blinded and imprisoned three ¹

¹ Vide Sir H. Elliot's Glossary (Beames Edition) I p. 11 and p. 297. On p. 12 of

The Sayyids of Barha are even nowadays numerous and "form the characteristic element in the population of the Muzaffarnagar district" (Leeds Report)

Abu l Fazl mentions nine Sayyids in this List of grandees viz —

- | | |
|------------------------------------|---|
| 1 Sayyid Mahmūd (No 75) | 6 Sayyid Jamāl ^u d Dīn (No 217) son of 2 |
| 2 Sayyid Ahmad his brother (No 91) | |
| 3 Sayyid Qasim (No 105) | } sons of 1 |
| 4 Sayyid Hashim (No 143) | |
| 5 Sayyid Raju (No 165) | 7 Sayyid Chajhū (No 221) |
| | 8 Sayyid Bayazid (No 295) |
| | 9 Sayyid Laḍ (No 409) |

The Akbarnama mentions several other Sayyids without indicating to what family they belong Thus S Jamāl^u d Dīn, a grandson of S Mahmūd (vide under 91), S Salīm, S Fath Khān (Bad II 180), etc

The following trees are compiled from the Turuk Pādīshahnāma, and Ma^tasir

¹ They made Farrukh Siyar Rafiʿ^u d Darajāt Rafiʿ^u d Dawla and Muḥammad Shāh emperors they dethroned and killed Jahāndar Shāh an l Farrukh Siyar w l om they had moreover blinded an l they blinded and imprisoned Princes ʿĀziz^u d Dīn ʿĀlī Tabār and Humāyun Bakht

(d) Sayyid Khan Jahān i Shāhjahānī Tihānpūrī ————— A brother
 (alias S 'Abd' i Muẓaffar Khān) d 1055

1 S Maṅṣūr	2 Sher Zaman title S Muẓaffar Khān.	3 S Munawwar Lashkar Khān S Wajih' d Dīn Khān	1 S 'Alī Pād II 748	2 S Firūz Ikhtisās Khān d 1077
------------	---	--	------------------------	-----------------------------------

The Pādīshāhnāma (I, b, 312, 319, II, p 733, 734, 735, 741, 752) mentions also S Mākhan, d 9th year of Shahjahān, S Sīkhan, S 'Abd' ilah, S Muhammad, son of S Afzal, S Khādīm, S Sālār, S Shihāb

(e) Sayyid Qasīm Shahāmat Khān [Chātraurī] ————— a brother (was alive in the 24th year of Awrangzīb)

1 S Nurāt Yār Khār
 (under Muḥammad Shāh)

(f) Sayyid Husayn Khān d 1120

1 S Abu Sa'īd Khār	2 (I) ayrat Khān.	3 Hasan Khān
--------------------	-------------------	--------------

(g) Sayyid 'Abd' ilah Khān [Tihānpūrī] alias Sayyid Miyan (under Shāh 'Alam I)

1 S Hasan 'Alī Khān title Qutb I Mulk S 'Abd' ilah Khān	2 Amīr' i Mamūlik S. Husayn 'Alī Khān (killed by Muḥammad Shāh)
3 Sayf' d Dīn Husayn 'Alī Khān	4 S Najm' d Dīn 'Alī Khān

For the following notes, I am indebted to R J Leeds, Esq, C S, Mirzapore, who kindly sent me two Urdū MSS containing a short family history of the Sādāt i Bārha, composed in 1864 and 1869 by one of the Sayyids themselves. As Mr Leeds has submitted together with his Report "a detailed account in English of the history of the Sayyids," the following extracts from the Urdū MSS will suffice

The date of the arrival in India of the above mentioned Abū 'l Farah from Wāsīt is doubtful. The two MSS mention the time of Iltīmish (Altamsh) and trace the emigration to troubles arising from Hulagu's invasion of Baghdad and the overthrow of the empire of the Khālifas, while the sons of Abu 'l Farah are said to have been in the service of Shihāb' d Dīn Ghori—two palpable anachronisms

Abū 'l Farah is said to have arrived in India with his twelve sons, of whom four remained in India on his return to his country. These four brothers are the ancestors of the four branches of the Sayyids. Their names are —

1 Sayyid Da'ūd who settled in the mawā'if of Tihānpur

2 Sayyid Abu 'l Fazl, who settled in the qasba of Chhatbanurā

(چھتبانورا)

3 Sayyid Abū 'l Faẓā'īl who settled in the maizā' of Kūndlī

4 Sayyid Najm^u 'd Dīn Husayn who settled in the maizā' of Jhujar

These four places are said to lie near Patiyala in the Panjab and have given rise to the names of the four branches. Instead of Chhatbanūrī, the name of the second branch the MSS have also Chhatraudī چہاترودی or چہاترودی, and Jagnerī (جگنری) instead of Jhujarī (جھجری) although no explanation is given of these alterations.

From Patiyala the four brothers went to the Du'ab between the Ganges and Jamna, from where a branch was established at Bilgram in Audh.

The etymology of barha is stated to be uncertain. Some derive it from bāhīr, outside because the Sayyids encamped outside the imperial camp, some from bārah imām the twelve Imams of the Shi'ahs as the Sayyids were Shi'ahs, some derive it from twelve (barah) villages which the family held just as the district of Balanshahr Tahsil Anupshahr, is said to contain a bārha of Pathans i.e. 12 villages belonging to a Pathan family, and others lastly, make it to be a corruption of the Arabic abrār,¹ pious.

The descendants of S Da'ūd settled at Dharī and form the Tīhan pūrī branch, those of S Abū 'l Faẓl at Sambalhara, and form the Chhat banūrī or Chhatraurī branch, those of S Abū 'l Faẓā'īl went to Majhara, and are the Kundliwals, and those of S Najm^u 'd Dīn occupied Bidāuli, and form the Jhujarī or Jagnerī branch.

A The Tīhanpurīs

The eighth descendant of S Da'ūd was S Khan Qīr (؟) (خان قیر)². He had four sons —

1 Sayyid 'Umar Shahīd who settled in Jansath, a village then inhabited by Jats and Brahmīns. To his descendants belong the renowned brothers mentioned on p. 428 (g).

The occurrence of the name 'Umar shows that he, at any rate, was no Shi'ah.

2 Sayyid Chaman, who settled at Chatora (چہورا) in the Pargana of Jolī Jansath. To his descendants belongs S Jalal, who during the reign of Shahjahan¹ is said to have founded Kharwa Jalalpūi in the Śilāqa of Sirdhana, district Mirāth. His son S Shams left the imperial service, hence the family declined. He had two sons, Asad ʿAlī and ʿAlī Asghar, whose descendants still exist in Chatora and Jalalpūr respectively. They are very poor, and sold in 1843-44 the bricks of the ruined family dwelling, in Chatora for Rs 10 000 to the Government for the construction of works of irrigation. The buildings in Chatora are ascribed to S Muhammad Ṣalāh Khan, who served in Audh, and died childless.

¹ Plural — P]

3 Sayyid Hunā (ح) He settled at Bihāri, Muzaffarnagar. He had six sons —

I Sayyid Qutb, whose descendants occupy the village of Bilāspur in the Muzaffarnagar District. From this branch come the Ratheri Sayyids.

II S Sulṭān, whose descendants hold Sirdhaoli².

III S Yūsuf, whose posterity is to be found in Bihāri and Vhalna (one MS reads Dubalna).

IV and V S Jān and S Mān, had no offspring.

VI S Nasir 'd Dīn. To his descendants belongs S Khān Jahān i Shāhjahānī, p 428 (d). On him the Sayyids appear to look as the second founder of their family. His first son, S Mansūr, built Mansūrpūr and his descendants hold nowadays Mansūrpūr and Khatauli, his second son Muzaffar Khān [Sher Zamān] built Muzaffarnagar, where his descendants still exist, though poor or involved.

4 Sayyid Ahmad. He settled at جالو in Joli Jansath, where his descendants still are. The MSS mention Tatar Khan, and Diwan Yar, Muhammad Khan as having distinguished themselves in the reign of Awrangzib.

B The Chhatbanūrī, or Chhātraurī, Clan

One of the descendants of S Abū 'l Fazl is called S Hasan Fakhr^u 'd Dīn who is said to have lived in the reign of Akbar at Sambalhara, the rājas of which place were on friendly terms with the family. His son, S Nadhab, is said to have had four sons —

I Sayyid ʿAlī

II Sayyid Ahmad, a descendant of whom, S Rawshan ʿAlī Khan, served under Muhammad Shah.

¹ The Pādshāhnāma though very minute does not mention S Jalal and S Shams. A S. Jalal is mentioned Tw^r, p 30. He died of his wounds received in the fight at Bharonwal (vide No 99).

[² Sandhā oli '—P.]

III. S Taj^u 'd Dīn whose son, S 'Umar settled at Kakrauli

IV. S Salār (perhaps the same on p 428d, 1st line of) who had two sons S Haydar Khān, and S Muhammad Khān The "descendants of the former settled at Mirānpūr, which was founded by Nawab S Shahamat Khān, evidently the same as on p 428 S Muhammad Khān settled at Khatora ("a village so called, because it was at first inhabited by Kaiths") Among his descendants are S Nusrat Yār Khān (p 428) and Rukn^u 'd Dawla

C The Kūndliwāls

S Abū 'l Fazāl settled at Majhara,¹ which is said to have been so called because the site was formerly a jungle of *mūnj*¹ grass. The MSS say that many Sayyids of the branch are mafqūd^u khabar, i e it is not known what became of them. The 'Kūndliwāl' which now exist, are said to be most uneducated and live as common labourers, the condition of Majhara¹ being altogether deplorable

The Kūndliwāls are now scattered over Majhara,¹ Hashimpūr, Tisang,² Tandera, etc

D The Jagnerīs

The son of S Najm^u 'd Dīn, S Qamar^u 'd Dīn, settled at Bīdauli A descendant of his, S Faḥ^u 'd Dīn, left Bīdauli and settled at پلری in Joli Jansath, and had also zamīndārīs in Chandauri Chandaura, Tulsipūr, and Khari Nowadays many of this branch are in Bīdauli, 'Ilāga Panipat, and Dibli

* * *

The chief places where the Sayyids of Bārha still exist are Miranpūr, Khatauli, Muzaffarnagar, Joli, Tisaha, Bakhera, Majhara, Chataura, Sambalbara Tisang, Bilāspūr, Morna, Sandhā,oli, Kailā,odha, Jānsath

11 000 000 000

¹ The value of the above mentioned two MSS lies in their geographical details and traditional information. A more exhaustive History of the Sayyids of Bārha based upon the Muhammadan Historians of India—now so accessible—and completed from inscriptions and sanads and other documents still in the possession of the clan would be a most welcome contribution to Indian History and none are better suited for such a task than the Sayyids themselves.

² There is no doubt that the Sayyids owe their renown and success under the Timurids to the Kūndliwāls who are the very opposite of Mafqūd^u khabar.

After the overthrow of the Tihanpūrī brothers (p 428, (g)), many emigrated Sayyids of Bārha exist also in Lakhnau, Bareilly, Āwla, in Audh, also in Nagina, Maiman, and Chāndpūr in the Bijnor district. A branch of the Jolī Sayyids is said to exist in Pūrnia (Bengal), and the descendants of the saint ‘Abd^u ‘llāh Kirmānī of Birbhūm claim likewise to be related to the Barha Sayyids.

During the reign of Awrangzib, the Sayyids are said to have professed Sunni tendencies.

The political overthrow of the Sādats of Bārha under Muhammad Shāh (vide Elphinstone, 5th edition, p 693) was followed by the disastrous fight at Bhausi (بھوسی), which lies on the Khatauli road, where the Sayyids were defeated by the Imperialists, and robbed of the jewels and gold vessels which their ancestors, during their palmy days, had collected.

76 ‘Abd^u ‘llāh Khān Mughl

I cannot find the name of this grandee in the Ma‘āşir or the Tabaqāt. He has been mentioned above, p 322, l 10 Akbar's marriage with his daughter disleased Bayram because ‘Abd^u ‘llāh's sister was married to Kamran of whose party Bayram believed him to be. When Bayram, during his rebellion (p 332) marched from Dīpāl pūr to Jalūndhar, he passed over Tihara where Abd^u ‘llāh defeated a party of his friends under Wali Beg (No 24).

‘Abd^u ‘llāh Khān Mughl must not be confounded with ‘Abd^u ‘llāh Khān Uzbek (No 14).

77 Shaykh Muhammad Bukhārī

He was a distinguished Hindustani Sayyid, and maternal uncle (tughai (?) to Shaykh Farīd Bukhārī (No 99). Akbar liked him for his wisdom and faithfulness. Fattū Khāsa Khayl Afghān handed over the Fort of Chanār to Akbar, through the mediation of Shaykh Muhammad.

In the 14th year, Akbar gave him a tuyul in Ajmir, and ordered him to take charge of Shaykh Mu‘īn Chishtī's tomb, as the khādims were generally at feud about the emoluments and distribution of vows presented by pilgrims. Nor had the efficacy of their prayers been proved, though they claimed to possess sufficient influence with God to promise offspring to the barren and childless.

In the 17th year, Shaykh M was attached to the corps under Mirzā ‘Azīz (No 21), whom Akbar had put in charge of Ahmadābad. After the Emperor's victory at Sarnāl, Ibrāhīm Mirzā joined Husayn Mirzā, Shāh Mirzā, and ‘Āqil Mirzā, at Patan (Gujrat), but having quarrelled with them, he left them, and invaded the District of Āgra. The other three Mirzās remained in Patan and entered into a league with the Fulādī party (vide No 67) Mirza 'Aziz had been reinforced by the Malwa contingent under Qutb' d Dīn (No 28), Shah Budagh (No 52) and Matlab Khān (No 83) His army was further increased by the contingent of Shaykh M, whom Akbar had ordered to move from Dholqa to Sūrat Mirza 'Aziz Koka left Sayyid Hamid (No 78) in Ahmadabad, and moved against the Mirzās in Patan The Mirzas and Sher Khān Fulādī, however, wished to delay the fight, as their reinforcements had not arrived, and Sher Khān sent proposals of peace through Shaykh M to M 'Aziz Shah Budagh advised M 'Aziz not to listen to them as the enemies only wished to gain time, and 'Aziz drew up his army He himself, Shāh Budagh, Muḥṣin' d Dīn, Farankhūdi (No 128), Maḥsūm Khān and his son, and Matlab Khān (No 83) stood in the centre (gol) Qutb' d Dīn (No 28), and Jamal' d Dīn Injū (No 164) on the right wing Shaykh Muhammad, Murād Khān (No 54) Shāh Muhammad (No 95), Shah Fakhr' d Dīn (No 88) Muzaffar Muḡhul, Payanda (No 68), Hajī Khān Afghān, and the son of Khawa Khān on the left wing, Dastam Khān (No 79), Nawrang Khān (vide p 351), Muhammad Qalī Toqbāi (No 129), and Mihr 'Alī Silḏoz (No 130), led the van (harāwal), Baz Bahadur (No 188) occupied the Altumash (between the van and the commander), and Mirza Muqīm and Chirgis Khān formed the reserve behind the centre The centre of the enemies was held by Sher Khān Fulādī and Junayd Kararānī, the right wing by the three Mirzas, the left wing by Muhammad Khān (Sher Khān's eldest son) and Sadat Khān, and their van was led by Badr Khān, younger son of Sher Khān The battle then commenced in the neighbourhood of Patan, 18th Ramazān, 980 (22nd January, 1573) The left wing of the Imperialists was defeated by the Mirzas Murād Khān (No 54) preferred to look on Shah Muhammad (No 95) was wounded, and carried off by his men to Ahmadabād Shaykh Muhammad himself was killed with several of his relations, as the son of Sayyid Baha' d Dīn and Sayyid Jaḥfar, brother of Shaykh Farīd (No 99) The Mirzas also fell upon Shah Fakhr' d Dīn and repulsed him Qutb' d Dīn even was hard pressed, when M 'Aziz by a timely attack with his centre put the enemies to flight As usual, the soldiers of the enemies had too early commenced to plunder

Sher Khān fled to Jūnāgaḏh, and the Mirzas to the Dakḥin

78 Sayyid Hamid : Bukhārī

Sayyid Hamid was the son of S Mirān son of S Mubārīk Sayyid Mubārīk was a Gujrātī Courtier (vide p 419, note) who, it is said, arrived from Bukhara with but a horse One day he was attacked by a mast elephant when he discharged an arrow that entered the forehead of the animal so deep that only the notch of the arrow was visible From this event the people of Gujrat swore by S Mubarak's arrow He gradually rose to higher dignities When Istimad Khan (No 67) raised Nathu to the throne under the title of Muzaffar Shah, S Mubarak got several Mahalls of the Patan Dholqa, and Dandoqa (W of the Peninsula) Districts After his death Dholqa and Dandoqa were given to his son Sayyid Miran and after him to his grandson Sayyid Hamid

When Akbar on his invasion of Gujrat arrived on 1st Rajab 980 at Patan Sayyid Hamid went over to him and was favourably received During the war of Mirza Aziz Koka with the Mirza (vide No 77) S H was put in charge of Ahmadabad In the 18th year Dholqa and Dandoqa were again given him as tuyul Subsequently he served under Qutb' d Din in Kambhat

In the 22nd year he was appointed to Multan, and served in the end of the same year with M Yusuf Khan i Razawi (No 35) against the Baluchis In the 25th year when M Muhammad Hakim invaded Lahor S H with the other tuyul'dars of the Panjab assembled and joined the army of Prince Murad, S H commanding the left wing He also served under Akbar in Kabul On the Emperor's return he was permitted to go from Sirhind to his jagir

In the 30th year he served under Man Singh in Kabul On his arrival at Peshawar his jagir S H sent most of his men to Hindustan and lived securely in Bigram (on our Maps Beghram), leaving his affairs in the hands of a man of the name of Musa This man oppressed the Mahmand and Gharbah (?) Khayl tribes who have ten thousand homes near Peshawar The oppressed Afghans instead of complaining to Akbar chose Jalalayi Tariki as leader and attacked S H He first resolved to shut himself up in Bigram, but having received an erroneous report regarding the strength of the enemies he left the town and was defeated and killed (31st year) The Ma'asir says he was killed in 993 In this fight forty of his relations and clients also perished The Afghans then besieged the Fort which was held by Kamal son of S H He held it till he was relieved

S Kamal during Akbar's reign was promoted to a command of Seven Hundred and, on the accession of Jahangir, to a Hazariship He was made Governor of Dilhi vice Shaykh 'Abdu l Wabhab, also a Bukhari Sayyid (Tur p 35, l 8 from below) Kamal served under Farid i Bukhari (No 99) in the expedition against Prince Khusraw, and commanded the left wing in the fight near Bhairowāl, rendering timely assistance to the Sayyids of Bārha who, as was customary, led the van.

Sayyid Yaʿqūb, son of S Kamāl, was a Commander of Fifteen Hundred, 1,000 horse, and died in the third year of Shahjahan's reign. The Maʿāsir says, in the 2nd year

The two lists of Shāhjahān's grantees given in the Pādīshāhnāma (I, b, 322, II, 740) mention another son of Sayyid Hāmid of the name of Sayyid Bāqir, who held a Command of Five Hundred, 400 horse

79 Dastam Khān, son of Rustam : Turkistānī

The correct name of this grantee is Dastam دستم, a very unusual name though most MSS of the Āʿin and many of the Albarnāma give رستم, Rustam. The Maʿāsir correctly places his name under the letter D

His father's name was Rustam. His mother—her name is not clearly written in the MSS of the Maʿāsir and Albarnāma, which I have seen, either Najība or Bakhya—was a friend of Māhum Anaga (vide No 19) and had free access to the Harem. Dastam appears to have been a play-fellow of Prince Akbar.

Dastam Khān in the 9th year, served under Muʿizz al Mulk (No 61) against ʿAbd al Ilāh Khan Uzbek (No 14). In the 17th year he served under Mirzā ʿAziz Koka in the battle of Patan (vide No 77), distinguished himself in the war with Muhammad Husayn Mirzā, and got a flag. In the 22nd year he was appointed to the Suba of Ajmīr, and got Rantanbhār as tuyūl. His administration was praiseworthy, he kept down the rebellious, and protected the oppressed.

In the 25th year Uchlā, son of Balbhadra, and Mohan, Sur Dās, Tiluksī, sons of Raja Bihārī Mal's brother, came without permission from the Panjab to Luni (?), their native town, and caused disturbances. Dastam, from a wish not to be too hard on Kachhwahas, advised them to return to obedience, but his leniency only rendered the rebels more audacious. Akbar then ordered D to have recourse to threats, and if this was not sufficient, to proceed against them. D had at last to do so, but he did it hastily, without collecting a sufficient number of troops. In the fight,¹ the three nephews of the Raja were killed. Dastam received a

¹ The geographical details given in the Albarnāma are unsatisfactory.

Abu l Fazl mentions the Qasba (small town) of Luni (لونی) as the birth place of the Kachhwaha rebels. The fight he says took place in a village (maizga) of the name of Thor and Dastam died at Sherpur which is also called a Qasba. But the Akbar Maʿāsir says that the fight took place in the neighbourhood of Thor and Dastam died at Sherpur. The Talbot in its list of three are territory for is bisected wound from Uchlā, who had attacked him from an ambush. Wounded as he was, he attacked Uchlā, and killed him. Immediately afterwards he fainted and fell from his horse. His men put him again on horseback—a usual expedient, in order not to dishearten the soldiers. The rebels were totally defeated and their estates plundered (988).

Dastam died of his wounds, two days later, at Sherpūr. Akbar said that even D's mother could not feel the loss of her son as much as he did, because D, with the exception of three years, had never been away from him.

The Ma'āsir says he was a Commander of Three Thousand. Rantanbhūr was then given to Mirzā 'Abdurrahīm (No. 29) as jagir.

A son of Dastam is mentioned below (No. 362).

80 Shahbāz Khān i Kambū

Regarding the tribe called Kambū, vide Beames' Edition of Sir H. Elliot's Glossary, I, 304. The Persian hemistich quoted (Metre Hazaj)—

[اگر محض الرجال فتدسه کس کم اس گری]

بکی اعدای ددم کسو سوم بددات کمشری

“The Afghāns are the first, the Kambūs the second, and the Kashmiris the third, set of scoundrels’

must be very modern, for during the reigns of Akbar and Jahangir, it was certainly a distinction to belong to this tribe, as will be seen just now.

The sixth ancestor of Shahbāz was Hājī Ismā'īl, a disciple of the renowned saint Bahā'u'd-Dīn Zakariyā of Multan. Once a beggar asked the saint to give him an ashrafī, or gold muhr, for the name of every prophet he would mention, but as Bahā'u'd-Dīn could not pay the money, Hājī Ismā'īl took the beggar to his house, and gave him an Ashrafī for each of the ten or twenty names he mentioned. Another time, Hājī Ismā'īl acknowledged to the saint that his power of understanding was defective, whereupon the saint prayed for him, and from that time the Kambūs are proverbial in Hindustan for sagacity and quickness of apprehension.

Shāhbāz at first devoted himself to a life of abstinence and austerity, as his ancestors had done, but the excellent way in which he performed uce of the re are two e^s of it which will ange of ٤٠

the duties of lotwāl, drew Akbar's attention to him and he was made an Amīr and appointed Mīr Tozak (quarter master)

In the 16th year, when Lashkar Khān (No 90) fell into disgrace, Sh was appointed Mīr Bakhsī. In the 21st year he was sent against the rebels in Jodhpūr, especially against Kallah, son of Rāy Rām, and grandson of Rāy Māldeo, and was ordered to take Fort Siwana. Shāhbāz first took Fort Daigūr (?),¹ where a large number of Rāthor rebels were killed, after this he took Dūnāra, from where he passed on to Siwanah, which on his arrival capitulated (984)

In the same year, Shāhbāz was sent against Rāja Gajpatī². This Rāja was the greatest Zamīndār in Bihar, and had rendered good services during Munḥim's expedition to Bengal. But when Da'ūd, king of Orisa, invaded Bengal after Munḥim's death at Gaur in 983 Gajpatī rebelled and plundered several towns in Bihār. Farhat Khān (No 145) tuyūldār of Ara, his son Farhang Khān, and Qarātāq Khān, opposed the Raja, but perished in the fight. When Shāhbāz approached Gajpatī fled, but Sh. followed him up, and gave him no rest, and conquered at last Jagdespūr, where the whole family of the Raja was captured. Sh then conquered Shergadh, which was held by Sī Rām Gajpatī's son. About the same time, Sh took possession of Rahtās. Its Afghān commander, Sayyid Muhammad, who commanded the Fort on the part of Junayd Kararanī, had been hard pressed by Muzaḥfir (No 37), he therefore fled to Shāhbāz, asked for protection, and handed over the Fort. Sh then repaired to court, where he received every distinction due to his eminent services.

In the 23rd year (986) Sh marched against the proud Rānā Partab, and besieged the renowned Fort of Kōbhalmīr (called on our maps Komalnair, on the frontier between Udaipūr and Jodhpūr, lat 25° 10'). The Rānā, unable to defend it, escaped in the disguise of a Sannāsī when the fort was taken. Goganda and Udaipūr submitted likewise. Sh. erected no less than 50 thānas in the hills and 35 in the plains, from Udaipūr to Pūr Mandāl. He also prevailed upon the rebellious Dauda, son of Ray Surjan Hāda (No 96), to submit, and took him to Court. After this, Sh was sent to Ajmīr, where disturbances frequently occurred.

¹ The MSS. have دوگور which is a singular name S W of Jodhpūr lies on the right bank of the river and went to Siwanah which lies in the Jumna.

² So according to the best MSS Stewart calls him Gajpatī the Lakhnau Akbarnāma (III 140) Aj and the Leit Bibl Indica of Bodley's Kocher (p 179 284 285) and Kuj (p 237) which forms are also found in the Lakhnau edition of the Akbarnāma.

When the military revolt of Bengal broke out Sh was ordered to go to Bihar, but he did not agree with M 'Aziz Koka—for Sh could not bear to be second or third—and carried on the war independently of him, defeated 'Arab Bahādur, and marched to Jagdespūr. At that time the report reached him that Ma'sūm Khān Farānkhūdi (No 157) had rebelled and 'Arab Bahādur and Niyābat Khān had joined him. Sh therefore marched to Aūdḥ, and met the enemies near Sultānpūr Bilkari, 25 los from Awadh (Fayzābad). Ma'sūm, by a timely centre attack, put Sh to flight, and followed him up, Sh fighting all the way to Jaunpūr, a distance of 30 los. Accidentally a rumour spread in the army of the enemy that Ma'sūm had been killed, which caused some disorder. At this moment Sh's right wing attacked the enemy, Ma'sūm got wounded, and withdrew to Awadh (Fayzabād). Sh now pursued him, and seven miles from that town, after a hard fight, totally routed him. Ma'sūm could not hold himself in Awadh, and his army dispersed.

After this, Sh again went to court where he was received by the emperor on his return from Kābul. At court, Sh generally gave offence by his pride, and when once, at a parade the Bakshis had placed the young Mirzā Khān (No 29) above him he gave vent openly to his anger, was arrested and put under the charge of Rāy Sāl Darbarī (No 106).

But an officer of Sh's usefulness could ill be spared, and when M 'Aziz in the 28th year applied for transfer from Bihār, Sh with other Amirs was sent there. He followed up Ma'sūm Khān Kābuli to Ghoraghat, and defeated him. He then followed him to Bhaṭī (p 365), plundered Baktarāpūr, the residence of 'Isr, took Sunnārgāw, and encamped on the Brahmaputra. 'Isr afforded Ma'sūm means and shelter, but being hard pressed by the imperialists he made proposals of peace. An Imperial officer was to reside at Sunnārgāw, Ma'sūm was to go to Makkah, and Sh was to withdraw. This was accepted, and Sh crossed the river expecting the terms would be carried out. But the enemy did nothing, and when Sh prepared to return, his officers showed the greatest insubordination, so that he had to retreat to Ṭanḍa, all advantage being thus lost. He reported matters to Court, and the tuyuldārs of Bihār were ordered to join him. Sh then took the field and followed up Ma'sūm. In the 30th year, he and Sādiq Khān (vide No 43) quarrelled. Subsequently, Sh marched again to Bhaṭī, and even sent a detachment "to Kokra (کوکرا), which lies between Orisa and the Dakḥin." Madhū Singh, the Zamindar of the district, was plundered, and had to pay tribute. In the 32nd year, when Sa'id (No 25) was made Governor of Bengal, and the disturbances had mostly been suppressed, Sh returned to Court. In the 31th year, he was made Kotwāl of the army. He was then sent against the Afghāns of Sawād, but he left his duties without orders, and was again imprisoned.

After two years he was released, was made atāliq to M Shahrūkh, who had been appointed to Mālwa, and was on his way to Prince Murad in the Dakhīn. During the siege of Ahmadnagar, the inhabitants of Shahr 1 Naw, "which is called Burhānābād," asked the Imperialists for protection, but as they were mostly Shī'as Sh, in his bigotry, fell upon them, plundered their houses, especially the quarter called Langar 1 Duscāzda Imām, the very name of which must have stunk in Sh's nostrils. The inhabitants "seeing that they could not rely on the word of the Mughuls" emigrated. The Prince was irritated and when Sādiq Khān (No 43) was appointed his atāliq, Sh left without permission for Malwa. Akbar gave his jāgir to Shāhrūkh, and transferred Shāhbāz.

In the 43rd year Sh was sent to Ajmīr as Commander of the marqalā of Prince Salīm (Jabāngīr) whom Akbar had asked to go from Ilāhabād against the Rānā. But Sh was now about seventy years old, and as he had been in the habit of eating quicksilver he commenced to suffer from pain in his hands and wrists. He got well again, but had in Ajmīr another attack, he rallied again but died suddenly in the 44th year (1008). Salīm took quickly possession of Sh's treasures, went back to Ilāhabād without having done anything, and continued in his rebellious attitude towards his father.

Shāhbāz had expressed a dying wish to be buried in Ajmīr within the hallowed enclosure of Muṣīn 1 Chishtī. But the custodians of the sacred shrine refused to comply, and Sh was buried outside. At night, however, the saint appeared in the dreams of the custodians, and told them that Shāhbāz was his favourite, whereupon the hero was buried inside, north of the dome.

Shāhbāz was proverbial for his rigid piety and his enormous wealth. His opposition to Akbar's "Divine Faith" had been mentioned above (p 197). He would neither remove his beard to please the emperor, nor put the word murīd (disciple) on his signet. His Sunnī zeal, no doubt, retarded his promotion as much as his arrogance, for other less deserving officers held higher commands. He observed with great strictness the five daily prayers, and was never seen without a rosary in his hand. One day the emperor took a walk along the tank at Fatihpūr and seized Shāhbāz's hand to accompany him. It was near the time of the ṣar, or afternoon prayer, and Sh was restless and often looked up to the sun, not to miss the proper time Hakīm Abū 'l Fath (No 112) saw it from a distance, and said to Hakīm 'Alī who stood near him, "I shall indeed call Shāhbāz a pious man, if he insists on saying the prayer alone, as he is with the emperor", (for the prayer had been abolished by Akbar at Court) When the time of prayer had come, Sh mentioned it to the emperor "Oh," replied Akbar, "you can pray another time, and make amends for this omission" But Sh drew away his hand from the grasp of the emperor, spread his dupatta shawl on the ground, and said not only his prayer but also his virā (voluntary daily religious exercise), Akbar his head slapping all the while, and saying, "Get up!" Abū 'l Fazl stepped up and interceded for Shāhbāz, whose persistency he admired

Abū 'l Fath says that Shahbāz was an excellent and faithful servant, but he blames him for his bigotry In liberality, he says, he had no equal, and people whispered that he found the Pāras stone (vide Book III, Sūba of Mālwa) His military contingent was always complete and in good order, during his fights near the Brahmaputr he had 9,000 horse Every Thursday evening he distributed 100 Ashrafis to the memory of the renowned Ghauṣ" 'ṣ-ṣiqḡlayn (?) ('Abdū 'l Qādu : Jilani) To the Kambū he gave so much that no Kambū in India was in bad circumstances

During the time he was Mir Bakhshī he introduced the Dāgh law, the most important military reform of Akbar's reign (vide pp 252, 265 266)

Shahraz's brother, Karamū 'llāh, was likewise pious He died in 1002 at Saronj (Ma'āṣir) The Ma'āṣir mentions a son of Shāhbāz, Ilhāmū 'llah He was Waqi'ca nawis (p 268) of the Sarkār of Baglana, where he died

The Tuzuk (p 248) mentions another son of his, Ranbāz Khān, who during the reign of Shahjahān was a Commander of Eight Hundred, 400 horse He was, in the 13th year, Bakhshī and Wāqi'ca-nawis of the corps which was sent to Bangash He held the same rank in the 20th year of Shahjahān's reign¹

81 Darwish Muhammad Uzbek

The Ma'āṣir says nothing about this grandee, the MSS of the Tabaqāt merely say that he was dead in 1001

¹ In the list of Akbar's grantees in the Tabaqāt Nizami says "At present (in 1001) Shāhbāz is Mir Bakhshī of Mālwa"

From the Albarnāma (Lucknow edition, II, p 137) we see that he was a friend of Bayrām. He was sent by Bayram together with Muṣaffar Ṣāli (No 37, and p 332, l 6) to Sher Muhammad Dīwana, who dispatched both fettered to Court.

His name occurs again in the Albarnāma (Lucknow edition II, p 250—where for Daruīsh Uzbek Khūaja, read Daruīsh Uzbek o Muṣaffar Khūaja). From the fact that Abu l Fazl has given his name in this list, it is evident that Akbar pardoned him on Bayram's submission.

82 Shaykh Ibrahim, son of Shaykh Mūsā, elder brother of Shaykh Ṣalīm of Fathpūr Sikrī.

His father, Shaykh Mūsā lived a retired life in Sikrī. As Akbar had at first no children he asked the Sikrī Shaykhs to pray for him, which they did, and as at that time one of Akbar's wives became pregnant (with Salīm), Akbar looked upon the Shaykhs with particular favour. To this lucky circumstance, the Sikrī family owes its elevation.

Shaykh Ibrāhīm lived at first at Court, chiefly in the service of the princes. In the 22nd year he was made Thanahdār of Ladlā, and suppressed the disturbances. In the 23rd year he was made Governor of Fathpūr Sikrī. In the 28th year he served with distinction under M Ṣāziz Koka (No 21) in Bihar and Bengal, and was with Vazīr Khan (No 11) in his expedition against Qutlū of Orisā. When Akbar, in the 30th year, went to Kabul he was made Governor of Āgra, which post he seems to have held till his death in 999 (36th year).

According to the Tabaqāt, he was not only the brother but also the son in law of Shaykh Salīm i Sikrīwāl.

83 ṢAbdū 'l Matlab Khan, son of Shah Budāgh Khān (No 52)

The Ma'asir makes him a Commander of Two Thousand Five Hundred.

ṢAbdū 'l Matlab accompanied Sharafū d Dīn Husayn (No 17) on his expedition to Mirtha. In the 10th year he served together with his father under Muṣizzū 'l Mulk (No 61) against Iskandar and Bahādur Khān and fled from the battlefield of Khayrābād. In the 12th year he served under Muhammad Qulī Khān Barlās (No 31) against Iskandar Khān in Audh. He then retired to his tuyūl in Malwa.

In the 17th year he belonged to the auxiliaries of M Ṣāziz Koka and was present in the battle of Patan (p 133). In the 23rd year, when Qutlū 'd Dīn's men (No 28) brought Muṣaffar Husayn Mirzā from the Dakhin to Court, ṢAbdū 'l Matlab attached himself as convoy and saw the Mirza safely to Court. In the 25th year he accompanied Ismī'īl Qulī Khān (No 46) on his expedition against Niyābat Khān ṢArīb. In the following year he received a reprimand for having murdered Fath Dawlat, son of 'Alī Dost'. He was, however, subsequently pardoned, and was put in command of the left wing of the army which was sent to Kābul. In the 27th year, Akbar honoured him by being his guest in Kālpī, his jāgīr.

In the 30th year he accompanied M. 'Azīz Koka to the Dakhn, and was sent, two years later, against Jalāla Tārīkī, the Afghān rebel. One day, Jalāla fell upon the van of the Imperialists, which was commanded by Beg Nūrīn Khān (No. 212), Salīm Khān (No. 132), and Sheroya Khān (No. 168). They were in time, and, assisted by Muhammad Qulī Beg, routed Jalāla, who escaped to the mountains. 'Abd' 'l-Matlab "had not the good fortune of even mounting his horse to take part in the fight". He seems to have taken this to heart, for when the victorious army returned to Bangash, he had an attack of madness and was sent to Court. He died soon after.

His son, Sherzād, was under Jahāngīr, a Commander of Three Hundred, 200 horse.

84. Iṣṭibār Khān, the Eunuch

His name, like that of many other Eunuchs, was 'Ambar. He was one of Babar's Eunuchs. When Humayūn left Qandahar for 'Irāq, he despatched Iṣṭibār and others to conduct Maryam Makānī (Akbar's mother) to his camp. In 952 he left Kābul and joined the emperor, who attached him to Prince Akbar's suite.

In the 2nd year of Akbar's reign he accompanied Akbar's mother and the other Begams from Kābul to India. Akbar appointed him Governor of Dihli, where he died.

He must not be confounded with No. 86.

85. Rāja Bir Bal [Bir Bar], the Brahman

He was a Brahman of the name of Mabesh Dās (Ma'āsir, the Ed. Bibl. Indica of Badā'onī, II, p. 161, calls him Brahman Dās) and was a Bhāt, or minstrel, a class of men whom the Persians call bādsharosh, "dealers in encomiums". He was very poor, but clear-headed, and remarkable for his power of apprehension. According to Badā'onī, he came soon after Akbar's accession from Kālpī to Court, where his bonmots in a short time made him a general favourite. His Hindī verses also were much liked, and Akbar conferred on him the title of Kab Rāy, or (Hindu) Poet Laureate,¹ and had him constantly near himself.

¹ Just as Jotik Rāy the (Hindu) Court Astrologer. The (Persian) Poet Laureate [Fayyī] had the title of Malik' sh Shū'arā, or 'King of Poets'.

In the 18th year Rāja Jai Chand of Nagarkot, who was at Court happened to displease the emperor, and was imprisoned. Nagarkot was given to Kab Rāy as jāgīr. He also received the title of Raja Bir Bar. But Jai Chand's son, Budh Chand (or Budh Ch., or Badī Ch. — the MSS differ) shut himself up in Nagarkot, and Husayn Qulī Khān (No 24) was ordered to conquer it. The invasion of Ibrāhīm Husayn Mirzā, as related above, forced Husayn Qulī to raise the siege, and Bir Bar, in all probability, did not get his jāgīr. He accompanied Akbar on his forced march to Patan and Ahmadabād, 24th Rabīʿ II, 981 (Vide note to No 101).

He was often employed in missions. Thus in the 21st year he was sent with Rāy Lon Karan to Dūngarpūr, the Rāy of which town was anxious to send his daughter to Akbar's Harem. In the 28th year, again, B B and Zayn Koka (No 34) conducted Raja Ram Chand (No 89) to Court.

Bir Bar spent his time chiefly at Court. In the 34th year Zayn Khān Koka marched against the Yūsufzādis in Bijūr and Sawad, and as he had to ask for reinforcements, Bir Bar was sent there together with Hakīm Abū l Fath (No 112). It is said that Akbar determined by lot whether Abū l Fāzīl or Bir Bar should go, and the lot fell on the latter, much against Akbar's wish.

The result of this campaign has been related above (pp 214, 367). Bir Bar and nearly 8,000 Imperialists were killed during the retreat — the severest defeat which Akbar's army ever suffered.¹

How Akbar felt Bir Bar's loss has been mentioned on p 214. There is also a letter on this subject in Abū l Fāzīl's Maktūbāt.

The following passages from Badaonī (Ed. Bibl. Ind., pp 357, 358) are of interest: "Among the suly lies — they border on absurdities — which during this year (995) were spread over the country, was the rumour that Bir Bar, the accursed, was still alive, though in reality he had then for some time been burning in the seventh hell. The Hindās by whom His Majesty is surrounded, saw how sad and sorry he was for Bir Bar's loss, and invented the story that Bir Bar had been seen on the hills of Nagarkot, walking about with Jogīs and Sannāsīs. His Majesty believed the rumour, thinking that Bir Bar was ashamed to come to Court on account of the defeat which he had suffered at the hands of the Yūsufzādis; and it was, besides, quite probable that he should have been seen with Jogīs, inasmuch as he had never cared for the world. An Ahadī was therefore sent to Nagarkot to inquire into the truth of the rumour, when it was proved that the whole story was an absurdity."

¹ A similar catastrophe befell Aurangzīb when several thousand soldiers of the army commanded by Amin Khan were killed in the Khaibar Pass on the 3rd Mularram 1027 or 21st April 1672. Miʿān-ur-Riʾāṣ, p. 117. J. Journ. A. S. Inst. Ind. 1842, p. 261.

"Soon after, His Majesty received a report that Bir Bar had been seen at Kalinjar (which was the jāgir of this dog), and the collector of the district stated that a barber had recognized him by certain marks on his body, which the man had distinctly seen, when one day Bir Bar had engaged him to rub his body with oil, from that time, however, Bir Bar had concealed himself. His Majesty then ordered the barber to come to Court, and the Hindū Krori (collector) got hold of some poor innocent traveller charged him with murder, and kept him in concealment giving out that he was Bir Bar. The Krori could, of course, send no barber to Court, he therefore killed the poor traveller, to avoid detection, and reported that it was Bir Bar in reality, but he had since died. His Majesty actually went through a second mourning, but he ordered the Krori and several others to come to Court. They were for some time tortured as a punishment for not having informed His Majesty before, and the Krori had, moreover, to pay a heavy fine."

Bir Bar was as much renowned for his liberality, as for his musical skill and poetical talent. His short verses, bon mots, and jokes, are still in the mouths of the people of Hindūstān.

The hatred which Badaonī Shāhbāz Khan (No. 80) and other pious Muslims showed towards Bir Bar (vide pp. 192, 198, 202, 209, 214) arose from the belief that Bir Bar had influenced Akbar to abjure Islām.

Bir Bar's eldest son, Lāla, is mentioned below among the commanders of Two Hundred (No. 387). He was a spendthrift, and as he got no promotion, and his property was squandered away, he resigned court life, and turned faqīr in order to live free and independent (end of 46th year).

86 Ikhlas Khan Iq̄tibar, the Eunuch

The Ma'āsir does not give his name. The list of Akbar's grantees in the Tabaqāt has the short remark that Ikhlas Khan was a Eunuch, and held the rank of a Commander of One Thou. and

87 Bahar Khan (Muhammad) Asghar, a servant of Humayūn

The name of this grantee is somewhat doubtful, as some MSS. read Bahādur Khān. The Ma'āsir does not give his name. The list of the Tabaqāt mentions a "Bahar Khān a Khāsa Khayl Afghan, who held a command of Two Thousand." Bahar Khan Khāsa Khayl is also mentioned in several places in the Albarnāma. He is therefore most probably the same as given by Abū'l Fazl in this list. Perhaps we have to read Pahār Khān, instead of Bahār Khān, vide No 407 The notice in the Tabaqāt implies that he was dead in 1001

88 Shāh Fakhr² 'd Dīn, son of Mir Qasim, a Mūsawī Sayyid of Mashhad

Shāh Fakhr² 'd Dīn came, in 961, with Humāyūn to India In the 9th year of Akbar's reign he served in the army which was sent against 'Abd² 'llah Khān Uzbek (No 14) In the 16th year he was in the manqalā, or advance corps, commanded by Khān i Kalān (No 16) When Akbar arrived at Patan, he sent Sh F and Hakim 'Ayn² 'l Mulk to Mir Abū Turab and Istimād Khān (No 67) On the road he fell in with the former, and went to Istimād whom he likewise induced to pay his respects to Akbar He was among the auxiliaries of M 'Aziz Koka (No 21) and was present in the battle of Patan (p 433) He was also among the grandees who accompanied Akbar on his forced march to Gujrāt (p 343, note, where according to the Albarnāma we have to read 24th Rabī² II, for 4th Rabī² I) After this, he was made Governor of Ujjain, and received the title of *Naqābat Khān*¹ In the end of the 24th year, he was made Governor of Patan (Gujrat), vice Tarṣō Muhammad Khān (No 32), where he soon after, probably in the beginning of 987, died (986 Tabaqāt)

89 Rāja Rām Chand Baghela

A few MSS read Bhagela, which form Tod says is the correct one Baghela, however, is the usual spelling

Rām Chand was Raja of Bhath (or Bhattah, as the Ma²āyir spells it) Among the three great Rajas of Hindūstān whom Bābar mentions in his Memoire, the Rajas of Bhath are the third

Rām Chand was the patron of the renowned musician and singer Tansīn, regarding whom vide the List of Musicians at the end of this book His fame had reached Akbar, and in the 7th year, the Emperor sent Jalal² 'd Dīn Qūrchi (No 213) to Bhath, to induce Tansin to come to Āgra Rām Chand feeling himself powerless to refuse Akbar's request, sent his favourite, with his musical instruments and many presents to Āgra, and the first time that Tansin performed at Court, the Emperor made him a present of two lakhs of rupees Tansin remained with Akbar Most of his compositions are written in Akbar's name and his melodies are even nowadays everywhere repeated by the people of Hindūstān

When Āsaf Khan (I) led his expedition to Gaḍha (p 396)² he came in contact with Ram Chand but by timely submission the Raja became a servant of Akbar. In the 14th year Yam Chand lost Fort Kalnjar as related on p 399. He sent his son Bir Bhadr to Court but from distrust would not pay his respects personally. In the 28th year, therefore when Akbar was at Shahabad he ordered a corps to march to Bhath but Bir Bhadr through the influence of several courtiers prevailed upon the Emperor to send a grandee to his father and convey him to Court. Raja Bir Bar and Zayn Koka were selected for this office and Ram Chand came at last to Court where he was well received.

¹ The Lucknow Edition of the Albarnāma (III p 222) calls him Naqib Khān (*)

² On p 396 Rām Chand is by mistake called Rām Chandr

R Ch died in the 37th year and Bir Bhadr succeeded to the title of Raja. But on his way from Court to Bhath he fell from his palanquin and died soon after in the 38th year (1001 vide p 385). His sudden death led to disturbances in Bandhu of which Bikramajit a young relation of Ram Chand had taken possession. Akbar therefore sent Raja Patrdas (No 196) with troops to Bandhu and the Mughuls according to custom erected throughout the district military stations (thanas). At the request of the inhabitants Akbar sent Isma'il Quli Khan (No 46) to Bandhu to convey Bikramajit to Court (41st year) their intention being to prevent Bandhu from being conquered. But Akbar would not yield he dismissed Bikramajit and after a siege of eight months and several days Bandhu was conquered (42nd year).

In the 47th year Durjodhan a grandson of Ram Chand was made Raja of Bandhu. In the 21st year of Jahangir's reign Amr Singh another grandson of Ram Chand acknowledged himself a vassal of Delhi. In the 3th year of Shahjahan when 'Abdu' lla' Khan Bahadur marched against the refractory zamindar of Ratanpur Amr Singh brought about a peaceful submission. Amr Singh was succeeded by his son Anup Singh. In the 24th year when Raja Pahar Singh Bandela Jagirdar of Chauragadh attacked Anup because he had afforded shelter to Dairam a amin lar of Chauragadh Anup Singh with his whole family withdrew from Rowa (which after the destruction of Bandhu had been the family seat) to the hills. In the 30th year however Sayyid Salabat Khan Gove nor of Ilahabad (vide p 427) conducted him to Court where Anup turned Muhammadan. He was made a Commander of Three Thousand 2 000 horse and was appointed to Bandhu and the surrounding districts.

90 Lashkar Khan Muhammad Husayn of Khurasan

He was Mir Bakshi and Mir 'Arz. In the 11th year Muzaffar Khan (No 37) had him deposed. In the 16th year he came one day drunk to the Darbar and challenged the courtiers to fight him. Akbar punished him by tying him to the tail of a horse and then put him into prison.

He was subsequently released, and attached to Mun'im's Bengal corps. In the battle of Takarōi (p 406) he was severely wounded. Though his wounds commenced to heal, he did not take sufficient care of his health, and died, a few days after the battle, in Orisā.

He is mentioned as having had a contingent of 2,000 troopers (Ma'āsir, 1,000).

The Ma'āsir has a long note in justification of the extraordinary punishment which Akbar inflicted on him.

The title of Lashkar Khān was conferred by Jahangir on Abū 'l Hasan Mashhadī, and by Shahjahān on Jān Nisār Khān Yādgār Beg.

91 Sayyid Ahmad of Barha

He is the younger brother of Sayyid Mahmūd (p 427). In the 17th year he served in the manqāla, which, under the command of Khān 1 Kalan (No 16), was sent to Gujrat. After the conquest of Ahmadabād, he was ordered with other Amirs to pursue the sons of Sher Khān Fulādī (p 432), who had removed their families and property from Patan to Idar. A portion of their property fell into the hands of Imperialists. When Akbar afterwards encamped at Patan, he gave the town to Mīzā Abdu 'r Rahīm (No 29), but appointed S A as Governor. In the same year, Muhammad Husayn Mirza, Shāh Mirzā, and Sher Khān Fūlādī, besieged Patan, but they dispersed on the approach of M 'Aziz.

In the 20th year S A. and his nephews S Qāsim and S Hāshim quelled the disturbances in which Jalālud Dīn Qurchī (No 213) had lost his life. In 984 he served under Shahbāz Khān (No 80) in the expedition to Siwānah. According to the Tobaqāt, which calls him a Commander of Three Thousand, he died in 985.

Abu 'l Fazl mentioned Sayyid Ahmad above on p 300, l 11 from below.

Sayyid Ahmad's son S Jamālud Dīn was killed by the untimely explosion of a mine during the siege of Chitor (p 398).

This S Jamālud Dīn must not be confounded with the notorious S Jamālud Dīn who was executed in 993 (Badāonī II, 345). He was a grandson of S Mahmūd (No 75) S Qasim being called his uncle.

92 Kākar 'Alī Khān 1 Chishtī

He came with Humāyūn to Hindūstān. In the 11th year (973) he was sent together with Shāh Qulī Naranjī (No 231) to Gadha Katanga, because Mahdī Qasim Khān (No 36) had gone without leave to Makkah. Kākar served also under Mu'izzud Dīn Mulik (No 61) and was present in the battle of Khayrabād. He took part in the bloody fight at Sarnāl (middle of Sha'ban, 980, vide p 353). He was then attached to Mun'im's corps, and served in the siege of Patna, during which he and his son were killed (end of 981, Ma'āsīr, 980)

93 Bay Kalyān Mal, Zamīndār of Bikānīr.

He is the father of Rāy Singh (No 44), and has been mentioned above, p 384

94 Tahir Khan, Mīr Farāghat, son of Mīr Khurd, who was atāliq to Prince Hindāl

His name is not given in the Ma'āsīr. The Tabaqāt merely says that he was a grandee of Humāyūn, and reached, during the reign of Akbar, the rank of a Commander of Two Thousand. According to the same work, he had a son Bāqī Khan, who likewise served under Akbar.

From the Akbarnāma (Lucknow Edition, II, p 274) we see that he was one of Akbar's companions. Together with Dastam Khān (No 79) Qutluq Qadam Khān (No 123), Peshraw Khān (No 280), Ḥakīm^u l Mulk, Muqbil Khān, and Shimāl Khān (No 154), he assisted in the capture of the wild and mad Khawāja Mu'azzam, brother of Akbar's mother.

95 Shah Muhammad Khān of Qalāt

As Qalat belongs to Qandahār, he is often called Shāh Muhammad Khān : Qandahār. The Ma'āsīr says that the name of the town of Qalat is generally spelt with a Q, but that the Hazāras pronounce Kalāt, with a K.

Shāh Muhammad Khān was a friend of Bayrām, and was with him in Qandahār, which Humayūn had given Bayrām as jāgīr. Bayram, however, left it entirely in S M's hands. Bahadur Khān (No 22) was then governor of Dawar, and had bribed several grandees to hand over Qandahar to him, but S M discovered the plot and killed the conspirators. Bahadur then marched against Qandahar. S M knew that he could expect no assistance from Humayun, and wrote to Shah Tahmāsp of Persia that it was Humāyūn's intention to cede Qandahār, he should therefore send troops, defeat Bahadur, and take possession of the town. Tahmāsp sent 3,000 Turkman troopers furnished by the jāgīrdārs of Sīstān, Farāb, and Garmīr. Their leader, 'Alī Yar, surprised Bahādūr and defeated him so completely, that Bahādūr could not even keep Dawar. He therefore fled to India. S M had thus got rid of one danger, he treated the Persian Commander with all submissiveness, but would not hand over the town. Shāh Tahmāsp then ordered his nephew, Sultān Husayn Mirza, son of Bahram Mirza (vide No 8), Walī Khālifa Shāmlū, and others, to besiege Qandahār. The siege had lasted for some time, when Sultān Husayn Mirzā felt disgusted and withdrew Tahmāsp felt annoyed, and sent again Sultān Husayn Mirza with ʿAlī Sultān, Governor of Shīrāz, to Qandahār, with positive orders to take the town. ʿAlī Sultān was shot during the siege, and Sultan Husayn Mirza remained encamped before the town without doing anything. At this juncture, Akbar, who in the meantime had succeeded to the throne, ordered S M to hand over Qandahār to the Persians, according to Humāyūn's promise, and come to India.

This account of the cession of Qandahār, observes the author of the Maʿasir, differs from Munshī Sikandar's version of his great work entitled ʿĀlamārā-yi Sikandarī. According to that history, Tahmāsp, at the very first request of Shah Muhammad sent Sultān Husayn Mirza with Wali Khalifa and other nobles to Qandahār. They defeated Bahadur, but as S M would not hand over Qandahār, Tahmasp sent ʿAlī Sultān with a stronger army, and appointed Sultān Husayn Mirza governor of Dawar and Qandahār. Shāh Muhammad held out for six months, but as he got no assistance from India, he capitulated, and withdrew to Hindūstān.

Be this as it may, S M arrived in the end of the third year of Akbar's reign in India, was made a Khan, and gradually rose to the rank of a Commander of Two Thousand. In the beginning of the 6th year (968) he led the van in the battle near Sarangpūr, in which Baz Bahādur lost Malwa, and served, in the 9th year, in the war against ʿAbdū llah Khan Uzbek (No 14). In the 12th year he was made governor of Kotha. In the 17th year he was among the auxiliaries of Mirzā ʿAzīz Koka, and was wounded in the battle of Patan (p 432).

Regarding ʿĀdil Khan, S M's son, vide below, No 125

96 Rāy Surjan Haḍā

He is often merely called Rāy Haḍā. The Haḍas are a branch of the Chauhāns. The Sarkār of Rantanbhūr is called after them Hadaulī.

Rāy Surjan was at first in the service of the Ranā, and defied the Mughuls, because he thought himself safe in Rantanbhur. Akbar, after the conquest of Chitor (p 398), besieged in the end of the 13th year, Rantanbhur, and R S, despairing of holding out longer—the siege having lasted about a month—sent his sons Dauda and Bhoj (No 175) to Akbar's camp to sue for peace. The Emperor received them well and gave each a dress of honour. When they were taken behind the tent enclosure to put on the garments, one of their men, suspecting foul play, rushed sword in hand towards the audience tent, and killed several people, among them Shaykh Bahāʿ ʿl Dīn Majzūb of Haḍā, or, but was cut down by one of Muzaffar Khān's men. As R S's sons were entirely innocent, the accident did not change Akbar's goodwill towards them; and he sent them back to their father. At R S's request, Husayn Quli Khan (No 24) was then sent to the Fort and escorted R S to the Emperor. Rantanbhūr was annexed (Shawwal, 976, or beginning of the 14th year).

R S was made Governor of Gaḍha Katanga, from where, in the 20th year, he was transferred to Fort Chanadh (Chunar).

Soon after, Dauda fled and created disturbances in Būndī. Zayn Khan Koka (No 34), R S and his second son Bhoj were therefore sent to Būndī, which was conquered in the beginning of 985. After the conquest, R S was made a commander of Two Thousand. Daudā who had escaped, submitted, in the 23rd year, to Shāhbāz Khān (p 436). Not long after, Dauda fled again. He died in the 30th year.

R S served in the 25th year, after Muzaffar's (No 37) death in Bihar. The Ma'asir does not mention the year of his death. From the Tabaqāt, it is clear, that he had been dead for some time in 1001.

For R S's son, Ray Bhoj, vide below, No 175.

97 Shāham Khān Jalā,ir

Jalā ir is the name of a Chaghtā,ī tribe.

Shāham's father was Bāba Beg, who had been under Humāyūn, governor of Jaunpūr. Bābā Beg also took part in the battle of Chausa, in which Humāyūn was defeated by Sher Shāh. The Emperor fled to Āgra, and ordered Bābā Beg and other grandees to bring up the camp and the Begams. In attempting to rescue the ladies of the Harem, Bābā Beg was killed by an Afghān near the imperial tent.

Shaham Khān was made an Amīr by Akbar.

In the beginning of the 4th year (966) he served together with the two Jalā irs mentioned below, Hājī Muhammad Khān i Sistānī (No 55), Chalma Beg (58) Kamal Khān, Ghakkar, and Qiyā Khān Gung (No 33), under Khān Zamān (No 13) in the Jaunpūr District against the Afghāns. The war continued till the sixth year, in which Sher Shāh, son of 'Adlī, Mubārīz Khān, after Bayrām's death, made a final attempt to overthrow the Mughuls. In the 10th year Sh Kh served against Khān Zamān.

In the 19th year he served under Mun'īm in the Bengal and Orisā wars, was present in the battle of Tsakaroi and pursued with Toḍar Mal the Afghāns to Bhadrak (p 406). After Mun'īm's death at Gaur (p 407), the grandees put Sh Kh in command of the army till the Emperor should send a new commander. In the 21st year he took part in the battle near Āg Mahall (p 350). In the 24th year he was jāgīrdār of Ḥajpūr (opposite Patna). After Muzaffar's death (No 37) in 988, before Toḍar Mal had arrived he defeated and killed Sa'īd i Badakhshī, one of the Bengal rebels. Subsequently, he pursued 'Arab Bahādūr, whom Shāhbāz Khān

(p 438) had defeated In the 26th year Sh Kh was stationed at Narhan In this year, Ma'sūm Khān 1 Farankhūdī (No 157) had been driven by the imperialists from Bahra,ich over Kalyānpūr to Muhammadābad, which he plundered, and prepared to attack Jaunpūr Sh Kh from Narhan, Pahār Khān (No 407) from Ghazīpūr and Qasim from Jaldpūr, united their contingents, and pursued Ma'sūm so effectually that he applied to M 'Aziz Koka to intercede for him with the Emperor In the 32nd year he was made Governor of Gaḍha, and soon after, of Dīhli In the end of the same year he accompanied Sultān Murād, who conducted M Sulaymān (No 5) to Court In the beginning of the 33rd year he assisted Ṣādiq Khān (No 43) in his expedition against Jalala Tarīki in Terāh

In the 43rd year, after a stay of fourteen years in the Panjāb, Akbar made Dīhli his residence It was proved that Sh had been oppressive, and he was therefore reprimanded Two years later, he served in the Āsur war, and died during the siege of that fort, Zī Hijjah 1009

The Ṭabaqāt says that Shāham Khān was in 1001 a Commander of Two Thousand

The Akbarnāma mentions two other Jalā'ir Grandees -

1 Sultan Husayn Khān Jalā'ir He was mentioned above, p 417, l 3

2 Muhammad Khān Jalā'ir The Ṭabaqāt says of him, ' he is an old Amir, and is at present (1001) mad ' He served under Khān Zaman in the war with Hemū In the beginning of the 4th year all three Jalā'irs served under Khān Zamān against the Afghans in the Jaunpūr District

98 Asaf Khan (III), [Mirza Qiwām' d' Dīn] Ja'sfar Beg son of Badī's'z Zaman of Qazwīn

His father Mirza Badī's'z Zaman was the son of Āgha Mulla Dawatdār of Qazwīn (vide p 398) M Badī during the reign of Shah Ṭahmasp, had been vazīr of Kāshān, and Ja'sfar had also been introduced at the Persian Court

In the 22nd year of Akbar's reign (985), Ja'sfar Beg came to India, and was presented to Akbar by his uncle M Ghīyās' d' Dīn 'Alī Āsaf Khān II (No 126), on his return from the Idar expedition The new Dāgh law having then been introduced, Akbar made Ja'sfar a Commander of Twenty (Bīstī) and attached him to the Dākhilīs (p 252) of his uncle According to Badā'onī (III, 216) people attributed this minimum of royal favour to the malice of Ja'sfar's uncle The post was so low that Ja'sfar threw it up in disgust and went to Bengal, to which province Muzaḥfar Khān (No 37) had just been appointed governor He was with him when the Bengal military revolt broke out, and fell together with Shams^u 'd Dīn i Khafī (No 159) into the hands of the rebels Ja^ʿfar and Shams found means to escape, the former chiefly through his winning manners. On arriving at Gathpur, Ja^ʿfar met with a better reception than before, was in a short time made a Commander of Two Thousand, and got the title of Āsaf Khān. He was also appointed Mīr Bak^hshī vice Qazī ʿAlī. In his first expedition against the Rana of Udaipur, Āsaf was successful.

In the 32nd year he was appointed Thāladār of Sīwād (Swat), vice Isma^ʿl Qulī Khan, who had been reprimanded (p 388, where for Wajūr read Biḡur). In the 37th year Jalala Rawshanī fled to ʿAbd^u 'llah Khan Uzbek, king of Tūrān, but finding no support, he returned to Terāh, and stirred up the Āfrīdī and Ūrakzā i Afghāns. Āsaf was sent against him and with the assistance of Zayn Khān Koka, defeated Jalala. The family of the rebel fell into the hands of the imperialists, his women were given to Wahdat ʿAlī, who was said to be Jalala's brother, while the other members of his family were taken to Court.

In the 39th year Āsaf was sent to Kashmir, M Yūsuf Khan (No 35) having been recalled. He re-distributed the lands of the Jagir holders, of whom Ahmad Beg Kabuli (No 191) Muhammad Qulī Afshar, and Hasan ʿArab were the most important. The cultivation of Za^ʿfarān (saffron, vide p 89) and hunting were declared monopolies, and the revenue was fixed according to the assessment of Qazī ʿAlī i.e. at one lakh of kharwars, at 24 dārs each (vide p 370). Āsaf stayed only three days in Kashmir and returned to Lahor. In the 42nd year, when Kashmir had become all but desolated through the oppressions of the Jagir holders Āsaf was made Governor of the province. In the 44th year (beginning of 1008) he was appointed Dīwān i kull vice Patr Das (No 196).

In 1013 Prince Salīm (Jahangīr) rebelled against Akbar, but a reconciliation was effected by Akbar's mother, and Salīm was placed for twelve days under surveillance. After this he received Gujrat as tuyul and gave up the Sūbas of Ilahābād and Bihar of which during his rebellion he had taken possession. Bihar was given to Āsaf, who, moreover, was appointed to a Command of Three Thousand.

On Jahangīr's accession, Āsaf was called to Court, and appointed atāliq to Prince Parwīz, who had taken the command against the Rana. The expedition was, however, interrupted by the rebellion of Prince Khusraw. In the 2nd year, 1015, Jahangīr, after suppressing Khusraw's revolt, left Lahor for Kabul, and as Sharīf Khan Amīr^u l Umara^s remained dangerously ill in India, Āsaf was made Vakīl and Commander of Five Thousand. He also received a pen box studded with jewels.¹ But he never trusted Jahāngīr, as the Emperor himself found out after Āsaf's death (Tuzuk, p. 109).

From the time of Akbar's death, the kings² of the Dakhīn had been restless, and Malik Āmbar had seized upon several places in the Balāghāt District. The Khān Khanān (No. 29), with his usual duplicity, had done nothing to recover the loss, and Jahāngīr sent Prince Farwīz to the Dakhīn, with Āsaf Khān as atāliq, and the most renowned grandees of the Court, as Rājā Man Singh (No. 30) Khān Jahān Lodī, Khān Āzam (No. 21), Ābd^u 'Ilāh Khān, "each in himself sufficient for the conquest of a country." But incessant drinking on the part of the Prince, and the jealousy and consequent insubordination of the Amīrs, spoiled every thing, and the Mughuls suffered a check and lost their prestige. Not long after, in 1021, Āsaf died at Burhāmpūr. The Tārīkh of his death is —

صد حب ، آمجان . A hundred times alas! for Āsaf Khān

The Tuzuk (p. 108) says that he died at the age of sixty three.

Āsaf Khān is represented as a man of the greatest genius. He was an able financier, and a good accountant. A glance is said to have been sufficient for him to know the contents of a page. He was a great horticulturist, planting and lopping off branches with his own hands in his gardens, and he often transacted business with a garden spade in his hand. In religious matters, he was a free thinker, and one of Akbar's disciples (p. 218-9). He was one of the best poets of Akbar's age, an age most fruitful in great poets. His Masnawī, entitled Nūrnāma ranks after Nizām's Shīrīn Khusrāw. Vide below among the poets of Akbar's reign.

Āsaf kept a great number of women, and had a large family.

His sons: 1. Mīrzā Zayn^u 'l Ābidīn. He was a Commander of Fifteen Hundred, 500 horse, and died in the second year of Shāhjahān's reign. He had a son Mīrzā Ja^u far, who like his grandfather was a poet, writing under the same talhallas (Ja^u far). He, Zāhid Khān Koka, and M. Shāfi (Pādīshāhnāma, Sāqī, Ma^u ā'ir) son of Sayf Khān, were such intimate friends, that Shāhjahān dubbed them sih yār, "the three friends." He later resigned the service, and lived in Āgra on the pension which Shāh-jahān granted and Awrangzib increased. He died in 1094.

¹ It was customary under the Mughul Government to confer a pen box or a golden inkstand or both as assignia on Diwāns. When such officers were deposed they generally returned the presents.

² Mughul historians do not like to call the rulers of the Dakhīn rajās. The word which they generally use is rajjōddār which is a meaningless title. I have not found this title used in histories written before the Albarānāma.

2 Suhrāb Khān. He was under Shahjahān a Commander of Fifteen Hundred, 1,200 horse, and died in the 13th year of Shahjahān.

3 Mīrzā ʿAlī Asghar. He was a hasty youth, and could not bridle his tongue. In the Parenda expedition, he created dissensions between Shāh Shujāʿ and Mahābat Khān. He served in the war against Jujhār Bandela, and perished at the explosion of a tower in Fort Dhamūnī, as related in the Pādīshāhnāma. He had just been married to the daughter of Muṣṭamid Khān Bakhshī (author of the Iqbāl-nāma-yi Jahānqīrī), but as no cohabitation had taken place, Shāhjahān married her to Khān Dawrān. He was a Commander of Five Hundred, 100 horse.

4 Mīrzā ʿAskarī. He was in the 20th year of Shāhjahān a Commander of Five Hundred, 100 horse.

The lists of grandees in the Pādīshāhnāma mention two relations of Āsaf—1 Muhammad Salih, son of Mīrzā Shāhī, brother or nephew of Āsaf. He was a Commander of One Thousand, 800 horse, and died in the second year of Shāhjahān's reign. 2 Muqīm, a Commander of Five Hundred, 100 horse.

AI Commanders of One Thousand and Five Hundred

99 Shaykh Farīd i Bukhārī

The Iqbāl-nāma, according to the Maʿāzīr, says he belonged to the Mūsawī Sayyids, but this is extraordinary, because the Bukhārī Sayyid's trace their descent to Sayyid Jalāl i Bukhārī, seventh descendant of Imām ʿAlī Naqī Alhādī.

The fourth ancestor of Shaykh Farīd was Shaykh ʿAbdu 'l Ghaffār of Dihli, who when dying desired his family to give up depending on Suyūrghal tenures, but rather to enter the military service of the kings. This they seem to have done.

Shaykh Farīd was born at Dihli (Tuzuk, p. 68). He entered Akbar's service early. In the 28th year, when M. ʿAzīz (No. 21) resigned from ill health the command of the Bihar army, S. F. accompanied Vazīr Khān (No. 41) to the neighbourhood of Bardwān, where Qutlū of Orisā had collected his Afghāns. Qutlū having made proposals of peace, S. F. was ordered to meet him. In doing so he nearly perished through Qutlū's treachery (vide Stewart's Bengal). In the 30th year, he was made Commander of 700, and gradually rose, till the 40th year, to a command of 1,500. He was also appointed Mīr Bakhshī, and had also for some the Daftar-i-Tan in his charge, i e, he had to settle all matters relating to the grants of Jāgīr holders

His elevation under Jahāngīr was due to the decided support he gave Jahāngīr, immediately before his accession, and to the victory he obtained over Prince Khusraw at Bhairōwāl. When Prince Salim occupied Ilāhabad during his rebellion against his father, appointing his servants to mansabs and giving them jāgirs, Akbar favoured Prince Khusraw so openly, that every one looked upon him as successor. Soon after, a sort of reconciliation was effected, and Salim's men were sent to Gujrāt. When Akbar lay on the death bed, he ordered Salim to stay outside the Fort of Āgra, and M 'Aziz Koka (No 21) and Raja Mīn Singh, who from family considerations favoured Khusraw's succession, placed their own men at the gates of the fort, and asked Shaykh Farīd to take command. But S F did not care for their arrangements and went over to Prince Salim outside, and declared him emperor, before Akbar had closed his eyes. On the actual accession S F was made a commander of 5 000, received the title of Sāhib^u's sayf w^u'l qalam,¹ and was appointed Mīr Bahshī.

A short time after, on the 8th Zī Hījāh, 1014, Prince Khusraw suddenly left Āgra and went plundering and recruiting to Lāhor. S F, with other Bukhārī and many Barha Sayyids was sent after him, whilst Jahāngīr himself followed soon after, accompanied by Sharif Khan Amīr^u'l Umarā^u and Mahābat Khān who were hostile to S F, and took every possible opportunity of slandering him. Sultān Khusraw had gone to Lāhor and besieged the town, when he heard of S F's arrival with 12 000 horse at the Āb-i-Sultānpūr. He raised the siege, and arrived at the Bīah which S F had just crossed. Khusraw was immediately attacked. The fight was unusually severe. The Barha and Bukhārī Sayyids had to bear the brunt of the fight, the former in the van under the command of Sayf Khān, son of Sayyid Mahmūd Khān Kundliwāl (p 427) and Sayyid Jalāl. There were about 50 or 60 of the Barha Sayyids opposed to 1,500 Bada^{khshī} troopers, and had not S Kamāl (vide No 78) come in time to their rescue, charging the enemy with loud cries of Pādīshāh salāmat the Barha Sayyids would have been cut down to a man. Sayyid Sayf Khān got seventeen wounds, and S Jalāl died a few days after the battle. About four hundred of Khusraw's troopers were killed, and the rest dispersed. Khusraw's jewel box fell into the hands of the Imperialists. The fight took place in the neighbourhood of Bhairōwāl¹. In the evening Jahāngir arrived, embraced S F, and stayed the night in his tent. The District was made into a Pargana of the name of Fathābād, and was given S F as a present. He received, besides, the title of Murtazā Khān, and was appointed governor of the Sūba of Gujrāt.

¹ This title we also find in old inscriptions e g in those of Tribeni and Satgāw. Hugh District. It means Lord of the sword and the pen.

In the 2nd year, S F presented Jahāngir with an immense ruby made into a ring, which weighed 1 mīsqāl, 15 surkhs, and was valued at 25,000 Rs. As the relations of the Shaykhī oppressed the people in Gujrāt, he was recalled from Ahmadābād (Tuzuk, p 73). In the 5th year he was made governor of the Panjab. In 1021 he made preparations to invade Kāngra. He died at Pathān in 1025, and was buried at Dihli (Tuz p 159). At the time of his death, he was a Commander of Six Thousand, 5,000 horse.

Sayyid Ahmad, in his work on the antiquities of Dihli, entitled Āshār 's Sanādīd, No 77, says that the name of S F's father was Sayyid Ahmad i Bukhārī. Of Farīd's tomb, he says, nothing is left but an arcade (dālān). But he wrongly places the death of the Shaykhī in the 9th year, or 1033 A H, instead of in the eleventh year, or 1025 A D. Sayyid Ahmad also mentions a Sāraṭī, built by Shaykhī Farīd in Dihli, which has since been repaired by the English Government, and is now used as a jail (حاصل خانہ, jel khāna).

According to the Tuzuk, p 65, Salimgadh (Dihli) belonged to S Farīd. It had been built by Salim Khān the Afghān during his reign in the midst (dar nuqān) of the Jamna. Akbar had given it to Farīd².

When Shaykhī Farīd died only 1,000 Ashrafis were found in his house, which very likely gave rise to the Tārīkh of his death. —

داده ¹ dād, khurd burd (1025 A H)

"He gave,¹ and left (carried off) little"

Shaykh Farid was indeed a man of the greatest liberality. He always gave with his own hands. Once a beggar came to him seven times on one day, and received money, and when he returned the eighth time, Farid gave him again money, but told him not to tell others, else they might take the money from him. He gave widows a great deal, and his jagir lands were given as free land tenures to the children of his servants or soldiers who had been killed. When in Gujrat, he had a list made of all Bukhāri Sayyids in the province,² and paid for every marriage feast and outfit, he even gave pregnant women of his clan money for the same purpose for the benefit of their yet unborn children. He never assisted singers, musicians, or flatterers.

He built many sarāīs. The one in Dīhli has been mentioned above. In Ahmadabad, a mahalla was adorned by him and received as a memorial of him the name of Bukhāra. In the same town he built the Masjid and Tomb of Shah Wajih³ 'd Din (died 988, Badā'onī, III, 43). He also built Farīdābād near Dīhli, the greater part of the old pargana of Tilpat being included in the pargana of Farīdābād (Elliot's Glossary, Beame's Edition, II, p 123). In Lāhor also, a Mahalla was built by him, a large bath, and a chaul, or bazar. The Government officers under him received annually three khulṣats, to his footmen he gave annually a blanket, and his sweepers got shoes. He never made alterations in his gifts.

His contingent consisted of 3 000 picked troopers. Neither in the reign of Akbar, nor that of Jahangir did he build a palace for himself. He always lived as if on the march. He paid his contingent personally, he always lived as if on the march. He paid his contingent personally, he little caring for the noise and tumult incident to such offices. One of his best soldiers, an Afghan of the name of Sher Khān, had taken leave in Gujrat, and rejoined after an absence of six years, when Sh. Farid was in Kalanur on his march to Kāngra. The Shaykh ordered Dwarkā Dās, his Bahshī, to pay the man his wages and the Bahshī wrote out the Descriptive Roll, and gave the man one day's pay. But Farid got angry, and said "He is an old servant, and though he comes rather late, my affairs have not fared ill on account of his absence, give him his whole pay." The man got 7,000 Rs., his whole pay for six years.

¹ Khurd eat enjoyed—P.]

² In Dīhli Ahmadābad and many other places in Gujrat do we find Bukhāri Sayyids vide Nos 77 78

'Night and day," exclaims the author of the Ma'āzīr, "change as before, and the stars walk and the heavens turn as of old, but India has no longer such men. Perhaps they have left for some other country!"

Shaykh Farid had no son. His daughter also died childless. He had adopted two young men, Muhammad Sa'id and Mir Khān. They lived in great pomp, and did not care for the emperor. Though often warned, they would noisily pass the palace in pleasure boats to the annoyance of the emperor, their boats being lighted up with torches and coloured lamps. One night they did so again, and Mahābat Khān, whom Jahāngīr had given a hint, sent one of his men and killed Mir Khān. S. F. demanded of the emperor Mahābat's blood, but Mahābat got together several "respectable" witnesses who maintained before the emperor that Mir Khān had been killed by Muhammad Sa'id, and Shaykh F. had to remain quiet.

Muhammad Sa'id was alive in the 20th year of Shāhjahān, and was a Commander of Seven Hundred, 300 horse (Pādīshāhn, II, 743).

Sayyid Ja'far, S. F.'s brother, was also in Akbar's service. He was killed in the battle of Patan (p. 433).

The Pādīshāhnāma (I, b, 316, 313, II, 739) also mentions Sayyid Badr, son of Shaykh Farid's sister, a Commander of 700, 500 horse; and Sayyid Bhal'ar, son of Sh. F.'s brother, a Commander of Five Hundred, 300 horse.

100 Samānjī Khān, son of Chalma Beg

For Samānjī we often find in MSS. Samājī. The Turkish samān means hay, so that Samānjī or Samānchī would mean one who looks after the hay.

The name of this grandee is neither given in the Ma'āzīr, nor the Ṭabaqāt. Nor have I come across his name in the Albarnāma. It remains, therefore, doubtful whether he is the son of No. 58.

Another Samānjī Khān will be found below, No. 147.

101 Tardī Khān, son of Qīya Khan Gung (No. 33)

He has been mentioned above, on p. 367. The Ṭabaqāt says that, in 1001, he was governor of Patan (Gujrāt).¹

¹ Tardī Khan is also mentioned in Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk, p. 19 l. 15.

102 Mihtar Khan, Anis^u 'd Dīn, a servant of Humāyūn

The word mihtar, prop a prince, occurs very often in the names of Humāyūn's servants. Thus in the Akbarnama (Lucknow Edition, Vol I, p 269—a very interesting page, which gives the names of the grandees, etc, who accompanied the emperor to Persia)

Mihtar Khān was the title of Anis^u 'd Dīn. He was Humāyūn's treasurer on his flight to Persia, and returned with the emperor

In the 14th year, when Rantanbhūr had been conquered (vide No 96), the fort was put in his charge. In the beginning of the 21st year (beginning of 984) he accompanied Man Singh on his expedition against Ranā Partāb of Maiwār, and distinguished himself as leader of the Chandāu ul (rear). In the 25th year he held a jāgīr in Audh, and distinguished himself in the final pursuit of Ma'sūm Khān Farānkhūdi (No 157)

Anis was gradually promoted. He was at the time of Akbar's death a Commander of Three Thousand. According to the Tabaqāt, he was in 1001 a Commander of 2 500

He died in the 3rd year of Jahangīr's reign, 1017, eighty four years old. If I read the MSS of the Ma'āsir correctly, he was a Katī and looked upon his tribe with much favour. He was a man of great simplicity. It is said that he paid his contingent monthly.

Mūnis Khān, his son, was during the reign of Jahangīr a Commander of Five Hundred, 130 horse. Abu Tālīb, son of Mūnis Khān, was employed as treasurer (Khizānchī) of the Sūba of Bengal.

103 Rāy Durga Sisodia

Rāy Durgā is generally called in the Akbarnāma, Ray Durga Chandrāwat, (جدراوت). The home of the family was the Pargana of Rampūr, also called Islampur, near Chitor.

In the 26th year of Akbar's reign Rāy Durgā accompanied Prince Murād on his expedition against Mirzā Muhammad Hakīm of Kābul. In the 28th year he was attached to Mirzā Khān s (No 29) corps, and distinguished himself in the Gujrāt war. In the 30th year he was with M^o A'Aziz Koka (No 21) in the Dakḥin. In the 36th year he followed Prince Murād to Malwa, and later to the Dakḥin.

In the 45th year Akbar sent him after Muza'ffar Husayn Mirzā. He then accompanied Abu 'l Fazl to Nāsik, and went afterwards home on departure i.e. on the 5th Jumada I 981. Hence the date 5th Jumada I 980 which leave He returned, but after six weeks went again home, apparently without permission

He died towards the end of the 2nd year of Jahāngir's reign

According to the Tuzuk (p 63) he had served Akbar for upwards of forty years Jahāngir says he had at first been in the service of Rānā Udar Singh, and reached, during the reign of Akbar, the dignity of Commander of Four Thousand He is said to have been a good tactician

The Tabaqāt says that he was in 1001 a Commander of Fifteen Hundred

The Maʿāzīr continues the history of his descendants from which the following tree has been taken

Genealogy of the Raos of Rampur (Islampur) Chitor

Rao Ratan Singh turned Muhammadan and got the title of Muslim Khan (Aurangzib Jahāndār Shah)

104 Madhū Singh, son of Rāja Bhāgwan Dās (No 27)

He was present in the fight at Sarnal (p 353) In the beginning of the 21st year (Muharram 984) he served under Man Singh against Rāna Kika, and distinguished himself in the battle of Goganda (21st Rabiʿ I, 984) ² In the 30th year he accompanied Mirzā Shāhrukh (No 7)

¹ There is some confusion in the MSS and printed editions regarding his name Thus on his expedition to Kashmir. In the 31st year after the death of Sayyid Hamid (No 78), he took the contingent of Rāja Bhagwān from Thanā Langar, where he was stationed, to ‘Alī Masjid, where Mān Singh was

In the 48th year he was made a Commander of Three Thousand, 2,000 horse. According to the Ṭabaqāt, he had been, in 1001, a Commander of 2,000

His son, Chatr Sāl, or Satr Sāl, was at the end of Jahāngīr’s reign a Commander of Fifteen Hundred, 1,000 horse. He was killed together with his two sons, Bhīm Singh and Anand Singh in the Dakhin, in the 3rd year of Shāhjahān’s reign. His third son, Ugar Sen, was a Commander of Eight Hundred, 400 horse (vide Pādīshahn, I, p 294, I, b, pp 305, 314)

105 Sayyid Qāsim, and 143 Sayyid Hashim, sons of Sayyid Mahmūd Khān of Barha, Kūndliwāl (No 75)

In the 17th year S Qāsim served under Khan ‘Ālam (No 58) in the pursuit of Muhammad Husayn Mirza, who after his defeat by M ‘Aziz Koka (No 21) had withdrawn to the Dakhin

S Hashim served, in the 21st year, with Ray Rāy Singh (No 44) against Sultān De,ora, ruler of Sarohi, and distinguished himself in the conquest of that place

In the 22nd year both brothers served under Shabbāz Khān (No 80) against the Rānā. In the 25th year, when Chandr Sen, son of Māldeo, raised disturbances both brothers, who had jāgīrs in Ajmir, were ordered to march against him. Both again distinguished themselves in the 28th year, and served in the harāual of Mirzā Khān (No 29) in the Gujrat war

S Hashim was killed in the battle of Sarkich, near Ahmadabad. S Qāsim was wounded. He was subsequently appointed Thānadār of Patan. When Mirza Khān went to Court, leaving Qulij Khān as Governor of Ahmadabād, Qāsim was again appointed to a command and operated successfully against Muzaffar, Jīm (zamindar of Little Kachh), and Khangār (zamindar of Great Kachh)

On the transfer of Mirza Khān, Khān i Aṣṣam (No 21) was appointed Governor of Gujrat. Qasim continued to serve in Gujrat, and distinguished himself especially in the 37th year. Later, he commanded the left wing of Sultān Murād’s Dakhin corps

Qāsim died in the 41th year (1007). He was at his death a Commander of 1,500

Regarding their sons, vide p 427

All Commanders of Twelve Hundred and Fifty

106 Rāy Sal Darbarī, Shaykhāwat

He is also called Raja Rāy Sāl Darbārī, and is the son of Rājā Soja, son of Ray Ray Mal Shaykhāwat, in whose service Hasan Khan Sūr (father of Sher Shah) was for some time

As remarked above (No 23) the Kachhwāhas are divided into Rajawats and Shaykhawats To the latter branch belong Raja Lō Karan Rāy Sal, etc , the former contains Mān Singh's posterity (the present rulers of Jaipur)

The term Shaykhāwat, or Shekhāwat, as it is generally pronounced, is explained as follows One of the ancestors of this branch had no sons A Muhammadan Shaykh however, had pity on him, and prayed for him till he got a son From motives of gratitude, the boy was called *Shaykh*¹ Hence his descendants are called the Shaykhawats Branch

Rāy Sal was employed at Court, as his title of Darbārī indicates He was in charge of the Harem During the reign of Jahangir, he was promoted and served in the Dakhn He died there at an advanced age He had twenty one sons each of whom had a numerous posterity

Whilst Ray Sal was in the Dakhn, Madhu Singh and other grand children of his collected a lot of ruffians and occupied Ray Sal's paternal possessions² But Mathurā Das a Bengali, who was Ray Sal's Munshi and Wakil recovered a portion of his master's lands

After Rāy Sāl's death, his sons and grandsons lived, according to the custom of the Zamindārs of the age, in feud with their neighbours and with each other Raja Giridhar Ray Sāl's son is almost the only one that distinguished himself at Court

From the Albarnāma we see that Ray Sal entered early Akbar's service for he was present in the battle of Khayarbad (p 414) in the fight at Surnal (vide 27), and accompanied the Emperor on his forced march to Patan and Ahmadābad (p 458 note)

The Pādīshāhnāma (I, b, p 314) mentions another son of Rāy Sal's, Bhoj Raj, who was a Commander of Eight Hundred, 400 horse

The Ṭabaqat says that Ray Sal, was in 1001 a Commander of Two Thousand and Abū l Fazl calls him in this list a Commander of 1250 This number is unusual and Ray Sal stands alone in this class It does not

¹ He is the same as the Shaykh of the Albarnāma (p 414) a grandson of Udaikaran

² Called in the Ma'asir a Khandhar near Amber occur in the lists of Grandees in the Pādīshahnāma. From other histories also it is clear that the next higher Mansab after the Hazārī was the Haṣār o pānsadī, or Commander of Fifteen Hundred

XIII Commanders of One Thousand

107 Muhibb ṢAlī Khān, son of Mir Khalifa

This grandee must not be confounded with Muhibb ṢAlī Khān Rahtāsī (p 166)

Muhibb ṢAlī Khān is the son of Mir Nizām^u 'd Dīn ṢAlī Khalifa, the "pillar of Babar's government". He had no faith in Humāyūn, and was opposed to his accession. He therefore favoured Mahdī Khawāja, Babar's son in law. Mahdī, a short time before Babar's death, assumed a royal department. One day, Mir Khalifa happened to be in Mahdī's tent, and when he left, Mahdī thinking himself alone, put his hand to his beard and exclaimed, "Thou shalt by and by follow me." He had scarcely uttered these words when he observed Muqīm Harawī¹ in the corner of the tent. Muqīm reported these words to Mir Khalifa, and upbraided him for giving Mahdī his support. Mir Khalifa thereupon changed his mind, forbade people to visit Mahdī, and raised, on Bābar's death, Humāyūn to the throne.

His son Muhibb ṢAlī Khān distinguished himself under Babar and Humāyūn. His wife was Nahid Begam, daughter of Qasim Koka. Qasim had sacrificed himself for Babar. Babar had fallen into the hands of ṢAbdu'llah Khān Uzbak, when Qasim stepped forward and said that he was Babar. He was cut to pieces, and Bābar escaped. In 975, Nahid Begam went to Thatha, to see her mother, Hāji Begam (daughter of Mirza Muqīm son of Mirza Zū'ī Nun). After Qasim Koka's death, . . . ṢIsa Tarkhan, King . . . ha Mirzā ṢIsa died . . . and her daughter Hāji Begam therefore collected a few desperate men and watched for an opportunity to get hold of M. Bāqī's person. The plot was, however, discovered, and Hāji Begam was put into prison. Nāhid Begam escaped and went to Bhakkar, where she was well received by Sulṭān Mahmūd, ruler of the District. He persuaded her to ask Akbar to send her husband Muhibb ṢAlī to Bhakkar, and he would give him an army, if he liked to attack Thatha. Nahid Begam did so on coming to Court, and Akbar, ¹ Father of the Historian Nizām^u 'd Dīn Ahmad author of the Tabaqāt-i Akbarī. Muqīm was then Ducān-i Bayuḍāt.

in the 16th year (978), called for Muhibb, who had then retired from court life, and ordered him to proceed to Bhakkar

Muhibb set out, accompanied by Mujāhid Khān, a son of his daughter Saʿīd Khān (No 25), Governor of Multān, had also received orders to assist Muhibb, but at Sultan Mahmūd's request, Muhibb came alone, accompanied by only a few hundred troopers. When he arrived at Bhakkar Sultān Mahmūd said that he had changed his mind—he might go and attack Thatha without his assistance, but he should do so from Jaisalmir, and not from Bhakkar. Muhibb, though he had only 200 troopers, resolved to punish Sultan Mahmūd for his treachery, and prepared himself to attack Bhakkar. Mahmūd had 10,000 horse assembled near Fort Māthila (ماثيلا). Muhibb attacked them, dispersed them, and took soon after the fort itself. He then fitted out a larger corps, and moved to Bhakkar, where he again defeated Mahmūd. The consequence of this victory was that Mubarak Khān, Sultan Mahmūd's vazīr, left his master and went with 1500 horse over to Muhibb. But as Mubarak's son, Beg Oghlū, was accused of having had criminal intercourse with a concubine of Sultān Mahmūd, Muhibb wished to kill Beg Oghlū. Mubarak, who had not expected this, now tried to get out of Muhibb's power. Muhibb therefore killed Mubarak, and used the money which fell into his hands to complete his preparations for the siege of Bhakkar.

The siege had lasted three years, when famine and disease drove the inhabitants to despair. The swelling which is peculiar to the district decimated the people, and the bark of the Sirs tree (p 238) the best remedy for it, could only be had for gold. Sultan Mahmūd at last sent a message to Akbar, and offered the fort as a present to Prince Salim, if Muhibb were recalled and another grandee sent in his stead, who was to take him (Mahmūd) to Court, for he said, he could not trust Muhibb. Akbar accepted the proposal, and sent Mir Gesū, Bakawal begī, to Bhakkar¹. Before Mir Gesū arrived Sultān Mahmūd had died. New complications arose on his arrival. Mujāhid Khān just besieged Fort Ganjaba² and his mother Sumāʿa Begam (Muhibb's daughter), who felt offended at Akbar's proceedings, dispatched a few ships against Mir Gesū and nearly captured him. In the meantime Muqīmī Harawī also arrived and dissuaded Muhibb from hostilities against Mir Gesū.

¹ The conquest of Bhakkar was a total one.

The latter now entered Bhakkar (981) and the inhabitants handed the keys over to him

But neither Muhibb nor Mujahid felt inclined to leave for the Court, though their stay was fraught with danger. Muhibb therefore entered into an agreement with Mir Gesu, according to which Mujahid should be allowed to go to Thatha, and that he himself with his whole family should be accommodated in Lohari. The arrangement had been partially carried out, when Mir Gesu dispatched a flotilla after Mujahid. Muhibb upon this withdrew to Mathla. Samra Begam fortified the environs, and when attacked by Gesu's men, she successfully repulsed them for one day and one night. Next day, Mujahid arrived by forced marches, defeated the enemy,¹ and occupied the land east of the river.

In the meantime Akbar had sent Muhammad Tarso Khan (No. 32) as governor to Bhakkar, and Muhibb thought it now wise to go to Court.

In the 21st year, Muhibb received an appointment at Court, as a sort of Mir Sarz. As he gave the emperor satisfaction, Akbar, in the 23rd year, allowed him to choose one of four appointments, the office of Mir Sarz, the guard of the Harem, the governorship of a distant province, or the governorship of Dilli. Muhibb chose the last, and entered at once upon his office.

He died as Governor of Dilli in 989.

Muhibb is placed in the Tabaqat among the Commanders of Four Thousand.

Regarding the town of Bhakkar, Abū l-Fazl says that it is called in old books Mansūra. Six rivers united pass by it in several branches, two branches lie to the south, one to the north. The town at the latter branch is called Bhakkar. On the second branch another town lies, called Lohari, and near it is the Indus.

Mirza Shah Husayn Arghūn, king of Thatha, had Bhakkar fortified, and appointed as Commander his foster brother, Sultan Mahmūd. After Shāh Husayn's death, Sultan Mahmūd declared himself independent at Bhakkar, and Mirzā 'Isa Tarkhan (p. 390), at Thatha. Both were often at war with each other. Sultan Mahmūd is said to have been a cruel man.

As Bhakkar was conquered and annexed before Thatha, it was attached to the Ṣūba of Multān.

¹ If Prof. Dawson's MSS. agrees with his version (I p. 241) the Tārīkh-i-Maṣṣūmī would contradict the Akbar-nāma. Mujahid Khan is again mentioned loc. cit. p. 23^o.

in the 16th year (978), called for Muhibb, who had then retired from court life, and ordered him to proceed to Bhakkar

Muhibb set out accompanied by Mujāhid Khān, a son of his daughter Saʿīd Khān (No 25), Governor of Multān had also received orders to assist Muhibb, but at Sultān Mahmūd's request, Muhibb came alone, accompanied by only a few hundred troopers. When he arrived at Bhakkar, Sultan Mahmūd said that he had changed his mind he might go and attack Thatha without his assistance, but he should do so from Jaisalmir, and not from Bhakkar. Muhibb though he had only 200 troopers, resolved to punish Sultan Mahmūd for his treachery, and prepared himself to attack Bhakkar. Mahmūd had 10,000 horse assembled near Fort Mathila (ماثيلا) Muhibb attacked them, dispersed them, and took soon after the fort itself. He then fitted out a larger corps, and moved to Bhakkar, where he again defeated Mahmūd. The consequence of this victory was that Mubarak Khān, Sultan Mahmūd's vazīr, left his master and went with 1,500 horse over to Muhibb. But as Mubarak's son, Beg Oghlū, was accused of having had criminal intercourse with a concubine of Sultan Mahmūd, Muhibb wished to kill Beg Oghlū. Mubarak, who had not expected this now tried to get out of Muhibb's power. Muhibb therefore killed Mubarak and used the money which fell into his hands to complete his preparations for the siege of Bhakkar.

The siege had lasted three years when famine and disease drove the inhabitants to despair. The swelling which is peculiar to the district decimated the people and the bark of the Sirs tree (p 238), the best remedy for it could only be had for gold. Sultan Mahmūd at last sent a message to Akbar, and offered the fort as a present to Prince Salim, if Muhibb were recalled and another grandee sent in his stead, who was to take him (Mahmūd) to Court, for he said, he could not trust Muhibb. Akbar accepted the proposal and sent Mir Gesu Bakawal begi, to Bhakkar¹. Before Mir Gesu arrived Sultan Mahmūd had died. New complications arose on his arrival. Mujāhid Khān just besieged Fort Ganjaba,² and his mother Samsa Begam (Muhibb's daughter), who felt offended at Akbar's proceedings dispatched a few ships against Mir Gesu and nearly captured him. In the meantime Muqim Harawi also arrived and dissuaded Muhibb from hostilities against Mir Gesu.

¹ The conquest of Bhakkar was completed in the year 1000.

The latter now entered Bhakkar (981) and the inhabitants handed the keys over to him

But neither Muhibb nor Mujāhid felt inclined to leave for the Court, though their stay was fraught with danger. Muhibb therefore entered into an agreement with Mir Gesū, according to which Mujāhid should be allowed to go to Thatha, and that he himself with his whole family should be accommodated in Loharī. The arrangement had been partially carried out, when Mir Gesū dispatched a flotilla after Mujāhid. Muhibb upon this withdrew to Mathūla. Samṣa Begam fortified the environs, and when attacked by Gesū's men, she successfully repulsed them for one day and one night. Next day, Mujāhid arrived by forced marches, defeated the enemy,¹ and occupied the land east of the river.

In the meantime Akbar had sent Muhammad Tarso Khān (No 32) as governor to Bhakkar, and Muhibb thought it now wise to go to Court.

In the 21st year, Muhibb received an appointment at Court, as a sort of Mir ʿArz. As he gave the emperor satisfaction, Akbar, in the 23rd year, allowed him to choose one of four appointments, the office of Mir ʿArz, the guard of the Harem, the governorship of a distant province, or the governorship of Dihli. Muhibb chose the last, and entered at once upon his office.

He died as Governor of Dihli in 989.

Muhibb is placed in the Talāqāt among the Commanders of Four Thousand.

Regarding the town of Bhakkar, Abu l Fazl says that it is called in old books Mansūra. Six rivers united pass by it in several branches, two branches lie to the south one to the north. The town at the latter branch is called Bhakkar. On the second branch another town lies, called Loharī, and near it is the Indus.

Mirza Shāh Husayn Arghūn, king of Thatha had Bhakkar fortified, and appointed as Commander his foster brother, Sultan Mahmūd. After Shāh Husayn's death, Sultan Mahmūd declared himself independent at Bhakkar, and Mirza ʿIsa Tarkhan (p 300) at Thatha. Both were often at war with each other. Sultan Mahmūd is said to have been a cruel man.

As Bhakkar was conquered and annexed before Thatha, it was attached to the Ṣūba of Multān.

¹ If Prof. Dowson's MSS. agree with his version (I p 241) the Tārīkh-i-Maʿrūmī would contradict the Al-Bardawāz. Mujāhid Khān is again mentioned loc. cit. p 232.

[Muhibb 'Alī Khan Rahtas.]

Like Muhibb 'Alī Khan son of Mir Khalifa Muhibb 'Alī Khan Rahtas is put in the Tabaqat among the Commanders of Four Thousand It is impossible to say why Abu I Fazl had not mentioned him in this list His name however occurs frequently in the Ikbarnama and other histories As he was a long time Governor of Rahtas in S Bihar he is generally called Rahtas This renowned Fort had passed in 945 into the hands of Sher Shah During his reign as also that of Salim Shah Fath Khan Batni commanded the Fort Subsequently it came into the hands of Sulayman and Junayd i Karraranī The latter appointed Sayyid Muhammad commander As related above (p 437) he handed it over to Shahbaz Khan (No 80) at the time of the war with Gajpati and his son Sri Ram (984)

In the same year Akbar appointed Muhibb 'Alī Khan governor of Rahtas and Shabbaz Khan made over the Fort to him

Muhibb rendered excellent services during the Bengal Military Revolt His son also Habib 'Alī Khan (vide No 133) distinguished himself by his bravery but was killed in a fight with one Yusuf Miṭṭī who had collected a band of Afghans and ravaged S Bihar His death affected his father so much that he became temporarily insane

In the 31st year two officers having been appointed to each Suba Muhibb was ordered to join Vazir Khan (No 41) Governor of Bengal In the 33rd year Bihar was given to the Kachhwahas as jagir and Akbar called Muhibb to Court intending to make him governor of Multan But as the emperor was just about to leave for Kashmir (997) Muhibb accompanied him

Soon after entering Kashmir Muhibb fell ill and died on the emperor's return near the Koh-i-Sulayman Akbar went to his sick bed and saw him the moment he died

In the Ikbarnama (III p 245) a place *Muhibb 'Alīpur*¹ is mentioned which Muhibb founded near Rahtas

108 Sultan Khwaja 'Abdū l 'Azim son of Khwaja Khawand Dost

He is also called Sultan Khwaja Naqshbandī² His father Khawand Dost was a pupil of Khwaja 'Abdū sh Shahid fifth son of Khwaja

ʿAbdū ʿIlah (generally called Khwajagan Khwaja, vide No 17), son of the renowned saint Khwaja Aasir^u ʿd Dīn Ahrar (born 806, died 29th Rabiʿ I, 895)

When ʿAbdū sh Shabīd came from Samarqand to India, he was well received by Akbar, and got as present the Pargana Chamari. He remained there some time, but returned in 982 to Samarqand, where he died two years later.

Sultan Khwāja, though neither learned in the sciences nor in tasawwuf (mysticism), had yet much of the saintly philosopher in him. He possessed in a high degree the confidence and the friendship of the emperor. In 984 he was made Mīr Hajj, and as such commanded a numerous party of courtiers during the pilgrimage to Makkah. Never before had so influential a party left for Arabia. Sultan Khwaja was to distribute six lākhs of rupees and 12 000 khilʿats to the people of Makkah.

On his return in 986 (23rd year) he was made a Commander of One Thousand, and appointed Sadr of the realm (p 284). He held that office till his death, which took place in the 29th year (992). He was buried outside the Fort of Fathpur, to the north.

His daughter, in the beginning of the 30th year, was married to Prince Danyal.

His son, Mir Khwaja was in the 46th year a Commander of 500.

According to Badaoni and Abu l Faʿzī Sultan Khwaja belonged to the elect of the Divine Faith (vide p 214).

109 Khwaja ʿAbdū ʿIlah, son of Khwaja ʿAbdū l Latīf

His name is not given in the Maʿasir and the Ibāqat. The Albar mentions a Khwaja ʿAbdū ʿIlah who served in the war against Abdū ʿIlah Khan Uzbek (No 14), in Malwah (971-2) during the last rebellion of Khan Zaman (No 13), and in the fight at Sarnal (middle of Shaʿbān 980, vide No 27). He also accompanied the emperor on his forced march to Patan and Ahmadabad. Vide the Lucknow Edition of the Albarnāma, II, 285, 287, 367, III, 24.

110 Khwaja Jahān, Aminā of Hirat

His full name is Khwaja Amin^u ʿd Dīn Mahmūd of Hirat. The form Aminā is modern Irānī which likes to add a long ā to names.

Amin was an excellent accountant and a distinguished calligrapher. He accompanied Humayūn on his flight to Persia. On the return of the emperor, he was made Bakhshī of Prince Akbar.

On Akbar's accession, Amin was made a Commander of One Thousand, and received the title of Khwāja Jahān. He was generally employed in financial work, and kept the great seal. In the 11th year he was accused by Muzaffar Khān (No 37) of want of loyalty shown in the rebellion of Khan Zamān Amīn was reprimanded, the great seal was taken from him, and he was dismissed to Makkah

On his return, he was pardoned In the 19th year (981-2) Akbar besieged Hajipur, but Amin had been compelled by sickness to remain behind at Jaunpur When the emperor returned from Hajipur over Jaunpur to Āgra, Amin followed him On the march, he was once charged by a mast elephant, his foot got entangled in a tent rope, and he fell to the ground The accident had an injurious effect on Amin, convalescent as he was He died near Lakhnau in the beginning of Shaʿban, 982

According to the chronology of the Tabaqāt, his death took place in 983

A son of Amin's brother is mentioned His name was Mirza Beg He was a poet and wrote under the takhallus of Shahrī He withdrew from Court, and died in 989

Jahangir also conferred the title of Khawaja Jahan on the officer (Dost Muhammad of Kabul) who had served him as Balī slā while Prince

111 Tatar Khān, of Khurāsān

His name is Khawaja Tahīr Muhammad In the 8th year he accompanied Shah Budagh Khān (No 52) and Rumī Khān (No 146), and pursued Mir Shah Abu l Maʿali, who withdrew from Hīsar Fīruza to Kabul

He was then made governor of Dihli where he died in 986

The Tāʾīqāt says he was for some time Vazīr and died in 985

Regarding his enmity with Mulla Nur^u d Din Tarkhān vide Badaoni III, 199

112 Hakīm Abu l Fath son of Mulla ʿAbd^u r Razzaq of Gilan

His name is Masū^u d Din Abu l Fath Mawlana ʿAbd^u r Razzaq his father was a learned and talented man and held for a long time the post of Sadr of Gilan When Gilan in 974 came into the possession of Tahmasp, Ahmad khān ruler of the country was imprisoned, and ʿAbd^u r Razzaq was tortured to death Hakīm Abū l Fath with his distinguished brother Hakīm Humam (No 203) and Hakīm Nur^u d Din¹ left the country and arrived, in the 20th year in India (p 184) They went to Court and were well received Abu l Fath, in the 24th year, was made Sadr and Amīn of Berhāl At the outbreak of the military revolt, he was captured with several other officers (vide Nos 98 and 159), but he escaped from prison, and went again to Court. He rose higher and higher in Akbar's favour, and possessed an immense influence in state matters and on the emperor himself. Though only a Commander of One Thousand, he is said to have had the power of a Vakīl.

¹ He is mentioned below among the poets of Akbar's reign His takhallus is Qutbī Their fourth brother Hakīm ʿUstā^u līh came later from Iran to India and received through Abu l Fath's influence a Command of Two Hundred (No 34) He did not live long

As related above (p 367), he accompanied Bir Bar on the expedition against the Yūsufzā, is in Sawād and Bijor. On his return, he was reprimanded, for the emperor, correctly enough, ascribed the disastrous issue of the campaign to Abu 'l Fath's insubordinate conduct towards Zayn Koka (No 34).

In the 34th year (997) he went with the emperor to Kashmir and from there to Zābulstān. On the march he fell sick, and died. According to Akbar's order, Khwāja Shams^u d Dīn (No 159) took his body to Hasan Abdal, and buried him in a vault which the Khwāja had made for himself (Tuzuk, p 48). On his return, the emperor said a prayer at Abu 'l Fath's tomb.

The great poet 'Urfī of Shirāz (vide below, among the poets) is Abū 'l Fath's encomiast. Fayzī also has composed a fine marṣiya, or elegy, on his death.

Abū 'l Fazl and Bada'onī speak of the vast attainments of Abu 'l Fath. A rare copy of his *Munshiyāt*¹ is preserved in the Library of the As Soc Bengal (No 780). He had a profound contempt for old Persian poets; thus he called Anwarī diminutively Anwariyāl, and of Khaqānī he said, he would give him a box on the ears if he were to come to him to rouse him from his sleepiness, and would send him to Abū 'l Fazl, who would give him another box and both would then show him how to correct his verses (Bada'onī, III, 167).

Bada'onī mentions Abū 'l Fath's influence as one of the chief reasons why Akbar abjured Islam (p 184).

Abū 'l Fath had a son, Fath^u Ilah. He was killed by Jahangir, as he was an accomplice of Khusraw (Tuzuk, p 58).

A grandson of Abū 'l Fath is mentioned in the Pādīshāhnāma (II, p 739). His name is Fath Ziya, he was a Commander of Nine Hundred, 150 horse.

113 Shaykh Jamal son of Muhammad Bakhtyar

His full name is Shaykh Jamal Bakhtyar, son of Shaykh Muhammad Bakhtyar. The Bakhtyār clan had possessions in Jalesar, near Dihli.

Shaykh Jamāl's sister held the post of superintendent in Akbar's harem, and procured for her brother a command of One Thousand. Jamal's elevation excited much envy. One day, after taking some water, he felt suddenly ill. Rûp also, one of Akbar's servants, who had drunk of the same water, fell immediately ill. Akbar had antidotes applied, and both recovered.

¹ His Munshiyāt contain interesting letters addressed by Abū 'l Fath to his brother Hakim Humam the Ḥān Ḥānān (No 29) Khwāja Ḥānūs (No 159) and others.

In the 25th year he accompanied Ismâ'îl Qulî Khân (No. 46) on his expedition against the rebel Niyabat Khân. Niyabat Khân was the son of Mir Hashim of Nishapur, his name was 'Arab. Before his rebellion he held Jhosi and Arail (Jalalabas) as jagir. In the fight which took place near "Kantit, a dependency of Panna,"¹ Shaykh Jamal was nearly killed, Niyabat Khân having pulled him from his horse.

In the 26th year he marched with Prince Murad against Mirza Muhammad Hakim of Kabul.

Shaykh Jamal drank a great deal of wine. One day he brought such a smell of wine to the audience hall that Akbar felt offended, and excluded him from Court. Jamal therefore squandered and destroyed the things he had with him, and assumed the garb of a jogî. This annoyed the emperor more, and Jamal was put into prison. Soon after, he was pardoned, but he continued his old vice, and brought delirium tremens on himself. In the 30th year, when Akbar set out for Zabulistan, Shaykh Jamal had to remain sick in Lûdhiana. He died there in the same year (993).

Jamal has been mentioned above on p. 200.

114 Ja'far Khân, son of Qazaq Khân.

He is generally called in the histories Ja'far Khwâ Taklu, Taklu being the name of a Qizilbash tribe.

His grandfather, Muhammad Khân Sharaf^u d Din Oghlu Taklu was at the time of Humayûn's flight governor of Hirat and *lalla*² to Sultan Muhammad Mirza, eldest son of Shah Ismahaspî Safawî. At the Shah's order, he entertained Humayun in the most hospitable manner. When he died he was succeeded in office by his son Qazaq Khân. But Qazaq showed so little loyalty, that Ismahaspî in 972 sent

¹ The Bibl. Indi.
() a dependency (Scamers Glossary make in the name above on p. 13)

Ma^sūm Beg i Sīfawī against him Qazīq fell ill, and when the Persians came to Hirāt, he died. Ma^sūm seized all his property.

Ja^sfar thinking himself no longer safe in Persia, emigrated to India, and was well received by Akbar. He distinguished himself in the war with Khan Zamān, and was made a Khān and a Commander of One Thousand. From Badā onī (II, p. 161), we see that he had a yāgīr in the Panjab, and served under Husayn Qulī Khān (No. 24) in the expedition to Nagarkot.

According to the Ṭabaqāt, Ja^sfar's father did not die a natural death, but was killed by the Persians.

Ja^sfar had been dead for some time in 1001.

115 Shāh Fanāⁱ, son of Mīr Najafī

His name is not given in the Ma^sūm and the Ṭabaqāt. From the Albarnāma (Lucknow Edition, II, 170, 172) we see that he served in the conquest of Mālwa and took part in the battle near Sārangpūr (beginning of the 6th year, vide No. 120).

The poet Fanāⁱ who is mentioned in Badā onī (III, 296), the Ṭabaqāt, and the Mīr^{āt} 'l Alam, appears to be the same. He travelled a good deal, was in Makkah, and distinguished himself by personal courage in war. Akbar conferred on him the title of Khān. He was a Chaghtāⁱ Turk of noble descent. Once he said, in Akbar's presence, that no one surpassed him in the three C's—chess, combat, composition, when the emperor replied that he had forgotten a fourth, viz. conceit. For some reason, he was imprisoned, and when set at liberty it was found that he had become mad. He ran into the wilderness, and was no more heard of.

116 Asad^a 'llāh Khān, of Tabriz

His name is not given in the Ma^sūm and the Ṭabaqāt. An Asad^a 'llāh Khān is mentioned in the Albarnāma (end of the 12th year). He served under Khan Zamān (No. 13) and commanded the town of Zamāniyā (p. 337, l. 14). After Khān Zamān's death, he wished to make over the town to Sulaymān, king of Bengal. But Mun^{im} (No. 11) sent a man to him to convince him of his foolishness, and quickly took possession of the town, so that the Afghāns under their leader, Khan Khānān Lodī, had to withdraw. This incident, however, brought the Afghān's into contact with Mun^{im}, and as they found him a tractable man, a meeting was arranged, which took place in the neighbourhood of Patna. This meeting was of importance, inasmuch as Khan Khānān Lodī, on the part of Sulaymān, promised to read the Khutba, and to strike coins in

Akbar's name Bengal therefore enjoyed peace till the death of Sulayman in 980¹

The Akbarnama mentions another officer of a similar name Asad^u Ilah Turkman. He was mentioned above under 61

117 Sa'adat 'Ali Khan of Badakhshan

From the Akbarnama (III 235) we see that he was killed in 988 in a fight with the rebel 'Arab Bahadur. Shahbaz Khan had sent Sa'adat to a Fort² near Rahtas where he was surprised by 'Arab defeated and slain. It is said that 'Arab drank some of his blood.

118 Rups Bairagi brother of Raja Bihari Mal (No 23)

The Ma'asir says that Rupsī was the son of Raja Bihari Mal's brother. He was introduced at Court in the 6th year.

According to the Tabaqat he was a commander of Fifteen Hundred Jaymal. Rupsī's son was the first that paid his respects to Akbar (under 23). He served some time under Sharaf^u d Din (No 17) jagirdar of Ajmir and was Thanadar of Mirtha. When Sharaf rebelled Jaymal went to Court. In the 17th year he served in the mangala of Khan Kalan (vide No 129) and accompanied the emperor on the forced march to Patan and Ahmadabad (p 458 note). In the 21st year he served in the expedition against Dauda son of Ray Surjan (No 96) and the conquest of Bundi (Muharram 985). Subsequently he was sent by Akbar on a mission to the grandees of Bengal but on reaching Chausa he suddenly died.

Jaymal's wife a daughter of Moth Raja (No 121) refused to mount the funeral pile but Uday Singh Jaymal's son wished to force her to become a Sati. Akbar heard of it and resolved to save her. He arrived just in time. Jagnath (No 69) and Ray Sal (No 106) got hold of Uday Singh and took him to Akbar who imprisoned him.

The story of the heavy armour which Jaymal wore in the fight with Muhammad Husayn Mirza after Akbar's forced march to Patan and Ahmadabad is known from Elphinstone's History (Fifth Edition p 509 note). Rupsī was offended because the emperor ordered Karan (a grand scion of Maldeo) to put on Jaymal's armour and angrily demanded it back. Akbar then put off his own armour. Bhagwan Das however thought it necessary to ask the emperor to pardon Rupsī's rudeness.

¹ read upon as a mistake. Vide note 3 p 179

² The MSS call the Fort کس کس کس etc. It is said to be a dependency (az muzafaf) of Rahtas.

119 Iṣṭimād Khān, Khawājasarā

He has been mentioned above, p 13, note His appointment to Bhaḷkar was made in 984, when Sayyid Muhammad Mir ṣ Adl (vide No 140) had died

Maqsūd ṣ Ali, who killed Iṣṭimād, is said to have been blind in one eye When he explained to Iṣṭimād his miserable condition, his master insulted him by saying that someone should put urine into his blind eye Maqsūd stabbed him on the spot According to another account, Iṣṭimād was murdered by Maqsūd, whilst getting up from bed

Iṣṭimād built Iṣṭimādpūr, 6 los from Āgra He had there a villa and a large tank He also lies buried there¹

120 Baz Bahādūr, son of Shajāwal Khān [Sur]

Abū 'l Fazl says below (Third Book, Suba of Malwa) that his real name was Bāyazīd

Bāz Bahādūr's father was Shujāṣat Khān Sūr, who is generally called in histories Shajawal, or Sajawal, Khān The large town Shajāwalpūr, or Sajāwalpūr, in Mālwa bears his name,² its original name, Shujāṣatpūr, which Abū 'l Fazl gives below under Sarkar Sarangpūr, Mālwa, appears to be no longer in use

When Sher Shāh took Malwa from Mallū (Qadir Khān), Shujāṣat Khān was in Sher Shah's service, and was made by him governor of the conquered province In Salm's reign, he returned to Court, but feeling dissatisfied with the king, he returned to Malwa Salm dispatched a corps after him, and Shujāṣat fled to the Raja of Dūngarpur Some time after, he surrendered to Salm, and remained with him, Malwa being divided among the courtiers Under ṣ Adl, he was again appointed to Mālwa After a short time, he prepared himself to assume the royal purple, but died (962)

Baz Bahādūr succeeded him He defeated several opponents, and declared himself, in 963, king of Malwa His expedition to Gaḍhā was not successful, Rānī Dūrgawatī (p 397) having repulsed him He now gave himself up to a life of ease and luxury his singers and dancing women were soon famous throughout Hindustan, especially the beautiful Rupmatī, who is even nowadays remembered

Akbar's name Bengal therefore enjoyed peace till the death of Sulaymān in 980¹

The Akbarnāma mentions another officer of a similar name, Asad^u 'lāh Turkmān He was mentioned above under 61

117 Sa'ādat 'Alī Khān, of Badakhshān

From the Akbarnāma (III, 235) we see that he was killed in 988 in a fight with the rebel 'Arab Bahādūr Shāhbaz Khān had sent Sa'ādat to a Fort² near Rahtas, where he was surprised by 'Arab, defeated and slain It is said that 'Arab drank some of his blood

118 Rups. Bairāgi, brother of Rāja Bihārī Mal (No 23)

The Ma'āsir says that Rūpsī was the son of Rāja Bihārī Mal's brother He was introduced at Court in the 6th year

According to the Tabaqāt, he was a commander of Fifteen Hundred Jaymal, Rūpsī's son, was the first that paid his respects to Akbar (under 23) He served some time under Sharaf^u 'd Dīn (No 17), jagirdār of Ajmīr, and was Thanadār of Mūrtha When Sharaf rebelled, Jaymal went to Court In the 17th year he served in the manqala of Khān Kalan (vide No 129) and accompanied the emperor on the forced march to Patan and Ahmadabad (p 458, note) In the 21st year he served in the expedition against Dauda, son of Ray Surjan (No 96), and the conquest of Būndī (Muharram, 985) Subsequently, he was sent by Akbar on a mission to the grandees of Bengal, but on reaching Chausā, he suddenly died

Jaymal's wife, a daughter of Moth Rāja (No 121), refused to mount the funeral pile, but Udaī Singh, Jaymal's son, wished to force her to become a Safī Akbar heard of it, and resolved to save her He arrived just in time Jagnath (No 69) and Ray Sal (No 106) got hold of Udaī Singh, and took him to Akbar, who imprisoned him

The story of the heavy armour which Jaymal wore in the fight with Muhammad Husayn Mirza, after Akbar's forced march to Patan and Ahmadabad, is known from Elphinstone's History (Fifth Edition, p 509, note) Rūpsī was offended, because the emperor ordered Karan (a grand sc. of Maldeo) to put on Jaymal's armour, and angrily demanded it back Akbar then put off his own armour Bhagwān Dās, however, thought it necessary to ask the emperor to pardon Rūpsī's rudeness

¹ The MSS call the fort کب, کب, کب etc It is said to be a dependency (as muzfār) of Rohtas

119 Iṣṭimād Khān, Khawājasarā

He has been mentioned above, p 13, note His appointment to Bhakkar was made in 984, when Sayyid Muhammad Mir ʿAdl (vide No 140) had died

Maqsūd ʿAlī, who killed Iṣṭimād, is said to have been blind in one eye When he explained to Iṣṭimād his miserable condition, his master insulted him by saying that someone should put urine into his blind eye Maqsūd stabbed him on the spot According to another account, Iṣṭimād was murdered by Maqsūd, whilst getting up from bed

Iṣṭimād built Iṣṭimād-pūr, 6 kos from Āgra He had there a villa and a large tank He also lies buried there ¹

120 Baz Bahādūr, son of Shajawal Khān [Sūr]

Abū ʿl Fazl says below (Third Book, Sūba of Malwa) that his real name was Bāyazīd

Bāz Bahādūr's father was Shujāʿat Khan Sūr, who is generally called in histories Shajawal, or Sajawal, Khān The large town Shajā walpūr, or Sajawalpur, in Malwa bears his name, ² its original name, Shujaʿatpūr, which Abu ʿl Fazl gives below under Sarkar Sārangpūr, Malwa, appears to be no longer in use

When Sher Shāh took Malwa from Mallu (Qadir Khān), Shujāʿat Khan was in Sher Shah's service, and was made by him governor of the conquered province In Salim's reign, he returned to Court, but feeling dissatisfied with the king, he returned to Malwa Salim dispatched a corps after him, and Shujaʿat fled to the Raja of Dūngarpūr Some time after, he surrendered to Salim, and remained with him, Malwa being divided among the courtiers Under ʿAdlī, he was again appointed to Mālwa After a short time, he prepared himself to assume the royal purple, but died (962)

Baz Bahādūr succeeded him He defeated several opponents, and declared himself, in 963, king of Malwa His expedition to Gaḍha was not successful, Ranī Dūrgawatī (p 397) having repulsed him He now gave himself up to a life of ease and luxury his singers and dancing women were soon famous throughout Hindūstan, especially the beautiful Rūpmatī, who is even nowadays remembered

In the very beginning of the 6th year of Akbar's reign Adham Koka (No 19) was ordered to conquer Malwa. Pir Muhammad Khan (No 20) 'Abdullah Khan Uzbek (No 14) Qiya Khan Gung (No 33) Shah Muhammad Khan of Qandahar (No 95) and his son 'Adil Khan (No 125) Sadiq Khan (No 43) Habib 'Ali Khan (No 133) Haydar Muhammad Khan (No 66) Muhammad Quli Toqba'i (No 129) Qiya Khan (No 184) Mirak Bahadur (No 208) Samanji Khan (No 147) Payanda Muhammad Mughul (No 68) Mihr 'Ali Sildoz (No 130) Shah Fana'i (No 115) and other grandees accompanied Adham. They met Baz Bahadur three kos from Sarangpur and defeated him (middle of 968)¹. Baz Bahadur fled to the jungles on the Khandesh frontier. He collected a new army but was defeated by Pir Muhammad who had succeeded Adham. He then fled to Miran Shah of Khandesh who assisted him with troops. Pir Muhammad in the meantime conquered Bijagadh, threw himself suddenly upon Burhanpur, sacked the town and allowed an indiscriminate slaughter of the inhabitants. B. B. marched against him and defeated him. As related above Pir Muhammad fled and was drowned in the Narbada. The imperialists thereupon got discouraged and the jagirdars left for Agra so that Baz Bahadur without opposition re-occupied Malwa.

In the 7th year Akbar sent 'Abdullah Khan Uzbek to Malwa. Before he arrived B. B. fled without attempting resistance and withdrew to the hills. He lived for some time with Bharji Zamindar of Baglana and tried to obtain assistance from Chingiz Khan and Sher Khan of Gujrat and lastly even from the Nizam-ul-Mulk. Meeting nowhere with support B. B. went to Rana Uday Singh. He then appears to have thrown himself on Akbar's generosity for in the 15th year Akbar ordered Hasan Khan Khizanchi² to conduct Baz Bahadur to Court. He now entered the emperor's service and was made on his arrival a commander of One Thousand. Some time later he was promoted to a mansab of Two Thousand. He had been dead for some time in 1001.

Baz Bahadur and his Rupmati lie buried together. Their tomb stands in the middle of a tank in Ujjain. I. id. No 188.

121 Uday Singh Moth Raja son of Ray Maldeo

The Tabaqat says that he was in 1001 a Commander of Fifteen Hundred and ruler of Jodhpur.

¹ The 6th year of Akbar's reign commences on the 21th Jumada II 968 and the battle of Sarangpur took place in the very beginning of the 6th year.

² This officer was often employed on missions. In the beginning of Akbar's reign he was sent to Mukund Deo the last Gajpat of Orissa.

In 991 he was at Kambhat which he left on the approach of Muhammad Husayn Mirza and withdrew to Ahmadabad to Mirza Azim Koka (No 21).

Akbar, in 994, married Udai Singh's daughter to Jahāngir. On p 8 of the Tuzuk, Jahāngir says that her name was Jagat Gosā'inī. She was the mother of Prince Khurram (Shahjahan), vide p 323, l 18.

Mirza Hadī in his preface to Jahāngir's Memoirs (the Tuzuk i Jahāngiri) has the following remark (p 6) "Raja Udai Sing is the son of Raja Māldeo, who was so powerful that he kept up an army of 80,000 horse. Although Rānā Sānka, who fought with Firdaws makāni (Babar) possessed much power, Māldeo was superior to him in the number of soldiers and the extent of territory, hence he was always victorious."

From the Akbarnāma (Lucknow Edition, III, p 183) we see that Moth Rāja accompanied in the 22nd year Sadiq Khān (No 43), Rāja Askaran, and Ulugh Khan Habshī (No 135) on the expedition against Madhukar (26th Rabi' I, 985). In the 28th year he served in the Gujrat war with Muzaffar (Akbarnāma, III, 422).

Another daughter of Moth Rāja was married to Jaymal, son of Rupsi (No 118).

122 Khwaja Shāh Mansur, of Shiraz

Mansūr was at first mushrif (accountant) of the Khushbū Khana (Perfume Department). Differences which he had with Muzaffar Khān (No 37) induced Sh Mansūr to go to Jaunpur, where Khan Zaman made him his Diwān. Subsequently he served Mun'im Khan Khān in the same capacity. After Mun'im's death he worked for a short time with Toḍar Mal in financial matters. In the 21st year (983), he was appointed by the emperor lazir. He worked up all arrears, and applied himself to reform the means of collecting the land revenue. The custom then was to depend on experienced assessors for the annual rate of the tax, but this method was now found inconvenient, because the empire had become greater, for at different places the assessment differed, and people and soldiers suffered losses. For this reason, the Khwaja in the 24th year, prepared a new rent roll, based upon the preceding Dahsala roll, and upon the prices current in the 24th year. The empire itself, which did not then include Orisa, Thathah, Kashmīr, and the Dakhan, was divided into 12 parts, called sūbas, and to each sūba a sipahsālār (Military Governor), a Diwān, a Bakhshī (Military Paymaster and Secretary), a Mir 'Adl, a Sadr, a Kotwāl, a Mir Bahr, and a Hāqīqa Nācis (p 268) were to be appointed. The strictness which the Khwaja displayed towards jagir holders led to serious results. In the 25th year he lowered the value of the jagirs of the grandees in Bengal by one fourth of their former value, and those in Bihar by one fifth. As Bengal and South Bihār were then not completely subjugated, and the Afghāns still mustered large forces in Eastern and Southern Bengal, in Orisa, and along the Western frontier of Bengal, Mansūr's rigour was impolitic, for Akbar's officers looked upon the old jāgīr emoluments as very moderate rewards for their readiness to fight the Afghāns. Akbar some time before, in consideration of the troubled state of both provinces, and the notorious climate of Bengal, had doubled the allowances of Bengal officers and increased by 50 per cent the emoluments of those in Bihār. Thus Mansūr cut down. He allowed Bengal officers an increase of 50, and Bihār officers an increase of only 20 per cent. He then wrote to Muzaffar to enforce the new arrangements. But the dissatisfaction was also increased by the innovations of the emperor in religious matters, and his interference with Suyurgāl tenures brought matters to a crisis. The jāgīr holders in Jaunpūr, Bihār, and Bengal rebelled. That religious excitement was one of the causes of this military revolt, which soon after was confined to Bengal, is best seen from the fact that not a single Hindū was on the side of the rebels.¹ Todar Mal tried to prevent the outbreak by reporting Mansūr and charging him with unnecessary harshness shown especially towards Ma'sūm Khān, Farankhūdi (No 157) and Muhammad Tarsō (No 32). Akbar deposed Mansūr and appointed temporarily Shāh Qulī Mahram (No 45), but having satisfied himself of the justice of Mansūr's demands, he reinstated him in his office, to the great anxiety of the courtiers.

In the same year, Mirzā Muhammad Hakīm, at Ma'sūm Khān's instigation, threatened to invade the Panjāb, and Akbar prepared to leave for the north. Mansūr's enemies charged him with want of loyalty, and showed Akbar letters in the handwriting of Mirzā M. Hakīm's Munshī, addressed to Mansūr. Accidentally Malik Sanī Hakīm's Diwan, who had the title of Vazīr Khān, left his master, and paid his respects to Akbar at Sonpat. As he put up with Mansūr, new suspicions got afloat. Several words which Mansūr was said to have uttered, were construed into treason, and letters which he was said to have written to M M Hakim were sent to Akbar. Another letter from Sharaf Beg, his collector, was likewise handed to the emperor, in which it was said that Faridūn Khān (maternal uncle to M M Hakim) had presented the Beg to the Mirza Akbar, though still doubtful, at the urgent solicitations of the grandees gave orders to arrest Mansūr, he should remain in arrest till any of the grandees should stand bail for him, but as none dared to come forward, they ordered the Khidmat Rāy (p 262) to hang Mansūr on a tree near Sarā Kot Khachwa (beginning of 989) ¹

¹ The chief rebel was Ma'sūm Khān, Kabuli, who has been frequently mentioned

This foul murder gave the nobles the greatest satisfaction. But when Akbar came to Kābul (10th Rajab 989) he examined into Mansur's treasonable correspondence. It was then found, to the sorrow of Akbar, that every letter which had been shown to him had been a forgery, and that Mansur was not guilty of even one of the malicious charges preferred against him.

It is said, though at the time it was perhaps not proved, that Karam^u 'llah, brother of Shāhbāz Khān i Kambū (p 440, l 23), had written the letters, chiefly at the instigation of Rāja Todar Mal.

Mansur had been Vazir for four years.

123 Qutluḡ Qadam Khān, Ākhta begi ²

The Turkish word qulluḡ means mubārak, and qadam-i mubārak, is the name given to stones bearing the impression of the foot of the Prophet. The Tabaqāt calls him Qutlū, instead of Qutluḡ, which confirms the conjecture in note 2, p 383.

Qutluḡ Qadam Khān was at first in the service of Mirzā Kāmran, and then went over to Humāyūn.

In the 9th year of Akbar's reign, he assisted in the capture of Khwāja Mu'azzam, and served in the same year in Mālwa against 'Abd^u 'llah Khān Uzbek (No 14). In the battle of Khayrabād, he held a command in the van.

¹ So the Akbarnama مرای کوت کچھوہ. Kot Khachwa is a village on the road from

In the 19th year, he was attached to Munṣim's Bengal corps, and was present in the battle of Takarōi (p 406) He was no longer alive in 1001

His son, Asad (?) Khān, served under Prince Murad in the Dakhn, and was killed by a cannon ball before Dawlatabād

124 ṢAlī Qulī Khān, Indarābī

Indarāb is a town of Southern Qunduz A straight line drawn from Kabul northwards to Taliḥhān passes nearly through it

ṢAlī Qulī had risen under Humāyūn When the Emperor left Kabul for Qandahār to inquire into the rumours regarding Bayram's rebellion, he appointed ṢAlī Qulī governor of Kabul Later, he went with Humāyūn to India

In the first year of Akbar's reign, he served under ṢAlī Qulī Khān Zamān (No 13) in the war with Hemu, and accompanied afterwards Khizr Khwaja (p 394, note 1) on his unsuccessful expedition against Sikandar Sūr

In the fifth year, he served under Atga Khān (No 15), and commanded the van in the fight in which Bayram was defeated

The Tabaqāt says that he was commander of Two Thousand, and was dead in 1001

125 ṢAdil Khān, son of Shah Muhammad i Qalatī (No 95)

He served under Adham Khān (No 19) in Malwa, and took a part in the pursuit of ṢAbdū l Khān Uzbek Later, he assisted Muhammad Qulī Khān Barlas (No 31) on his expedition against Iskandar Uzbek, and was present at the siege of Chitor (p 397). In the beginning of the 13th year (Ramazan, 975), Akbar was on a tiger hunt between Ajmur and Alwar ṢAdil, who was at that time muṣṭāb, i e, under reprimand and not allowed to attend the Darbars, had followed the party A tiger suddenly made its appearance, and was on the point of attacking the Emperor, when ṢAdil rushed forward and engaged the tiger, putting his left hand into its mouth, and stabbing, with the dagger in his right, at the animal's face The tiger got hold of both hands of his opponent when others came up and killed the brute with swords In the struggle ṢAdil received accidentally a sword cut

He died of his wounds after suffering for four months In relating his end, Abu 'l Fazl says that the wrath of heaven overtook him He had been in love (taṢalluq i khāṭir) with the wife of his father's Diwan, but he was not successful in his advances His father remonstrated with him, and ṢAdil in his anger struck at him with a sword

Qiyām Khān, brother of ṢAdil Khān Jahangir made him a Khān He served the Emperor as Qarāu albegī (officer in charge of the drivers)

126. Khawāja Ghīyās 'd-Dīn (ʿAlī Khān, Āsaf Khān II) of Qazwin

He is not to be confounded with Mir Ghīyās 'd-Dīn ʿAlī Khān (No 161) For his genealogy, vide p 398 The family traced its descent to the renowned saint Shaykh Ghīyās 'd-Dīn Suhrawardī,¹ a descendant of Abū Bakr, the Khalifa

Khawīja Ghīyās was a man of learning On his arrival from Persia in India, he was made a Balshāhī by Akbar In 981, he distinguished himself in the Gujrātī war, and received the title of Āsaf Khān He was also made Balshāhī of Gujrāt, and served as such under M ʿAziz Koka (No 21) In the 21st year, he was ordered to go with several other Amīrs to Idar, "to clear this dependency of Gujrāt of the rubbish of rebellion" The expedition was directed against Zamīndar Naraʿin Dās Rāthor. In the fight which ensued, the van of the Imperialists gave way, and Muqīm i Naqshbandī, the leader, was killed The day was almost lost, when Āsaf, with the troops of the wings, pressed forward and routed the enemies

In the 23rd year, Akbar sent him to Mālwa and Gujrat, to arrange with Shihāb Khān (No 26) regarding the introduction of the Dāgh (pp 252, 265)

He died in Gujrāt in 989

Mīrzā Nūr 'd Dīn, his son After the capture of Khusraw (p 455) Jahāngīr made Āsaf Khān III (No 98), Nūr 'd Dīn's uncle, responsible for his safety. Nūr 'd Dīn, who was an adherent of the Prince, found thus means to visit Khusraw and told him that at the first opportunity he would let him escape But soon after, Khusraw was placed under the charge of Istibār Khān, one of Jahāngīr's eunuchs, and Nūr 'd Dīn had to alter his plans He bribed a Hindū, who had access to Khusraw, and sent the Prince a list of the names of such grāndees as favoured his cause In four or six months, the number had increased to about 400, and arrangements were made to murder Jahāngīr on the road But it happened that one of the conspirators got offended, and revealed the plot to Khawīja Waisī, Diwan of Prince Khurram, who at once reported matters to his august father Nūr 'd Dīn and Muhammad Sharif, son of Istimad 'd Dawla, and several others were impaled The paper containing the list of names was also brought up, but Jahāngīr, at the request of Khān Jahān Lodī, threw it into the fire without having read it, "else many others would have been killed"

¹ Author of the ʿAwarif 'l Maʿarif He died at Bagdad in 632 His uncle ʿAbd^o 'l Najib (died 563) was also a famous saint Wüstenfeld's Jacut III p 203 Nafhat 'l Uns, pp 478, 544 Safinat 'l Aʿfyā (Lahore Edition), pp 681, 683

127 Farrukh Husayn Khan, son of Qasim Husayn Khan His father was an Uzbek of Khwarazm his mother was a sister of Sultan Husayn Mirza

The Ma'aşır and the Tabaqat say nothing about him A brother of his is mentioned in the Albarnama (II p 335)

128 Muḥin^u d Dīn [Ahmad] Khān i Farankhūdi¹

Muḥin joined Humayun's army when the Emperor left Kabul for Hindustan In the 6th year of Akbar's reign he was made Governor of Āgra during the absence of the Emperor in the Eastern provinces In the 7th year when 'Abd^u llah Khan Uzbek was ordered to re-conquer Malwa Muḥin was made a Khan After the conquest he divided the province into khalsa and jagir lands and performed this delicate office to Akbar's satisfaction In the 18th year Muḥin was attached to Munḥim's Bihar corps He then accompanied the Khan Khanan to Bengal was present in the battle of Takaroi and died of fever at Gaur (vide p 407)

The Tabaqat merely says of him that he had been for some time Mīr Saman

For his son vide No 157

Badaoni (III p 157) mentions a Jamī' Masjid built by Muḥin at Āgra

129 Muhammad Quli Toqba

Toqba': is the name of a Chaghta'i clan

Muhammad Quli served under Adham Khan (No 19) in the conquest of Malwa (end of the 5th and beginning of the 6th year) and in the pursuit of Mirza Sharaf^u d Dīn (No 17) in the 8th year In the 17th year (980) he served in the manqala of the Khan i Kalan (No 16)² In the 20th

Many MSS have Faranjūd The Muḥjam me to is a place فَرَانْجُو Faranka which

There are serious discrepancies in the MSS regarding the day and year of Pr n e year, he was attached to Mun'im's corps, and was present in the battle of Takaroi, and the pursuit of the Afghans to Bhadrak (p 375)

130 Mihr 'Alī Khan Sildoz

Sildoz is the name of a Chaghata'i clan. According to the Tabaqāt, he was at first in Bayram's service. In the end of 966, Akbar sent him to Fort Chanadh (Chunar) which Jamal Khan, the Afghan Commander, wished to hand over to the Imperialists for a consideration (vide Bada'oni II, 32). Akbar offered him five parganas near Jaunpur, but Jamal did not deem the offer sufficiently advantageous, and delayed Mihr 'Alī with vain promises. Mihr 'Alī at last left suddenly for Agra.

On his journey to Chanadh he had been accompanied by the Historian Bada'oni, then a young man to whom he had given lodging in his house at Agra. On his return from the Fort Bada'oni nearly lost his life during a sudden storm whilst on the river. Bada'oni calls him Mihr 'Alī Beg, and says that he was later made a Khan and Governor of Chitor.

He served under Adham Khan (No 10) in Malwa, and in the Gujrat wars of 980 and 981. In the 22nd year, Akbar was on a hunting tour near Hisar, and honoured him by being his guest. In the following year, he attended Sakina Banu Begum whom Akbar sent to Kabul to advise his brother, Mirza Muhammad Hakim. In the 25th year, he served under Todar Mal against the rebel 'Arab.

The Tabaqat makes him a Commander of Fifteen Hundred and says that he was dead in 1001.

131 Khwaja Ibrahim i Badakhshī

He is not mentioned in the Ma'asir and the Tabaqat. From the Akbarnama (II p 207) we see that he was Jagirdar of Sakit (in the Mainpuri District). Near this town there were eight villages inhabited by robbers. In consequence of numerous complaints Akbar resolved to surprise the dacoits. A great number were killed and about one thousand of them were burnt in dwellings in which they had fortified themselves. Akbar exposed himself to great dangers, no less than seven

Ikt' yar' i Mulk also appeared and marched upon Ahmadabad. Muhammad Husayn arrows struck in his shield and his elephant fell with one foot in a grain pit which threw the officer who was seated behind him with much force upon him. The fight chiefly took place in a village called in the MSS مرونگه or *مرونگه*¹

The Tabaqat mentions a Sultan Ibrahim of Awba (near Hirat) among Akbar's grandees. His name is not given in the A^cin. He was the maternal uncle of Nizam¹ d Din Ahmad, author of the Tabaqat. He conquered Kamaon and the Daman i Koh.

132 Salim Khān Kakar²

Several MSS of the A^cin call him Salim Khan Kakar ʿAlī. The Akbarnama calls him Salim Khan Kakar or merely Salim Khan or Salim Khan Sirmur. The Tabaqat has Salim Khān Sirmur Afghān.

He served in the beginning of the 6th year in the conquest of Malwa and later under Mu^ʿizz^u l Mulk (No 61) in Audh and was present in the battle of Khayrabad. In 980 he took a part in the fight of Sarnal. He then served in Bengal and was jagirdar of Tajpur. In the 28th year he accompanied Shahbaz Khan (No 80) to Bhatī. As there were no garrisons left in Upper Bengal, Vazir Khan having gone to the frontier of Orisa, Jabarī (vide p 400 note 2) made an inroad from Kūch Bihar into Ghoraghat and took Tajpur from Salim's men and Purnā from the relations of Tarso Khan (No 32). Jabarī moved as far as Tanda. The Kotw Hasan ʿAlī was sick and Shaykh Allah Baksh Sadr fled in precipitate haste. Fortunately Shaykh Farid arrived and Jabarī withdrew to Tajpur. In the 3rd year Salim served under Matlab Khan (No 83) against the Tarikīs and shortly after in the 33rd year under Sadiq Khan against the same Afghān rebels.

He was no longer alive in 1001.

133 Habīb ʿAlī Khan.

He is not to be confounded with the Habīb ʿAlī Khan mentioned on p 406.

Habīb was at first in the service of Bayram Khan. In the third year when Akbar had marched to Agra he ordered Habīb to assist Qiya Khan (No 33) in the conquest. Towards the end of the fourth year Akbar sent him against Rantanbhur. This fort had formerly been in the possession of the Afghāns and Salim Shah had appointed Jhujhar Khan governor. On Akbar's accession Jh saw that he would not be able to hold it against the Imperialists and handed it over to Ravi Surjan (No 96) who was then in the service of Rana Uday Singh. But Habīb had to raise the siege.

[Pa^ukl n ncteen kos south of Sialkot — B]
[* Should be Orma — B]

Abū 'l Fazl attributes this want of success partly to fate, partly to the confusion which Bayrām's fall produced

In the 6th year (968) he served under Adham (No 19), in Mālwa According to the Tabaqāt, he died in 970

134 Jagmal, younger brother of Rāja Bihārī Mal (No 23)

He must not be confounded with No 218 Jagmal was mentioned on p 348 In the 8th year, he was made governor of Mūrthā In the 18th year, when Akbar marched to Patan and Ahmadābād, he was put in command of the great camp

His son Kangār He generally lived with his uncle Raja Bihārī Mal at Court When Ibrāhīm Husayn Mirzā threatened to invade the Āgra District, he was ordered by the Rāja to go to Dīhl In the 18th year, he joined Akbar at Patan In the 21st year, he accompanied Mān Singh's expedition against Rānā Partāb Later, he served in Bengal, chiefly under Shahbāz Khan (No 80) When Shahbāz returned unsuccessfully from Bhātī (p 438) Kangar, Sayyid 'Abd' 'llah Khan (No 189), Rāja Gopāl Mirzāda 'Alī (No 152) met a detachment of rebels, and mistook them for their own men Though surprised, the Imperialists held their ground and killed Nawrūz Beg Qaqshal, the leader They then joined Shāhbāz, and arrived after a march of eight days at Sherpūr Murcha

According to the Tabaqāt, Kangār was in 1001 a Commander of Two Thousand The phraseology of some MSS implies that he was no longer alive in 1001

135 Ulugh Khān Habshī, formerly a slave of Sultān Mahmūd of Gujrat

Ulugh Khān is Turkish for the Persian Khān : Kalān (the great Khān)

He rose to dignity under Mahmud of Gujrat The word Habshī, for which MSS often have Badakhshī, implies that he was of Abyssinian extraction, or a eunuch In the 17th year, when Akbar entered for the first time Ahmadābād, he was one of the first Gujrātī nobles that joined the Imperialists

In the 22nd year, he served with distinction under Sadīq (No 43) against Rāja Madhukar Bundela, Zamīndār of Ūndcha In the 24th year, he followed Sadīq who had been ordered to assist Raja Toḍar Mal on his expedition against the rebel 'Arab (Niyābat Khān) in Bihār He commanded the left wing in the fight in which Khabīta (p 383, note 1) was killed

He died in Bengal

136 Maqsūd ʿAlī Kor

The Tabaqāt says that Maqsūd was at first in Bayrām Khān's service. He had been dead for a long time in 1001.

From the Akbarnāma (II, 96) we see that he served under Qiyā Khān (No 33) in the conquest of Gwaliyar.

137 Qabul Khān

From the Akbarnāma (II, p 450, last event of the 15th year of Akbar's reign) we see that Qabul Khān had conquered the District of Bhimbar on the Kashmir frontier. One of the Zamindārs of the District, named Jalal, made his submission, and obtained by flattery a great power over Qabul, who is said to have been a good hearted Turk. Jalāl not only managed on various pretexts to send away Qabul's troops, but also his son Yadgar Husayn (No 338), to Nawshahra. The Zamindārs of the latter place opposed Yadgar, and wounded him in a fight. Exhausted and wounded as he was, Yadgar managed to escape and took refuge with a friendly Zamindār. About the same time Jalāl collected his men and fell over Qabul, and after a short struggle killed him (5th Ramazān, 978).

Akbar ordered Khān Jahan to invade the District. The lands of the rebellious Zamindārs were devastated and summary revenge was taken on the ringleaders.

Yadgar Husayn recovered from his wounds. He is mentioned below among the commanders of Two Thousand.

The Akbarnāma mentions another Qabul Khān among the officers who served in the Afghan war in Bengal under Munʿum Khān Khānān. He was present in the battle of Takarā and pursued the Afghans under Toḍar Mal to Bhadrak (p 406).

Neither of the two Qabul Khāns is mentioned in the Tabaqāt and the Maʿāshir.

*Commanders of Nine Hundred*¹138 Kuchak ʿAlī Khān i Kolābī

Kolāb is the name of a town and a district in Bada^{kh}shān, long 70°, lat 30°. The District of Kolab lies north of Bada^{kh}shān Proper, from which it is separated by the ʿĀmū (Oxus), but it was looked upon as part of the kingdom of Bada^{kh}shān. Hence Kūchak ʿAlī is often called in the Akbarnāma Kūchak ʿAlī Khān i Bada^{kh}shī.

¹ Not all MSS of the Āʿin have these words they count the officers from No 138 to 175 amongst the Hazāra. But the best MSS have this mansab. In the lists of grandees in the Pādshāh-nāma also the mansab of Nine Hundred occurs.

He served under Mun⁵im Khan Zamān, and was present at the reconciliation of Baksar (Buxar) in the 10th year

He also served under Mun⁵im Khān in Bengal, and held a command in the battle of Takaro,¹ (p 406)

His sons are mentioned below, No 148 and No 380

139 Sabdal Khan, Sumbul, a slave of Humayun

140 Sayyid Muhammad, Mir ⁵Adl, a Sayyid of Amroha

Amroha, formerly a much more important town than now, belongs to the Sarkar of Sambal Its Sayyids belonged to old families of great repute throughout India Mir Sayyid Muhammad had studied the Hadis and law under the best teachers of the age The father of the Historian Badā'onī was his friend Akbar made Sayyid Muhammad, Mir 5Adl When the learned were banished from Court (ikhraj-i 5ulamā) he was made governor of Bhakkar¹ He died there two years later in 984 (vide Nos 119 and 251)

From the Albarnāma, we see that S Muhammad with other Amroha Sayyids served in the 18th year, under S Mahmud of Barha in the expedition against Raja Madhukar

He advised the Historian Badā'onī to enter the military service of the emperor, instead of trusting to learning and to precarious Madad-i ma5ash tenures, an advice resembling that of 5Abd⁵ 'I Ghaffar (vide No 99, p 454) S Muhammad's sons were certainly all in the army, vide Nos 251, 297, 363

141 Razawī Khān, Mirza Mirak, a Razawī Sayyid of Mashhad

He was a companion of Khan Zaman (No 13) In the 10th year, he went to the camp of the Imperialists to obtain pardon for his master When in the 12th year Khan Zaman again rebelled, Mirzā Mirak was placed under the charge of Khan Baqi Khān (No 60), but fled from his custody (at Dihli, Badā'onī II 100) After Khān Zamān's death, he was captured, and Akbar ordered him daily to be thrown before a mast elephant, but the driver was ordered to spare him as he was a man of illustrious descent This was done for five days when at the intercession of the courtiers he was set at liberty Shortly afterwards he received a mansab, and the title of Ra ai5 Khān In the 19th year, he was made Diwan of Jaunpur, and in the 24th year, Bakhshī of Bengal in addition to his former duties

At the outbreak of the Bengal Military Revolt (25th year), he was with Muzaffar Khan (No 37) His harsh behaviour towards the dissatisfied grantees is mentioned in the histories as one of the causes of

¹ In 983 the 20th year (Albarnāma III, 138). Ladd, msf (III, p. 75) has 984

the revolt When the rebels had seceded (9th Zī Hıjjab, 987) and gone from Tānda to Gaur, Muẓaffar sent Razawī Khān, Rāy Patr Das (No 196) and Mīr Ahmad Munshī to them to try to bring them back to obedience Things took indeed a good turn, and everything might have ended peacefully when some of Rāy Patr Dās's Rājpūts said that the opportunity should not be thrown away to kill the whole lot Rāy Patr Dās mentioned this to Razawī Khān, and through him, it appears, the rebels heard of it They took up arms and caught Rāy Patr Dās Razawī Khān and Mīr Ahmad Munshī surrendered themselves

The Ma'āsir says that nothing else is known of Razawī Khān The Tabaqāt says that he was a Commander of Two Thousand, and was dead in 1001

Mīrza Mīrak is not to be confounded with Mīrak Khān, "an old grandee, who died in 975" (Tabaqāt), or with Mīrak Bahādur (208)

Shāhjahān conferred the title of Razawī Khān on Sayyid 'Alī, son of Şadr' ş' Şudūr Mīran S Jalāl of Bukhārā

142 Mīrzā Najāt Khān, brother of Sayyid Barka, and 149 Mīrzā Husayn Khān, his brother.

Both brothers, according to the Tabaqāt, were dead in 1001 Their names are often wrongly given in MSS, which call them Najābat, instead of Najāt, and Hasan instead of Husayn

From the Akbarnāma (I, 411) we see that both brothers accompanied Humāyūn on his march to India

Mīrza Najāt served, in the 10th year, against Khān Zamān (No 13). In the end of the 21st year, he was attached to the corps which under Shihab Khān (No 26) moved to Khandesh, the king of which, Raja 'Alī Khān, had shown signs of disaffection Later, he served in Bengal When the Military Revolt broke out, Bābā Khān Qāqshal (vide, p 399, note 2), Jabārī (p 400), Vazīr Jamīl (No 200), Sa'id i Toqbā'i, and other grandees, marched on the 9th Zī Hıjja, 987, from Tānda to Gaur across the Ganges Mīr Najāt was doubtful to which party to attach himself, and when Muẓaffar sent his grandees [Mīr Jamāl' d Dīn Husayn Injū (No 164), Razawī Khān (No 141), Tīmūr Khān (No 215), Ray Patr Das (No 196), Mīr Adham, Husayn Beg, Hakīm Abū 'l Fath (No 112), Khawāja Shams' d Dīn (No 159), Ja'far Beg (No 98), Muhammad Qulī Turkman' (No 203), Qasīm Khān i Sıstānī, 'Iwaz Bahādur, Zulf 'Alī Yazdī, Sayyid Abū Is hāq i Şafawī (No 384), Muẓaffar Beg, etc] to the banks of the Ganges, where the rebels had drawn up their army, Mīr Najāt stayed with Vazīr Jamīl, although Muẓaffar, who was Najāt's father in law, fully expected him to join He must have soon after left the rebels and gone to Southern Bengal, for in the end of the 25th year he was at Satgāw (Huglī) Abū 'l Fazl mentions him together with Murād Khān at Fathabad (No 34), and Qiya Khān in Orisā (No 33), as one of the few that represented Imperialism in Bengal (Akbarn III, 291). But these three were too powerless to check the rebels. Murād died, and Qiya was soon after killed by the Afghāns under Qutlū, who looked upon the revolt as his opportunity. Mir Najāt also was attacked by Qutlū and defeated near Salimābād (Sulaymanābād), S of Bardwān. He fled to the Portuguese governor of Hūghl¹. Bābā Khān Qāqshāl sent one of his officers to get hold of Najāt, but the officer hearing of Qutlū's victory, attacked the Afghāns near Mangalkoṭ, N.E of Bardwān. Qutlū, however, was again victorious.

143 Sayyid Hashim, son of Sayyid Mahmūd of Bārha. Vide No 105, p 461

144 Ghazi Khān i Badakhshī

In MSS, Ghāzī is often altered to Qāzī, and Badakhshī to Bakhshī, and as Ghāzī Khān's first title was Qāzī Khān, his name is often confounded with No 223. Other Ghāzī Khāns have been mentioned above, on pp 396, 418

Ghazi Khān's name was Qāzī Nizam. He had studied law and Hadīṣ, under Mullā 'Isām^u 'd Dīn Ibrāhīm, and was looked upon as one of the most learned of the age. He was also the murīd of Shaykhⁱ Husayn of Khwārazm, a renowned Sūfī. His acquirements procured him access to the court of Sulaymān, king of Badakhshān (No 5), who conferred upon him the title of Qāzī Khān. At the death of Humayūn, Sulaymān, wishing to profit by the distracted state of the country, moved to Kābul and besieged Munṣim (No 11). After the siege had lasted for some time, Sulaymān sent Qāzī to Munṣim to prevail on him to surrender. But Munṣim detained him for several days, and treated him "to the most sumptuous fare, such as Badakhshīs cannot enjoy even in peaceful times". The good dinners made such an impression on Qāzī Khān that he advised Sulaymān to raise the siege, as there was no lack of provisions in the fort. Sulaymān thereupon returned to Badakhshan.

Subsequently Qāzī Khān left his master, and went to India. At Khānpūr he was introduced to the emperor on his return from Jaunpūr (Akbarn, III, 85). He received several presents, and was appointed Parwānchī writer (p 273). Akbar soon discovered in him a man of great insight, and made him a Commander of One Thousand. He also bestowed upon him the title of Ghāzī Khān, after he had distinguished himself in several expeditions

¹ The MSS of the Akbarnāma call him Bartab Bar Firuzī, or Partab Firuzī.

In the 21st year, Ghāzī Khān commanded the left wing of Mān Singh's corps in the war with the Rāna. Though his wing gave way, he returned with the troops and joined the van, and fought bravely. He then received Awadh as tuyūl, and distinguished himself in Bihār against the rebellious grandees

He died at Awadh in the 29th year (992) at the age of seventy, about the same time that Sultān Khawāja died (No 108)

Ghāzī Khān is the author of several works (vide Badā'onī III, 153)

The siyda, or prostration, which formed so important a part in the ceremonies of the Court, was his invention (vide p 167, note)

His son Husām 'd Dīn Akbar made him a Commander of One Thousand, and sent him with the Khān Khānān (No 29) to the Dakhīn. Suddenly a change came over Husām, and though a young man, he expressed to the commander his wish to resign the service and live as a faqr at the tomb of Nizām 'd Dīn Awliya in Dīhlī. The Khān Khānān persuaded him in vain to give up this mad idea, but Husām next day laid aside his clothes, smeared his body with clay and mud, and wandered about in the streets and bazars. Akbar permitted his resignation. Husām lived for thirty years as an ascetic in Dīhlī. Khawāja Baqī Billah (born at Kābul and buried at Dīhlī) conferred on him power of "guiding travellers on the road of piety". He died in 1034. His wife was Abū 'l Fazl's sister. She gave at the request of her husband her ornaments to Darwishes, and fixed an annual sum of 12,000 Rupees as allowance for the cell of her husband. Vide Tuzuk, p 80

145 Farhat Khān, Mihtar Sakā'i, a slave of Humāyūn

The MSS have Sakā'i and Sakāhi. Farhat Khān is first mentioned in the war between Humāyūn and Mirzā Kamran, when many grandees joined the latter. In a fight, Beg Babā of Kolab lifted up his sword to strike Humāyūn from behind. He missed and was at once attacked by Farhat, and put to flight. When Humāyūn left Lāhor on his march to Sarhind, where Sikandar Khān was, Farhat was appointed Shiqdār of Lāhor¹. Subsequently, Mir Shah Abū 'l Ma'ālī was appointed Governor of Lāhor. He sent away Farhat, and appointed his own men instead. Farhat therefore joined Prince Akbar on his arrival in the Panjāb of t

After Akbar's accession, Farhat was made Tuyuldār of Korra. He distinguished himself in the war with Muhammad Husayn Mīrza near Ahmadabād. When the Mīrza was brought in a prisoner, Farhat refused him a drink of water which he had asked for, but Akbar gave him some of his own water, and remonstrated with Farhat for his cruelty. In the 19th year, he served in Bihār and was made jāgīrdār of Āra. In the 21st year (984), Gajpati (p. 437) devastated the district. Farhang Khān, Farhat's son, marched against him, but was repulsed and slain. Farhat then moved against the enemy to avenge the death of his son, but met with the same fate (vide No. 80).

146 Rūmī Khān, Ustad Jalabī (?), of Rūm

He is not mentioned in the Tabaqāt and the Ma'āsir, and but rarely in the Akbarnāma. In the 20th year, he and Baqī Khān (No. 60) and 'Abd'ur Rahmān Beg (No. 186) accompanied a party of Begams from Court on their road to Makkah. The party consisted of Gulbadan Begam, Salima Sultān Begam, Hāji Begam, Gul'azār Begam, Sultān Begam (wife of Mīrza 'Askarī), Umm Kulsūm Begam (granddaughter of Gulbadan Begam), Gujnār Āgha (one of Babar's wives), Bībī Safiya, Bībī Sarwī Sahī and Shaham Āgha (wives of Humayūn), and Salima Khānum (daughter of Khizr Khwāja). They left in Rajab, 983.

Rūmī Khān has also been mentioned above (No. 111).

147 Samanjī Khān Qurghujī (vide No. 100)

He was a grandee of Humayūn. During the reign of Akbar, he reached the dignity of a Commander of Fifteen Hundred. The Tabaqāt says he was, in 1001, a Commander of 2,000. In the same work he is called a Mughul.

In the beginning of the 6th year (middle of 968) he served in Malwa under Adham Khān (No. 19) and was present in the battle of Sarangpūr. In the 9th year, he accompanied Muhammad Qāsim Khān i Nishapūri (No. 40) and pursued 'Abd'illah Khān Uzbek (No. 14). In the 13th year, he was ordered, together with Ashraf Khān Mir Munshī (No. 74), to go to Rantanbhur and suppress the disturbances created by Mīrza Muhammad Husayn in Malwa. Later, he held a jāgīr in Āra.¹ He joined at first the rebellious grandees, but convincing himself of their selfishness, he went back to the Imperial camp.

In the 39th year, he was allowed to come to Court, and died a few years later. His sons received employments in the army.

From the Akbarnāma (III, 156) we see that he also served in the ¹ The Ma'āsir has Aswadā. At the outbreak of the Bengal Military Revolt, he was Jāgīrdār of the Āra District (Akbarnāma III, 244).

21st year under Khan Jahān (No 24) and was present in the battle of Āg Mahall In the 30th year, he was in Malwa and was ordered to join the Dakhin corps Two years later, he served under Shihāb Khan (No 26) against Raja Madhukar

148 Shahbeg Khan, son of Kuchak ʿAlī Khān of Badakhshān (Nos 138 and 380)

His name is not given in the Maʿāsir and the Tabaqāt Amīr Beg, a Pansadī under Shahjahan appears to be his son

149 Mirza Husayn Khan, brother of Mirza Najāt Khan (vide No 142)

150 Hakim Zanbil, brother of Mirzā Muhammad Ṭabīb of Sabzwar Zanbil means "a basket" In the list of the physicians of the Court, lower down, he is called Hakim Zanbil Beg Bada, onī says, he was a muqarrīb, or personal attendant on the emperor¹

151 Khudawand Khan 1 Dakhni

Khudawand Khan was a Nizamshahī Grandee As his father was born at Mash had, Kh is often called Mash hadī He was of course a Shiʿah

He was a man of imposing stature and well known for his personal courage When Khwāja Mirak of Isfahan, who had the title of Chingiz Khan, was the Vakil of Murtaza Nizam Shah, Kh rose to dignity He held several districts in Barar as jagir The Masjid of Rohankhera² was built by him

In 993, when Mir Murtaza of Sabzwar (No 162) commanded the army of Barar, and was no longer able to withstand Salabat Khan Churgis in the Dakhin Kh accompanied M Murtaza to Hindustan Both were well received by Akbar, and Kh was made a Commander of One Thousand He received Patān in Gujrat as tuyul

He was married to Abu 'l Fazl's sister, and died at Karī in the end of the 34th year, before the middle of 998 (Bada, onī II 372, where in the Tārīkh of his death the word Dakhnī must be written without an h)

Once Abū 'l Fazl had invited several grandees, Khudawand among them The dishes placed before Kh contained fowls and game and different kinds of vegetables whilst the other guests had roast meat He remarked it, took offence, and went away Although Akbar assured him that Abū 'l Fazl had treated him to fowls and game according to a Hindūstani custom, Kh disliked Abu 'l Fazl, and never went again to his house "Hence Dakhnis are notorious in Hindūstan for stupidity"

¹ The Edit Eibl Index of Bada onī (III 164) calls him wrongly Hakim Zinal Shāhid. Zinal is the reading of bad MSS, and Sabzwar is often altered to Shāhid. Other bad MSS have Pansal

² Rohankhera lies in West Barar in the district of Buldana In Abu 'l Fazl's list of parganas in Sackār Taluqans, there is one called Qiryāt 1 Khudawand Khan

The Tabaqāt puts Kh among the Commanders of Fifteen Hundred, and says that he died in 995 The Ma'āzīr has 997

152 Mīrzada 'Alī Khan, son of Muhtaram Beg¹

He served in the 9th year in Mālwa during the expedition against 'Abdū 'llah Khan Uzbek (No 14) In the 17th year, he served in the Gujrat war under the Khan 1 Kalān (No 16) Two years later, he commanded an expedition against Qāsim Khān Kāsū, who with a corps of Afghāns ravaged the frontiers of Bihār In the 23rd year, he accompanied Shāhbāz Khān in the war with Rāna Partāb² He then served in Bihar under Khān 1 A'szam (25th year) and in Bengal under Shāhbāz Khān (vide No 134, p 483) In the 30th year (993) he was present in the fight with Qutlu near Mangalkoṭ (Bardwan) In the 31st year, he was ordered to join Qasim Khan (No 59), who was on his way to Kashmir Not long after, in 995 (32nd year) he was killed in a fight with the Kashmiris who defeated an Imperial detachment under Sayyid 'Abdū 'llah Khan (No 189)

Badā'onī (III, p 326) says he was a poet He places his death in 996

153 Sa'adat Mīrzā, son of Khīzr Khwāja Khān (p 394, note)

154 Shimāl Khan Chela

Chela means "a slave" The Tabaqāt says he was a Qurchī, or armour-bearer of the emperor, and a genial companion He was made a Hazārī and was no longer alive in 1001

In the 9th year, he assisted in the capture of Khwāja Mu'sazzam, In the 20th year, he served in the war against Chandr Sen, during which Jalal Khan (No 213) had lost his life, and afterwards under Sayyid Ahmad (No 91) and Shāhbāz (No 80) in the expedition to Siwāna

155 Shah Ghāzi Khan, a Sayyid from Tabriz

The Tabaqāt calls him a Turkman, and says, he was dead in 1001 He served in the 19th year with Mīrzāda 'Alī Khan (No 152) against Qāsim Khān Kāsū

He may be the Shāh Ghāzi Khan mentioned below under No 161

156 Fāzil Khan, son of Khan 1 Kalān (No 16)

He was mentioned above, on p 339

157 Ma'sūm Khan, son of Mu'sīn³ 'd Dīn Ahmad Farānkūhī (No 128)

He is not to be confounded with Ma'sūm Khān 1 Kābulī (p 476, note)

¹ He is also called Mīrzād 'Alī Khān. My text edition has wrongly Mīrzā 'Alī Khān. For Muhtaram many MSS read wrongly Mahram

His father, Muhtaram Beg was a grandee of Humāyūn's Court

² Generally called in the Histories Rānā Aīka

Ma'sūm was made a Hazārī on the death of his father, and received Ghāzipūr as tuyūl. He joined Toḍar Mal in Bihār, though anxious to go over to the rebels (pp 376-7). Not long afterwards, Mirzā Muhammad Hakīm, Akbar's brother, threatened to invade the Panjāb, and as the emperor had resolved to move personally against him, Ma'sūm thought it opportune to rebel. He seized Jaunpūr and drove away Tarsō Khān's men (No 32). As Akbar had known him from a child, he was inclined to pardon him, provided he left Jaunpūr, and accepted Awadh as tuyūl. This M did, but he continued to recruit, and when Shāh Qulī Mahram and Raja Bir Bar had failed to bring him to his senses, Shāhbāz Khān, on hearing of his conduct, determined to punish him. The events of the expedition have been related on p 437.

After his defeat near Awadh, M. threw himself into the town, but as several rebel chiefs had left him, he absconded, without even taking his family with him. He applied to two Zamindārs for assistance, but the first robbed him of his valuables, and the latter waylaid him, and had it not been for a bribe, M would not have escaped. About this time one of his friends of the name of Maqsūd joined him and supplied him with funds. M collected men and surprised and plundered the town of Bahraich. Vazīr Khan (No 41) and others moved from Hājīpūr against him, but M escaped them. After plundering the town of Muhammadābād, he resolved to surprise Jaunpūr, when the tuyūldārs of the district marched against him. Being hard pressed, he applied to M 'Aziz Koka (No 21) to intercede for him. Akbar again pardoned him, and gave him the Pargana Mihsī, Sarkār Champāran, as tuyūl. But M continued in a rebellious attitude, and when M 'Aziz prepared to punish him, he applied for leave to go to Court. He arrived, in the 27th year, in Āgra, and was again pardoned, chiefly at the request of Akbar's mother.

Soon after, on going home one night from the Darbar, he was killed on the road. An inquiry was ordered to be held, but without result, and people believed that Akbar had connived at the murder. Compare with this the fate of Nos 61 and 62, two other Bihar rebels.

158 Tolak Khan Qāchin

Tolak commenced to serve Babar. He joined Humayūn on his return from Persia. When the emperor had seized on Kābul, and M Kārām came near the town under the mask of friendship, many of Humayun's grandees went over to him, and the emperor was obliged to retreat northwards to Zahak (صاحك) and Bamiyan, where he hoped to find faithful officers. He sent, however, Tolak and several others to Kābul, to bring him correct information, but Tolak alone returned. For his faithfulness he was made Qurbegī.

Tolak accompanied Humayūn to India. After the emperor's death, he belonged to those who supported the young Akbar, and was instrumental in the capture at a dinner party of Mir Shāh Abū 'l Maṣāl. Afterwards, T went to Kābul, where he remained for a long time. In the 7th year of Akbar's reign, he was suddenly imprisoned by the young and hasty Ghanī Khān, son of Munṣim Khan (No 11), who was in charge of Kabul. Tolak managed to escape, and went to Bābā Khātūn, his jāgīr, collecting men to take revenge on Ghanī. A favourable opportunity presented itself when Ghanī one day had left Kabul for a place called Khawaja Sayyaran (حواجه ساران), to waylay a caravan from Balkh. He was just feasting with his companions, when Tolak Khān fell upon them. Ghanī, who was drunk, was caught, and Tolak marched to Khawaja Awash (حواجه اواش), a place two kos distant from Kabul. But he was opposed by Fazīl Beg (Munṣim's brother) and his son Abū 'l Fath (called wrongly 'Abd' 'l Fath, on p 318), and thought it advisable to let Ghanī go. Ghanī immediately collected men and pursued Tolak, who now prepared himself to go to Hindustān. Ghanī overtook him near the Āb i Ghorband and killed Babā Quchin, and several other relations and friends of Tolak. Tolak himself and his son Isfandiyyār managed to cut their way through the enemies, and arrived safely in India. Akbar gave Tolak a jāgīr in Mālwa, where he remained for a long time.

In the 28th year, T served under Khan Khānan (No 29) in Mālwa and Gujrat, and defeated Sayyid Dawlat in Kambhat. He distinguished himself in the fights with Muzaffar, and served under Qulij Khān (No 42) in the conquest of Bahroch. In the 30th year, he was attached to the corps which under M 'Aziz Koka was to be sent to the Dakhin. Having indulged in slander during the disagreement between M 'Aziz Koka and Shanab' 'd Dīn, he was imprisoned. After his release he was sent to Bengal, where in the 37th year he served under Man Singh against the Afghāns.

He died in the beginning of the 41st year (1004)

159 Khawaja Shams' 'd Dīn Khawafī

Khawafī means 'coming from Khawaf', which is a district and town in Khurasan. Our maps have 'Khaff' or "Khāf", due west of Hirāt, between Lat 60° and 61°. According to the Muṣjam' 'l Buldān, "Khawāf is a large town belonging [at the time the author wrote] to the revenue district of Nishāpūr. Near it lies on one side Būshanj which belongs to the districts of Hirāt, and on the other Zuzan. Khawāf contains one hundred villages and three towns (Sanjān, Sirāwand, and Kharjard)” Amīn Rāzī in his excellent Haft Iqlīm says that the district of Khawāf is famous for the kings, ministers, and learned men it has produced. The dynasty called, Āl-i Muzaffar, of whom seven kings ruled for 59 years over Fārs and Shirāz,¹ were Khawāfis. The author of the *Zakhīrat*² Khawānīn says that the people of Khawāf were known to be bigoted Sunnis. When Shāh ‘Abbās-i Ṣafawī, in the beginning of his reign, came to Khawāf, he forced the inhabitants to abuse, as is customary with Shī‘as, the companions of the Prophet (sabb-i ṣahāba), but as the people refused to do so, he had seventy of the principal men thrown down from a Masjid. Although then no one was converted, the Khawāfis are now as staunch Shī‘as as they were formerly bigoted Sunnis.

Khawāja Shams³ ‘d-Dīn was the son of Khawāja ‘Alā⁴ ‘d-Dīn, who was a man much respected in Khawāf. Shams accompanied Muzaffar Khān (No. 37), his countryman, to Bihār and Bengal. At the outbreak of the Military Revolt, he was caught by the rebels, and Ma‘sum-i Kābulī had him tortured with a view of getting money out of him. Shams was half dead, when at the request of ‘Arab Bahādur he was let off and placed under ‘Arab’s charge, who lay under obligations to him. But Shams eluded his vigilance, and fled to Singrām, Rāja of Khārakpūr (Bihār)⁵. As the roads were all held by the rebels, Shams could not make his way to the Imperial army. He collected men, attacked the rebels, and carried off some of their cattle, and when some time after dissensions broke out among the mutineers, he found means to escape. Akbar received him with every distinction, and appointed him in the same year (26th) to superintend the building of Fort Atak (built 990-1) on the Indus, near which the Imperial camp then was¹.

¹ They succumbed to Timūr. The Histories disagree regarding the length of their

After this, Shams was for some time Diwan of Kabul. In the 39th year, when Qulij Khān (No 42) after the death of Qasim Khān (No 59) was made Sūbadar of Kabul, Shams was made Diwan of the empire (Diwan-i Lu'li) vice Qulij². When Akbar in the 43rd year, after a residence of fourteen years in the Panjāb, moved to Agra to proceed to the Dakhin, the Begams with Prince Khurram (Shahjahan) were left in Lahor, and Shams was put in charge of the Panjāb, in which office he continued, after Akbar's mother had returned, in the 44th year, with the Begams to Āgra.

Shams died at Lāhor in the 45th year (1008). The family vault which he had built near Babā Hasan Abdāl having been used for other purposes (p 469) he was buried in Lahor in that quarter of the town which he had built, and which to his honour was called Khawāfīpūra.

He is said to have been a man of simple manners, honest and faithful, and practical in transacting business.

Like Shaykh Farid-i Bulhārī (No 99), whom he in many respects resembles, he died childless.

His brother, Khawāja Mumin Khawāfī, was made, on his death, Diwan of the Panjāb. Mumin's son, 'Abd' 'l Khaliq was a favourite of Āsaf Khan IV (p 398). He was killed by Mahabat Khan, when Āsaf had been removed by Mahābat from Fort Atak and imprisoned.

160 Jagat Singh, eldest of Raja Man Singh (No 30)

Kūwar Jagat Singh served in the 42nd year under Mirzā Ja'far Āsaf Khan (No 98) against Rāja Basū, zamindar of Mau and Pathan (Nūrpūr, N E Panjab). In the 44th year (1008) when Akbar moved to Malwa, and Prince Salim (Jahangir) was ordered to move against Rānā Amr Singh,

¹ The

... ..

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

Man Singh was called from Bengal and Jagat Singh was ordered to go to Bengal as na'ib of his father. While still at Agra he died from excessive drinking. Regarding J S's daughter, vide p 323 and No 175.

Maha Singh Jagat's younger son was appointed in his stead. His youth and inexperience inclined the Afghans under 'Usman and Shujawal Khan to attack him. They defeated him and Partab Singh son of Raja Bhagwan Das (No 336) near Bhadrak in Orisa (45th year). Man Singh hastened to Bengal and after defeating in 1009 the Afghans near Sherput 'Ata between Shipur (Sooree) in Birbhum and Murshidabad recovered Lower Bengal and Orisa.

Maha Singh died soon after like his father from excessive drinking.

161 Naqib Khan son of Mir 'Abd' l Latif of Qazwin.

Naqib Khan is the title of Mir Ghiyas' d Din 'Ali. His family belongs to the Sayfi Sayyids of Qazwin who were known in Iran for their Sunni tendencies. His grandfather Mir Yahya was a well known theologian and philosopher who had acquired such extraordinary proficiency in the knowledge of history that he was acquainted with the date of every event which had occurred from the establishment of the Muhammadan religion to his own time.

In the opening of his career Mir Yahya was patronized by Shah Tahmasp i Safawi who called him Yahya Ma'sum¹ and was treated by the king with such distinction that his enemies envious of his good fortune endeavoured to poison his patron's mind against him by representing that he and his son Mir 'Abd' l Latif were the leading men among the Sunnis of Qazwin. They at last prevailed so far as to induce the king when he was on the borders of Azarbayjan to order Mir Yahya and his son together with their families to be imprisoned at Isfahan. At that time his second son 'Ala' d Dawla was in Azarbayjan and sent off a special messenger to convey his intelligence to his father. Mir Yahya being too old and infirm to flee accompanied the king's messenger to Isfahan and died there after one year and nine months in A H 96² at the age of 77 years.²

Mir 'Abd' l Latif however immediately on receipt of his brother's

Some fix the date of Mir Yahya's death two years earlier communication, fled to Gilān,¹ and afterwards at the invitation of the emperor Humāyun went to Hindūstān, and arrived at Court with his family just after Akbar had ascended the throne. By him he was received with great kindness and consideration, and appointed in the second year of his reign as his preceptor. At that time Akbar knew not how to read and write, but shortly afterwards he was able to repeat some odes of Hafiz. The Mir was a man of great eloquence and of excellent disposition, and so moderate in his religious sentiments,² that each party used to revile him for his indifference."

"When Bayram Khan had incurred the displeasure of the emperor and had left Āgra and proceeded to Alwar with the intention, as it was supposed, of exciting a rebellion in the Panjāb, the emperor sent the Mir to him, to dissuade him from such an open breach of fidelity to his sovereign." Elliot, Index, 1c

Mir 'Abd' l Latif died at Sikrī on the 5th Rajab, 981,³ and was buried at Ajmīr near the Dargāh of Mir Sayyid Husayn Khing Suwar.

'Abd' l Latif had several sons. The following are mentioned: 1 Naqīb Khan, 2 Qamar Khān, 3 Mir Muhammad Sharif. The last was killed in 984 at Fathpūr by a fall from his horse, while playing hockey with the emperor (Bad II, 230). For Qamar Khan, vide No. 243.

Naqīb Khān arrived with his father in India, when Akbar after his accession was still in the Panjāb (Albarn II, 23) and soon became a personal friend of the emperor (II, 281). In the 10th year, he conveyed Akbar's pardon to Khan Zamān, for whom Mun'īm Khān had interceded (II, 281). In the 18th year, N accompanied the emperor on the forced march to Patan and Ahmadabad (p. 491, note), and in the following year to Patan. In the end of the 21st year, he took part in the expedition to Idar (III, 165) and was sent in the following year to Malwa or Gujrāt, after the appointment of Shuhab to the latter province. After the outbreak of the Military Revolt in Bengal, N with his brother Qamar Khan served under Toḡar Mal and Sadiq Khān in Bihār against Ma'sūm i Kābuli (III, 273). In the 26th year, he received the title of Naqīb Khān.⁴ Though

¹ The MSS. of the Ma'asir have سجستان, so also Badāoni 1c.

² He was the first that taught Akbar the principle of rukū' kull—peace with all the Persian term which Abu l Fazl so often uses to describe Akbar's policy of toleration. Abu l Fazl (Albarn II, 23) says that 'Abd' l Latif was accused in terms of being a Sunni and in Hindustan of being a Shi'ah.

³ Elliot, Index, 1c.
⁴ Elliot, Index, 1c.
 he does not even mention his name.

Man Singh was called from Bengal and Jagat Singh was ordered to go to Bengal as na'ib of his father. While still at Agra he died from excessive drinking. Regarding J S's daughter vide p 323 and No 175.

Maha Singh Jagat's younger son was appointed in his stead. His youth and inexperience inclined the Afghans under 'Usman and Shujawal Khan to attack him. They defeated him and Partab Singh son of Raja Bhagwan Das (No 336) near Bhadrak in Orisa (45th year). Man Singh hastened to Bengal and after defeating in 1009 the Afghans near Sherpur 'Ata between Shi'uri (Sooree) in Birbhūm and Murshidabad recovered Lower Bengal and Orisa.

Maha Singh died soon after like his father from excessive drinking.

161 Naqib Khan son of Mir 'Abdu l Latif of Qazwin.

Naqib Khan is the title of Mir Qhyyas' d Din 'Ali. His family belongs to the Sayfi Sayyids of Qazwin who were known in Iran for their Sunni tendencies. His grandfather Mir Yahya was a well known theologian and philosopher who had acquired such extraordinary proficiency in the knowledge of history that he was acquainted with the date of every event which had occurred from the establishment of the Muhammadan religion to his own time.

In the opening of his career Mir Yahya was patronized by Shah Tahmasp I Safawi, who called him Yahya Ma'sum¹ and was treated by the king with such distinction that his enemies envious of his good fortune endeavoured to poison his patron's mind against him by representing that he and his son Mir 'Abdu l Latif were the leading men among the Sunnis of Qazwin. They at last prevailed so far as to induce the king when he was on the borders of Azarbaijan to order Mir Yahya and his son together with their families to be imprisoned at Isfahan. At that time his second son 'Ala' d Dawla was in Azarbaijan and sent off a special messenger to convey his intelligence to his father. Mir Yahya being too old and infirm to flee accompanied the king's messenger to Isfahan and died there after one year and nine months in A H 962 at the age of 77 years.²

Mir 'Abdu l Latif however immediately on receipt of his brother's

¹ I e exempt probably from loss of life and property for life.

² Mir Yahya is the

Some fix the date of Mir Yahya's death two years earlier.

ommunication, fled to Gilān,¹ and afterwards at the invitation of the emperor Humāyūn went to Hindūstān, and arrived at Court with his family just after Akbar had ascended the throne. By him he was received with great kindness and consideration, and appointed in the second year of his reign as his preceptor. At that time Akbar knew not how to read and write, but shortly afterwards he was able to repeat some odes of Hāfiz. The Mir was a man of great eloquence and of excellent disposition, and so moderate in his religious sentiments,² that each party used to revile him for his indifference."

"When Bayrām Khān had incurred the displeasure of the emperor and had left Āgra and proceeded to Alwar with the intention, as it was supposed, of exciting a rebellion in the Panjāb, the emperor sent the Mir to him, to dissuade him from such an open breach of fidelity to his sovereign." Elliot, Index, l c

Mir ʿAbd^u ʿl Latif died at Sikrī on the 5th Rajab, 981,³ and was buried at Ajmir near the Dargah of Mir Sayyid Husayn Khān Suwar.

ʿAbd^u ʿl Latif had several sons. The following are mentioned: 1 Naqīb Khān, 2 Qamar Khān, 3 Mir Muhammad Sharif. The last was killed in 984 at Fathpūr by a fall from his horse, while playing hockey with the emperor (Bad II, 230). For Qamar Khān, vide No 243.

Naqīb Khān arrived with his father in India, when Akbar after his accession was still in the Panjāb (Albarn II, 23) and soon became a personal friend of the emperor (II, 281). In the 10th year, he conveyed Akbar's pardon to Khān Zamān, for whom Munʿim Khān had interceded (II, 281). In the 18th year, N accompanied the emperor on the forced march to Patan and Ahmadābad (p 491, note), and in the following year to Patan. In the end of the 21st year, he took part in the expedition to Idar (III, 165) and was sent in the following year to Mālwa or Gujrāt, after the appointment of Shihab to the latter province. After the outbreak of the Military Revolt in Bengal, N with his brother Qamar Khān served under Toḍar Mal and Sadiq Khān in Bihār against Maʿsūm ʿ Kabuli (III, 273). In the 26th year, he received the title of Naqīb Khān.⁴

¹ Elliot has by mistake 971. The Tārīkh of his death in the W. A. S.

during the reign of Akbar he did not rise above the rank of a Hazarī he possessed great influence at Court He was Akbar's reader and superintended the translations from Sanscrit into Persian mentioned on p 110 Several portions of the Tarīkh-i-Alfī also (p 113) are written by him

Naqib had an uncle of the name of Qazī 'Isa who had come from Iran to Akbar's Court where he died in 980 His son was Shah Ghazī Khan (vide No 155) Akbar married the latter to Sakina Banu Begam sister of Mirza Muhammad Hakim (Akbar's half brother) and as Naqib Khan in the 38th year reported that Qazī 'Isa had expressed a dying wish to present his daughter to Akbar the emperor married her Thus two of Naqib's cousins married into the imperial family

On the accession of Jahangir N was made a Commander of 1500 (Tuzuk p 12) He died in the 9th year of J's reign (beginning of 1023) at Ajmir and was buried at the side of his wife within the enclosure of Muḥimī Chishtī's tomb (Tuzuk p 199) His wife was a daughter of Mir Mahmud Munshiy-i-Maṅalīk who had been for twenty five years in Akbar's service (Badaoni III 321)

Naqib's son 'Abd'ul Latīf was distinguished for his acquirements He was married to a daughter of M Yusuf Khan (No 35) and died insane

Naqib Khan like his grandfather excelled in history It is said that he knew the seven volumes of the Rauzat' s-ṣafa by heart Jahangir in his Memoirs praises him for his remarkable memory and Badaoni who was Naqib's schoolfellow and friend says that no man in Arabia or Persia was as proficient in history as Naqib Once on being asked how many pigeons there were in a particular flock then flying he responded instantly without making a mistake of even one

169 Mir Murtaza Khān, a Sabzwari Sayyid

Mir Murtaza Khān was at first in the service of 'Adil Shah of Bijapur Murtaza Nizam Shah called him to Ahmadnagar and made him Military Governor of Barar and later Amīr'ul Umara' He successfully invaded at Nizam Shah's order 'Adil Shah's dominions But Nizam Shah suffered from insanity and the government was left in the hands of his Vakīl Shah Qulī Salabat Khān and as he reigned absolutely several of the nobles especially the tujuldars of Barar were dissatisfied Salabat Khān being bent on ridding them Mir Murtaza Khudawand Khān (No 151) Jamshed Khān i Shāra and others marched in 992 to Ahmadnagar Salabat Khān and Shahzāda Miran Husayn surprised them and routed them Mir Murtaza lost all his property and unable to resist Salabat Khān he went with Khudawand Khān to Akbar who made him a Commander of One Thousand his brother Qutb^u 'd Dīn (No 28), though Akbar had appointed the latter Atāliq of the Prince. But Khān i Kalān did not get on well with M M Hakim, especially when the Prince had given his sister Fakhr^u 'n Nisa Begum (a daughter of Humāyūn by Jūyak Begum, and widow of Mīr Shah 'Abd^u 'l Ma'ālī) to Khawja Hasan Naqshbandī in marriage. To avoid quarrels, Khān i Kalān left hābul one night and returned to Lāhor.

In the 13th year (976) the Atga Khayl was removed from the Panjab, and ordered to repair to Āgra. Khān i Kalān received Sambhal as jāgir, whilst Husayn Qulī Khān (No 24) was appointed to the Panjab. In 981, he was sent by Akbar in advance, for the reconquest of Gujrat (Bad II, 165). On the march near Sarohī (Ajmir), he was wounded by a Rājput, apparently without cause, but he recovered. After the conquest, he was made governor of Patan (Nahrwala). He died at Patan in 983.

He was a poet and wrote under the takhallus of 'Ghaznawī', in allusion to his birthplace. Bada'oni (III 287) praises him for his writing.

His eldest son Fa'iz Khān (No 156) was a Harārī and was killed when Mīrzā 'Azīz Koka (No 21) was shut up in Ahmadnagar. His second son, Farrukh Khān (No 232) was a Panṣadī. Nothing else is known of him.

17 Mīrza Sharaf^u 'd Dīn Husayn son of Khawja Muṣīn

He was a man of noble descent. His father, Khawja Muṣīn was the son of Khawand Mahmud second son of Khawja Kalān (known as Khawja Jagan Khawja) eldest son of the renowned saint Khawja Naṣīr^u 'd Dīn 'Ubayd^u 'llah Ahrārī. Hence Mīrza Sharaf^u 'd Dīn Husayn is generally called Ahrārī.

His grandfather, Khawand Mahmud, went to India, was honorably received by Humayūn and died at Kabul.

His father, Khawja Muṣīn, was a rich, but avaricious man, he held the tract of land called 'Rūd^hkhāna yī Nāshab', and served under 'Abd^u 'llah Khān ruler of Kāshghar. He was married to Kūyak Begum, daughter of Mīr 'Alā^u 'l Mulk of Tirmīz who is a daughter of Fakhr Jahan Begum daughter of Sultan Abu Sa'īd Mīrzā. "Hence the blood of Timur also flowed in the veins of Mīrza Sharaf^u 'd Dīn Husayn. As the son did not get on well with his father, he went to Akbar. Through the powerful influence of Mahum, Akbar's nurse, and Adham Khān, her son (No 19), Mīrza Sharaf was appointed Panḥazārī. In the 5th year, Akbar gave him his sister Bakhshī Banū Begum in marriage, and made him governor of Ajmir and Nagor. In 969, when Akbar went to Ajmir, Mīrza Sharaf joined the emperor, and distinguished himself in the siege of Maratha, which was defended by Jagmal and Devidās, the latter of whom was killed in an engagement subsequent to their retreat from the fort

In 970, Mirzā Sharaf's father came to Āgra, and was received with great honours by Akbar. In the same year, Mirzā Sharaf, from motives of suspicion, fled from Āgra over the frontier, pursued by Husayn Quli Khān (No 24), and other grandees. His father, ashamed of his son's behaviour, left for Hijāz, but died at Cambay. The ship on which was his body, foundered. Mirzā Sharaf stayed for some time with Changiz Khān, a Gujrāt noble, and then joined the rebellion of the Mirzās. When Gujrāt was conquered, he fled to the Dakhun, and passing through Baglāna, was captured by the Zamīndār of the place, who after the conquest of Sūrāt handed him over to Akbar. To frighten him Akbar ordered him to be put under the feet of a tame elephant, and after having kept him for some time imprisoned, he sent him to Muẓaffar Khān, Governor of Bengal (No 37), who was to give him a jāgīr, should he find that the Mirza showed signs of repentance. But if not, to send him to Makkah. Muẓaffar was waiting for the proper season to have him sent off when Mir Ma'ssum i Kabuli rebelled in Bihār. Joined by Babā Khān Qaqshāl, the rebels besieged Muẓaffar Khān in Tānda and overpowered him. Mirzā Sharaf fled to them, after having taken possession of the hidden treasures of Muẓaffar. But subsequently he became Ma'ssum's enemy. Each was waiting for an opportunity to kill the other. Ma'ssum at last bribed a boy of the name of Mahmud, whom Mirza Sharaf liked, and had his enemy poisoned. Mirza Sharaf's death took place in 988. He is wrongly called Siefuddeen in Stewart's History of Bengal (p 108).

18 Yusuf Muhammad Khān eldest son of Atga Khān (No 15)

He was Akbar's foster brother (koka or kūkalāsh). When twelve years old, he distinguished himself in the fight with Bayram (p 332 l 9), and was made Khān. When his father had been killed by Adham Khān (No 19) Akbar took care of him and his younger brother 'Aziz Koka (No 21). He distinguished himself during the several rebellions of Khān Zaman (No 13).

He died from ... Bad II, p 84

is evidently a royal bastard

¹ Generally called in European histories Ādam Khān but his name is آدم not آدم

His mother Māhum was one of Akbar's nurses (anga),¹ and attended on Akbar "from the cradle till after his accession" She appears to have had unbounded influence in the Harem and over Akbar himself, and Mun'im Khān (No 11), who after Bayrām's fall had been appointed Vakil, was subject to her counsel She also played a considerable part in bringing about Payram's fall, Part II, p 36

Adham Khan was a Panjhazāri, and distinguished himself in the siege of Mankot² Bayram Khān, in the third year, gave him Hatkānth,³ South East of Āgra, as jāgīr, to check the rebels of the Bhadauriya clan, who even during the preceding reigns had given much trouble Though he accused Bayram of partiality in bestowing bad jāgīrs upon such as he did not like Adham did his best to keep down the Bhadauriyas After Bayram's fall, he was sent, in 968, together with Pīr Muhammad Khān to Malwah, defeated Baz Bahadur near Sarangpūr and took possession of Bahadur's treasures and dancing girls His sudden fortune made him refractory, he did not send the booty to Āgra, and Akbar thought it necessary to pay him an unexpected visit, when Mahum Anga found means to bring her son to his senses Akbar left after four days On his departure, Adham prevailed on his mother to send back two beautiful dancing girls, but when Akbar heard of it, Adham turned them away They were captured, and killed by Mahum's orders Akbar knew the whole, but said nothing about it On his return to Āgra however, he recalled Adham and appointed Pīr Muhammad governor of Malwah

At Court Adham met again Atga Khān, whom both he and Mun'im Khān envied and hated On the 12th Ramadan 969, when Mun'im Khān Atga Khān, and several other grandees had a nightly meeting in the state hall at Āgra, Adham Khān with some followers, suddenly

¹ The o is the pronunciation given in the Calcutta Chaghatai Dictionary Misled by the printed editions of Badaoni Firishta Khafi Khan etc. I put on p 223 of my text edition of the Asin Mahur Aljah as if it was the name of a man. Idem Kāfi Khān I p 132 l 6 from below

² The Masdar gives a short history of this fort partly taken from the Albarnama

³ Hatkanth was held by Rājputs of Elliot's Glossary II p 86 and I 27, certainly not Lahore; for the old spelling author of the Makhzan Afghani wrote from the South war entered. All rose to greet him, when Adham struck Atga with his dagger, and told one of his companions (vide p 338) to kill him. He then went with the dagger in his hand towards the sleeping apartments of Akbar, who had been awakened by the noise in the state hall. Looking out from a window, he saw what had happened, rushed forward sword in hand, and met Adham on a high archway (aywān) near the harem. "Why have you killed my foster father you son of a bitch?" (bachcha ya lāda), cried Akbar. "Stop a moment, Majesty," replied Adham, seizing Akbar's arms, "first inquire." Akbar drew away his hands and struck Adham a blow in the face, which sent him "spinning" to the ground. "Why are you standing here gaping?" said Akbar to one of his attendants of the name of Farhat Khān, "bind this man." This was done, and at Akbar's orders Adham Khān was twice thrown down from the dais (suffa) of the Aywān to the ground, with his head foremost. The corpses of Adham and Atga were then sent to Dihli.

Mahum Anga heard of the matter, and thinking that her son had been merely imprisoned, she repaired though sick, from Dihli to Āgra. On seeing her, Akbar said, 'He has killed my foster father, and I have taken his life.' "Your Majesty has done well," replied Mahum, turning pale, and left the hall. Forty days after she died from grief, and was buried with her son in Dihli in a tomb which Akbar had built for them. For Adham's brother, vide No 60.

20 Pir Muhammad Khān of Shirwān¹

Nothing is known of his father. Pir Muhammad was a Mulla and attached himself to Bayram in Qandahar. Through Bayram's influence he was raised to the dignity of Amir on Akbar's accession. He distinguished himself in the war with Hemu, and received subsequently the title of *Nāsir*² 'i Mulk. His pride offended the Chaghatai nobles, and at last Bayram himself to whom he once refused admittance when he called on him at a time he was sick.

Bayram subsequently ordered him to retire, sent him, at the instigation of Shaykh Gada'i (vide p 282) to the Port of Bīwān and then forced him to go on a pilgrimage. Whilst on his way to Gujrat, Pir Muhammad received letters from Adham Khān (No 19) asking him to delay. He stayed for a short time at Rantanbhūr, but being pursued by Bayram's men, he continued his journey to Gujrat. This harsh treatment annoyed Akbar, and accelerated Bayram's fall. Whilst in Gujrat, P. M. heard of showed himself so disobedient that Akbar was compelled to deprive him temporarily of his rank

¹ In my text edition, p 223 No 20, dele سور Shirwan is also the birth place of Khāqani. The spelling Sāzrudn given in the Muṣṣam does not appear to be usual.

Though restored to his honours in the 23rd year, M 'Aziz remained unemployed till the 25th year (988), when disturbances had broken out in Bengal and Bihār (vide Muzaffar Khān, No 37) 'Aziz was promoted to a command of Five Thousand, got the title of A'zam Khān, and was dispatched with a large army to quell the rebellion His time was fully occupied in establishing order in Bihār Towards the end of the 26th year, he rejoined the emperor, who had returned from Kābul to Fathpūr Sikrī During 'Aziz's absence from Bihār, the Bengal rebels had occupied Hajipur, opposite Patna, and 'Aziz, in the 27th year, was again sent to Bihar, with orders to move into Bengal After collecting the Tuyūldars of Ilāhābad, Audh, and Bihār, he occupied Garhī, the "key" of Bengal After several minor fights with the rebels under Ma'ṣūm ḥ Kabuli, and Majnūn Khān Qaqshal, 'Aziz succeeded in gaining over the latter, which forced Ma'ṣum to withdraw The imperial troops then commenced to operate against Qitlū, a Lohānī Afghan, who during these disturbances had occupied Orissa and a portion of Bengal 'Aziz, however, took this ill and handing over the command to Shahbaz Khān ḥ Kambū, returned to his lands in Bihar Soon after, he joined Akbar at Ilahabad, and was transferred to Garha and Raisin (993)

In the 31st year (994), M 'Aziz was appointed to the Dakhīn but as the operations were frustrated through the envy of Shahab'ūd Dīn Ahmad (No 26) and other grandees, 'Aziz withdrew, plundered Ilchpūr in Barar, and then retreated to Gujrat where the Khan Khanan was (Briggs, II, 257)

In the 32nd year, Prince Murad married a daughter of M 'Aziz Towards the end of the 34th year, 'Aziz was appointed Governor of Gujrat in succession to the Khān Khanan In the 36th year he moved against Sultān Muzaffar, and defeated him in the following year He then reduced Jām and other zamīndars of Kachh to obedience and conquered Somnāt and sixteen other harbour towns (37th year) Junāgarh also the capital of the ruler of Sorath, submitted to him (5th Zī Qa'ḍa 999), and Miyan Khān and Taj Khān sons of Dawlat Khan ibn ḥ Amin Khan ḥ Ghorī joined the Muḡhuls 'Aziz gave both of them jagirs He had now leisure to hunt down Sultan Muzaffar, who had taken refuge with a Zamīndar of Dwarkā In a fight the latter lost his life, and Muzaffar fled to Kachh, followed by 'Aziz There also the Zamīndars submitted, and soon after delivered Sultān Muzaffar into his hands No sooner had he been brought to the Mirzā than he asked for permission to step aside to perform a call of nature, and cut his throat with a razor

In the 39th year Akbar recalled M 'Aziz, as he had not been at Court for several years, but the Mirzā dreading the religious innovations at Court,¹ marched against Dii under the pretext of conquering it. He made, however, peace with the "Farangī" and embarked for Hijāz at Balāwal, a harbour town near Somnāt accompanied by his six younger sons (K̄hurram, Anwar, 'Abd' 'lāh 'Abd' 'l Lātif, Murtaẓā, 'Abd' 'l-Ghafūr), six daughters, and about one hundred attendants. Akbar felt sorry for his sudden departure, and with his usual magnanimity, promoted the two eldest sons of the Mirza (M Shamsī and M. Shādmān)

M 'Aziz spent a great deal of money in Makkah, in fact he was so "fleeced", that his attachment to Islam was much cooled down, and being assured of Akbar's good wishes for his welfare, he embarked for India, landed again at Balāwal, and joined Akbar in the beginning of 1003. He now became a member of the "Divine Faith" (vide p 217, l. 33), was appointed Governor of Bihār, was made Vakil in 1004, and received Multān as Jāgīr

In the 45th year (1008) he accompanied Akbar to Āsir. His mother died about the same time, and Akbar himself assisted in carrying the coffin. Through the mediation of the Mirzā, Bahādur K̄han, ruler of Khandes, ceded Āsir to Akbar towards the end of the same year. Soon after, Prince K̄husraw married one of 'Aziz's daughters

At Akbar's death, Mān Singh and M 'Aziz were anxious to proclaim K̄husraw successor but the attempt failed, as Shaykh Farīd i Bukhārī and others had proclaimed Jahangīr before Akbar had closed his eyes. Mān Singh left the Fort of Āgra with K̄husraw, in order to go to Bengal. 'Aziz wished to accompany him, sent his whole family to the Raja, and superintended the burial of the deceased monarch. He countenanced K̄husraw's rebellion, and escaped capital punishment through the intercession of several courtiers and of Salima Sultan Begum and other princesses of Akbar's harem. Not long after, K̄hwaja Abu 'l Hasan laid before Jahangīr a letter written some years ago by 'Aziz to Raja 'Alī K̄hān of Khandes, in which 'Aziz had ridiculed Akbar in very strong language. Jahangīr gave 'Aziz the letter and asked him to read it before the whole Court which he did without the slightest hesitation thus incurring the blame of all the courtiers present Jahangir deprived him of his honours and lands and imprisoned him

¹ M 'Aziz ridiculed Akbar's tendencies to Hinduism and the orders of the Divine Faith. He used to call Fayzī and Abū 'l Fazl 'U-ṣman and 'Alī. His disparaging remarks led to his disgrace on the accession of Jahangīr, as related below

In the 3rd year of Jahangir's reign (1017) Mir Aziz was restored to his rank and appointed (nominally) to the command of Gujrat his eldest son Jahangir Quli Khan being his ra'is. In the 7th year when matters did not go on well in the Dakhin he was sent there with 10 000 men. In the 8th year (1022) Jahangir went to Ajmir and appointed at the request of Aziz Shahjahan to the command of the Dakhin forces whilst he was to remain as adviser. But Shahjahan did not like Mir Aziz on account of his partiality for Khusra and Mahabat Khan was dispatched from Court to accompany Aziz from Udaipur to Ajgra. In the 9th year Aziz was again imprisoned and put under the charge of Asaf Khan in the Fort of Gwalihar (Tuzuk p 127). He was set free a year later and soon after restored to his rank. In the 18th year he was appointed Atalq to Prince Dawar Bahsh who had been made Governor of Gujrat. Mir Aziz died in the 19th year (1033) at Ahmadabad.

Aziz was remarkable for ease of address, intelligence and his knowledge of history. He also wrote poems. Historians quote the following aphorism from his pithy sayings: A man should marry four wives—a Persian woman to have some body to talk to, a Khurasani woman for his housework, a Hindu woman for nursing his children and a woman from Mawarannahr to have some one to whip as a warning for the other three. vide Ibqalnama p 230.

Kola means foster brother and is the same as the Turkish Kukaldash or Kukaltash.

Mirza Aziz's sons: 1 Mirza Shamsi (No 163). He has been mentioned above. During the reign of Jahangir he rose to importance and received the title of Jahangir Quli Khan.

2 Mirza Shadman (No 233). He received the title of Shad Khan. Tuzuk p 99.

3 Mirza Khurram (No 177). He was made by Akbar governor of Junagarh in Gujrat, received the title of Kamal Khan under Jahangir and accompanied Prince Khurram (Shahjahan) to the Dakhin.

4 Mirza Abd' Ulah (No 257) received under Jahangir the title of Sardar Khan. He accompanied his father to Fort Gwalihar.

5 Mirza Anwar (No 206) was married to a daughter of Zayn Khan Kola (No 34).

All of them were promoted to commanderships of Five and Two Thousands. Aziz's other sons have been mentioned above.

A sister of M 'A'iz, Māh Bānū, was married to 'Abd' 'r-Rahim Khān Khānān (No 29)

22 Bahādur Khān i Shaybānī, (younger) brother of Khān Zamān (No 13)

His real name is Muhammad Sa'id Humāyūn on his return from Persia put him in charge of the District of Dāwar Hē then planned a rebellion and made preparations to take Qandahar, which was commanded by Shāh Muhammad Khān of Qalāt (No 95) The latter, however, fortified the town and applied to the king of Persia for help, as he could not expect Humāyūn to send him assistance A party of Qizilbashs attacked Bahādur, who escaped

In the 2nd year, when Akbar besieged Mankot, Bahādur, at the request of Bayrām Khān, was pardoned, and received Multān as jagir In the 3rd year, he assisted in the conquest of Malwa After Bayrām's fall, through the influence of Māhum Anga (vide p 310), he was made Valī, and was soon after appointed to Itāwa (Sirkar of Āgra)

Subsequently he took an active part in the several rebellions of his elder brother (vide p 336) After his capture, Shāhbāz Khān i Kambū (No 80) killed him at Akbar's order

Like his brother he was a man of letters (Bad III, 239)

23 Raja Bihārī Mal, son of Prithiraj Kachhwāha

In some historical MSS he is called Bihārī Mal There were two kinds of Kachhwaha, Rājāwat and Shaykhawat, to the former of which Bihārī Mal belonged Their ancient family seat was Amber in the Sūba of Ajmir Though not so extensive as Marwār, the revenues of Amber were larger

Bihārī Mal was the first Rājput that joined Akbar's Court The flight¹ of Humayūn from India had been the cause of several disturbances Hajī Khān, a servant of Sher Khān, had attacked Narnaul, the jagir of Majnūn Khān Qāqshāl (No 50), who happened to be a friend of the Raja's Through his intercession both came to an amicable settlement, and Majnūn Khān, after the defeat of Hemū (963), brought Bihārī Mal's services to the notice of the emperor The Rāja was invited to come to court, where he was presented before the end of the first year of Akbar's reign At the interview Akbar was seated on a wild (mast)² elephant,

¹ The flight¹ of Humayūn from India was a delicate subject for Mughul historians. Abu 'l Fazl generally uses euphemisms as an uđiqā'at ya' naguzar, 'that unavoidable event' or ri'ālat (departure), or amadan i Sher Ahān, the coming of Sher Khān (not Sher Shah), etc and as the animal got restive and ran about, the people made way; only Bihāri Mal's Rājput attendants, to the surprise of Akbar, stood firm.

² Mast, in rut, furious — P]

In the 6th year of his reign (969), Akbar made a pilgrimage to the tomb of Mu'īn i Chishtī at Ajmīr, and at Kalāh, Chaghtā Khān reported to the Emperor, that the Rāja had fortified himself in the passes, as Sharaf^u 'd Dīn Husayn (No 17), Governor of Malwa, had made war upon him chiefly at the instigation of Sojā, son of Pūran Mal, elder brother of the Rāja. Sharaf^u 'd Dīn had also got hold of Jagnāth (No 69), son of the Rāja, Rāj Singh (No 174), son of Askaran, and Kangār, son of Jagmal (No 134), his chief object being to get possession of Amber itself. At Deosa, 40 miles east of Jaipūr, Jaima, son of Rūpsī (No 118), Bihāri Mal's brother, who was the chief of the country, joined Akbar, and brought afterwards, at the request of the emperor, his father Rūpsī. At Sangānūr, at last, Bihāri Mal with his whole family, attended, and was most honorably received. His request to enter Akbar's service and to strengthen the ties of friendship by a matrimonial alliance, was granted. On his return from Ajmīr, Akbar received the Rāja's daughter at Sambhar, and was joined, at Ratan, by the Rāja himself, and his son Bhagawant Das and his grandson Kūwar Man Singh. They accompanied Akbar to Āgra, where Bihāri Mal was made a Commander of Five Thousand. Soon after Bihāri Mal returned to Amber. He died at Āgra (Ṭabaqāt).

Amber is said to have been founded A D 967 by Dhola Ray, son of Sora, of whom Bihāri Mal was the 18th descendant¹.

The Akbernāma mentions the names of four brothers of Bihāri Mal: 1 Pūran Mal, 2 Rūpsī (No 118), 3 Askaran (vide No 174), 4 Jagmal (No 134). Bihāri Mal is said to have been younger than Pūran Mal, but older than the other three.

Three sons of Bihāri Mal were in Akbar's service—1 Bhagwan Das (No 27), 2 Jagannath (No 69) and 3 Salhadī (No 267).

21 Khān Jahan Husayn Qulī Khān,² son of Walī Beg Zū 'l Qadr.

He is the son of Bayram Khān's sister. His father Walī Beg Zū 'l Qadr was much attached to Bayram, and was captured in the fight in the Pargana of لکھو (Jalindhar, vide p 332 l 5) but died immediately afterwards from the wounds received in battle. Akbar looked upon him as the chief instigator of Bayram's rebellion, and ordered his head to be cut off which was sent all over Hindustan. When it was brought to Itawa, Bahadur Khan (No 22) killed the foot soldiers (tauāchīs) that carried it. Khan Jahan had brought Bayram's insignia from Mewat to Akbar, and as he was a near relation of the rebel, he was detained and left under charge of Āsaf Khan 'Abd^u 'I Majid, Commander of Dīhlī. When Bayrām had been pardoned, Khan Jahan was released. He attached himself henceforth to Akbar.

¹ The present Maharāja of Jaipur is the 34th descendant, vide Selections Government of India No. LXV, 1868. Amber was deserted in 1728 when Jai Singh II founded the modern Jaipur.

² Husayn Qulī Beg Ma'ārif

In the 8th year (end of 971) he was made a Khan and received orders to follow up Sharaf^u 'd Dīn Husayn (No 17). Ajmir and Nagor were given him as tuyūl. He took the Fort of Jodhpur from Chandar Sen, son of Ray Maldeo, and distinguished himself in the pursuit of Uday Singh during the siege of Chitor.

In the 13th year (976) he was transferred to the Panjab, whither he went after assisting in the conquest of Rantanbhur.

In the 17th year he was ordered to take Nagarkot which had belonged to Raja Jai Chand. Badaoni says (II, p 161) that the war was merely undertaken to provide Bir Bar with a jagir. Akbar had Jai Chand imprisoned, and Budhⁱ Chand, his son, thinking that his father was dead, rebelled. Khan Jahan, on his way, conquered Fort Kotla, reached Nagarkot in the beginning of Rajab 980, and took the famous Bhawan temple outside of the Fort. The siege was progressing and the town reduced to extremities, when it was reported that Ibrahim Husayn Mirza and Mas'ūd Mirza had invaded the Panjab. Khan Jahan therefore accepted a payment of five mans of gold and some valuables, and raised the siege. He is also said to have erected a Masjid in front of Jai Chand's palace in the Fort, and to have read the Khutba in Akbar's name (Friday, middle of Shawwal 980).

Accompanied by Isma'īl Qulī Khan and Mirza Yusuf Khan i Rīzawī (No 35), Khan Jahan marched against the Mirzas, surprised them in the Pargana of Talamba, 40 los from Multan, and defeated them. Ibrahim Husayn Mirza escaped to Multan, but Mas'ūd Husayn and several other Mirzas of note were taken prisoners.

In the 18th year (981) when Akbar returned to Āgra after the conquest of Gujrāt, he invited his Amirs to meet him, and Khan Jahan also came with his prisoners, whom he had put into cow skins with horns on, with their eyelids sewn together. Akbar had their eyes immediately opened, and even pardoned some of the prisoners. The victorious general received the title of Khan Jahan a title in reputation next to that of Khan Khanan. About the same time Sulayman ruler of Badakhshan (p 326) had come to India driven away by his grandson Shahrul (No 7) and Khan Jahan was ordered to assist him in recovering his kingdom. But as in 983 Mun'im Khan Khanan died and Bengal was unsettled Khan Jahan was recalled from the Panjab before he had moved into Badakhshan and was appointed to Bengal Raja Todar Mal being second in command. At Bhagalpur Khan Jahan was met by the Amirs of Bengal and as most of them were Chaharta nobles he had as Qizilbash to contend with the same difficulties as Bayram Khan had had. He repulsed the Afghans who had come up as far as Garhi and Lina but he met with more decided opposition at Ag Mahal where Da'ud Khan had fortified himself. The Imperialists suffered much from the constant sallies of the Afghans. Khan Jahan complained of the wilful neglect of his Amirs and when Akbar heard of the death of Khujaja 'Abdu'llah Naqshbandi who had been purposely left unsupported in a skirmish he ordered Muzaffar Khan Governor of Bihar (No 37) to collect his Jagirdars and join Khan Jahan (984). The fights near Ag Mahal were now resumed with new vigour. During a skirmish a cannon ball wounded Junayd Kararani Da'ud's uncle¹ which led to a general battle (15th Rabi' II 984). The right wing of the Afghans commanded by Kala Pahar gave way when the soldiers saw their leader wounded and the centre under Da'ud was defeated by Khan Jahan. Da'ud himself was captured and brought to Khan Jahan who sent his head to Akbar.

[¹ General Cunningham tells me that the correct name is Budhī (Sansk. Vriddhī) not Budi, vide Index.—B.]

After this great victory Khan Jahan dispatched Todar Mal to Court and moved to Satgaw (Hughli) where Da'ud's family lived. Here he defeated the remnant of Da'ud's adherents under Jamshed and Mitti and reannexed Satgaw which since the days of old had been called *Bulghakkhana*² to the Mughul empire. Da'ud's mother came to Khan Jahan as a suppliant.

Soon after Malku Sa³ Raja of Kuch Bihar sent tribute and 54 elephants which Khan Jahan dispatched to Court.

With the defeat and death of Da'ud Bengal was by no means conquered. New troubles broke out in Bhati⁴ where the Afghans had ¹ The Ed. Bhl Ind ca of Badr on (II 238) has by mistake uncle. Badaoni says that the battle took place near Colgong (Khalasaw).

² This nickname of Satgaw is evidently old. Even the word bulghak (rebellion) which may be found on almost every page of the Mir'at & Frus Sakh is scarcely ever met with in historical works from the 10th century. It is now quite obsolete.

[³ Bal Gosā. — B.]

⁴ For BATI see below under No 32.

collected under Karim Dād, Ibrāhīm, and the rich Zamīndār Ṣā' (عسلی) With great difficulties Khān Jahān occupied that district, assisted by a party of Afghāns who had joined him together with Da'ūd's mother at Go,ās, and returned to Sihhatpūr, a town which he had founded near Tanda. Soon after, he felt ill, and died after a sickness of six weeks in the same year (19th Shawwāl, 986)

Abū 'l Fazl remarks that his death was opportune, inasmuch as the immense plunder collected by Khān Jahān in Bengal, had led him to the verge of rebellion

Khān Jahan's son, Rīza Qulī (No 274) is mentioned below among the Commanders of Three Hundred and Fifty. In the 47th year he was made a Commander of Five Hundred with a contingent of 300 troopers. Another son, Rahīm Qulī, was a Commander of Two Hundred and Fifty (No 333). For Khān Jahān's brother, vide No 46

25 Sa'īd Khān, son of Ya'qūb Beg son of Ibrāhīm Jabūq

He is also called Sa'īd Khān Ḥaghtā'. His family had long been serving under the Timūrides. His grandfather Ibrāhīm Beg was an Amīr of Humayūn's, and distinguished himself in the Bengal wars. His son, Yusuf Beg, was attacked near Jaunpūr by Jalāl Khān (i e, Saḥīm Shāh), and killed. His other son also, Ya'qūb Sa'īd's father distinguished himself under Humayūn. According to the Tabaqāt he was the son of the brother of Jahāngīr Qulī Beg, governor of Bengal under Humayūn.

Sa'īd rose to the highest honours under Akbar. He was for some time Governor of Multān, and was appointed, in the 22nd year, atālīq of Prince Dānyāl. Some time after, he was made Sūbahdar of the Panjāb, in supercession to Shāh Qulī Muhrīm (No 45), of whom the inhabitants of the Panjāb had successfully complained. Sa'īd again was succeeded in the governorship by Rāja Bhagwān Dās (No 27), and received Sambhal as tuyūl. In the 28th year, he was called to Court, was made a Commander of Three Thousand, and was sent to Hājipur (Patna) as successor to Mīrzā Ṣāzī-Koka (No 21). In the 32nd year, when Vazīr Khān (No 41) had died in Bengal, Sa'īd was made Governor of Bengal, which office he held till the 40th year. He was also promoted to the rank of Panjahzārī. In the 40th year, Mān Singh (No 30) being appointed to Bengal, he returned to Court, and was, in the following year, again made Governor of Bihār. In the 48th year (1001), when Mīrzā Ghāzī rebelled in Thatha after the death of his father, Mīrzā Jānī Beg (No 47), Sa'īd was appointed to Multān and Bhsḥkar, and brought about the submission of the rebel.

After the accession of Jahāngīr, he was offered the Governorship of the Panjāb on the condition that he should prevent his eunuchs from committing oppressions, which he promised to do (Tuzuk, p 6, l 2) He died, however, before joining his post, and was buried "in the garden of Sarhind".

His affairs during his lifetime were transacted by a Hindū¹ of the name of Chetr Bhoj Sa'id had a passion for eunuchs, of whom he had 1,200¹ One of these Khawājasarās, Hūlal, joined afterwards Jahāngīr's service, he built Hūlālābād, six kos N W from Āgra, near Rankatta,² regarding which the Ma'ā'ir tells an amusing incident Another eunuch, Ishiyar Khan, was his Vakīl, and another, Istibār Khan, the Fawjdār of his jagīr For Sa'id's brother, vide No 70

26 Shihāb Khan, a Sayyid of Nishāpūr

His full name is Shihāb^u 'd Dīn Ahmad Khān He was a relation and friend of Māhum Anga (p 341), and was instrumental in bringing about Bayram's fall From the beginning of Akbar's reign, he was Commander of Dīhli When Akbar, at the request of Māhum, turned from Sikandarābād to Dīhli to see his sick mother, Shihāb Khān told him that his journey, undertaken as it was without the knowledge of Bayram Khān, might prove disastrous to such grandees as were not Bayram's friends, and the Chaghtā'i nobles took this opportunity of reiterating their complaints, which led to Bayram's disgrace

As remarked on p 337, Shihāb served in Malwah against 'Abd'illah Khān

In the 12th year (975) he was appointed Governor of Malwah, and was ordered to drive the Murzas from that province In the 13th year, he was put in charge of the Imperial domain lands, as Muzaffar Khān (No 37) had too much to do with financial matters

In the 21st year, he was promoted to a command of Five Thousand, and was again appointed to Malwah, but he was transferred, in the following year, to Gujrat, as Vazīr Khān (No 41) had given no satisfaction He was, in the 28th year, succeeded by Istīmad Khān (No 119), and intended to go to Court, but no sooner had he left Ahmadābad than he was deserted by his servants, who in a body joined Sultan Muzaffar The events of the Gujrat rebellion are known from the histories When Mirza Khān Khānān (No 29) arrived Shihāb was attached to Quliy

¹ If not acquired in Bengal this predilection could not have been better satisfied elsewhere The eunuchs of Bengal and Sihat were renowned, for interesting passages vide below, Third Book Suba of Bengal and Tuzuk-i-Jahāngīrī, pp 72-328

² Sikandra (or Bhushtabād) where Akbar's tomb is lies halfway between Āgra and Rankatta

Khān (Mālwah Corps) He distinguished himself in the conquest of Bahrōch (992), and received that district as tuyūl. In the 34th year (997), he was again made Governor of Mālwa, in succession to M ^ʿAziz Koka (No 21)

Shihāb died in Malwah (Ujain, Tabaqāt) in 993. His wife, Bābā Āghā, was related to Akbar's mother, she died in 1005

During the time Shihāb was Governor of Dīhli, he repaired the canal which Firūz Shah had cut from the Parganah of Khīzrabād to Safidūn, and called it Nahr ʿ Shihāb. This canal was again repaired, at the order of Shāhjahān, by the renowned Makramat Khān, and called نهر فاضل, Fayz Nahr, (20th year of Shahjahān). During the reign of Awrangzeb it was again obstructed but has now again been repaired and enlarged by the English (Asār's sanādīd)

27 Rāja Bhagwan Das, son of Raja Bihāri Mal

In the histories we find the spellings Bhagwant, Bhagwānt, and Bhagwān. He joined Akbar's service with his father (No 23). In 980, in the fight with Ibrāhīm Husayn Mirza near Sarnal (Briggs, Sartāl), he saved Akbar's life. He also distinguished himself against the Rānā of Idar, whose son, Amr Singh, he brought to Court. When, in the 23rd year, the Kachwahas had their tuyūls transferred to the Panjāb, Rāja Bh D was appointed Governor of the province. In the 29th year, Bh's daughter was married to Prince Salim, of which marriage Prince Khusraw was the offspring. In the 30th year, Bh D was made a commander of Five Thousand and Governor of Zābulistān, as Man Singh was sent against the Yūsufzais. But Akbar, for some reason, detained him. In Khayrabad, Bh D had a fit of madness, and wounded himself with a dagger, but he recovered soon after in the hands of the Court Doctors. In the 32nd year, the jāgirs of the Rāja and his family were transferred to Bihar, Man Singh taking the command of the province.

Raja Bh D died in the beginning of 998 at Lahor, a short time after Raja Todar Mal (No 39). People say that on returning from Tolar Mal's funeral, he had an attack of stranguary, of which he died. He had the title of Amir ʿ Umarā

The Jamī Masjīd of Lahor was built by him

Regarding his sons, vide Nos 30, 101, 336

28 Qutb ʿ d Dīn Khān, youngest brother of Atga Khān (15)

As he belonged to the Atga Khayl (vide p 338), his tuyūl was in the Panjab. He founded several mosques, etc., at Lahor

In the 9th year (972), Akbar sent him to Kābul. During his stay there, he built a villa at Ghaznin, his birth place. On the transfer of the “Atga Khayl” from the Panjāb, Q was appointed to Mālwa. After the conquest of Gujrāt, he received as jāgīr the Sirkār of Bahrōch (Broach), “which lies south of Ahmadābād, and has a fort on the bank of the Narbuddā near its mouth.” Subsequently he returned to Court, and was made a Commander of Five Thousand.

In the 24th year (12th Rajab, 987), he was appointed atāliq to Prince Salīm, received a dāgān,¹ and the title of Beglar Begī. Akbar also honoured him by placing at a feast Prince Salīm on his shoulders. Afterwards Q was again appointed to Bahrōch “as far as Nazrbār.” In the 28th year (991), Muzaffar of Gujrāt tried to make himself independent. Q did not act in concert with other officers, and in consequence of his delay and timidity he was attacked and defeated by Muzaffar near Baroda. O’s servants even joined Muzaffar, whilst he himself retreated to the Fort of Baroda. After a short time he capitulated and surrendered to Muzaffar, who had promised not to harm him or his family. But at the advice of a Zamīndār, Muzaffar went to Bahroch, occupied the fort in which Q’s family lived, and confiscated his immense property (10 lacs of rupees) as also 14 lacs of imperial money. Immediately after, Muzaffar had Q murdered.

His son, Nawrang Khān, served under Mirzā Khān Khānān (No 29) in Gujrāt (992), received a jāgīr in Mālwa and subsequently in Gujrāt. He died in 999.

The MSS of the Tabaqāt, which I consulted, contain the remark that Nawrang Khān was a Commander of Four Thousand, and was, in 1001, governor of Jūnāgarh.

His second son, Gūjar Khān, was a Haftsadī (No 193), and served chiefly under Mirzā Khān Koka (No 21). He also had a tuyūl in Gujrāt.

29 Khān Khānān Mirzā ‘Abdū ‘r-Rahīm, son of Bayrām Khān.

His mother was a daughter of Jamāl Khān of Mewāt.² In 961, when Humayūn returned to India, he enjoined his nobles to enter into matrimonial alliances with the Zamīndārs of the country, and after marrying the eldest daughter of Jamāl Khān, he asked Bayrām Khān to marry the younger one.

Mirzā ‘Abdū ‘r-Rahīm was born at Lāhor, 14th Safar 964. When Bayrām Khān was murdered at Patan in Gujrāt (p 332) his camp was plundered

¹ A kind of warm mantle—a great distinction under the Timūrides.

² He was the nephew of Hasan Khān of Mewāt (Bar I, p 361). In the fourth Book of the A’in, ‘Abū’l Faṣl says that the Khānzādas of Mewāt were chiefly converted Janūha Rājputs.

M M distinguished himself under Shāh Murād in the Dakhīn invasion. When the Prince left Ahmadnagar, Sādiq Khān (No 43) remained in Mahkār (South Barar), and M M in Ilchpūr, to guard the conquered districts. During his stay there, he managed to take possession of Fort Gawil, near Ilchpur (43rd year, 1007), persuading the commanders Wajih^u 'd Dīn and Biswas Ra, o, to enter Akbar's service. Later, M M distinguished himself in the conquest of Ahmadnagar under Prince Danyāl, and received a higher Mansāb, as also a flag and a naqqāra.

Mir Murtaza is not to be confounded with the learned Mir Murtaza Sharif i Shirāzi (Badā'onī III, 320), or the Mir Murtaza mentioned by Badā'onī III, 279.

163 Shamsī, son of Khān i A'zam Mirza Koka (No 21)

He was mentioned above on pp 345 and 346. At the end of Akbar's reign, Shamsī¹ was a Commander of Two Thousand.

In the third year of Jahāngir's reign, he received the title of Jahāngir Quli Khān, vacant by the death of Jahāngir Quli Khān Lala Beg, Governor of Bihār, and was sent to Gujrāt as na'ib of his father. Mirza 'Aziz had been nominally appointed Governor of that Sūba, but as he had given the emperor offence, he was detained at Court. Subsequently Shamsī was made a Commander of Three Thousand and Governor of Jaunpūr. Whilst there, Prince Shāhjahān had taken possession of Bengal, and prepared himself to march on Patna, sending 'Abd^u 'līh Khān Firūz Jang and Raja Bhīm in advance towards Ilahābad. On their arrival at Chausā, Shamsī left Jaunpur, and joined Mirzā Rustam (No 9), Governor of the Suba of Ilahābad.

On Shāhjahān's accession, Shamsī was deposed, but allowed to retain his Mansāb. A short time after, he was appointed to Surat² and Jūrāghadh, vice Beglar Khān. He died there in the 5th year of Shāhjahān's reign (1041).

Shamsī's son, Bahrām, was made by Shāhjahān a Commander of 1,000, 500 horse (Pādishāhn I, b, 309) and appointed to succeed his father. Whilst in Gujrāt, he built a place called after him Bahrāmpura. He died in the 18th year of Shāhjahān's reign (Pādishāhn II, p 733).

164 Mir Jamāl^u 'd Dīn Husayn, an Injū Sayyid

From a remark in the Wassāf it appears that a part of Shiraz was called Injū, vide Journal Asiatic Society Bengal, 1868, p 67 to p 69.

Mir Jamāl^u 'd Dīn Injū belongs to the Sayyids of Shiraz who trace their descent to Qāsimarrāsī (?) ibn i Hasan ibn i Ibrāhīm 'Ṭabātībā¹, Husaynī. Mir Shāh Mahmūd and Mir Shāh Abū Turab two later members of this renowned family, were appointed during the reign of Shah Tahmasp I Safawī, at the request of the Chief Justice of Persia, Mir Shams^u 'd Din Asad^u 'Ilāh of Shushtar, the first as Shaykh^u 'l Islām of Persia, and the second as Qaziy^u 'l Quzāt Mir Jamāl^u 'd Din is one of their cousins

¹ Shamsī is an abbreviation for Shams^u 'd Dīn

² Sorath — B.

Mir Jamāl^u 'd Din went to the Dakhīn, the kings of which had frequently intermarried with the Injūs. He afterwards entered Akbar's service, took part in the Gujrāt wars, and was present in the battle of Patan (p 432). Later he was sent to Bengal. At the outbreak of the Military Revolt, he was with Muzaffar (Akbarnāma III, p 255). In the 30th year (993) he was made a Commander of Six Hundred, and accompanied shortly after, Asram Khan (No 21) on his expedition to Gadha and Ra'īsīn (Akbarnāma, III, 472). In the 36th year, he had a jagir in Malwa, and served under Asram Khan in the Dakhīn. His promotion to the rank of a Hazarī took place in the 40th year. When in the 45th year the fort of Āsīr had been conquered, Ādil Shah, king of Bijapūr wished to enter into a matrimonial alliance with Akbar, and offered his daughter to Prince Danyal. To settle matters, Akbar dispatched the Mir in 1009 (Akbarnāma III, 846) to the Dakhīn. But the marriage only took place in 1013, near Patan. After this, accompanied by the Historian Frishta, he went to Āgra, in order to lay before the emperor "such presents and tribute, as had never before come from the Dakhīn."

At the end of Akbar's reign, Mir J was a Commander of Three Thousand. Having been a favourite of Prince Salīm, he was promoted after the Prince's accession to the post of a Chahar Hazarī, and received a naqqira and a flag. When Khusraw rebelled, the Mir received the order to effect an understanding by offering Khusraw the kingdom of Kābul with the same conditions under which M Muhammad Hakim, Akbar's brother, had held that province. But the Prince did not consent, and when he was subsequently made a prisoner (p 455) and brought before his father, Hasan Beg (No 167), Khusraw's principal agent told Jahangir that all Amirs of the Court were implicated in the rebellion, Jamāl^u 'd Din had only a short time ago asked him (Hasan Beg) to promise him an appointment as Panjhazārī. The Mir got pale and confused, when Mirza Asrız Koka (No 21) asked the emperor not to listen to such absurdities, Hasan Beg knew very well that he would have to suffer death and therefore tried to involve others, he himself (Asrız) was the chief conspirator, and ready as such to undergo any punishment. Jahāngir consoled the Mir, and appointed him afterwards Governor of Bihār. In the 11th year, Mir Jamal received the title of Asad^u 'd Dawla

On this occasion, he presented to the emperor a dagger, inlaid with precious stones, the making of which he had himself superintended when at Bijapur. At the top of the handle, he had a yellow yāqut fixed, perfectly pure, of the shape of half an egg, and had it surrounded by other yāquts and emeralds. The value was estimated at 50,000 Rupees.

In 1621, Jahangir pensioned him off, because he was too old, allowing him four thousand rupees per mensem. The highest rank that he had reached was that of a brevet Panjhzari with an actual command of Three Thousand and Five Hundred. In 1623, at the eighteenth anniversary of Jahangir's accession, he presented the emperor a copy of the great Persian Dictionary, entitled Farhang-i Jahāngīrī, of which he was the compiler. The first edition of it had made its appearance in 1017¹.

After having lived for some time in Bahrā ich, Mir Jamal returned to Āgra, where he died.

Mir Jamāl^u 'd Dīn had two sons. 1. Mīr Amīn^u 'd Dīn. He served with his father, and married a daughter of 'Abd^u'r Rahīm Khān Khānān (No 29). He died when young.

2. Mīr Husam^u 'd Dīn. He married the sister of Ahmad Beg Khān, brother's son of Ibrāhīm Khān Fath Jang (Nur Jahān's brother). Jahangir made him Governor of Āsir, which fort he handed over to Prince Shahjahān during his rebellion. On Shāhjahān's accession, he was made a Commander of 4,000, with 3,000 horse, received a present of 50,000 Rupees, and the title of Murtazā Khān. He was also made Governor of Thathah, where he died in the second year (1039).

Mir Husam's sons—1. Samsām^u 'd Dawla. He was made Dīwān of Shah Shuja^c in the 21st year. In the 28th year, he was appointed Governor of Orisa with a command of 1,500, and 500 horse. He died in the end of the same year. 2. Nūr^u 'Ulāh. He is mentioned in the Pādīshāhnāma (I, b, p 312) as a Commander of Nine Hundred, 300 horse.

165. Sayyid Raju, of Barha.

Historians do not say to which of the four divisions (vide p 427) the Barha clan Rājū belongs.

He served in the 21st year, under Man Singh, and in the 28th year, under Jagannāth (No 69), against the Ranā. While serving under the latter, Raju commanded the Imperial garrison of Mandalgarh, and successfully conducted an expedition against a detachment of the Ranā's troops. In the 30th year, Jagannāth and Rājū attacked the Ranā in his residence, but he escaped.

¹ Regarding the Farhang-i Jahāngīrī vide Journal Asiatic Society Bengal, 1868 pp 12 to 15 and 65 to 69.

Later, Rājū served under Prince Murād, Governor of Mālwa, whom, in the 36th year, he accompanied in the war with Rāja Madhukar; but as the Prince was ordered by Akbar to return to Mālwa, Rājū had to lead the expedition. In the 40th year, he served in the siege of Ahmadnagar. Once the enemies surprised the Imperialists, and did much damage to their cattle. Rājū attacked them, but was killed in the fight, together with several of his relations (A. H. 1003)

166 Mīr Sharif-i Āmulī

His antecedents and arrival in India have been mentioned above on p. 185. In the 30th year (993) Prince Mirzā Muhammad Ḥakīm of Kābul died, and the country was annexed to India. Mīr Sharif was appointed Amīn and Sadr of the new province. In the following year, he served under Mān Singh in Kābul. In the 36th year,¹ he was appointed in the same capacity, though with more extensive powers, to Bihār and Bengal. In the 43rd year, he received Ajmīr as aqtāʿ, and the Pargana of Mohān near Lakhnau, as tuyūl. During the siege of Āsīr, he joined the Imperial camp with his contingent, and was well received by the emperor.

He is said to have risen to the rank of a Commander of Three Thousand. He was buried at Mohān. On his death, neither books nor official papers were found, his list of soldiers contained the names of his friends and clients, who had to refund him six months' wages per annum.

Jahāngīr in his memoirs (Tuzuk, p. 23) praises him very much.

The Tabaqāt says, "Mīr Sharif belongs to the heretics of the age. He is well acquainted with sūfism and is at present (1001) in Bihār."

Note on the Nuqtawīyya Sect (نقطیہ)

It was mentioned above (p. 186) that Mīr Sharif spread in India doctrines which resembled those of Mahmūd of Basakhwān.² The curious sect which Mahmūd founded, goes by the name of Mahmūdīyya, or Wāhidīyya, or Nuqtawīyya, or Umanū.³ Mahmūd called himself Shakhs-i uāhid, or "the individual", and professed to be the Imām Mahdī, whose appearance on earth ushers in the end of the world. According to the Calcutta edition of the Dabistan and Shea's Translation, he lived about A H 600, but the MSS of the Ma'āṣir have A H 800 which also agrees with Badaonī's statement that Mahmud lived at the time of Tīmūr. The sect found numerous adherents in Iran but was extinguished by Shāh 'Abbas 1 Māzī¹ who killed them or drove them into exile.

¹ The 1001 Indian edition was printed, have Nabari, which was given on p. 185. For Umanū, Shea's translation of the Dabistān has Imanū, but Umanū (umand) is, no doubt, the plural of amān.

Mahmud had forced into his service a passage from the Qur'an (Sur XVII, 81), 'asā an yab'asa k' rabbu k' maqām'an mahmūd'an, 'peradventure thy Lord will raise thee to an honorable (mahmūd) station.' He maintained that the human body (jasād) had since its creation been advancing in purity, and that on its reaching a higher degree of perfection 'Mahmud' would arise, as indicated in the passage from the Qur'an, and with his appearance the dispensation of Muhammad would come to an end. He taught the transmigration of souls, and said that the beginning of everything was the nuqta yī khāk, or earth atom, from which the vegetables, and from these the animals, arose. The term nuqta yī khāk has given rise to their name Nuqtawīs. For other of Mahmūd's tenets, vide Shea's translation of the Dabistan, vol III, pp 12 to 26.

Some of Mahmūd's doctrines must have been of interest to Akbar, whose leanings towards the "man of the millennium", transmigration of souls, etc., have been mentioned above, and Mir Sharif 1 Āmuli could not have done better than propounding the same doctrine at Court, and pointing out to Akbar as the restorer of the millennium.

The author of the 'Alam Āra'-yī Sikandarī, as the Ma'āṣir says, mentions Mir Sharif 1 Āmuli under the following circumstances. In 1002, the 7th year of Shah 'Abbas 1 Māzī's reign, the astrologers of the age predicted, in consequence of certain very inauspicious conjunctions, the death of a great king, and as this prediction was universally referred to Shāh 'Abbās Jalālī² 'd Dīn Muhammad of Tabriz, who was looked upon as the greatest astronomer of the period, it was proposed that Shah 'Abbas should lay aside royalty for the two or three days the dreaded conjunction was expected to last, and that a criminal who had been sentenced to death should sit on the throne. This extraordinary expedient was everywhere approved of, the criminals threw lots, and Yusuf the quiver maker, who belonged to the heretical followers of Darwish Khusraw of Qazwin, was raised to the throne. He reigned for three days, and was then killed. Soon after, Darwish Khusraw was hanged. His ancestors had been well diggers, but he was a dervish, and though he had been wise enough never to speak of his Nuqtawīyya belief he was known as one of the sect and was accordingly killed So also Mir Sayyid Ahmad of Kashan whom 'Abbas killed with his own sword Among his papers treatises were found on the Nuqta doctrine and also a letter addressed to him by Abu l Fazl in Akbar's name Mir Sharif: Amulī a good poet and the head of the sect heard of these persecutions and fled from Astrabad to Hindustan

¹ Māzī (مازی) : e who passed away is the epithet which historians give to Shāh 'Abbās I of Persia, the contemporary of Akbar and Jahangir.

Regarding the last sentence the author of the Ma'asir remarks that it involves an anachronism for Mir Sharif was in India in 984 when Akbar was at Dīpālpur in Malwa and besides Sharif: Amulī was mentioned in no Tazkira as a poet

167 Hasan Beg Khan: Badakhshī Shaykh 'Umarī¹

Hasan Beg was a good soldier In the 34th year Akbar after his stay in Kashmir marched to Zabulistan and passed through the district of Pakhalī which is 35 kos long and 20 broad and lies west of Kashmir In Pakhalī Sultan Husayn Khan: Pakhalīwāl (No 301) paid his respects This Zamindar belonged to the descendants of the Qarlugī's (قارلوق) whom Timūr on his return from India to Turan had left in Pakhalī as garrison After following Akbar's Court for a few days Sultan Husayn Khan withdrew without leave and the emperor ordered Hasan Beg to occupy Pakhalī (Akbarnama III 591-598) He speedily subdued the district In the 35th year during Hasan Beg's temporary absence at Court Sultan Husayn Khan again rebelled assumed the title of Sultan Nasir² d Din and drove away Hasan Beg's men But soon after he had again to submit to Hasan Beg In the 46th year Hasan was made a Commander of Two Thousand and Five Hundred for his services in Bangash and was put towards the end of Akbar's reign in charge of Kabul receiving Fort Rohtas³ (in the Panjab) as jagir

In the beginning of Jahangir's reign he was called from Kabul to Court On his way at Mathura (Muttra) Hasan Beg met Prince Khusraw, who had fled from Agra on Sunday the 8th Zī Hıjjah 1014³ From distrust as to the motives of the emperor, which led to his recall from Kabul, or "from the innate wickedness of Badakhshis", he joined the Prince with his three hundred Badakhshi troopers received the title of Khan Baba, and got the management of all affairs. Another officer who attached himself to Khusraw, was 'Abd^u 'r Rahim Dīwān of Lahor. After the defeat near Bhairawal on the Bīah¹ the Afghāns who were with the prince, advised him to retreat to the Eastern provinces of the Empire, but Hasan Beg proposed to march to Kabul, which he said, had always been the starting place of the conquerors of India, he had, moreover, four lacs of rupees in Rohtās which were at the Prince's service. Hasan Beg's counsel was ultimately adopted. But before he could reach Rohtās, Khusraw was captured on the Chanab. On the 3rd Safar 1015, the Prince, Hasan Beg, and 'Abd^u 'r Rahim, were taken before Jahangir in the Bagh i Mirza Kamran, a villa near Lahor, Khusraw himself, according to Chingiz's law (batorah i Chingizī (?)), with his hands tied and fetters on his feet. Hasan Beg after making a useless attempt to incriminate others (p. 500), was put into a cow hide and 'Abd^u 'r Rahim into a donkey's skin, and in this state they were tied to donkeys, and carried through the bazars. "As cow hides get dry sooner than donkey skins," Hasan died after a few hours from suffocation but 'Abd^u 'r Rahim was after 24 hours still alive, and received, at the request of several courtiers, free pardon.² The other accomplices and the troopers of Khusraw were impaled. Their corpses were arranged in a double row along the road which leads from the Bagh i Mirza Kamran to the Fort of Lahor, and Khusraw, seated on a sorry elephant, was led along that way. People had been posted at short intervals, and pointing to the corpses, kept calling out to Khusraw, "Behold, your friends, your servants, do homage to you."

¹ So the Turuk. The Ma'asir has the 20th instead of the 8th MSS continually confound مقدم and مقدم But Jahangir on his pursuit reached Hodal on the 10th Zī Hıjjah and the Turuk is correct

Hasan Beg was mentioned above on p. 370. His son Isfandiyyār Khān, was under Shāhjahan, a commander of 1,500. He served in Bengal, and died in the 16th year of Shahjahan's reign (Pādīshāhn I, 476, I, b. 304). The 'Arif Beg i Shaykh 'Umarī mentioned in the Pādīshāhn (I, b. 319) appears to be a relation of his.

168 Sheroya Khan, son of Sher Afkan Khan.

Sher Afkan Khān was the son of Qūch Beg. Qūch Beg served under Humāyun, and was killed in the successful attempt made by several ¹ Vide p. 456 note. There is another Bhairōwāl between Wazirābād and Siyalkot, south of the Chanab.

² In Zu l Hijjah 1018 he got an appointment as a Yuzbashi or commander of 100 and was sent to Kashmir (Tuzuk p. 79). In the Tuzuk he is called 'Abd^u 'r Raḥīm KMr, Abd^u 'r Raḥīm the Asa'.

grandeęs to save Maryam Makānī, Akbar's mother, after the fatal battle of Chausā (vide No 96, p 450) When Humāyūn fled to Persia, Sher Afkan remained with Mīrza Kāmram in Kābul, but he joined the emperor on his return from Īrān, and was made governor of Qalāt Later he received Zahak Bāmuyān as jāgīr, but went again over to Kāmran Humāyūn s, soon after, captured and killed him

Sheroya Khān served at first under Munḥim (No 11) in Bengal and Orisā In the 26th year he was appointed to accompany Prince Murād to Kābul In the 28th year, he served under ḤAbd^u 'r Rahim (No 29) in Gujrat, and was present in the battle of Sarkich (Albarnāma III, 408, 422) In the 30th year, he served under Maṭlab Khān (No 83) against Jalāla Tārīkī (p 441) In the 39th year, he was made a Khān, and was appointed to Ajmir According to the Tabaqāt he was a Hazāri in 1001

169 Nazar Be Uzbek

The Albarnāma (III, p 500) says, " On the same day¹ Nazar Be, and his sons, Qanbar Be, Shādī Be (No 367), and Bāqī Be (No 368), were presented at Court, and were favourably received by the emperor "

Shadī Be distinguished himself in the expedition under Matlab Khā (No 83) against the Tārīkīs He may be the Shādī Khān Shadī Be mentioned in the Pādīshāhnama (I, b 308) as a commander of On Thousand Be is the abbreviation of Beg Nazar Be is not to be confounded with Nazar (?) Beg (No 247)

170 Jalal Khan, son of Muhammad Khān, son of Sultān Ādam, the Gakkhar

171 Mubarak Khān, son of Kamāl Khān, the Gakkhar

The Gakkhars are a tribe inhabiting, according to the Maḥāṣin, the hilly districts between the Bahat and the Indus² At the time of Zayn^u 'l ḤAbidin, king of Kashmir, a Ghaznī noble of the name of Malīk Kīd (کد or کد), who was a relation of the then ruler of Kābul, took away

¹ When the news was brought to Akbar that Man Singh, soon after the defeat of the Imperialists and the death of Īr Bar in the Abhaybar Pass had defeated the Tārīkīs at these districts from the Kashmiris, and gradually extended his power over the region between the Nilab (Indus) and the Sawāhks and the frontier of modern Kashmir¹ Malik Kid was succeeded by his son Malik Kalān, and Malik Kalān by Malik Bir. After Bir, the head of the tribe was Sultān Tatar, who rendered Bābar valuable service, especially in the war with Rānā Sānkā. Sultān Tatar had two sons, Sultān Sārang and Sultān Ādam. Sārang fought a great deal with Sher Shāh and Salīm Shāh, capturing and selling a large number of Afghans. The Fort Rohtās was commenced by Sher Shāh with the special object of keeping the Gakkhars in check. Sher Shāh in the end captured Sultān Sārang and killed him, and confined his son Kamāl Khān in Gwāliyar, without, however, subjugating the tribe. Sultān Ādam was now looked upon as the head of the clan. He continued to oppose the Afghans. Once Salīm Shāh gave the order to blow up a portion of the Gwāliyar Fort, where the state prisoners were kept. Kamāl Khān, who was still confined, had a miraculous escape and was in consequence pardoned. Kamāl went to his kinsfolk; but as Sultān Ādam had usurped all power, he lived obscurely, with his brother Saʿīd Khān, avoiding conflict with his uncle. Immediately after Akbar's accession, however, Kamāl paid his respects to the emperor at Jahndhar, was well received, and distinguished himself in the war with Hemū and during the siege of Mankot. In the 3rd year he was sent against the Miyāna Afghans, who had revolted near Saronj (Malwa) and was made on his return jāgīrdar of Karah and Fathpūr Huswah. In the 6th year, he served under Khān Zamān (No 13) against the Afghāns under the son of Mubārīz Khān ʿAdhī (p 320). In the 8th year (970), he was called to Court, and as Akbar wished to reward him, Kamāl Khān begged the emperor to put him in possession of the Gakkhar district, which was still in the hands of his usurping uncle. Akbar ordered the Khān Kalān (No 16) and other Panjābī grandees to divide the district into two parts, and to give one of them to Kamāl Khān, if Sultan Ādam was not satisfied with the other, they should occupy the country and punish Sultan Ādam. The latter alternative was rendered necessary by the resistance of Sultan Ādam. The Panjab,

¹ The Maʿāshir says he subjected the tribes called پوکال حسریہ اڑاں خانومہ کھپر

army, therefore, and Kamāl Khān entered the Gakkhar district, and defeated and captured Ādam after a severe engagement near the "Qasba of Hilā" ¹ Sultan Ādam and his son Lashkarī were handed over to Kamāl Khān, who was put in possession of the district. Kamāl Khān killed Lashkarī, and put Sultan Ādam into prison, where he soon after died (Akbar-nāma, II, 240 ff.)

It is stated in the Tabaqāt that Kamāl Khān was a Commander of Five Thousand, distinguished for courage and bravery, and died in 972 ²

Mubārak Khān and Jalāl Khān served in the 30th year under Mirzā Shāhrukh, Bhagwan Dās, and Shāh Qulī Māhram, in Kashmir (Akbar-nāma, III, 485). The Tabaqāt calls both, as also Saʿīd Khān, Commanders of Fifteen Hundred. A daughter of Saʿīd Khān was married to Prince Salīm, vide No 225, note.

172 Tash Beg Khān Mughul, [Tāj Khān]

Tash Beg served at first under Mirzī Muhammad Hākīm, king of Kābul, and entered, after the death of his master, Akbar's service. He received a jagir in the Panjāb. According to the Akbar-nāma (III, 489), he went with Bir Bar (No 85) to Sawād and Bijor, and distinguished himself under ʿAbdū ʿl Matlab (No 83) against the Tārīkīs (III, 511).

In the 40th year, he operated against the ʿĪsā Khayl Afghāns, though with little success. Two years later, he served under Āʿraf Khān (No 98) in the conquest of Mau, and received the title of Tāj Khān. When Rāja Basū again rebelled (47th year), Khawāja Sulaymān, Bahshī of the Panjāb, was ordered to march against him with the contingents of Qulij Khān (No 42), Husayn Beg ʿ Shaykh ʿUmarī (No 167), Ahmad Beg ʿ Kabulī (No 191), and Tāj Khān. Without waiting for the others, T Kh moved to Pathān. Whilst pitching his tents, Jamil Beg, T Kh's son, received news of Bāsū's approach. He hastily attacked him, and was killed with fifty men of his father's contingent.

Jahāngir, on his accession, promoted him to a command of 3,000. In the second year of his reign, he officiated as governor of Kābul till the arrival of Shāh Beg Khān (No 57). He was afterwards appointed governor of Thathah, where he died in the ninth year (1023).

¹ Not Huslī (هسل) south of Chilianwalī between the Jhelum and the Chanab, but Huslī or Huslī (هسل) south of Chilianwalī.

173 Shaykh 'Abd^u llah son of Shaykh Muhammad Ghaws [of Gwahyar]

Shaykh 'Abd^u llah at first lived a retired and saintly life but entered subsequently the Emperor's service. He distinguished himself and is said to have risen to the dignity of a Commander of Three Thousand. He died when young.

His brother Ziyā' llah lived as a Faqir and studied during the lifetime of his father under the renowned saint Wajih¹ d Dīn in Gujrat who himself was a pupil of Muhammad Ghaws.

Biographies of Muhammad Ghaws (died 970 at Agra buried in Gwahyar) will be found in the Ma'āsir Badā'uni (III p 4) and the Klāmat² i Asfiyā' (p 969). He was disliked by Bayram Khan Shaykh Gada and Shaykh Mubarak Abu l Fazl's father. See also Ma'āsir i 'Alan giri p 166.

174 Raja Rajsingh son of Raja Askaran the Kachhwaha

Raja Askaran is a brother of Raja Bihari Mal (No 23). He served in the 2nd year with Sadīq Khan (No 43) against Raja Madhukar of Ūdcha¹ and in the 25th year under Toḍar Mal in Bihar. In the 30th year he was made a Commander of One Thousand, and served in the same year under 'Aziz Koka (No 21) in the Dakhn. In the 31st year when Akbar appointed two officers to each suba Askaran and Shaykh Ibrahim (No 82) were appointed to Agra. In the 33rd year he served a second time against Raja Madhukar under Shihab Khan (No 26) and died soon after.

Abu l Fazl has not given his name in this list of grandees. The Tabaqat says he was a Commander of Three Thousand.

Raj Singh his son received the title of Raja after the death of his father. He served for a long time in the Dakhn, was called in the 44th year to Court and was appointed commandant of Gwahyar. In the 45th year he joined the Imperial army which under Akbar besieged Fort Āsir. In the 47th year he pursued together with Ray Rayan Patr Das (No 196) the notorious Bir Singh Deo Bundela who at Jahangir's instigation had murdered Abu l Fazl. For his distinguished services in the operations against the Bundela clan, he was promoted and held in the 50th year the rank of a Commander of 4 000 3 000 horse. In the 3rd year of Jahangir's reign he served in the Dakhn where he died in 1024 (10th year).

¹ Ū'chā is generally spelt on our maps Oorchā. It lies near Jhans on the left bank of the Betwa. The name of the river Dasthara mentioned on p 38^o is differently spelt in the MSS. In one place the Ma'āsir has Saldahārā.

Rām Dās, his son, was a Commander of 1,000, 400 horse. He received, in the 12th year, the title of Raja, and was made, in the same year, a Commander of 1,500, 700 horse.

One of his grandsons, Prasuttam Singh, turned Muhammadan in the 10th year of Shāhjahān's reign, and received the name of 'Ibūdatmand'.

175 Rāy Bhoj, son of Rāy Surjan Hādā (No 96)

When Bandī, in the 22nd year, was taken from Daudā, elder brother of Rāy Bhoj, the latter was put in possession of it. Bhoj served under Mān Singh against the Afghans of Orīsa, and under Shaykh Abū 'l Fazl in the Dakḥin (Albarn, III, 851, 855).

His daughter was married to Jagat Singh (No 160)

In the first year of his reign, Jahāngir wished to marry Jagat Singh's daughter. Rāy Bhoj, her grandfather, refused to give his consent, and Jahāngir resolved to punish him on his return from Kābul. But Rāy Bhoj in the end of 1016 committed suicide. The marriage, however, took place on the 4th Rabi' I, 1017, (Tuzuk pp 68, 69).

It is said that Rathor and Kachhwāba princesses entered the imperial Harem, but no Hādā princess was ever married to a Timuride.

XIV Commanders of Eight Hundred

176 Sher Khwāja

— He belonged to the Sayyids of Itawa (سادات ایتاوی). His mother was a Naqshbandī (p 466, note 2). Sher Kh's name was "Padīshāh Khwāja", but Akbar called him on account of his bravery and courage Sher Khwāja.

In the 30th year, Sh Kh served under Sa'id Khan Chaghata'i (No 25) against the Yūsufzais, and afterwards under Sultan Murad in the Dakḥin. In the 40th year, the Prince sent with him a corps to Patan, where he distinguished himself against Iḥlās Khān. He continued to serve in the Dakḥin under Abū 'l Fazl. In the engagement near Bir he was wounded. He entered the town victoriously but was besieged. From want of provisions, his men had to subsist on horse flesh. As in consequence of the swelling of the Ganga (Godavari) he did not expect assistance from the north, he resolved to try a last sortie and perish, when Abū 'l Fazl arrived and raised the siege. Abū 'l Fazl proposed to leave his own son 'Abd'ur Rahmān at Bir, but Sh Kh refused to quit his post. In the 46th year, he received a drum and a flag.

² Regarding the Kachhwahas see my article in the Calcutta Review, for April 1871, entitled 'A Chapter from Muhammadan History.'

Sh Kh remained in favour during the reign of Jahangir. He was with the emperor when Mahābat Khan near the Bahat had taken possession of Jahangir's person. After Jahangir's death, he served with Āsaf Khān against Shahryar in Lāhor.

In the 1st year of Shāhjahān's reign, he was made a Commander of 4,000, with 1,000 horse, and received the title of Khawāja Bāqī Khān. He was also appointed governor of Thathah, vice Mirza Ā'isa Tarkhān (p 392). He died on his way to his province in 1037 Padīshāhn, I, 181, 200.

His son Khawāja Hāshim was made a commander of 500 (Padīshāhnama, I, b 327). Another son, Asad 'llah, is mentioned as a Commander of 900, 300 horse, (Padīshāhn, II, 738).

177 Mirzā Khurram, son of Khān 1. Āzam Mirzā Āziz Koka (No 21)

He has been mentioned above, p 346

XV Commanders of Seven Hundred

178 Quraysh Sultān, son of Abd^u 'r Rashīd Khān, kung of Kāshghar

182 Sultān Ā'abd^u 'llah, brother (by another mother) of Quraysh Sul^{ān}

310 Shāh Muhammad, son of Quraysh Sultān

Quraysh Sultān is a descendant of Chingiz Khān¹. His genealogical tree is given in the Akbarnāma (III, 584) and the Tārīkh-i Rashīdī as on following page.

After the death of Ā'abd^u 'r Rashīd Khān (16), Ā'abd^u 'l Karīm Khan, elder brother of Quraysh Sultān, succeeded to the throne of Kāshghar. He treated his relations well, partly in fulfilment of his father's wish, partly from natural benevolence. But Khudabanda, son of Quraysh Sultān, quarrelled with Muhammad Khān, his uncle, and Khudabanda occupied the town of Tarfān. Ā'abd^u 'llah, doubting the loyalty of his relations, ordered Quraysh Sultān to go to Makkah. Q went first with his family to Badakhshān and Balkh, and lastly, with the permission of Ā'abd^u 'llāh Khan of Tūran, to Hindūstān. He met Akbar, in the 31st year, at Shīhab^u 'd Dīn pūr, when the emperor was just returning from Kashmir, was well received, and appointed to a command of Seven Hundred.

Quraysh died in the 37th year (1000), at Hajipūr

179 Qara Bahādur, son of Mirzā Mahmūd, who is the paternal uncle of Mirzā Haydar [Gurganī]

¹ Chingiz Khān in the histories is often called Q^{ān} 1. Buzary

- 1 Chingiz Khān
 - 2 Chaghta² Khān
 - 3 Mawatkān (second son of Chaghta² Khān)
 - 4 سمرقند (the MSS give various readings)
 - 5 Yaraq² Khān (called after his conversion Sultān Ghiyā² 'd Dīn)
 - 6 Dawā Khān *
 - 7 Alānūqa or Alānuqa, Khān
 - 8 Tughluq Timūr Khān.
 - 9 Khizr Khwāja Khān * (father in law of Timur)
 - 10 (a) Muḥammad Khān (b) Shamṣ Jahān Khān (c) Naqsh Jahān Khān.
 - 11 (a) Sher Muḥammad Khān (b) Sher ṢAlī Ughlan
 - 12 Uwais Khān, son of Sher ṢAlī Ughlan
 - 13 Yūnas Khān, father of Babar's mother
 - 14 Sultān Aḥmad Khān, known as Alāncho Khān
 - 15 Sultan Abu Saṣīd Khān.
 - 16 ṢAbd² 'r Rashīd Khān
-
- 17 (1) ṢAbd² 'i Karīm Khān (2) Quraysh Sultān (No 168) (3) Sultān ṢAbd² 'lāh (No 178)
- (1) Shah Muḥammad (No 310)
(2) Khudābanda

Like the preceding, Qarā Bahādūr belonged to the royal family of Kāshghar. Mirzā Haydar's father, Muḥammad Husayn, was the son of Bābar's maternal aunt.

Mirzā Haydar,⁴ during his stay in Kāshghar, had accompanied the

¹ Burāq, Vamṣbery, p 163 —B]

² Dawā invaded India during the reign of ṢAlā² 'd Dīn, vide Journal As Soc Bengal for 1869, p 194, and 1870 p 44

³ His daughter is called Tukul Khānum گل خانم. It is said that Timūr after the marriage of his daughter to the son of the Khān of Kāshghar, erected a monument in honor of his daughter.

⁴ The MS of the Tārīkh-i Rashīdī in the Library of the Asiatic Society (Persian MSS, No 155, three parts, 19 lines per page) is a fair, though modern copy, and was brought by Capt H Strachey from Yārkand.

The Tārīkh commences with the reign of Tughluq Timūr, who was converted to Islām by Mawlānā Arshad² 'd Dīn, and goes down to the reign of ṢAbd² 'r Rashīd. The second daftar contains the Memoirs of Mirzā Haydar. The style is elegant.

son of Sultan Abu Sa'id on several expeditions to Kashmir and had thus acquired some knowledge of the people and the state of that province. He subsequently went over Badakhshan to India and arrived at Lahor where Mirza Kamran made him his na'ib during his absence on an expedition to Qandahar, which the Shah of Persia had taken from Khwaja Khan Beg. M. Haydar afterwards accompanied Kamran to Agra and tried on several occasions to persuade Humayun to take possession of Kashmir. When the emperor after his second defeat by Sher Shah retreated to Lahor he gave M. Haydar a small corps and sent him to Kashmir. The country being in a distracted state, M. H. took possession of it without bloodshed and ruled as absolute king for ten years. But afterwards he ordered the khutba to be read and coins to be struck in Humayun's name. He was killed in 958 by some treacherous Kashmiris.

The father of Qara Bahadur was Mirza Mahmud, hence Q. B. was M. Haydar's cousin. As he had been with M. H. in Kashmir, Akbar, in the 6th year, ordered him to re-conquer the province and gave him a large corps. But Q. B. delayed his march, and when he arrived in the hot season at Rajor, he found the passes fortified. Soon afterwards he was attacked and defeated by Ghazi Khan, who had usurped the throne of Kashmir. Q. B. discomfited returned to Akbar.

In the 9th year, he accompanied the emperor to Malwa, and was appointed on Akbar's return, governor of Mandu. He died soon after.

For a relation of Qara Bahadur, vide No. 183.

180. Muzaffar Husayn Mirza, son of Ibrahim Husayn Mirza [son of Muhammad Sultan Mirza].

Muzaffar Husayn Mirza is a Timuride. His tree is as follows —

Umar Shaykh Mirza (second son of Timur)

Mirza Bayqra

Mirza Mansur

M. Bayqra.¹

Wais Mirza.

Muhammad Sultan Mirza

(1) Ulugh Mirza	(2) Shah Mirza	(3) Ibrahim Husayn M.	(4) Muhammad Husayn M.
			(5) Mas'ud Husayn M.
			(6) 'Aqil Husayn M.

(1) Iskandar Mirza
vide Ulugh Mirza
(2) Mahmud Sultan M.
vide Shah Mirza

Muzaffar Husayn
Mirza (No. 180)

[¹ His brother is Abu L-Qhâzi Sultan Husayn Mirza.—B.]

- 1 Chingiz Khān
 2 Chaghtā'i Khān
 3 Mawatkan (second son of Chaghtā'i Khān)
 4 سوری (the MSS give various readings)
 5 Yaraq¹ Khān (called after his conversion Sultān Ḡhīyas^a 'd Dīn)
 6 Dawā Khān²
 7 Alanūqa or Alsanuqa Khān
 8 Tughluq Timūr Khān.
 9 Khizr Khwaja Khān³ (father in law of Timūr)
 10 (a) Muḥammad Khān (b) Shamḡ Jahān Khān (c) Naqsh Jahān Khān.
 11 (a) Sher Muḥammad Khān (b) Sher ḡAli Ughlān
 12 Uwais Khān, son of Sher ḡAli Ughlān
 13 Yūnas Khān, father of Bābar's mother
 14 Sultān Ahmad Khān, known as Alāncha Khān
 15 Sultān Abū Saḡīd Khān.
 16 ḡAbd^a 'r Rashīd Khān
 17 (1) ḡAbd^a 'l Karīm Khān (2) Quraysh Sultān (No 168) (3) Sultān ḡAbd^a 'llāh (No 178)
 (1) Shāh Muḥammad (No 310)
 (2) Khudabanda

Like the preceding, Qarā Bahadur belonged to the royal family of Kāshghar Mirzā Haydar's father, Muhammad Husayn, was the son of Bābar's maternal aunt

Murzā Haydar,⁴ during his stay in Kashghar, had accompanied the

¹ Burāq, Yamḡbery, p. 153 — B]

² Dawā invaded India during the reign of ḡAlā'ud Dīn, vide Journal As Soc Bengal for 1869, p. 194, and 1870, p. 44

³ His daughter is called Tukul Khānum توکول خانم. It is said that Timūr after the marriage received the title of Gurgan گورگان, the Mughal term for the Persian dāmad, a son in law. Hence Timurides are often called Gurganīs.

⁴ Mirzā Haydar was a historian and poet. He wrote in 951 the Tārīkh-i ḡAbd^a 'r Rashīdī, in honour of ḡAbd^a 'r Rashīd king of Kāshghar. The villa known as Bāgh-i Saḡa was erected by him. Ādārnāma, III 585.

The MS of the Tārīkh-i Rashīdī in the Library of the Asiatic Society (Persian MSS, No. 155, three parts, 19 lines per page) is a fair, though modern copy, and was brought by Capt. H. Strachey from Yārkand.

The Tārīkh commences with the reign of Tughluq Timūr, who was converted to Islām by Mawlānā Arshad^a 'd Dīn and goes down to the reign of ḡAbd^a 'r Rashīd. The second daftar contains the Memoirs of Mirzā Haydar. The style is elegant son of Sultān Abū Saʿīd on several expeditions to Kashmīr, and had thus acquired some knowledge of the people and the state of that province. He subsequently went over Badakhshān to India, and arrived at Lāhor, where Mirzā Kāmran made him his nāʾib during his absence on an expedition to Qandahār, which the Shāh of Persia had taken from Khwāja Kaʾān Beg. M. Ḥaydar afterwards accompanied Kāmran to Āgra, and tried on several occasions to persuade Humāyūn to take possession of Kashmīr. When the emperor after his second defeat by Sher Shāh retreated to Lāhor, he gave M. Ḥaydar a small corps and sent him to Kashmīr. The country being in a distracted state, M. H. took possession of it without bloodshed, and ruled as absolute king for ten years. But afterwards he ordered the khutba to be read, and coins to be struck, in Humāyūn's name. He was killed in 958 by some treacherous Kashmīris.

The father of Qarā Bahādur was Mirzā Maḥmūd; hence Q. B. was M. Ḥaydar's cousin. As he had been with M. H. in Kashmīr, Akbar, in the 6th year, ordered him to re-conquer the province, and gave him a large corps. But Q. B. delayed his march, and when he arrived in the hot season at Rājor, he found the passes fortified. Soon afterwards, he was attacked and defeated by Ghāzī Khān, who had usurped the throne of Kashmīr. Q. B. discomfited returned to Akbar.

In the 9th year, he accompanied the emperor to Mālwa, and was appointed, on Akbar's return, governor of Mandū. He died soon after.

For a relation of Qarā Bahādur, vide No. 183.

180. Muzaffar Ḥusayn Mirzā, son of Ibrāhīm Ḥusayn Mirzā [son of Muḥammad Sultān Mirzā].

Muzaffar Ḥusayn Mirzā is a Timuride. His tree is as follows:—

ʿUmar Shaykh Mirzā (second son of Timūr)

Mirzā Bāyqā.

Mirzā Manṣūr.

M. Bāyqā¹

Was Mirzā.

Muḥammad Sultān Mirzā.

(1) Ulugh Mirzā. (2) Shāh Mirzā. (3) Ibrāhīm Ḥusayn M. (4) Muḥammad Ḥusayn M.

(1) Sikandar Mirzā,
sive Ulugh Mirzā.
(2) Maḥmūd Sultān M.,
sive Shāh Mirzā.

Muzaffar Ḥusayn
Mirzā (No. 180).

(5) Maṣʿūd Ḥusayn M.
(6) ʿĀqil Ḥusayn M.

¹ His brother is Abū ʿĀlī Sultān Ḥusayn Mirzā.—B]

The mother of Muhammad Sultān Mirzā was the daughter of the renowned Sultān Husayn Mirzā, king of Khurāsān, at whose Court Muhammad Sultān Mirzā held a place of distinction. After Sultān Husayn's death, Muhammad Sultān Mirzā went to Babar, who treated him with every distinction. Humāyūn also favoured him, though on several occasions he rebelled, and extended his kindness to his sons, Ulugh Mirzā and Shāh Mirzā, who had given him repeatedly cause of dissatisfaction. Ulugh Mirzā was killed in the expedition against the Hazāras, and Shāh Muhammad died, soon after, a natural death.

Ulugh Mirzā had two sons, Sikandar Mirzā and Mahmūd Sultān Mirzā, but Humāyūn changed their names, and gave Sikandar the name of Ulugh Mirzā, and Mahmūd Sultān Mirzā that of Shāh Mirzā.

As Muhammad Sultān Mirzā was old, Akbar excused him from attending at Court (taklif-i bār), and gave him the pargana of Aʿzampūr in Sambhal as a pension. He also bestowed several other places upon his grandsons Ulugh and Shāh Mirzā. At Aʿzampūr in his old age, Muhammad Sultān M had four other sons born to him—1 Ibrāhīm Husayn Mirzā, 2 Muhammad Husayn Mirzā, 3 Masʿūd Husayn Mirzā, and 4 ʿĀqī Husayn Mirzā.

In the 11th year of Akbar's reign, Mirzā Muhammad Hakīm, king of Kābul, invaded India and besieged Lāhor, and when Akbar marched against him, Ulugh M and Shāh M rebelled. They were joined in their revolt by their (younger) uncles Ibrāhīm Husayn M and Muhammad Husayn M. The rebellious Mirzās went plundering from Sambhal, to Khān Zamān (No 13) at Jaunpūr, but as they could not agree with him, they marched on Dihli, and from there invaded Mālwa, the governor of which, Muhammad Qulī Khān Barlās (No 31), was with the emperor. The consequence of their revolt was, that Akbar imprisoned the old Muhammad Sultān Mirzā. He died a short time after in his prison at Biāna. In the 12th year, when Akbar had defeated and killed Khān Zamān, and conquered Chitor, he made Shuhāb Khān (No 26) governor of Mālwa, and ordered him to punish the Mirzas.

About this time Ulugh M died. The other Mirzās unable to withstand Shuhāb Khān fled to Chungiz Khān (p 419), who then ruled over a portion of Gujrāt. Chungiz Khān was at war with Iʿtimād Khān (No 67) of Ahmadabād; and as the Mirzās had rendered him good service, he gave them Bahrōch as jāgīr. But their behaviour in that town was so cruel that Chungiz Khān had to send a corps against them. Though the Mirzās defeated his troops they withdrew to Khāndesh, and re-entered Malwa. They were vigorously attacked by Ashraf Khān (No 74), Šādiq Khān

No 43), and others, who besieged Rantanbhūr (13th year), and were pursued to the Nabadā, where many soldiers of the Mirzās perished in crossing. In the meantime Chingiz Khān had been murdered by Jhujhār Khan and as Gujrat was in a state of disorder, the Mirzās with little fighting, occupied Champānūr, Bahroch and Sūrat.

In the 17th year, Akbar entered Gujrat and occupied Ahmadabad. Dissensions having broken out among the Mirzās Ibrahim Husayn M left Bahroch, and arrived at a place 8 miles from Akbar's camp. Most of Akbar's Amīrs had the day before been sent away towards Sūrat in search of Muhammad Husayn M. Hearing of Ibrāhīm Husayn's arrival, the emperor dispatched Shāhbāz Khān (No 80) after the Amīrs whilst he himself marched to the Mahindri River where it flows past the town of Sarnal. Akbar had about 40 men with him, few of whom had armour, but when the Amīrs returned, the number rose to about 200. The signal of attack was given and after a hard fight, Ibrahim Husayn M was defeated. He fled towards Āgra, whilst his wife, Gulrukh Begam, a daughter of Mirzā Kāmran, on hearing of his defeat, fled with Muzaffar Husayn Mirzā from Sūrat to the Dakhṇ.

Akbar now resolved to invest Sūrat, and left M 'Aziz Koka (No 21) with a garrison in Ahmadabād, ordering at the same time Qutb'ud Dīn (No 28) to join 'Aziz with the Malwa contingent. Muhammad Husayn M and Shāh M thereupon united their troops with those of Sher Khan Fuladī, a Gujratī noble, and besieged Paṭan. 'Aziz marched against them, and defeated them (p 432). Muhammad Husayn M then withdrew to the Dakhṇ.

Ibrāhīm Husayn M and his younger brother Mas'ūd Husayn M having met with resistance at Nagor (p 384), invaded the Panjab. The governor, Husayn Qulī Khān (No 24) at that time besieged Nagarkot, and hearing of the inroad of the Mirzās, made peace with the Raja, attacked the rebels, defeated them, and captured Mas'ūd. Ibrahim Husayn fled towards Multān, and was soon afterwards wounded and captured by some Balūchīs. He then fell into the hands of Sa'īd Khān (No 25) and died of his wounds.

After Akbar's return to Āgra, Muhammad Husayn Mirzā left the Dakhṇ, invaded Gujrat, and took possession of several towns. He was defeated at Kambha, it by Nawrang Khān (p 354) and joined the party of Ikhtiyar'ul Mulk and the sons of Sher Khan Fūladī. They then marched against Ahmadabad and besieged M 'Aziz Koka. To relieve him Akbar hastened by forced marches from Āgra to Paṭan, and arrived, on the 5th Jumāda I, 981 (p 458), with about 1,000 horse, at a place 3 kos from Ahmadabād Leaving Ikhtiyār to continue the siege, Muhammad Husayn opposed the emperor, but was defeated and wounded In his flight his horse fell over a bramble, when two troopers captured him, and led him to Akbar Each of the two men claimed the customary reward, and when Bir Bar, at Akbar's request, asked Muhammad Husayn which of the two had taken him prisoner, he said, "The salt of the emperor has caught me, for those two could not have done it" Ikhtiyār, on hearing of the defeat and capture of Muhammad Husayn, raised the siege, and fled with his 5,000 troopers Akbar at once pursued him Ikhtiyār got detached from his men, and in jumping over a shrub fell with his horse to the ground, when Suhrāb Turkmān who was after him, cut off his head, and took it to the emperor Muhammad Husayn also had, in the meantime, been executed by Ray Singh (No 44), whom Akbar had put over him

Shāh Mirza had fled in the beginning of the battle

In the 22nd year, Muẓaffar Husayn Mirzā, whom his mother had taken to the Dakhn, entered Gujrāt and created disturbances He was defeated by Rāja Toḍar Mal and Vazīr Khān (p 379) and fled to Jūnāghḍh When the Rāja had gone Muẓaffar besieged Vazīr in Ahmadābād During the siege he managed to attach Vazīr's men to his cause, and was on the point of entering the town, when a cannon ball killed Mihr ʿAlī Kolābī, who had led the young Muẓaffar into rebellion This so affected Muẓaffar that he raised the siege, though on the point of victory, and withdrew to Nazrbar Soon after, he was captured by Rāja ʿAlī of Khāndesh, and handed over to Akbar He was kept for some time in prison, but as he showed himself loyal, Akbar, in the 36th year, released him, and married him to his eldest daughter, the Sultān Khanum He also gave him the Sarkar of Qanawjastuyūl Muẓaffar, however, was addicted to the pleasures of wine, and when complaints were brought to Akbar, he cancelled the tuyūl, and again imprisoned him But he soon after set him at liberty In the 45th year (1008), when Akbar besieged Āsīr, he sent Muẓaffar to besiege Fort Lalang But he quarrelled with Khawāja Fath ʿllāh, and one day, he decamped for Gujrāt His companions deserted him, and dressing himself in the garb of a faqīr, he wandered about between Sūrat and Baglāna, when he was caught by Khawāja Waisī and taken before the Emperor After having been imprisoned for some time, he was let off in the 46th year He died, not long after, a natural death

His sister, Nūru ʿn Nisā, was married to Prince Salīm (vide No 225, note) Gulrukh Begam, Muẓaffar's mother, was still alive in 1023, when she was visited on her sick bed by Jahāngīr at Ajmīr

181 Qundūq Khān, brother of the well known Bavrām Oghlan
The Akbarnāma (I, 411) mentions a Qundūq Sultan, who accompanied Humāyūn on his march to India

For Qundūq, some MSS read Qundūz. A grandee of this name served in Bengal under Muḥim, and died at Gaur (p 407)

182 Sultān ʿAbd^u Ilah, brother (by another mother) of Quraysh
Sultān (No 178)

183 Mīrzā ʿAbd^u 'r-Rahmān, son of Mīrzā Haydar's brother (vide
No 179)

184 Qiyā Khān, son of Sāhib Khān

In the Tabaqāt and the Akbarnāma he is generally called قيا صاحب
حسن, which may mean "Qiyā, the beautiful", or "Qiyā, son of Sāhib Hasan". Proper nouns ending in a long vowel rarely take the Izāfat¹ It looks as if the reading قيا صاحب of the Ā^u in MSS was a mistake. The words قيا صاحب are intended to distinguish him from Qiyā Gung
(No 33)

Qiyā served under Shams^u 'd-Dīn Atga against Bayram (p 332)
He was also present in the battle of Sārangpūr (vide No 120)

185 Darbār Khān, ʿInāyat [ullah], son of Takaltu Khān, the Reader Darbār's father was Shah Ṭahmāsp's reader ʿInayat, on his arrival in India, was appointed to the same post by Akbar, and received the title of Darbār Khān. He served in the 9th year (end of 971) in Malwa, and in the 12th year, in the last war with Khān Zamān. He accompanied the emperor to Rantanbhūr, and when Akbar, in the 14th year, after the conquest of the fort, made a pilgrimage to the tomb of Muḥim Chishtī in Ajmīr, Darbār Khān took sick leave, and died on his arrival at Āgra

According to his dying wish—to the disgust of the author of the Muʿāẓir—he was buried in the mausoleum of one of Akbar's dogs, which he had built. The dog had shown great attachment to its imperial master

186 ʿAbd^u 'r-Rahmān, son of Muʿayyid Dūlday

The name Dūlday had been explained above on p 388. ʿAbd^u 'r-
Rahmān's great grandfather, Mīr Shāh Maḥk, had served under Tīmūr ʿAbd^u 'r-Rahmān was killed in a fight with the Bihār rebel Dalpat. Vide under his son Barḥurdar, No 328, and under No 146. Another son is mentioned below, No 349

¹ Thus you saw مبرور ملعون, for ملعون مبرور, the accursed Hulig.

187 Qāsım 'Alı Khān.

When Akbar, in the 10th year, moved against Khān Zamān (No 13), Qāsım 'Alı Khān held Ghāzīpūr. In the 17th year, he served in the siege of Sūrat, and in the following year, with Khān 'Ālam (No 58) in the conquest of Patna under Mun'ım. For some reason he returned to Court, and took Shuja'at Khan (No 51) a prisoner to Mun'ım, whom he had slandered. In the 22nd year, he served under Sādiq (No 43) against Madhukar Bundela, and in the 25th year, under 'Azīz Koka (No 21) in Bihar. In the 26th year, he was employed to settle the affairs of Hājī Begam, daughter of the brother of Humāyūn's mother (taḡhā'i zāda yī wālida yī Jannat āstānī), who after her return from Makkah (see under 146) had been put in charge of Humāyūn's tomb in Dihlī, where she died. In the 31st year, when Akbar appointed two officers for each Sūba, Q A and Fath Khan Tughluq were sent to Audh. He returned, in the 35th year, from Khayrābad to Court, and soon after received Kālpi as jāgīr. ' Nothing also is known of him ' 1 Ma'a'sır. For his brother, vide No 390.

188 Baz Bahadur, son of Sharīf Khān (No 63)

Vide above, p. 415

189 Sayyid 'Abd^u 'Ilāh, son of Mīr Khwananda

Some MSS have "Khwand" instead of "Khwananda". Sayyid 'Abd^u 'Ilāh had been brought up at Court. In the 9th year, he served in the pursuit of 'Abd^u 'Ilāh Khān Uzbek. In the 17th year, he was with the Khān ı Kalan (No 16) in the first Gujrāt war. Later, he served under Mun'ım in Bengal, and was with Khān 'Ālam (No 58) in the battle of Takarōi (p 406). In 981, he brought the news of Da'ūd's defeat and death at Āgmahal (p 350) to Akbar. During the Bengal military revolt, he served under Mīrzā 'Azīz (No 21) and under Shahbāz Khan (No 80), chiefly against Ma'sūm ı Farankhūdi (No 157). In the 31st year, Akbar sent him to Qāsım Khān (No 59) in Kashmīr. In the 34th year (997), he was one night surprised by a body of Kashmīris, and killed with nearly three hundred Imperialists.

190 Dhāru, son of Rāja Toḡar Mal (No 39)

Vide above, p 378

191 Ahmad Beg-i Kābuli.

Ahmad Beg traces his origin to Mīr Ghiyā's 'd' Dīn Tarkhān, a Chaghtā'i noble who served under Timūr. Like Shāh Beg (No 57), Tāj Khan

¹ Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk mentions a Qāsım 'Alı on p 58, l 2 from below, but according to the Ma'a'sır, we have there to read Qāsım Beg for Qāsım 'Alı

(No 172), Abū 'l Qāsum (No 199), Ma^ssūm Khan (p 476, note 1), and Takhta Beg (No 195), A B entered, after M Muhammad Hakim's death, Akbar's service He was made a commander of 700, and received, in 1003, on the removal of Yūsuf Khān 1 Razawī (No 35) a jāgīr in Kashmir He married the sister of Ja^sfar Beg Āsaf Khan (No 98)

During the reign of Jahangir he rose to the post of a commander of 3 000, and received the title of Khan, and also a flag He was for some time governor of Kashmir On his removal he went to Court, and died

From the Tuzūl we see that Ahmad Beg in the first year of Jahāngir was made a commander of 2,000, and held Peshawar as jāgīr In the second year he was ordered to punish the Afghan tribes in Bangash and was for his services there promoted, in the 5th year, to a command of 2 500 In the 9th year, in consequence of complaints made by Qulj Khān (No 42) he was called to Court, and confined to Fort Rantanbhūr (Tuzūl, p 136) In the following year, he was released (l c, p 146) and sent to Kashmir (l c, p 149)

Ahmad Beg's sons, especially his second eldest, were all distinguished soldiers They are —

1 *Muhammad Mas^sūd*¹ (eldest son) He was killed in the war with the Tarikīs His son Ardsheer, was a commander of 1,000, six hundred horse, and died in the 18th year of Shahj's reign

2 Sa^sīd Khān Bahādūr Zafar-jang (second son) He rose during the reign of Shahjahān to the high dignity of a commander of 7,000, and distinguished himself in every war He was governor of Kabul, the Panjab, and Bihār He died on the 2nd Šafar, 1062 Of his twenty two sons, the two eldest, Khānazād Khān and Lutf^u 'llah, were killed in the Balkh war, where Sa^sīd also was severely wounded Two other sons Sa^sīd^u 'llah and Fath^u 'llah, rose to high commands

3 Mukhlis^u 'llah Khān Iftikhār Khān He rose under Shāhjahān to a command of 2 000 one thousand horse, and was Fawjdar of Jammū (Pādīshāhn, I, p 258), and died in the 4th year of Shahj's reign

4 Abū 'l Baqā He was the younger brother (by the same mother) of Sa^sīd, under whom he served He was thānadār of Lower Bangash In the 15th year, after the Qandahār expedition, he got the title of Iftikhār Khān, at the same time that his elder brother received that of Zafar-jang, and was made a commander of 1,500, one thousand horse

192 Hakim Sa^sAlī, of Gilan

Sa^sAlī came poor and destitute from Persia to India, but was fortunate enough to become in course of time a personal attendant (mulāzim) and friend of Akbar. Once the emperor tried him by giving him several bottles of urine of sick and healthy people, and even of animals. To his satisfaction, ʿAlī correctly distinguished the different kinds. In 988 he was sent as ambassador to ʿAlī ʿĀdil Shāh of Bijāpūr, and was well received, but before he could be sent back with presents for his master, ʿĀdil Shāh suddenly died.¹

In the 39th year, Hakīm ʿAlī constructed the wonderful reservoir (hawz), which is so often mentioned by Mughul historians. A staircase went to the bottom of the reservoir, from where a passage led to an adjoining small room six gaz square, and capable of holding ten or twelve people. By some contrivance, the water of the reservoir was prevented from flowing into the chamber. When Akbar dived to the bottom of the reservoir and passed into the room he found it lighted up and furnished with cushions, sleeping apparel, and a few books. Breakfast was also provided.

In the 40th year, ʿAlī was a commander of 700, and had the title of Jālīnūs 'z Zamānī "the Galenus of the age." His astringent mixtures enjoyed a great reputation at Court.

He treated Akbar immediately before his death. It is said that the Emperor died of dysentery or acute diarrhoea, which no remedies could stop. ʿAlī had at last recourse to a most powerful astringent, and when the dysentery was stopped, costive fever and strangury ensued. He therefore administered purgatives which brought back the diarrhoea, of which Akbar died. The first attack was caused, it is said, by worry and excitement on account of the behaviour of Prince Khusraw at an elephant fight. Salīm (Jahāngīr) had an elephant of the name of Girānbār, who was a match for every elephant of Akbar's stables, but whose strength was supposed to be equal to that of Ābrup, one of Khusraw's elephants. Akbar therefore wished to see them fight for the championship which was done. According to custom a third elephant, Rantahman was selected as tabancha, i e., he was to assist either of the two combatants when too severely handled by the other. At the fight, Akbar and Prince Khurram (Shāhjahān) sat at a window, whilst Salīm and Khusraw were on horse back in the arena. Girānbār completely worsted Ābrup and as he mauled him too severely, the tabāncha elephant was sent off to Ābrūp's assistance. But Jahāngir's men, anxious to have no interference, pelted Rantahman with stones, and wounded the animal and the driver. This annoyed Akbar, and he sent Khurram to Salim to tell him not to break the rules, as in fact all elephants would once be his. Salim said that the pelting of stones had never had his sanction, and Khurram, satisfied with the explanation, tried to separate the elephants by means of fireworks, but in vain. Unfortunately Rantahman also got worsted by Gurānbār, and the two injured elephants ran away, and threw themselves into the Jamna. This annoyed Akbar more, but his excitement was intensified, when at that moment Khursaw came up, and abused in unmeasured terms his father in the presence of the emperor. Akbar withdrew, and sent next morning for 'Alī, to whom he said that the vexation caused by Khursaw's bad behaviour had made him ill.

In the end of 1017, Jahāngir also visited 'Alī's reservoir, and made him a commander of 2,000. He did not long enjoy his promotion, and died on the 5th Muharram, 1018. Jahāngir says of him (Tuzuk, p. 74) that he excelled in Arabic, and composed a commentary to the Qānūn. "But his subtlety was greater than his knowledge, his looks better than his walk of life, his behaviour better than his heart, for in reality he was a bad and unprincipled man." Once Jahāngir hunted that 'Alī had killed Akbar. On the other side it is said that he spent annually 6,000 Rupees on medicines for the poor.¹

He had a son, known as Hakīm 'Abd'ul Wahhāb. He held a manṣab. In the 15th year of Jahāngir's reign, he claimed from certain Sayyids in Lāhor the sum of 80,000 Rs., which, he said, his father had lent them. He supported his claim by a certificate with the seal of a Qazī on it, and the statements of two witnesses. The Sayyids, who denied all knowledge, seeing that the case went against them, appealed to the Emperor. Jahāngir ordered Āsaf Khān (No. 98) to investigate the case. 'Abd'ul Wahhāb got afraid, and tried to evade the investigation by proposing to the Sayyids a compromise. This looked suspicious, and Āsaf by cross-questioning found that the claim was entirely false. He therefore reported 'Abd'ul Wahhāb, and the Emperor deprived him of his manṣab and jaḡir. He seems to have been afterwards restored to favour, for in the Pādīshāh nāma (I, G. 328) he is mentioned as a commander of 500, fifty horse

193 Gujar Khan son of Qutbu d Din Khan Atga (No 28)
He was mentioned above under No 28

194 Şadr Jahān Mufti
Miran Şadr Jahān was born in Pihāni a village near Qanawj 1 Through the influence of Şavāh 'Abdu n Nabi he was made Mufti. When 'Abdu llah Khan Uzbek king of Turan wrote to Akbar regarding his apostacy from Islam Miran Şadr and Hakim (No 205) were selected as ambassadors
The answer which they took to 'Abdu 'llah contained a few Arabic verses which 'Abdu 'llah could construe into a denial of the alleged apostacy—

مئل ان الرسول ولد
ما سبحا الله والرسول معا
مئل ان الله ذو ولد
من نساء الورى فكف انا

Of God people have said that He had a son, of the Prophet some have slandered of men—Then how should I ?
Neither God nor the Prophet has escaped the Miran returned in the 34th year, and was made Sadr (vide p 284)

In the 35th year, at the feast of Ābanmah, the Court witnessed a curious spectacle. The Şadr and 'Abdu 'l Hay (No 230) the Chief Justice of the empire took part in a drinking feast, and Akbar was so amused at seeing his ecclesiastical and judicial dignitaries over their cups, that he quoted the well known verse from Hafiz —

در دور نادشاه حدایتش حرم نوش
حادث مرانه کش شد . معی باله نوش
Up to the 40th year, he had risen to the dignity of a commander of 700, but later he was made an Amir, and got a manşab of 2 000 (vide
p 217-18)

During the reign of Jahangir who was very fond of him he was promoted to a command of 4 000 and received Qanawj as tuyul. As Şadr under Jahangir he is said to have given more lands in five years than under Akbar in fifty. He died in 1020 at the age, it is believed, of 120 years. His faculties remained unpaired to the last.

His position to Akbar s 'Divine Faith has been explained above (p 217-18). There is no doubt that he temporized and few people got more for it than he. He also composed poems, though in the end of his life, like Badaoni he repented and gave up poetry as being against the spirit of the Muhammadian law.

He had two sons —

- 1 Mir Badr s Ālam. He lived a retired life
- 2 Sayyid Nizām Khan. His mother was a Brahman woman of

1 So Dadī, onl. The Ma'ādir says Pihāni lies near Lakhnau whom his father had been so enamoured that he married her, hence Nizām was his favourite son. He was early introduced at Court, and, at the death of his father, was made a commander of 2,500, two thousand horse. In the first year of Shāhjahān's reign, he was promoted to a command of 3,000, and received, on the death of Murtaẓā Khān Inju (p 501) the title of Murtaẓā Khān. He served a long time in the Dakhin. His tuyūl was the Pargana of Dalamau where he on several occasions successfully quelled disturbances. He was also Fawjdar of Lakhnau. In the 24th year of Shahj's reign he was pensioned off, and received 20 lacs of dāms per annum out of the revenue of Pihānī, which was one krór. He enjoyed his pension for a long time.

His sons died before him. On his death, his grandsons 'Abd' 'l Muqtadir and 'Abd' 'lāh were appointed to mansabs, and received as tuyūl the remaining portion of the revenue of Pihānī. 'Abd' 'l Muqtadir rose to a command of 1,000, six hundred horse, and was Fawjdar of Khayrābad.

195 Takhta Beg ı Kabuli [Sardār Khān]

He was at first in the service of M Muhammad Hakīm, and distinguished himself in the wars with India, but on the death of his master (30th year) he joined Akbar's service. He served under Mān Singh and Zayn Koka against the Yūsufzaīs. As Thānahdār of Peshāwar he punished on several occasions the Tārikīs. In the 49th year, he was made a Khān.

After Jahāngīr's accession, he was made a commander of 2,000, and received the title of Sardār Khān. He was sent with Mirzā Ghāzī Tarḫān (p 392), to relieve Shāh Beg Khān (No 57) in Qandahar. As Shāh Beg was appointed governor of Kābul, Takhta was made governor of Qandahār, where, in 1016 he died.

He had a villa near Peshawar, called the Bāgh ı Sardār Khān. His two sons, Hayat Khān and Hidāyat ' 'llah got low mansabs.

196 Ray Patr Das [Rāja Bikramājit] a Khatri

Patr Das was in the beginning of Akbar's reign accountant (mushrif) of the elephant stables, and had the title of Rāy Rāyān. He distinguished himself in the 12th year, during the siege of Chitor. In the 21th year, he and Mir Adham were made joint diwāns of Bengal. At the outbreak of the Bengal military revolt, he was imprisoned by the rebels (p 485) but got off and served for some time in Bengal. In the 30th year, he was made diwān of Bihār. In the 38th year, he was ordered to occupy Bandhū (p 446), the capital of which after a siege of 8 months and 25 days surrendered (42nd year). In the 43rd year, he was made diwān of Kabul.

but was in the following year again sent to Bandhū. In the 46th year, he was made a commander of 3,000. When Abū 'l-Faẓl, in the 47th year, had been murdered by Bīr Singh, Akbar ordered Patr Dās to hunt down the rebel, and bring his head to Court. Patr defeated Bīr Singh in several engagements, and blockaded him in Īrich. When the siege had progressed, and a breach was made in the wall, Bīr Singh escaped and withdrew to the jungles with Patr close at his heels. Akbar, at last, in the 48th year, called P to Court, made him in the next year a commander of 5,000, and gave him the title of Raja Bikramajit.

After Jahāngir's accession, he was made Mīr Ātash, and was ordered to recruit and keep in readiness 50,000 artillery (topchī) with a train of 3,000 gun carts, the revenue of fifteen parganas being set aside for the maintenance of the corps (Tuzuk, p. 10).

When the sons of Muzaffar of Gujrāt created disturbances, and Yatīm Bahādūr had been killed, Patr was sent to Ahmadābād with powers to appoint the officers of the rebels who submitted up to commands of Yūzbāshīs, or to recommend them, if they had held higher commands, for appointments to the Emperor.

"The year of his death is not known." Ma'ā'ir

The Rāy Mohan Das mentioned occasionally in the Albarnāma and the Tuzuk (p. 50) appears to be his son.

197 Shaykh 'Abd' 'r-Rahīm, of Lakhnau

He belongs to the Shaykhzādas of Lakhnau, and was in the 40th year a commander of 700. He was a great friend of Jamāl Bakhtyar (No. 113), from whom he learned wine-drinking. In fact he drank so hard that he frequently got insane. In the 30th year, when Akbar was in the Panjab, 'Abd' 'r-Rahīm wounded himself in a fit whilst at Siyālkot in Hakīm Abū 'l-Faḥ's dwelling. Akbar looked after the wound himself.

His wife was a Brāhman woman of the name of Kishnā. After the death of her husband, she spent his money in laying out gardens and villas. In one of them her husband was buried, and she entertained every one who passed by the tomb, from a panj hazārī to a common soldier, according to his position in life.

'Abd' 'r-Rahīm was mentioned above on p. 359-60.

198 Mednī Rāy Chauhān

From the Albarnāma we see that he served, in the 28th and 32nd years, in Gujrāt. Nizam' 'd-Dīn Ahmad, who was with him in Gujrāt, says in the Tabqāt—"Mednī Ray is distinguished for his bravery and liberality, and is now (i.e., in 1001) a commander of 1,000."

199 Mir Abu 'l Qāsim Namakīn [Qāsim Khān]

The MSS have almost invariably Tamkīn (تمكين) instead of Namakīn. He is not to be confounded with Nos 240 and 250.

Mir Abū 'l Qāsim was a Sayyid of Hirāt. He was at first in the service of Mirzā Muhammad Hakīm, Akbar's brother and king of Kābul. But he left Kābul, and on entering Akbar's service, he received Bhira and Khushāb in the Punjab as jagir. As his lands lay within the Namaksār,¹ or salt range, he once presented Akbar, evidently in allusion to his faithful intentions (namak halātī), with a plate and a cup made of salt (namakīn), from which circumstance he received the nickname of Namakīn.

Abū 'l Qāsim served in the war with Dā'ūd of Bengal. In the 26th year, he was in Kābul, and accompanied, in the 30th year, Ismā'īl Qulī Khān (No 46) on his expedition against the Balūchīs. In the 32nd year, the Afghān chiefs of Sawad and Bajor, and Terah waited with their families on Akbar, who made Abū 'l Qāsim Krori and Fawjdar of those districts, and ordered him to take the families of the chiefs back to Afghānistān. The chiefs themselves were retained at Court. Renewed fights, in the 33rd year, gave him frequent occasions of distinguishing himself.

Up to the 40th year, he rose to a command of 700. In the 43rd year, he was appointed to Bhakkar. He built the great mosque in Sukkhar, opposite to Bhakkar. The inhabitants accused him of oppressions, and he was deposed. A party of the oppressed arrived with him at Court, and lodged a new complaint against him with 'Abd' 'l Hay (No 230), the Qāzī of the imperial camp (urdu). But Abū 'l Qāsim, though summoned, did not appear before the judge, and when the matter was reported to Akbar, he was sentenced to be tied to the foot of an elephant, and paraded through the bazars. To avoid the disgrace, he came to an immediate settlement with the complainants, chiefly through the mediation of Shaykh Ma'rūf, Ṣadr of Bhakkar, and prevailed on them to return the very day to their homes. The next day he went to the Emperor, and complained of the Qāzī, stating that there were no complainants, and 'Abd' 'l Hay tried in vain to produce the oppressed parties. This case led to the order that Qāzīs should in future prepare descriptive rolls of complainants, and present them to the Emperor.

¹ The namaksār or salt range says the Ma'ā'ir, is a district 20 kos long and belongs to the Sultanate.

th
the
Mr 40
Ti

It is also often made into ornaments.

Abu I Qasim was soon after made a Khan, got a higher mansab and received Gujrat in the Panjab as tuyul. In the first year of Jahangir's reign he was made a commander of 1,500. The part which he played in the capture of Prince Khusrav has been mentioned above (p. 456, note 1, where Tamkīn is to be altered to Namakīn). For his services he was again appointed to Bhakkar with the rank of a commander of 3,000. He now resolved to make Bhakkar his home. Most of his illustrious descendants were born there. On a hill near the town southwards towards Lohari near the branch of the river called Kahārmatī (کیا ماہری), he built a mausoleum to which he gave the name of Suffa-yi Safa (the days of purity). He and several of his descendants were buried in it.

He is said to have been a most voracious man. He could eat—historians do not specify the time—1,000 mangoes, 1,000 sweet apples and 2 melons each weighing a man. The Ma'āyir says he had 22 sons and the Tuzuk (p. 13) says he had 30 sons and more than 15 daughters.

The following tree is compiled from several notes in the Ma'āyir—

Mir Abu I Qasim Namakin (settled at Bhakkar in 1015)

Mir Abul Baqā Amir Khān rose under Jahangir to a command of 2,500 fifteen hundred horse. Through the influence of Yamīn d Dawla he was made governor of Multan and in the 2nd year of Shahjahan he was made a commander of 3,000 two thousand horse and appointed to Thathah vice Murtaza-yi Inju deceased (p. 501). In the 9th year he was made Tuyuldar of Bir in the Dakhn and was sent in the 14th year to Siwistan vice Qaraq Khān. In the following year he was again appointed to Thathah where in 1057 (20th year) he died. He was buried in the mausoleum built by his father. Under Jahangir he was generally called Mir Khān. Shahjahan gave him the title of Amir Khān.

One of his daughters was married in 1066 after his death to Prince Murad Bakhs who had no children by his first wife a daughter of

Shāhnawāz Khān i Safawī¹ Amīr Khān had a large family His eldest son, Mir 'Abdū r'Razzāq, was a commander of 900, and died in the 26th year of Shāhjahān's reign His second son, Ziyā'ū 'd Dīn Yūsuf, was made a Khān, and held under Shāhjahān a mansab of 1,000, six hundred horse Ziyā'ū's grandson, Abū 'l-Wafā, was in the end of Awrangzib's reign in charge of his majesty's prayer room (dārogha yi jā namāz) Amīr Khān's youngest son, Mir 'Abdū 'l-Karīm, was a personal friend of Awrangzib He received in succession the titles of Multaft Khān, Khānazād Khān (45th year of Awrangzib), Mir Khānazād Khān and Amīr Khān (48th year), and held a command of 3,000 After Awrangzib's death, he was with Muhammad A'zam Shāh, but as he had no contingent, he was left with the baggage (bungāl) at Gnāliyār After the death of Muhammad A'zam in the battle of Sarāy Jāju,² Bahādur Shāh made him a commander of 3500 He was generally at Court, and continued so under Farrukh Siyar After Farrukh's death, the Bārha brothers made Amīr Khān sadr of the empire He died shortly after His son, Abū 'l-Khayr, was made a Khān by Farrukh Siyar, the other sons held no mansabs, but lived on their zamīndārīs

2 Mirzā Kashmīrī was involved in the rebellion of Prince Khusraw Is the associates were to be punished in an unusual way (siyāsāt i ghayr-uklarrar, Tuzuk, p 32) Jahāngīr ordered his penis to be cut off

3 Mirzā Husān'ū 'd Dīn He held a mansab, but died young

4 Mirzā Za'id'ū 'llāh He was in the service of Khān Jahān Lodi Wazīr Beg Jamīl³

Wazīr Jamīl, as he is often called, served in the 9th year of Akbar's reign against 'Abdū 'llāh Khān Uzbek, and in the war with Khān Zamān (No 13) In the final battle, when Bahādur Khān (No 22) was thrown off his horse, W J, instead of taking him prisoner, accepted a bribe from him, and let him off But Nazar Bahādur, a man in the service of Majnūn Khān (No 50) saw it, and took Bahādur prisoner Afterwards, he received jāgīr in the Eastern Districts, and took part in the expeditions to Bengal and Orīsā under Mun'īm Khān At the outbreak of the Bengal military revolt, he joined the Qīqshāls; but when they separated from Ma'cūm i

¹ Shahnawāz Khān i Safawī is the title of Mirzā Badī'ū 'z Zaman alias Mirzā Dakhil, son of Mirzā Purām (No 9) One of his daughters, Dilras Bānū Begum, was married, in the end of 1046, to Awrangzib Another was married, in 1052, to Prince Murād Baksh, Eghinstone (History of India, 6th edition, p 607) calls Shahnawāz Khān by mistake the brother of Shāyista Khān; but Shāyista is the son of Yamīn'ū 'd Dawla Asaf Khān, elder brother of Nur Jahān.

² Sarāy Jāju, near Dhoolpūr The battle was fought on the 16th Rabī' I, 1119, and Muhammad A'zam was killed with his two sons, Bedar Bakht and Wālī-jāh

³ Jamīl is a common name among Turks. It is scarcely ever used in Hindostān.

Kābuli (p 476, note) and tendered their submission, W J also was pardoned. In the 29th year, he came to Court, and served in the following year under Jagnath (No 69) against the Rāna. He seems to have lived a long time. Jahangir, on his accession, made him a commander of 3,000 (Tuzuk, p 8)

He is not to be confounded with the Jamil Beg mentioned under No 172

201 Tāhūr, [son of] Sayf^u 'l Muluk

The Tabaqāt says that Tāhūr was the son of Shāh Muhammad Sayf^u 'l Mulūk¹. His father was governor of Gharjistān in Khurasān, and was killed by Shāh Tahmasp of Persia. Tāhūr went to India, was made an Amir at Akbar's Court, and served in Bengal, where he was when the author of the Tabaqāt wrote (1001)

He is also mentioned in Dowson's Edition of Elliot's Historians, I, pp 241, 242

202 Babū Mankli

Regarding the name "Mankli", vide p 400, note 1. The Tabaqāt says that Babū Mankli was an Afghan and a commander of 1,000

He was at first in Dā'ūd's service, and occupied Ghoraghāt at the time when Mun'im Khān had invaded Orisā (p 400). Soon after, he entered Akbar's service, but continued to be employed in Bengal. In the 30th year, he suppressed disturbances at Ghoraghat (Albarn III, 470), and took part, in the 35th year, in the operations against Qutlū Khān. Two years later he accompanied Man Singh's expedition to Orisā.

He may have lived under Jahangir, for the Mankli Khān mentioned in the Tuzuk (pp 70, 138) can only refer to him. The Tuzuk (p 12) mentions a son of his, Hātīm. Another son, Mahmud, appears to have been a commander of 500, three hundred horse, under Shāhjahān (Pādīshāhn, I, b, p 323) though the text edition of the Bibl Indica calls him son of Yābū Mashālī (بابو مشکلی for بابو مشکلی)

XVI Commanders of Six Hundred

203 Muhammad Quli Khān Turkman [Afshār, p 452]

appointed to Kābul, Muhammad Qulī Khān, his brother Hamza Beg (perhaps No 277), and others, were sent to Kashmīr, vice Yusuf Khān (No 35, and p 452) In the 45th year, a party of Kasmīris tried to set up Ambā Chak¹ as king, but they were defeated by ʿAlī Qulī, son of M Q Kh In the 47th year, M Q Kh was made a commander of 1,500, six hundred horse, and Hamza Beg, one of 700, three hundred and fifty horse New disturbances broke out when in the following year ʿAlī Rāy, king of Little Tibet, invaded the frontier districts of Kashmīr He retreated on M Q Kh's arrival, and was vigorously pursued, when the imperialists were enforced by Sayf^u 'llah (No 262) from Lāhor In the 49th year, Amba again appeared, but was driven, with some difficulty, from his mountains

In the 2nd year of Jahāngir's reign, M Q Kh was removed from Kashmīr Hamza Beg was, in the 49th year of Akbar's reign, a commander of 1,000

204 Bakhtyar Beg Gurd 1 Shah Manṣūr

The Izāfat most likely means that he was the son of Shah Mansur, in which case the word gurd (athlete) would be Bakhtyar's epithet Two MSS, have the word ṣar (son) instead of gurd

The Tabaqat says "Bakhtyār Beg Turkman is an Amīr, and governs at present (1001) Sīwistān" In the 32nd year, he served against the Tarīkīs

205 Hakīm Humām,² son of Mīr ʿAbd^u 'r Razzaq of Gilān

Regarding his family connection, vide No 112, p 468 Humām's real name is Humāyūn When he came to Akbar's Court, he discreetly called himself Humāyūn Qulī, or "slave of Humāyūn", but soon afterwards Akbar gave him the name of Humām He held the office of Bakāwal Beg (p 59), and though only a commander of 600, he was a personal friend of Akbar, and possessed great influence at Court In the 31st year he was sent with Sadr Jahān (No 194) to Tūrān as ambassador Akbar often said that he did not enjoy his meals on account of Humām's absence He returned to India about a month after his brother's death He died in the 40th year, on the 6th Rabīʿ I, 1004 Badayūnī (II, p 406) says, the day after Humām's death, Kamalā (p 264) also died, and their property was at once put under seal and escheated to the government, so that they were destitute of a decent shroud

¹ The MSS have Chak The Tuzuk mentions "a Kashmīri of royal blood", of the name of Chak He was killed by Sher Afgan (vide No 394) at Bardwān, on the 3rd Safar, 1016

² Humām, not Hammām, is the Indian pronunciation.

Humam had two sons —

1 Ḥalīm Ḥāziq (حاذق) He was born at Fathpūr Sikrī, and was a young man when his father died. At Shahjahān's accession he was made a commander of 1,500, six hundred horse, and was sent, in the 1st year to Tūrān as ambassador. He rose to a command of 3,000. Later, for some reason, his mansab was cancelled, and he lived at Āgra on a pension of 20,000 rupces per annum, which in the 18th year was doubled. He died in the 31st year (1068)¹. He was a poet of some distinction, and wrote under the name of Ḥāziq. His vanity is said to have been very great. A copy of his diwān was kept on a golden stool in his reception room, and visitors, when it was brought in or taken away, were expected to rise and make salams, else he got offended.

2 Ḥalīm Khushḥāl He grew up with Prince Khurram Shāhjahān, on his accession, made him a commander of 1,000. He was for some time Bakhshī of the Dakḥin.

206 Mirzā Anwar, son of Khān Ṣāzam Mirzā Koka (No 21)

He was mentioned above on page 316

XVII Commanders of Five Hundred

207 Baltu Khan of Turkistan

He was a grundee of Humāyūn, and served in the Kābul war, and in the battles which led to H's restoration.

208 Mirak Bahādur Arghūn

The Ṭabaqat says he reached a command of 2,000, and died². From the Akbarnama (II, 170, 248) we see that he served in the conquest of Mālwa (vide No 120) and in the pursuit of Sharafu'd Dīn Husayn (No 17).

209 Laḥī Khan Kolabī

He is also called Laḥī Khan Badakhshī (vide p 484), and served under Humāyūn in the war of the restoration (Akbarn I, 411). He distinguished himself in the defeat of Hemū. Later, he served under Munḥim in Bengal and Orisā, and died of fever at Gaur (p 407).

210 Shaykh Ahmad, son of Shaykh Salīm

He is the second (miyānī) son of Shaykh Salīm of Fathpūr Sikrī. He served at Court with Shaykh Ibrāhīm (No 82), and died in the 22nd year (985)³.

¹ The Muḥḥit says that the author of the Mirḥāt Ṣālam mentions 1080 as the year of his death, but my MS of the Mirḥāt (Chapter on the poets of the period from Humāyūn to Awrangzib) mentions no year.

² Died in 975. He was blown up before Chitor, Sawānīh, p 201.—B]

³ Sawānīh, p 370.—B]

Khan was in the service of Mirza Hindal but after the Mirza's death (21st Zi Qa'ada 958) he was taken on by Humayun. He served in the wars with Khan Zaman.

Bada'oni (III 206) says that his real name was 'Alī Akbar. He was a fair poet but a heretic and like Tashbihī of Kashan wrote treatises on the Man of the Millennium according to the Nuqtawī doctrines (p 502). Hence he must have been alive in 990.

217 Sayyid Jamāl¹ d Dīn son of Sayyid Ahmad Barha (No 91)

Vide above p 447. He had also served in the final war with Khan Zaman.

218 Tagmal the Puwar

He served in the second Gujrat war after Akbar's forced march to Patan and Ahmadabad (p 458 note).

219 Husayn Beg brother of Husayn Khan Buzurg

220 Hasan Khan Batani¹

The Tabaqat classes him among the commanders of 1000. He was at first in the service of the Bengal king Sulayman and was present with Sulayman Mankli (p 400) and Kala Pahar at the interview between Mun'im and Khan Zaman (No 13) at Baksar (Buxar) Akbarn II 325.

Hasan was killed with Bir Bar in the Khaybar Pass vide p 214. MSS often call him wrongly Husayn instead of Hasan.

221 Sayyid Chhajhu² of Barha

The Tabaqat says that S Chhajhu was a brother of S Mahmūd (No 75) and distinguished for his courage and bravery. From the family genealogies of the Barha clan it appears that S Ch was a Kundliwal. His tomb still exists at Majhera and according to the inscription he died in 967.

222 Munsif Khan Sultan Muhammad of Hirat

223 Qazī Khan Bakhshi

Some MSS have Bada~~h~~shi instead of Bakhshi. Vide No 144.

224 Haji Yusuf Khan.

He was at first in Kamran's service. In the 12th year he joined the corps of Qiya Khan (No 33) and rendered assistance to M Yusuf Khan whom Khan Zaman (No 13) besieged in Qanawj. In the 17th year he operated under Khan 'Alam (No 58) against M Ibrahim Husayn and was present in the battle of Sarnal. In the 19th year he went with Mun'im to Bengal and Orisa and died after his return at Gaur (p 407).

¹ Barani is the name of an Afghan tribe N W of Dera Isma'īl Khān.

² The spelling Chhajhu is preferable to Jhajhu.

225 Rāwul Bhum, of Jaisalmir

The Tuzuk says (p 159) —“ On the 9th Khurdād (middle of 1025), Kalyān of Jaisalmir was introduced at Court by Rājā Kishn Dās, whom I had sent to him Kalyān's elder brother was Rāwul Bhīm, a man of rank and influence When he died, he left a son two months old, who did not live long Bhum's daughter had been married to me when I was prince, and I had given her the title of Malika-yi Jahān This alliance was made because her family had always been faithful to our house I now called Bhīm's brother to Court, invested him with the Alā, and made him Rāwul ”¹

For Kalyān, vide under No 226 In the 12th year of Jahāngīr's reign he was made a commander of 2,000, one thousand horse (Tuzuk, p 163)

226 Hashim Beg, son of Qāsim Khan (No 59)

After the death of his father (39th year) and the arrival of Quly Khān (No 42), the new governor of Kabul, Hashim returned to Court In the 41st year, he served under M Rustam (No 9) against Basū and other rebellious zamindars in the north-eastern part of the Panjāb, and distinguished himself in the conquest of Mau In the 44th year, he served under Farid i Bukhārī (No 99) before Āsir Later, he went with Sa'adat Khān to Nāsik² After the conquest of Tiranbak, he returned to Court (46th year), and was appointed, in the following year, to a command of 1,500

In the first year of Jahāngīr's reign, he was made a commander of 2 000, fifteen hundred horse In the 2nd year, his mansab was increased to 3,000, two thousand horse, and he was made governor of Orisā In the 6th year, he was transferred to Kashmīr, his uncle Khwājāgī Muḥammad

¹ The list of Jahān — — — — —
 (1) Malika y of Zayn Ko
 p. 8 and Al daughter ar Hasan Zam
 born in 10
 Sayy
 an 01
 or I K11,2
 1, 1
 11, 1
 1, 1
 111,
 (1) A daughter of Iam Chand Bu
² It is Sa'adat Khān hac of the party of Gulam and Ti

Husayn (No 241) officiating for him there till his arrival from Orisa His successor in Orisa was Raja Kalyan brother of Bhim (No 225)

Hashim's son is the renowned Muhammad Qasim Khan Mir Ātish He was in the 18th year of Shahjahan's a commander of 1,000 five hundred and ninety horse Daroghā of the Topkhana and Kotwal of the camp He distinguished himself in Balkh Andlud received the title of Muṣṭamīd Khan and was made in the 21st year a commander of 2,000 one thousand horse and Akhta Begī In the following year he was promoted to a command of 3,000 and also got the title of Qasim Khan He then served under Awrangzib in Qandahar and was made in the 28th year a commander of 4,000 two thousand five hundred horse In the next year he destroyed Fort Santur (سنتور) which the ruler of Srinagar had repaired Later he was made by Dara Shikoh a commander of 5,000 five thousand sīhaspa duaspa received a present of a lac of rupees and was appointed governor of Ahmadabad (Gujrat) whilst Jaswant Singh was made governor of Malwa Both were ordered to unite their contingents near Ujjain and keep Prince Murad Baksh in check When the Prince left Gujrat the two commanders marched against him viz Biswara but when approaching Khachrod Murad suddenly retreated 18 kos and joined 7 kos from Ujjain the army of Awrangzib The two chiefs had received no information of Awrangzib's march They attacked him however but were totally defeated (near Ujjain 22nd Rajab 1068) In the first battle between Awrangzib and Dara at Samogar² Qasim commanded the left wing Soon after he made his submission and received Sambhal and Murabadal as tujil as Rustam Khan Dakhini the former jagirdar had fallen at Samogar Qasim was then charged with the capture of Sīlayman Shikoh In the 3rd year of Awrangzib's reign he was appointed to Mathura On the way he was murdered by a brother of his who is said to have led a miserable life (1071) The murderer was executed at Awrangzib's order

²²⁷ Mirza Faridun son of Muhammad Quli Khan Birlas (No 31)

He has been mentioned above p 364 His death took place at Udaipur in 1023 (Tu ul p 131)

²²⁸ Yusuf Khan [Chak] king of Kashmir

Yusuf's father was Ṣālī Khan Chak king of Kashmir He died from a hurt he received during a game at claugan (p 309) having been violently thrown on the pommel of the saddle (pesh koha yī zim) On his death Yusuf was raised to the throne (Albarnāma III 237) He first surrounded the palace of his uncle Abdāl, who aimed at the crown, and in the fight which ensued, Abdāl was shot. A hostile party thereupon raised one Sayyid Mubārak to the throne, and in a fight which took place on the maydan of Srinagar, where the 'Id prayer is said, Yūsuf was defeated. Without taking further part in the struggle, he fled, and came, in the 21th year, to Akbar's Court, where he was well received. During his stay at Court, Sayyid Mubārak had been forced to retire, and Lohar Chak, son of Yūsuf's uncle, had been made king. In the 25th year (Albarn, III, 288) the Emperor ordered several Panjab nobles to reinstate Yūsuf. When the Imperial army reached Pinjar, the Kashmiris sued for mercy, and Yūsuf, whom they had solicited to come alone, without informing Akbar's commanders, entered Kashmir, seized Lohar Chak without fighting, and commenced to reign.

[¹ Succeeded by Kalyan commander of 1,500 eight hundred --B]

² J de Journal Asiatic Soc ety Bengal 18 0 p 275

Some time after, Sāhh Diwāna reported to the Emperor how firmly and independently Yūsuf had established himself, and Akbar sent Shaykh Ya'qūb, Kashmiri, a trusted servant, with his son Haydar to Kashmir, to remind Yūsuf of the obligations under which he lay to the Emperor. In the 29th year, therefore, Yūsuf sent his son Ya'qūb with presents to Akbar, but refused personally to pay his respects, although the Court, in the 30th year, had been transferred to the Panjāb, and Ya'qūb, who had hitherto been with the Emperor, fled from anxiety for his safety. The Emperor then sent Hakim 'Alī (No 192) and Bahā'ud Dīn Kambū to Yūsuf to persuade him to come, or, if he could not himself come, to send again his son. As the embassy was without result, Akbar ordered Shahrukh Mirzā (No 7) to invade Kashmir. The Imperial army marched over Pakhli, and was not far from Bārah Mūlah, when Yūsuf submitted and surrendered himself (Albarn, III, 492).¹ Shāhrukh was on the point of returning, when he received the order to complete the conquest. Yūsuf being kept a prisoner, the Kashmiris raised Awlād Husayn, and, soon after, Ya'qūb, Yūsuf's son, to the throne, but he was everywhere defeated. Information of Yūsuf's submission and the defeat of the Kashmiris was sent to Court, and at Srinagar the khulba was read, and coins were struck, in Akbar's name. The cultivation of zafarān (p 89)² and silk, and the right of hunting, were made Imperial monopolies (p 452). On the approach of the cold season, the army returned with Yūsuf Khān, and arrived, in the 31st year, at Court. Toḍar Mal was made responsible for Yūsuf's person

As Yaʿqūb Khān and a large party of Kashmiris continued the struggle, Qasim (No 59) was ordered to march into Kashmir to put an end to the rebellion. Yaʿqūb was again on several occasions defeated.

In the 32nd year Yūsuf was set at liberty, received from Akbar a jāgīr in Bihār (Akbarn, III, 547) and was made a commander of 500. He served in Bengal. In the 37th year, he accompanied Mān Singh to Orisā, and commanded the detachment which marched over Jhārkand and Kokra¹ (Chutiyā Nāgṗūr) to Mednīpūr (Akbarn, III, 641)

Yaʿqūb Khān, soon after, submitted, and paid his respects to Akbar, when, in the 34th year, the Court had gone to Kashmir (p 412)

Yūsuf Khān is not to be confounded with No 388

229 Nūr Qulij, son of Āltūn Qulij

Āltūn or āltūn is Turkish, and means "gold"

Nūr Qulij was a relation of Qulij Khān (No 42). He served under him in the expedition to Idar, which Akbar had ordered to be made when moving, in the 21st year, from Ajmīr to Gogunda. In the fight with the zamāndār of Idar, N Q was wounded. In the 26th year, he served under Sultān Murād against Mirzā Muḥammād Hakīm. In the 30th year, he again served under Qulij Khān, who had been made governor of Gujrat. He continued to serve there under Khānkhānān (No 29), and returned with him, in the 32nd year, to Court

230 Mir ʿAbd^u 'l-Hay, Mir ʿAdl

The Tabaqāt calls him Khawāja ʿAbd^u 'l Hay, and says that he was an Amīr. He had been mentioned above on pp 468, 471

231 Shah Qulij Khān Naranjī

Abū 'l Fazl says that Shāh Qulij was a Kurd from near Baghdād. He was an old servant of Humāyūn. In the first year of Akbar's reign, he served under Khizr Khān (p 394, note 1) in the Panjab. He was much attached to Bayrām. In the 11th year, he was sent to Gaḍha, when Mahdī Qāsum Khān (No 36) had left that province without permission for Makkah.

¹ Kokra was mentioned above on p 499. It is a place in the district of Chutiyā Nāgṗūr, in the State of Assam. It is a small town, and was the capital of the Kingdom of Kokra, which was founded by a Kurd, Shāh Qulij, in the 16th century. The Kingdom of Kokra was a vassal of the Kingdom of Assam, and was destroyed by the British in 1826. The ruins of the Kingdom of Kokra are still visible in the district of Chutiyā Nāgṗūr.

The Tabaqāt calls him a commander of 1,000.

His son, Pādishah Qulī, was a poet, and wrote under the name of Jazbī. A few verses of his are given below in the list of poets.

232 Farrukh Khān, son of Khān 1 Kalān (No 16)

He was mentioned on pp 338 and 384. According to the Tabaqāt, he served, in 1001, in Bengal.

233 Shādman, son of Khān 1 Aʿzam Koka (No 21)

Vide above, p 346

234 Hakīm ʿAyn^u ʿl Mulk, of Shiraz

He is not to be confounded with Hakīm^u ʿl Mulk, vide below among the Physicians of the Court.

He was a learned man and a clever writer. He traced his origin, on his mother's side, to the renowned logician Muhaqqiq 1 Dawwānī. The historian Badāʾonī was a friend of his. Akbar also liked him very much. In the 9th year he was sent as ambassador to Chingiz Khān of Gujrāt. In the 17th year he brought Iʿtimad Khān (No 67) and Mir Abū Turāb to the Emperor. He also accompanied Akbar on his march to the eastern provinces of the empire. Afterwards, in 983, he was sent to ʿĀdil Khān of Bijāpūr, from where, in 985, he returned to Court (Badāʾonī II, 250). He was then made Fawjdār of Sambhal. In the 26th year, when ʿArab Bahādūr and other Bengal rebels created disturbances, he fortified Bareilī, and refusing all offers, held out till the arrival of an Imperial corps, when he defeated the rebels. In the same year he was made Sadr of Bengal, and in the 31st year Bakhshī of the Sūba of Āgra. He was then attached to the Dakhin corps of ʿAziz Koka (No 21), and received Handia as jāgīr. When ʿĀziz, for some reason, cancelled his jāgīr, he went without permission to Court (35th year), but was at first refused audience. On inquiry, however, Akbar reinstated him.

He died at Handia on the 27th Zi Hujja, 1003 (Badāʾonī II, 403).

The Mirzāʿī Masjid, also called Pādishāhī Masjid, in Old Bareilī, Mirzāʿī Mahalla, was built by him. The inscription on it bears the date 987 (24th year), when the Hakīm was Fawjdār of Sambhal.

He was also a poet, and wrote under the takhallus of Dawa,ī

235 Janish Bahādūr

Jānish Bahādūr was mentioned on p 368. He was at first in the service of Mirza Muhammad Hakim king of Kābul. After the death, in the 30th year, of his master, he came with his sons to India. Soon after, he served under Zayn Koka (No 31) against the Yūsufzāi's, and saved Zayn's life in the Khaybar catastrophe. In the 35th year, he served under the Khān Khān in Thathah and returned with him, in the 38th year to Court. Later he served in the Dakhin. He died in the 46th year (1009). He was an excellent soldier.

His son Shujā'at Khān Shādī Beg. He was made, in the 7th year of Shahjahan's reign a commander of 1,000, and received the title of Shad Khan. In the 12th year he was sent as ambassador to Nazr Muham mad Khan of Balkh. On his return in the 14th year, he was made a commander of 1,500, and was appointed governor of Bhakkar, vide Shah Quli Khan. Afterwards, on the death of Ghayrat Khān, he was made governor of Thathah and a commander of 2,000. In the 19th year he was with Prince Murad Bakhsh in Balkh and Badakhshān. In the 21st year he was appointed governor of Kābul, vice Siwa Ram, and held in the following year, an important command under Awrangzib in the Qandahar expedition and the conquest of Bust. In the 23rd year, he was made a commander of 3,000, two thousand five hundred horse, and received the coveted distinction of a flag and a drum. Two years later in the 25th year he served again before Qandahar, and was made on Shahjahan's arrival in Kabul a commander of 3,500, three thousand horse with the title of Shujā'at Khān. In the 26th year, he served under Dara Shikoh before Qandahar, and with Rustam Khān Bahadur at Bust. He died soon after. He had a son of the name of Muhammad Sa'id.

236 Mir Tahir i Mūsawī

He is not to be confounded with Nos 94, 111, and 201. According to the Tabaqāt, Mir Tahir is 'the brother of Mirzā Yūsuf Pazawī (No 37), and was distinguished for his bravery'. It would thus appear that Abu l Fazl makes no difference between the terms Razawī and Mūsawī (vide p 414 under No 61).

237 Mirza 'Alī Beg, 'Alamshāhi

He is mentioned in the Akbarnāma among the grandees who accompanied Mun'im to Bengal and Orīśā and took part in the battle of Tekero (p 406). After the outbreak of the Bengal Military revolt, he joined a conspiracy made by Mir 'Akī 'Abdī Kor, Shihab i Badakhshī, and Kujak Yasāwul, to go over to the rebels. The plot, however, was discovered, they were all imprisoned but Mir 'Akī alone was executed. Akbarnāma, III 262.

His epithet 'Alamshāhi is not clear to me.

He must not be confounded with the more illustrious

[Mīrza ʿAlī Beg i Akbarshahī] ¹

He was born in Badakhshan, and is said to have been a highly educated man. When he came to India he received the title of Akbarshāhī. In the 30th year, he commanded the Ahadis on Shahrūkh's expedition to Kashmir (p. 535)

Later, he served under Prince Murad in the Dakhīn. When the prince, after making peace, returned from Ahmadnagar, Sadiq Khan (No. 43) occupied Mahkar. But new disturbances broke out under the Dakhīn leaders, Azhdar Khan and ʿĀyn Khan, against whom Sadiq sent a corps under M. ʿAlī Beg. He suddenly fell on them and routed them, carrying off much plunder and many dancing girls (zanān i akhara). In consequence of this defeat, Khudawand Khan and other Amirs of the Nizāmshah marched against the Imperialists with 10,000 horse, but Sadiq and M. A. B. defeated them. In the 43rd year, M. A. B. took Fort Rahūtara (راہوترہ) near Dawlatābad, after a siege of one month, occupied, in the same year, Patan on the Dodavari and took Fort Lohgadh. "Both forts," says the author of the Maʿāṣir, "have, from want of water, become uninhabitable (musmar shuda) and are so to this day." Later, M. A. B. served under Abu 'l Fazl, and distinguished himself in the conquest of Ahmadnagar. In the 46th year he received a drum and a flag, and continued to serve, under the Khan Khanan, in the Dakhīn.

In the beginning of Jahāngir's reign, he was made a commander of 4,000, jagirdar of Sambhal, and governor of Kashmir. He served in the pursuit of Khusraw (Tuzuk, p. 30). Later, he received a tuyul in Audh. When Jahāngir went to Ajmir, he went to Court. One day, he paid a visit to the tomb of Muḥimū 'd Dīn i Chishtī. On seeing the tomb of Shahbāz Khān (p. 439), he stooped down, and embracing it, exclaimed "Oh! he was an old friend of mine." The same moment, he fell forward a corpse, and was buried at the same spot (22nd Rabīʿ I, 1025).

It is said that he kept few soldiers and servants, but paid them well. In his habits he was an epicurean. He was looked upon as a great patron of the learned. He died childless, at the age of seventy five (Tuzuk, p. 163).

238 Ram Das, the Kachwaha

His father was a poor man of the name of Ordat (اوردات), and lived at Lūni (or Banū, vide p. 435). Ram Das was at first in the service of Rāy Sal Darbūrī (No. 106) and was recommended by him to the Emperor

¹ The Tuzuk (i. 11) says he belonged to the ulus i Dilli, a very doubtful term as he belonged to Badakhshan. Perhaps we have to read ulus i dildaj (p. 422).

His faithfulness was almost proverbial. In the 17th year, when Toḍar Mal was ordered to assist Munṣim in Bihar, he was made his nā'ib in the Financial Department, and gained Akbar's favour by his regularity and diligence. He amassed a fortune, and though he had a palace at Āgra near Hatīyapul he lived in the guard house, "always watching with his 200 Rājput's, spear in hand."

Immediately before Akbar's death he put his men over the treasures of the palace with a view to preserve them for the lawful heir. Jahāngīr, with whom he stood in high favour, sent him in the 6th year, with 'Abdū 'llāh Khan to Gujrāt and the Dakhin, and gave him the title of Rāja and a flag, Rantanbhur being assigned to him as jāgīr (Tuzuk, p. 98). It seems that he received the title of Rāja Karan. After the defeat of the Imperialists Jahangīr wished to make an example of the Amīrs who had brought disgrace on the Imperial arms. He ordered their pictures to be drawn, and taking the portraits one after the other into his hand, abused each Amīr right royally. Looking at Rām Das's portrait, he said "Now, when thou wert in Ray Sal's service, thou hadst a tanka per diem, but my father took an interest in thee, and made thee an Amīr. Do not Rājput's think flight a disgraceful thing? Alas! thy title, Rāja Karan, ought to have taught thee better. Mayest thou die without the comforts of thy faith." Rām Das was immediately sent to Bangash where, in the same year, he died (1022). When Jāhangīr heard of his death, he said "My curse has come true, for the Hindūs believe that a man who dies beyond the Indus will go straight to hell."

He was a liberal man and gave rich presents to jesters and singers.

His eldest son Naman Das, in the 48th year of Akbar's reign left the Court without permission and went home. At the request of his father, Shah Quli Khan's men were to bring him back to Court by force. But Naman defied them, a struggle ensued and he was killed. Rām Das was so grieved that Akbar paid him a visit of condolence.

His second son, Dalap Dās, had the same character as his father, but he died young.

In the Tuzuk (p. 312) a villa near a spring called Inch (چنچ), between Banjīr and Kakapur in Kashmir is mentioned which Akbar had given Rām Das. Vide also Tuzuk p. 39 l. 3.

2. Muhammad Khan Niyazi

Abū l-Faḍl ranks him among the commanders of 500. Under Jahangīr he rose to a command of 2,000. Like Mirza Rustam Safawī and Abū

'l-Hasan Turbatī, he refused a title, for he said that his name was Muhammad, than which no better name existed

He served under Shāhbāz Khān (No 80) in Bengal, and distinguished himself in the fights near the Brahmaputra. It is said that Shāhbāz was so anxious to retain his services, that he gave him a lac of rupees per annum. Later, he served, under the Khānkhānān in the conquest of Thathah, and inflicted the final blow on Mirzā Jānī Beg (No 47) near Lakhī,¹ where he obtained a signal victory, though far outnumbered by the enemies. From that time, the Khānkhānān was his friend.

Under Jahāngīr, he took a leading part in the Dakhin wars, especially in the fights with Mahk Ambar near Kharkī, a famous battlefield (vide note to No 255), and continued to serve there under Prince Shahjāhān.

He died in 1037. The tārīkh of his death is محمد جان اولنا سرد, "Muhammad Khān, the saint, is dead." He was a man of great piety. His day was carefully divided, religious exercises, the reading of commentaries on the Qur'ān, conversing with holy men, sleeping and eating each had its fixed time. Nor did he ever depart from his routine except on the march. He never neglected the ablution (wūzū) prescribed by the law. People told many miraculous stories (khawāriq) of him.

During his long stay in the Dakhin he held Āshtī (in the Warda district) as jāgīr, and made it his home. He adorned the town with several mosques, houses, and gardens. "At present," says the author of the Mā'āsir, "there is only one of his hundred houses left, the store house where his lamps were kept, the whole town and the neighbourhood are deserted, and do not yield a tenth part of the old revenue. Even among his descendants there is none left that may be called a man of worth (kas ī na-mānd ki ruzhd ī dāshta bāshad)." ²

The predecessor was . . . of the . . .
 wl . . .
 in . . .
 of . . .
 Nawab Wahid Khan one of its representatives in Āshtī the powers of an honorary magistrate

Karanja A small octroi town in the Ārvi tahsil of the Warda district. It was founded some 200 years by Nawab Muhammad Khān Niyazi of Āshtī. Extracts from C Grant's Gazetteer of the Central Provinces of India second edition 1870 pp 7 and 236

He was buried in Ashti. People often pray at his tomb.

The men of his contingent were mostly Niyazi Afghans. If one of them died he gave a month's pay to his family or if he had no children half a month's pay to his heirs.

His son Ahmad Khan Niyazi was in the 20th year of Shahjahan's reign a commander of 2500 (Padishahnama II 386-725).

210 Abu'l Muzaffar son of Ashraf Khan (No 74)

From the Akbarnama (III 248) we see that in the 21st year (987) he was stationed in Chandernagore and Narwar and was ordered to assist in suppressing the Bihar rebels (III 273). In the 28th year he served in Gujrat (III 423) and Badaoni II (323). Vide also under No 74.

211 Khwajagi Muhammad Husayn Mir Barr

He is the younger brother of Qasim Khan (No 59) and had the title of Mir Barr in contradistinction to that of his brother. He came in the 5th year with Mun'im (No 11) from Kabul to India. When dissensions broke out between Chani Khan Mun'im's son and Haydar Muhammad Khan Akhtabegi (No 66) whom Mun'im had left as his na'ib in Kabul Haydar was called to Court and Abu'l Fath's son of Mun'im's brother was sent there to assist Ghani Muhammad Husayn accompanied Abū'l Fath. He remained a long time in Kabul. After his return to India he accompanied the Emperor on his march to Kashmir. His honesty and punctuality made him a favourite with the Emperor and he was appointed Mir Bakawal (master of the Imperial kitchen) and was also made a commander of 1000.

In the 5th year of Jahangir he officiated for Hashim (No 26) as governor of Kashmir. On Hashim's arrival he returned to Court and died in the end of the 7th year (1091 Tuzuk p 114).

He had no children. The Tu'uk says that he was quite bald and had neither moustache nor beard. His voice was shrill like that of a eunuch.

242 'Abu'l Qasim brother of 'Abu'l Qadir Akhund

He is not to be confounded with Nos 199 and 251. Badaoni (II 393) calls him a native of Tabriz and says that his brother was Akbar's teacher (akhund). In 991 Abu'l Qasim was made Dewan of Gujrat.

243 Qamar Khan son of Mir 'Abdul Latif of Qazwin (No 161)

He served under Mun'im (No 11) in Pental and was present in the battle of Takara (p 406). In the 2nd year he served under Shahab

Abu'l Fath who on p 333 has erroneously been called 'Abul Latif was the son of Kay Beg Mun'im's brother. Badaoni II 26 has Fa'iz Beg but the Akbarnama and the Muzaffar have Fa'iz.

in Gujrāt (Akbarn, III, 190) and in the 24th year under Toḍar Mal in Bihār. In the 25th year he took part in the battle near Sultanpur Bilharī¹ (p 400, and Akbarn, III, 305)

His son, Kawkab, fell into disgrace under Jahangir for some fault. He was flogged and imprisoned. Regarding his restoration to favour, vide Tuzuk, p 219

- | | | |
|-----|--------------|----------------------------------|
| 244 | Arjum Singh, | } sons of Raja Mān Singh (No 30) |
| 245 | Sabal Singh, | |
| 246 | Ṣakat Singh, | |

Some MSS have *Durjan*² instead of Arjum. The name of Sakat Singh, moreover, recurs again at No 342. There is little doubt that at the latter place we should read Himmat Singh, though all MSS have Sakat.

Nor is it clear why Abū 'l Fazl has not entered the name of Bhā,0 Singh, who at Akbar's death was a commander of 1 000, and was gradually promoted during Jahāngir's reign to a mansab of 5,000. Like his elder brother Jagat Singh (No 160), he died from excessive drinking (1030). His name often occurs in the Tuzuk.

Arjun Singh, Sabal Singh, and Sakat Singh, served in the 37th year in the conquest of Orisā. Sakat Singh, in the 26th year (989), had served in Kābul. They died before their father.

Himmat Singh distinguished himself under his father in the wars with the Afghāns.

Col J C Brooke in his Political History of the State of Jeypore (Selections from the Records, Government of India, Foreign Department, No LXV, 1868) mentions six sons of Man Singh, Jagat, Arjun, Himmat, Sakat, Bhīm, and Kalyān Singh. The last two are not mentioned by Muhammadan historians, nor are Bha,0 and Sabal mentioned by Brooke. Vide, "A Chapter from Muhammadan History," in the Calcutta Review, April, 1871.

246 Mustāfa Ghulzi

A Sayyid Mustafā is mentioned in the Albarnāma (III, 416). He served in the 28th year in Gujrat, and was present in the battle near Masāna, 18 kos S E of Patan, in which Sher Khan Fuladī was defeated.

247 Nazar Khan, son of Sa'id Khan, the Gakkhar

A brother of his is mentioned below, No 232. Vide Nos 170, 171

[¹ Or Bilahri — B]

² The Lucknow edition of the Albarnāma (III, 642) has also Durjan and (by mistake) Sil for Sabal Singh. The Subhan Singh mentioned in the same passage, would also appear to be a son of Man Singh.

The Tabaqāt calls him Nazar Beg son of Sa'id Khān, and says that in 1001 he was a Hazarī

Mughul historians give the following tree of the Gakkhar chiefs —

Jalal Khān was killed in 1620 (15th year) in Bangash and his son Akbar Quli, who then served at Kangra, was made a commander of 1,000, and sent to Bangash (Tuzuk, pp 307, 308)

Jahāngir, after the suppression of Khushraw's revolt passed on his way to Kabul through the Gakkhar district (Tuzuk, pp 47, 48) He left the Bahat (1st Muharram, 1016) and came to Fort Rohitas, the cost of which he states to have been 161,000 000 dams, "which is equal to 4 025 000 rupees in Hindūstani money, or 120 000 Persian tumans, or 1 rob, 2,175,000 silver Hals of Turani money" After a march of 4½ kos, he came to Tila, tīla in the Gakkhar dialect meaning "a hill" He then came to Dih Bhakrala bhakarā meaning "forest" The way from Tila to Bhakra passes along the bed of the Kahan river, the banks of which are full of *kanir*¹ flowers He then came to Hatya which was built by a Gakkhar of the name of Hathi (mentioned in Mr Delmerick's History of the Gakkhars, Journal Asiatic Society Bengal, 1871) The district from Margala to Hatyā is called Pothwar, and from Rohitās to Hatya dwell the Bhūgyals, a tribe related to the Gakkhars From Hatya, he marched 4½ kos and reached Palka so called because it has a "pucca" sara: Four and a half kos further on, he came to Kurar, which means in the Gakkhar dialect "rugged" He then went to Rawalpindi, which is said to have been built by a Hindū of the name Rāwal, pindī meaning "a village", and gives a few curious particulars regarding the river and the pool of the place From Rāwalpindi he went to Khārbūza, where a dome may be seen which has the shape of a melon (khārbūza) The Gakkhars used formerly to collect tolls there. He then came to the Kalapāni, and to the Margala pass, mar meaning 'killing' and gala "a caravan". Here ends the country of the Gakkhars. They are a brutish race, always at feud with each other. I asked them to live in peace, but they will not."

[¹ Kanir probably kaner is 'a species of oleander'—P]

The Pādīshāhnāma (II, 240 264, 266 722 733 740) mentions several Gakkhar chiefs —

1 Akbar Quli Sultan, a commander of 1,500 horse, died in the 18th year of Shahjahan's reign. His son Murād Quli Sultān was under Shahjahan a commander of 1,500, 1 000 horse (Pādīshāhn, II, 410, 485, 512, 523, 565 595, 655, 730)

2 Jabbar Quli (brother of Jalal Khān)² 1,000, 800 horse

3 Khīzr Sultan (son of Nazar Khān),² 900, 500 horse died in the 12th year Shahj's reign

The Pādīshāhnāma (I, p 432) mentions these Gakkhars' mules as famous

The Ma'āwir i 'Alamgīrī (p 155) also mentions Murad Quli and his son Allah Quli. Allah Quli's daughter was married to Prince Muhammad Akbar, fourth son of Awrangzib, on the 3rd Rajab 1087

248 Rām Chand, son of Madhukar [Bundela]

He is also called Rām Sūh and was mentioned on p 356. He was introduced at court by Sadiq Khān (No 43), when Akbar was in Kashmir (1000). In the first year of Jahangir's reign we find him in rebellion, evidently because his right of succession was rendered doubtful by the predilection of the emperor for Bir Singh Deo, Rām Chand's younger brother. In the end of the first year, he was attacked by 'Abd' Allah Khān, who moved his jāgir from Kalpi to Udcha. On the 27th Zi Qa'ada, 1015, Rām Chand was brought fettered to court, but Jahāngir had his fetters taken off, gave him a dress of honour, and handed him over to Raja Basū of Dhamerī. "He never thought that he would be treated so kindly" (Tv'uk, p 42). But Udcha was handed over to Bir Singh Deo as a reward for the murder of Abū 'l Fazl

¹ For the geographical details of this passage I am indebted to Mr J G Delmerick. The Tv'uk has Pila of Tila, Bhakra for Bhakrāla and the Persian word khāna for khān (خان) the name of the river near Bhakrāla—a most extraordinary mistake, for Kurār or G'ra a village near Manikyāl. Ponkhār for Pothohar. Mr Delmerick also is bel an an

it

In the 4th year of his reign (1018), Jahāngīr married Rām Chand's daughter at the request of her father (vide Tuzuk p 77, and also No 225, note)

He appears to have died in 1021, and was succeeded by his son Bharat Singh Tuzuk, p 112

Muhammādan historians give the following tree of the Ūḍcha Bundelas —

The Mā'āḏ contains biographical notes of nearly all of them Vide also Thornton's Gazetteer, under Oorcha

Benī Das and Bhagwān Das were killed by a Rājput in the 13th year of Shahjahan's reign They held commands of 500, 200 horse, and 1,000, 600 horse, respectively

Chandr Man was in the 20th year of Shāh a commander of 1 500, 800 horse

Vide Pādīshāhnāma, I, 172 (where another Bundela of the name of Subk Dev is mentioned), 205, 241, 368, 372, 425, II, 731, 734

The Mā'āḏ : Ālamgīrī mentions several Bundelas as Satr Sal, Jāswant Singh, Indarman (died 1088) and the rebellious sons of Champat (i.e., pp 161, 163 169, 273, 424) Vide also under No 249

Bir Singh De o, the murderer of Abū 'l Faḏl is often called in bad MSS Nar Singh Deo Thus also in the printed editions of the Tuzuk, the 1st volume of Pādīshāhnāma the Ālamgīrnāma, etc., and in Elphinstone's History The temples which he built in Mathurā at a cost of 33 lacs of rupees, were destroyed by Awrangzīb in 1080 (Mā'āḏ : Ālamgīrī, p 95)¹

¹ The Dutch traveller De Laet has an interesting passage regarding Abū 'l Faḏl's death (De Imperio Mogorū Mogulū Leyden 1631, p. 209) He calls Bir Singh Rodzio Bertrugā Bundela.

219 Raja Mukatman, the Bhadauriya

Bhadawar is the name of a district S E of Āgra, its chief town is Hatkanth (vide p 311, note 4) The inhabitants are called Bhadauryas They were known as daring robbers, and though so near the capital, they managed to maintain their independence till Akbar had their chief trampled to death by an elephant, when they submitted

The next chief, Mukatman, entered the imperial service, and rose to a mansab of 1,000 In 992, he served in Gujrat (Akbarnama, III, 423, 438)

Under Jahāngir, we find a chief of the name of Rāja Bikramājī, who served under 'Abd' 'llāh against the Rāna, and later in the Dakhin He died in the 11th year of Jahāngir and was succeeded by his son Bhoj Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk (p 103) mentions a Bhadaurya chief Mangat, who in the 7th year served in Bangash, but the name is doubtful

Under Shāhjahān, the head of the Bhadauriya clan was Raja Kishn Singh He served in the first year under Mahābat Khān against Jhujhar Singh, and in the 3rd year against Khan Jahan Lodi and the Nizām 'l Mulk, who had afforded Khān Jahān protection In the 6th year, he distinguished himself in the siege of Dawlatabad Three years later, in the 9th year, he served under Khān Zamān against Sahū Bhōnsla He died in the 17th year (1053)

In the Pādīsāhrāma (I, b, 309) he is mentioned as a commander of 1 000, 600 horse

As Kishn Singh had only a son by a concubine, he was succeeded by Badar Singh,¹ grandson of Kishn's uncle He was made a Rāja and a commander of 1,000 In the 21st year, at a darbār a mast elephant ran up to him, took up one of his men with its tusks when Badan Singh stuck his dagger into the animal, which, frightened as it was at the same time by a fire wheel, dropped the unfortunate man Shāhjahān rewarded the bravery of the Raja with a khisat, and remitted 50 000 Rs out of the 2 lacs which was the assessment of the Bhadawar district In the 22nd year he was made a commander of 1 500 In the 25th year he served under Awrangzib, and in the 26th under Dāra Shikoh, before Qandahār, where in the following year he died

His son Maha Singh was then made a Raja and received a mansab of 1,000, 800 horse He served in the 28th year in Kabul After Dāra's defeat he paid his respects to Awrangzib, in whose reign he served against ¹ So Pādīsāhrāma II, 732 The Mas'udī calls him Bad Singh or Bud Singh.

the Bundela rebels In the 10th year he served under Kūmil Khān against the Yūsufzā'is He died in the 26th year

He was succeeded by his son Odat Singh (vide Ma'āwir : 'Ālamgīrī, p 226 and p 228, where the Bibl Ind edition has wrongly Rūḍar Singh for Odat S) He had before served under Jai Singh in the Dakhin, and was in the 24th year made commandant of Chitor (l c, p 196)

250 Raja Ram Chandr, zamindār of Orisā

Regarding him, vide Stirling's report of Orisā, Asiatic Researches, vol xv His name occurs often in the narrative of Mān Singh's conquest of Orisā (37th year of Akbar's reign)

The province of Khurda (South Orisā) was conquered and annexed to the Dihli empire by Mukarram Khān (vide No 260), in the 12th year of Jahāngīr's reign (Tuzuk, p 215)

251 Sayyid Abū 'l Qāsim, son of Sayyid Muhammad Mir 'Adl (No 140)

He served in the 25th year (998) in Bihār, and in the battle of Sulṭān pūr Bilharī, also, in the 33rd year, against the Yūsufzā'is

The Tārīkh Ma'sumī (Dowson, Elliot's Historians, I, p 243) gives earlier but perhaps more correct dates regarding the appointment to Bhakkar and the death of the Mir 'Adl, viz his arrival at Bhakkar, 11th Ramazan 983, and his death there, 8th Sha'bān, 984 (October, 1576) He was succeeded by his son Abū 'l Fazl, who is not mentioned in the Ā'in On the 9th Zī 'l hijjah, 985 (Feb, 1578), I'stimād (No 119) arrived at Bhakkar

252 Dalpat, son of Rāy Ray Singh

He has been mentioned above, p 386

XVIII Commanders of Four Hundred

253 Shaykh Fayzī, son of Shaykh Mubārak of Nāgor

The name of this great poet and friend of Akbar was Abū 'l Fayz Fayzī is his takhallus Towards the end of his life in imitation of the form of the takhallus of his brother 'Allāmī he assumed the name of Fayyā'ī

Fayzī was the eldest son of Shaykh Mubarak of Nāgor Shaykh Mubārak (vide pp 178, 195, 207, 219) traced his origin to an Arabian dervish from Yaman, who in the 9th century of the Hijrah had settled in Siwistān, where he married In the 10th century, Mubārak's father went to Hindūstan and settled at Nāgor Several of his children having died one after the other, he called his next child Mubārak He was born in 911 When a young man, Mubārak went to Gujrāt and studied under

Khatib Abū l Fazl of Kazarūn and Mawlānā ʿImād of Lārīstan In 950, Mubarak settled at Agra It is said that he often changed his religious opinions Under Islam Shah, he was a Mahdawī, and had to suffer persecution in the beginning of Akbar's reign, he then became a Naqshbandī, then a Hamadani, and lastly, when the court was full of Persians he inclined to Shiʿism But whatever his views may have been, the education which he gave his sons Fayzī and Abū 'l Fazl, the greatest writers that India has produced, shows that he was a man of comprehensive genius Shaykh Mubarak wrote a commentary to the Qurʿān, in four volumes, entitled Mambāʿ 'l ʿuyūn,¹ and another work of the title of Jawāmiʿ l kalām Towards the end of his life he suffered from partial blindness, and died at Lāhor, on the 17th 71 Qaʿda, 1001, at the age of 90 years The tārīkh of his death will be found in the words Shaykh l kāmil

Shaykh Fayzī was born at Āgra in 954 His acquirements in Arabic Literature, the art of poetry, and in medicine, were very extensive He used to treat poor people gratis One day he appeared with his father before Shaykh ʿAbdu 'n Nabī, the Sadr (p 282), and applied for a grant of 100 bighas, but he was not only refused, but also turned out of the hall with every contumely on account of his tendencies to Shiʿism But Fayzī's literary fame reached Akbar's ears, and in the 12th year, when Akbar was on the expedition to Chitor, he was called to court Fayzī's bigoted enemies in Āgra interpreted the call as a summons before a judge and warned the governor of the town not to let Fayzī escape He therefore ordered some Mughuls to surround Mubarak's house, but accidentally Fayzī was absent from home Mubarak was ill treated, and when Fayzī at last came, he was carried off by force But Akbar received him most favourably, and Fayzī in a short time became the emperor's constant companion and friend He was instrumental in bringing about the fall of Shaykh Abdu 'n Nabī

In the 30th year he planned a khamsa, or collection of five epics, in imitation of the khamsa of Nizāmī The first, Markiz 'l adwār, was to consist of 3,000 verses, and was to be a jawāb (imitation) of Nizāmī's Maʿkhzan 'l asrār, the Sulaymān o Bilqīs and the Nal Daman were to consist of 4,000 verses each, and were to be jawābs of the Khusrav 'l Shirīn and Layla 'l Majnūn respectively, and the Haft Kishwar and the Akbarnāma, each of 5,000 verses, were to correspond to the Haft Paykar and the Sikandarnāma In the 33rd year he was made Malik 'sh Shuʿarā,

¹ Badāʾiʿ nūʿ (III 74) calls it Mambāʿ nūʿ 'l ʿuyūn

or Poet Laureate (Akbarn, III, 559) Though he had composed portions of the Khamasa, the original plan was not carried out, and in the 39th year Akbar urged him to persevere, and recommended the completion of the Nal Daman Fayzī thereupon finished the poem and presented, in the same year, a copy of it to his imperial master

Fayzī suffered from asthma, and died on the 10th Safar, 1004 (40th year) The tārīkh of his death is Fayyāz : ʿAjam It is said that he composed 101 books The best known, besides his poetical works, are the Sawati ʿ*l Ilhām*, and the Mawārīd ʿ*l Kalām*, regarding which vide below the poetical extracts His fine library, consisting of 4,300 choice MSS, was embodied with the imperial library

Fayzī had been employed as teacher to the princes, sometimes he also acted as ambassador Thus, in 1000, he was in the Dakhin, from where he wrote the letter to the historian Badā,oni, who had been in temporary disgrace at court

Vide also pp 112, 113, 192, 194, 207, 216, 218, and Journal Asiatic Society Bengal for 1869, pp 137, 142

254 Hakīm Mīsrī.

According to Badā,oni (III, 165) Hakīm Mīsrī was a very learned man and a clever doctor He also composed poems A satire of his is mentioned which he wrote against Khwaja Shams ʿ*d Dīn Khawāfi* (No 159) He died in Burhānpūr and was buried there

Mīsrī is mentioned in the Akbarnāma, III, p 629, and p 843 In the latter passage, Abū ʿ*l Fazl* mentions his death (middle of 1009), and states that he saw his friend on the deathbed It is impossible to reconcile Abū ʿ*l Fazl*'s date with Badā,oni's statement, for Badā,oni died in 1004 (Journal Asiatic Society Bengal for 1869, p 143) But both Abū ʿ*l Fazl* and Badā,oni speak of the Hakīm as a man of a most amiable and unselfish character

255 Irij, son of Mirzā Khānkhānān (No 29)

He was mentioned on p 339 During the reign of Jshāngīr he was made Šūbadār of Barār and Ahmadnagar He greatly distinguished himself during several fights with Malik ʿ*Ambar*, especially as Kharkī,¹ master (Akbarnāma, III, 345), in the 30th year (993) he served in Kabul (III, 487, 490) In the 32nd year he distinguished himself under 'Abd^u 'l Matlab (No 83) against the Tārīkis (III, p 541)

In the Lucknow edition of the Akbarnāma he is wrongly called 'Alī Muhammad Alif

259 Mirzā Muhammad

A Mirza Muhammad was mentioned on p 399

260 Shaykh Bayazīd [Mu'azzam Khān], grandson of Shaykh Salim of Fathpūr Sikrī

Bayazīd's mother nursed Prince Salim (Jahangīr) on the day he was born (Tuzuk, p 13) In the 40th year of Akbar's reign B was a commander of 400 and gradually rose to a command of 2,000 After Jahāngīr's accession he received a mansab of 3,000 and the title of Mu'azzam Khān Soon after he was made Sūbahdar of Dihlī (l c, p 37), and in the 3rd year a commander of 4,000, 2,000 horse On his death he was buried at Fathpūr Sikrī (l c, p 262)

His son Mukarram Khān was son in law to Islam Khān Shaykh 'Ala'ud Dīn (another grandson of Shaykh Salim), under whom he served in Bengal¹ He distinguished himself in the expedition to Kūch Hajū, and brought the zamindār Parichhit before the governor² At the death of his father in law, Muhtashim Khan Shaykh Qasim, brother of Islam Khān, was made governor of Bengal, and Mukarram Khan continued for one year in his office as governor of Kūch Hajū, but as he could not agree with Qasim he went to court

Later he was made governor of Orisā, and conquered the province of Khurdah (l c, pp 214, 215) for which he was made a commander of 3,000, 2,000 horse He seems to have remained in Orisā till the 11th year (1629) when Hasan 'Alī Turkman was sent there as governor (Tuzuk, p 308) In the 16th year M Kh came to court and was made Sūbahdar of Dihlī and Fawjdar of Mewat (l c, p 352)

Hosbi

tungu

v. c. c.

In the 21st year he was sent to Bengal as governor vice Khanazad Khan. He travelled by boat. One day he ordered his ship to be moved to the bank, as he wished to say the afternoon prayer, when a sudden gale broke forth, during which he and his companions were drowned.

261 Ghaznū Khan, of Jalor

Ghaznū Khan was in the 40th year of Akbar's reign a commander of 400. He is mentioned in the Padīshahnāma (I 167)¹ as having served during the reign of Jahangir against the Rana.

Bird in his History of Gujrāt (pp 124, 405), calls him Ghaznawī Khan and Ghaznī Khān and says he was the son of Malik Khanji Jalori. Ghaznū Khan seems to have been inclined to join the insurrection of Sultan Muzaffar. The Khankhānan on the 9th Muharram, 998, sent a detachment against Jalor, but perceiving that he was not in a fit condition to offer resistance, Ghaznū went submissively to court. The emperor took compassion on him and confirmed him in his hereditary possessions.

His son Pahar was executed by Jshangir. "When I came to Dil Qazyan, near Ujjain, I summoned Pahar. This wretch had been put by me, after the death of his father, in possession of the Fort and the district of Jalor, his ancestral home. He is a young man and was often checked by his mother for his bad behaviour. Annoyed at this, he entered with some of his companions her apartments, and killed her. I investigated the case, found him guilty, and had him executed" (Šafar, 1026 Tuuk, p 174).

Another son of Ghaznū Khan is Nizam who died in the 6th year of Shahjahan's reign. He was a commander of 900, 550 horse (Padīshāhn, I b 313).

Ghaznū's brother Fīruz was a commander of 600, 400 horse and died in the 4th year (Padīshāhn, I, b 319).

The Padīshahnāma (II, 739) mentions also a Mujahid of Jalor, who in the 20th year of Shahjahan's reign was a commander of 800, 800 horse.

262 Kijak Khwaja son of Khwaja 'Abdu'llah

The first volume of the Albarnāma (p 411) mentions a Kijak Khwaja among the grandees who accompanied Humayun to India. The third ¹ Wrongly called in the Bibl. Indica Edition of the Padīshahnāma (I 167) Ghazālī Khān.

Ghaznū's ḥiṣṣa before Akbar's conquest of Gujrāt as detailed by Bird (p. 124) includes portions of Nāgor and Murthā and fixes the revenue at nearly 10 lacs of rupees with 7 000 horse. This can only have been nominal. Abu'l Fazl in his description of Šubā Jmir IIIrd book mentions 3½ lacs of rupees with 2 000 horse as the jama'at of Jalor and Sānchor (S.W. of Jalor).

volume of the same work (p 470) mentions a Kijak Khwāja, who in 993 served against Qutlū Lohānī in Bengal Vide No 109

263 Sher Khān Mughul

264 Fath^u 'llah, son of Muhammad Wafā

He appears to be the Fath^u 'llah mentioned in the Akbarnāma (III, 625) as the sharbatdār of the emperor Akbar made him an Amīr. For some fault he was sent to the Dakhin, but as he got ill, he was recalled. He recovered and went on sick leave to Māndu where he died (1008)

265 Ray Manohar, son of Raja Lōkaran

Raja Lōkaran belonged to the Shaykhāwat branch of the Kachhwāhas. He served, in the 21st year, under Man Singh, against the Rānā, and went in the same year with Raja Bir Bar to Dongarpūr,¹ the zamīndār of which wished to send his daughter to Akbar's harem. In the 24th year he served under Todar Mal in Bihar, and in the 24th year under the Khān Khanān in Gujrat

Manohar, in the 22nd year, reported to the emperor on his visit to Amber that in the neighbourhood an old town existed the site of which was marked by huge mounds of stone. Akbar encouraged him to rebuild it, and laid the foundation himself. The new settlement was called Mol Manoharnagar.² In the 45th year he was appointed with Ray Durga Lal (No 103) to pursue Muzaffar Husayn Mirzā (p 516), who was caught by Khwaja Wāsi

In the 1st year of Jahāngīr's reign he served under Prince Parwāz against the Rānā, and was made, in the 2nd year, a commander of 1,500, 600 horse (Tuzuk, p 61). He served long in the Dakhin and died in the 11th year.

His son Pr thī Chānd received after the death of his father the title of Ray, and was made a commander of 500, 300 horse (l c, p 160)

Manohar wrote Persian verses, and was called at court Mirzā Manohar, vide my article, "A Chapter from Muhammadan History," Calcutta Review, April, 1871

266 Khwaja 'Abd^u 's Samad, Shīrīn qalam (sweet pen)

He is not to be confounded with No 353

Khwaja 'Abd^u 's Samad was a Shirazī. His father Khwāja Nizām^u

¹ The maps give a Manoharpur north of Amber about Lat 27° 20'

I Mulk was Vazir to Shāh Shujā' of Sēirāz. Before Humāyūn left Irān he went to Tabriz, where 'Abd' s Samād paid his respects. He was even at that time known as a painter and calligraphist. Humāyūn invited him to come to him and though then unable to accompany the emperor, he followed him in 956 to Kabul.

Under Akbar 'A was a commander of 400, but low as his mansab was, he had great influence at court. In the 22nd year he was in charge of the mint at Fathpūr Sīkrī (Akbarnāma, III, 195), and in the 31st year, when the officers were redistributed over the several sūbas, he was appointed Diwan of Multan.

As an instance of his skill it is mentioned that he wrote the Sūrat 'I iklās (Qur'an, Sur CX'i) on a poppy seed (danah y khashkhāsh)
Vide p 114

For his son, vide No 351

267 Sulhadi, son of Raja Bihari Mal (No 23)

268 Ram Chand Kachhwāla

Vide p 422

[Ram Chand Chauhan] The Ma'āsir says that he was the son of Badal Singh, and a commander of 500. In the 17th year he served under M 'Aziz Koka (No 21) in Gujrāt, and in the 26th year under Sultān Murād against M Muhammad Hakim, king of Kabul. In the 28th year he was under M Shāhrukh in the Dakhin. In the fight, in which Rāja 'Alī of Khandesh fell, R Ch received twenty wounds and fell from his horse. Next day he was found still alive. He died a few days later (41st year, 1005).

269 Bahadur Khan Qūrdār

He served in the beginning of the 18th year in Gujrāt (Akbarnāma, III, 25), in the 26th in Kabul (l c, 333) and in the siege of Āsir (1008).

The Padishāhnāma (I, b, pp 311, 315) mentions Ababakr and 'Usman, sons of Bahadur Khan Qūrbegi, who seems to be the same officer. They died in the 8th and 9th years of Shāhjahān.

270 Banka, the Kachhwāla

He served in the 26th year in Kabul (Akbarnāma, III, 333). His son Haridi Ram was under Shāhjahān a commander of 1,500, 1,000 horse and died in the 9th of his reign.

XIX Commanders of Three Hundred and Fifty

271 Mīrzā Abu Sa'īd } sons of Sultān Husayn Mīrzā
272 Mīrza Sanjar }

They were mentioned above on p 326 Mirzā Sanjar is not to be confounded with the Mirzā Sankar mentioned on p 533, note 1.

273 ʿAlī Mardan Bahādūr

The Ṭabaqāt mentions him as having been in 981 (21st year) at court, from where he was sent to Qulij Khān (No 12) at Idar, who was to go to Gujrāt to see the ships off which under Sultān Khwaja (No 108) were on the point of leaving for Makkah. Later he served under the Khān Khānān in Sind,¹ and in the 41st year in the Dakhn. Subsequently, he commanded the Talungana corps. In the 46th year, he marched to Pathri to assist Sher Khwaja (No 176) when he heard that Bahādūr Khān Gilāni whom he had left with a small detachment in Talungana, had been defeated. He returned and attacked the enemies who were much stronger than he, his men fled and he himself was captured. In the same year Abū 'l Fazl made peace, and ʿAlī Mardan was set at liberty. In the 47th year he served with distinction under Mirzā Īrij (No 255) against Mahk ʿAmbar.

In the 7th year of Jahāngir's reign he was attached to the corps commanded by ʿAbd^u 'llāh Khān Fīruz jang, who had been ordered to move with the Gujrāt army over Nasik into the Dakhn, in order to co-operate with the second army corps under Khan Jahan Lodi. ʿAbd^u 'llāh entered the hostile territory without meeting the second army, and returned towards Gujrat, now pursued by the enemies. In one of the fights which ensued, ʿA M was wounded and captured. He was taken before Mahk ʿAmbar and though the doctors did everything to save him he died two days later of his wounds, in 1021 A H (Tuzuk, p 108).

His son Karam^u llāh served under Jahāngir (Tuzuk, p 269) and was under Shahjahan a commander of 1,000, 1 000 horse. He was for some time commandant of Fort Odgur, and died in the 21st year of Shāhj's reign.

274 Raza Quli, son of Khān Ṭuhan (No 24)

Vide above p 351

275 Shaykh Khubū [Qutb^u 'd Dīn Khān i Chishtī] of Fathpur Sikri

His father was a Shaykhzada of Badaon and his mother a daughter of Shaykh Salim Khubū was a foster brother of Jahāngir². When the prince was at Ilahabād in rebellion against Akbar, he conferred upon Khubū the title of Qutb^u 'd Dīn Khān, and made him Subadār of Bihār.

¹ Vide Dowson Elliot & Historians I p 248

² Jahāngir says that Khubū's mother was dearer to him than his own mother.

On his accession he made him Şibadār of Bengal, vice Mān Singh (9th Jumāda I, 1015, Tuzuk, p 37)

At that time, Sher Afkan ʿAlī Qulī Istaḡlū (vide No 394) was tuyūʿdār of Bardwan, and as his wife Mibrʿn Nīsā [Nūr Jahān] was coveted by the emperor, Qutb was ordered to send Sher Afkan to court, who however, refused to go. Qutb, therefore, went to Bardwan, sending Ghīyāsā, son of his sister, before him, to persuade Sher Afkan that no harm would be done to him. When Qutb arrived, Sher Afkan went to meet him, accompanied by two men. On his approach, Q. lifted up his horse whip as a sign for his companions to cut down Sher Afkan. "What is all this?" exclaimed Sher. Qutb waved his hand to call back his men, and advancing towards Sher, upbraided him for his disobedience. His men mistaking Qutb's signal to withdraw, closed round Sher, who rushed with his sword against Qutb and gave him a deep wound in the abdomen. Qutb was a stout man, and seizing the protruding bowels with his hands, called out to his men to cut down the scoundrel. Amba Khān, a Kashmīrī noble of royal blood, thereupon charged Sher Afkan, and gave him a sword cut over the head, but he fell at the same time, pierced through by Sher's sword (p 329, note 1). The men now crowded round him and struck him to the ground. Qutbʿd Dīn was still on horseback, when he heard that Sher Afkan had been killed, and he sent off Ghīyāsā to bring his effects and his family to Bardwan. He then was removed in a pālki. He died whilst being carried away. His corpse was taken to Fathpūr Sikrī and buried.

In 1013 he built the Jāmī mosque of Badāon.

His son, Shaykh Ibrāhīm, was, in 1015, a commander of 1,000, 300 horse, and had the title of Kishwar Khān. He was for some time governor of Rohtās, and served in the beginning of 1021 against ʿUsman.

Ilahdiya, son of Kishwar Khān, is mentioned in the Pūdishāhnāma (I, b, 100, 177, 307, II, 344, 379, 411, 484)

276 Ziyā^{tu} 1 Mulk, of Kashan

The Albarnāma (III, 490, 628) and the Tuzuk (p 11) mention a Ziyā^{tu} ʿd Dīn.

The Hakīm Ziyā^{tu} ʿd Dīn of Kashan, who under Shāhjahān held the title of Rahmat Khān, can scarcely be the same.

277 Hamza Beg Ghatrāghālī

He may be the brother of No 203. The Albarnāma (III, 255) mentions also a Husayn Beg Ghatrāghālī.

278 Mukhtar Beg, son of Āghā Mullā

Mukhtar Beg served under Aʿzam Khān Koka (No 21) in Bihar,

Gadha Rā,ṣiṣa (Akbarn III, 276, 473), and in the 36th year, under Sultān Murād in Mālwa

Nasr^u 'llāh, son of Mukhtār Beg, was under Shāhjahān a commander of 700, 150 horse, and died in the 10th year

Fath^u 'llāh, son of Nasr^u 'llāh, was under Shāhjahān a commander of 500, 50 horse (Pādīshāhn, I, b, 318, II, 752)

Abu 'l Fazl calls Mukhtār Beg the son of Āghā Mulla This would seem to be the Āghā Mulla Dawatdār, mentioned on p 398 If so, Mukhtār Beg would be the brother of Ghīyās^u 'd Din 'Alī (No 126), The Āghā Mulla mentioned below (No 376), to judge from the Turuḥ (p 27), is the brother of Āsaf Khan III (No 98), and had a son of the name of Badī'z Zaman, who under Shahjahān was a commander of 500, 100 horse (Pād, I, b, 327, II, 751) In Muhammadan families the name of the grandfather is often given to the grandchild

279 Haydar 'Alī 'Arab

He served, in the 32nd year in Afghānistān (Akbarn, III, 540, 518)

280 Peshraw Khān [Mihtar Sa'ādat]

Mihtar Sa'ādat had been brought up in Tabriz, and was in the service of Shāh Tahmasp, who gave him as a present to Humāyūn After Humāyūn's death he was promoted and got the title of Peshraw Khān In the 19th year Akbar sent him on a mission to Bihār, where he was caught on the Ganges by Gajpatī, the great zamīndār (p 437, note 2) When Jagdespūr, the stronghold of the Raja, was conquered, Gajpatī ordered several prisoners to be killed, among them Peshraw The executioner, however, did not kill him, and told another man to do so But the latter accidentally could not get his sword out of the scabbard, and the Rāja, who was on the point of flying, having no time to lose, ordered him to take P on his elephant The elephant was wild and restive, and the man who was in charge of P fell from the animal and got kicked, when the brute all at once commenced to roar in such a manner that the other elephants ran away frightened Although P's hands were tied, he managed to get to the kulawa (p 135) of the driver and thus sat firm, but the driver, unable to manage the brute, threw himself to the ground and ran away, leaving P alone on the elephant Next morning it got quiet, and P threw himself down, when he was picked up by a trooper who had been searching for him

In the 21st year he reported at court the defeat of Gajpatī¹ (Akbarn, III, 163) In the 25th year he served in Bengal (l c, p 289) Later he was sent to Nizam^u 'l Mulk of the Dakhn, and afterwards to Bahādur Khān, son of Raja 'Alī Khān of Khandesh His mission to the latter was in vain, and Akbar marched to Āsir P distinguished himself in the siege of Maligādh

¹ Gajpatī's brother Bairī Sāl had been killed (Akbarn, III, 162)

Jahāngir made him a commander of 2,000, and continued him in his office as superintendent of the Farrāsh khāna (Quartermaster)

P died in the 3rd year, on the 1st Rajab, 1017 Jahangir says (Tuzuk, p 71) "He was an excellent servant, and though ninety years old, he was smarter than many a young man He had amassed a fortune of 15 lacs of rupees His son Ryāyat is unfit for anything, but for the sake of his father, I put him in charge of half the Farrāsh Khāna

281 Qazi Hasan Qazwīnī

In the 32nd year (995) he served in Gujrat (Akbarn, III, 537, 554, where the Lucknow edition has Qazi Husayn), and later in the siege of Āsir (lc, III, 825)

282 Mīr Murād i Juwaynī

He is not to be confounded with No 380, but may be the same as mentioned on p 380

Juwaynī is the Arabic form of the Persian Gujan, the name of a small town,¹ in Khurāsān, on the road between Bistam and Nishapur It lies, according to the Ma'āsir in the district of Bayhaq, of which Sabzwār is the capital, and is renowned as the birthplace of many learned men and poets

Mīr Murād belongs to the Sayyids of Juwaynī As he had been long in the Dakhn, he was also called Dakhnī He was an excellent shot, and Akbar appointed him rifle instructor to Prince Khurram He died, in the 46th year, as Bakhshī of Lāhor He had two sons, Qāsum Khān and Hashim Khān

Qasim Khān was an excellent poet, and rose to distinction under Islām Khān, governor of Bengal, who made him treasurer of the sūba Later, he married Manīja Begum, sister of Nūr Jahan, and thus became a friend of Jahāngir An example of a happy repartee is given Once Jahāngir asked for a cup of water The cup was so thin that it could not bear the weight of the water, and when handed to the emperor it broke Looking at Qāsim, J said (metre Ramal) —

کاسه نازک بود آب آرام نتوانست کرد

The cup was lovely, so the water lost its rest—

¹ See Wustenfeld & Yacut II, 164

when Qāsim, completing the verse, replied —

دید حالم را و چشمش صفا اشک حدود نکرد

It saw my love grief and could not suppress its tears

In the end of J's reign, he was Şübadâr of Āgra, and was in charge of the treasures in the fort. When the emperor died, and Shâhjahân left the Dakhîn, Qasim paid his respects in the Bagh ı Dahra (Āgra), which in honour of Jahangir had been called Nūr Manzıl, and was soon after made a commander of 5 000, 500 horse, and appointed governor of Bengal, vide Fida'i Khân

As Shahjahan when prince, during his rebellion, had heard of the wicked practices of the Portuguese in Bengal who converted natives by force to Christianity, he ordered Qasim to destroy their settlement at Hüglı. In the 5th year, in Sha'ban, 1041, or February, A D 1632 (Pādushāhn, I, 435, 437), Q sent a corps under his son ŞIn'iyat^u 'llah and Allah Yar Khân to Hüglı. The Portuguese held out for three months and a half, when the Muhammadans succeeded in laying dry the ditch in front of the Church, dug a mine, and blew up the church. The fort was taken. Ten thousand Portuguese are said to have perished during the siege, and 4,400 were taken prisoners. About 10,000 natives whom they had in their power were liberated. One thousand Musulmāns died as martyrs for their religion¹

Three days after the conquest of Hüglı, Qasim died (loc. cit. p. 444). The Jamı' Masjid in the Atga Bāzar of Āgrah was built by him.

283 Mir Qāsım Badakhshī

He served in the Dakhîn (Albarn, III, 830)

284 Banda ŞAlı Maydanı

Maydanı is the name of an Afghān clan, vide No 317. Banda ŞAlı served in the 9th year with Muhammad Hakım of Kābul, who was attacked by Mirzā Sulaymān of Badakhshan (No 5) and had applied to Akbar for help. In the 30th and 32nd years he served in Kābul (Albarn, II, 299, III, 477, 540)

The Akbarnāma (II, 209) also mentions a Banda ŞAlı Qurbegı

285 Khwājagı Fath^u 'llah, son of Hajı Habıbu 'llah of Kashān

He was mentioned above on pp 386, 516. He served in the 30th year under Mirzā ŞAzız Koka (No 21) Albarn, III, 473

¹ The name of "

- 286 Zāhid
 287 Dost [Muhammad] } sons of Sadiq Khan (No 43)
 288 Yar [Muhammad] }

They have been mentioned above on p 384 Zāhid in the end of 1025, served against Dalpat (No 252)

Regarding Zāhid, vide also a passage from the Tarikh-i Ma'sumā, translated Dowson's edition of Elliot's Historians, I, 246

- 289 'Izzat^u 'llah Ghujduwan
Ghujduwan is a small town in Bukhara

The Akbarnāma (III, 548) mentions a Qāzi 'Izzat^u 'llah, who, in the 32nd year, served in Afghānistan

XX Commanders of Three Hundred

- 290 Altun Qulij

- 291 Jan Qulij

Two MSS have Āltūn Qulij, son of Khan Qulij; which latter name would be an unusual transposition for Qulij Khan. They are not the sons of Qulij Khan (No 42), vide Nos 292 and 293

Āltūn Qulij is mentioned in the Akbarnāma (III, 554) as having served in Baglana with Bharji, the Raja who was hard pressed in Fort Mother by his relations. Bharji died about the same time (beginning of the 33rd year)

- 292 Sayf^u 'llah [Qulij^u 'llah] } sons of Qulij Khan (No 42)
 293 Chin Qulij }

Sayf is Arabic, and means the same as the Turkish gülij, a sword. Sayf^u 'llāh was mentioned under No 203. In the beginning of the 33rd year he served under Sadiq Khan (No 43) in Afghānistan

Regarding Mirzā Chin Qulij, the Ma'ā'sir says that he was an educated liberal man, well versed in government matters. He had learned under Mulla Mustafa of Jaunpūr, and was for a long time Fawjdar of Jaunpūr and Banaras

At the death of his father, his younger brother Mirzā Lahauri, the spoiled pet son of his father, joined Chin Qulij in Jaunpur. He had not been long there when he interfered in government matters and caused disturbances, during which Chin Qulij lost his life. His immense property escheated to the state, it is said that it took the clerks a whole year to make the inventory

In 1022, when Jahāngir was in Ajmīr, he summoned Mulla Mustafa, who had been the Mirza's teacher, with the intention of doing him harm

While at court he got acquainted with Mullā Muhammad of Thathah, a teacher in the employ of Āsafjāh (or Āsaf Khān IV, vide p 398), who had scientific discussions with him, and finding him a learned man, interceded on his behalf. Mustafā was let off, went to Makkah and died.

Mirza Lahaurī was caught and imprisoned. After some time, he was set at liberty, and received a daily allowance (yaumīyya). He had a house in Āgra near the Jamna, at the end of the Darsan, and trained pigeons. He led a miserable life.

The Ma'āzīr mentions a few instances of his wicked behaviour. Once he buried one of his servants alive, as he wished to know something about Munkir and Nakir, the two angels who, according to the belief of the Muhammadans, examine the dead in the grave, beating the corpse with sledge hammers if the dead man is found wanting in belief. When the man was dug out he was found dead. Another time, when with his father, in Lahor, he disturbed a Hindū wedding feast and carried off the bride, and when the people complained to his father, he told them to be glad that they were now related to the Subadar of Lahor.

The other sons of Qulij Khān, as Qulij^u 'Ilah, Chān, Qulij, Baljū Q, Bayrām Q and Jan Q, held mostly respectable mansabs.

The Tuzuk-i Jahāngīrī relates the story differently. Both M Chīn Qulij and M Lahaurī are described as wicked men. Chīn Q, after the death of his father came with his brothers and relations to court (Safar, 1023, Tuzuk, p 197) and received Jaunpūr as jagīr. As the emperor heard of the wicked doings of M Lahaurī, from whom no man was safe he sent so Aladī to Jaunpūr to bring him to court, when Chīn Qulij fled with him to several zamīndars. The men of Janāngīr Qulī Khān, governor of Bilār at last caught him, but before he was taken to the governor, Chīn died. Some say, in consequence of an attack of illness owing to wounds he had inflicted on himself. His corpse was taken to Jahāngīr Qulī Khān who sent it with his family and property to Ilahābād. The greater part of his property had been squandered or given away to zamīndars (1024, Tuzuk p 148).

294 Abū 'l Fattah Atabq

295 Sayyid Bāvarīd of Bārna

He served in the 33rd year (996) in Gujrat (Ābarn, III, 553). In the beginning of the 17th year of Jahāngīr's reign (1031) he received the title of Mustafā Khān (Tuzuk, p 344).

In the 1st year of Shāhjahān's reign he was made a commander of 2,000, 700 horse (Pād, I, 183). His name is not given in the list of grandees of the Jadīsh-Jinārī.

296 Balbhadra, the Rāthor

297 Abu 'l Ma'ali, son of Sayyid Muhammad Mir 'Adl (No 140)

298 Bāqir Ansārī

He was in Bengal at the outbreak of the military revolt In the 37th year he served under Mān Singh in the expedition to Orisā (Albarn, III, 267, 641)

299. Bayazid Beg Turkmān

He was at first in Mun'im's service (Albarn, II, 238, 253) The Pādīshāhnāma (I, b, 328) mentions Mahmūd Beg, son of Bāyazid Beg Vide No 335

300 Shaykh Dawlat Bakhtyār

301 Husayn the Pakhlīwāl

The story of the origin of his family from the Qarluqs under Tīmūr (vide p 504) is given in the Tuzuk (p 290) Jahangir adds, "but they do not know who was then their chief At present they are common Panjabis (Lāhaurī yī mahaz) and speak Panjābī This is also the case with Dhantūr" (vide No 392)

Sultān Husayn, as he called himself, is the son of Sultān Mahmūd His rebellious attitude towards Akbar has been mentioned above on p 504 When Jahāngir in the 14th year (beginning of 1029) paid him a visit, Husayn was about seventy years old, but still active He was then a commander of 400, 300 horse, and Jahāngir promoted him to a mansab of 600, 350 horse

Husayn died in the 18th year (end of 1032, Tuzuk, p 367) His command and the district of Pakhlī were given to his son Shādmān

Shādmān served under Dārā Shikoh in Qandahār (beginning of 1052) and was in the 20th year of Shahjahan's reign a commander of 1,000, 900 horse Pādīshāhnāma II, 293, 733

The Tuzuk (p 290) mentions a few places in the district of Pakhlī, and has a remark on the thick strong beer which the inhabitants made from bread and rice

302 Kesu Dās son of Jat Mal

Vide No 408 One MS has Jat Mal, instead of Jat Mal The Pādīshāhnāma (I, b, 310) mentions a Raja Gardhar, son of Kesū Dās, grandson of Jat Mal of Mirtha The Tuzuk frequently mentions a Kesū Dās Miru (Tuzuk, pp 9, 37, 203)

303 Mirza Khan of Nishāpur One MS has Jān for Khān

304 Muẓaffar, brother of Khān 'Ālam (No 58)

My text edition has wrongly Khān-i 'Āsārī for Khān 'Ālam

305 Tulsī Dās Jadou.

He served in 992 against Sultān Muẓaffar of Gujrat (Albarn, III, 422). The Albarnāma (III, 157, 434, 598) mentions another Jadō Rāja Gopal. He died in the end of the 34th year, and is mentioned in the Tabaqat as a commander of 2 000.

306 Rahmat Khan, son of Masnad 'Āli

Masnad : 'Ālī is an Afghān title, as Majlis 'l Majālis, Majlis : Ikkhtiyār, etc. It was the title of Fattū Khan, or Fath Khān, a courtier of Islam Shāh, who afterwards joined Akbar's service. He served under Husayn Quli Khān Jahān (No 24) in 980 against Nagarkoṭ (Badā'onī, II 161). The Tabaqāt makes him a commander of 2 000. He seems to be the same Fath Khān whom Sulayman Kararānī had put in charge of Rohtās in Bihar (Bad, II, 77).

He died in the 34th year in Audh (Albarn, III, 599).

A Rahmat Khān served in the 45th year in the Dakhīn. Rahmat Khan's brother, Shah Muhammad, is mentioned below, No 395.

307 Ahmad Qasim Koka

He served in 993 against the Yūsufzā'is, and in 996 under Šādiq Khān, against the Tārikis (Albarn, III, 490, 552).

The Tuzuk (p 159) mentions a Yar Beg, son of A Q's brother.

308 Bahādur Gohlot309 Dawlat Khan Lodi

He was a Lodi Afghān of the Shāhū khayl clan, and was at first in the service of 'Azīz Koka (No 21). When 'Abd' r Rahīm (No 29) married the daughter of 'Azīz, Dawlat Khan was transferred to 'Abd' r Rahīm's service, and 'Azīz, in sending him to his son in law, said, "Take care of this man, and you may yet get the title of your father (Khan Khanān)." Dawlat distinguished himself in the wars in Gujrat (p 355, l 24, where for Dost Khan, as given in the Ma'āsir, we have to read Dawlat Khar), in Thatha and the Dakhīn. His courage was proverbial. In his master's contingent he held a command of 1,000. Sultān Danyāl won him over, and made him a commander of 2,000.

He died in the end of the 45th year (Sha'ġbān, 1009) at Ahmadnagar (Albarn, III, 846). It is said that Akbar stood in awe of him, and when he heard of his death, he is reported to have said, "To day Sher Khān Sūr died."

Dawlat Khān's eldest son whom the Ma'āsir calls Mahmūd, was half mad. In the 46th year, on a hunting tour, he left his companions, got into a quarrel with some Kolis near Pāl, and perished.

Dawlat's second son is the renowned Pīr Khān, or Pīrū, better known in history under his title Khān Jahān Lodī. If Akbar's presentiments were deceived in the father, they were fulfilled in the son.

Pīr Khān, when young, fell out with his father, and fled with his elder brother, whom the Ma'āsīr here calls Muhammad Khān, to Bengal, where they were assisted by Mān Singh. Muhammad Khān died when young.

Like his father, P Kh was in the service of Sultan Danyāl, who treated him like a friend, and called him 'son'. On the death of the Prince, Pīr, then twenty years old, joined Jahangīr's service, was made in the second year a commander of 3000, and received the title of Ṣalābat Khān (Tuzuk, p. 42). He gradually rose to a mansab of 5,000 and received the title of Khān Jahān which was looked upon as second in dignity to that of Khān Khānān. Although Jahangīr treated him like an intimate friend rather than a subject, Khān Jahān never got his position and formed no ambitious plans.

When Prince Parwīz, Raja Mān Singh and Sharīf Khān (No. 351) were sent to the Dakhīn to reinforce the Khān Khānān and matters took an unfavourable turn, Khān Jahān, in 1018, was sent with 12,000 troopers to their assistance. At the review, Jahangīr came down from the state window, put his turban on Kh J's head, seized his hand, and helped him in mounting. Without delaying in Burhānpūr, Kh J moved to Balaghāt, where the imperial army was. At Mulkāpūr, a great fight took place with Malīk ṢAmbar, and the imperialists unaccustomed to the warfare of the Dakhīnīs, lost heavily. The Khān Khānān met him with every respect, and took him to Balaghāt. According to the original plan Kh J was to lead the Dakhīn corps, and ṢAbdū 'llah Khān the Gujrāt army, upon Daulatabād (under No. 273). Malīk ṢAmbar, afraid of being attacked from two sides, succeeded in gaining over the Khān Khānān, who managed to detain Kh J in Zafarnagar, and ṢAbdū 'llah, when marching forward, found no support, and had to retreat with heavy losses. Kh J got short of provisions, his horses died off, and the splendid army with which he had set out, returned in a most disorderly state to Burhānpūr.

Kh J accused the Khān Khānān of treason, and offered to conquer Bijāpūr in two years, if the emperor would give him 30,000 men and absolute power. This Jahangīr agreed to, and the Khān ṢAzam (No. 21) and Khān ṢĀlam (No. 328) were sent to his assistance. But though the Khān Khānān had been removed the duplicity of the Amīrs remained what it had been before, and matters did not improve. The command was therefore given to the Khān Ṣāzām and Kh J received Thalner as jāgīr, and was ordered to remain at Ilīchpūr. After a year, he returned to court, but was treated by the emperor in as friendly a manner as before.

In the 15th year, when the Persians threatened Qandahār, Kh J was made governor of Multān. Two years later, in the 17th year, Shāh Ṣabbās took Qandahār after a siege of forty days. Kh J was called to court for advice, having been forbidden to attack Shah Ṣabbās, because kings should be opposed by kings. When he came to court, Prince Khurram was appointed to reconquer Qandahār, and Kh J was ordered back to Multān to make preparations for the expedition. It is said that the Afghān tribes from near Qandahār came to him in Multān, and declared themselves willing to be the vanguard of the army, if he would only promise every horseman five tankas, and each foot soldier two tankas per diem to keep them from starving, they were willing to go with him to Isfahan, and promised to be responsible for the supplies. But Kh J refused the proffered assistance, remarking that Jahangīr would kill him if he heard of the attachment of the Afghāns to him.

In the meantime matters changed. Shahjahān rebelled, and the expedition to Qandahār was not undertaken. The emperor several times ordered Kh J to return, and wrote at last himself, adding the curious remark that even Sher Khān Sūr, in spite of his enmity, would after so many requests have obeyed. The delay, it is said, was caused by severe illness. On his arrival at court, Kh J was made commandant of Fort Āgra, and was put in charge of the treasures.

In the 19th year, on the death of the Khān Ṣāzām, he was made governor of Gujrāt, and when Mahabat Khan was sent to Bengal he was appointed atāliq to Prince Parwīz, whom he joined at Burhānpūr.

In 1035 the 21st year, Parwīz died, and the Dakhīn was placed under Kh J. He moved against Fath Khān son of Malīk Ṣambar to Balaghat. His conduct was now more than suspicious. He accepted proposals made by Hamīd Khān Hāshī the minister of the Nūrīm Shāh to cede the conquered districts for an annual payment of three lacs of hunns though the revenue was 55 krons of dāms (Padishāhīn, I 271), and ordered the imperial Fawāidars and Thanahdars to give up their places to the agents of the Nūrīm Shāh and repair to Burhānpūr. Only Sīpahdar Khān who stood in Ahmadnagar refused to do so without express orders from the emperor.

Soon after, Mahabat Khan joined Shāhjahān at Junūr, and was honoured with the title of Sīpahsālār. On the death of Jahangīr, which took place immediately afterwards, Shāhjahān sent Jān Nisār Khān to Kh J, to find out what he intended to do, and confirm him at the same time in his office as Sūbadar of the Dakhīn, but as he in the meantime had formed other plans, he sent back Jan Nisār without answer. He intended to rebel. It is said that he was misled by Daryā Khān Rohila and Fāzil Khān, the Dīwān of the Dakhīn, Dawar Bakhs̄h, they insinuated, had been made emperor by the army, Shahryar had proclaimed himself in Lābor, whilst Shahj had offended him by conferring the title of Sīpahsalar on Mahabat Khān who only lately had joined him, he, too, should aim at the crown, as he was a man of great power, and would find numerous adherents.

Shāhj sent Mahābat to Māndu, where Kh J's family was. Kh J renewed friendly relations with the Nizām Shah, and leaving Sikandar Dutānī in Burhanpur, he moved with several Amīrs to Mandu, and deposed the governor Muzaffar Khān Ma'smūrī. But he soon saw how mistaken he was. The Amīrs who had come with him, left him and paid their respects to Shahj, the proclamation of Dawar Bakhs̄h proved to be a scheme made by Āsaf Khān in favour of Shahj, and Kh J sent a vaka to court and presented, after Shahj's accession, a most valuable present. The emperor was willing to overlook past faults and left him in possession of the government of Maiwah.

In the second year, after punishing Jhujhar Singh, Kh J came to court and was treated by the emperor with cold politeness. Their mutual distrust soon showed itself. Shahj remarked on the strong contingent which he had brought to Āgra and several parganas of his jāgīrs were transferred to others. One evening, at a darbar Muzā Lashkarī, son of Mukhs̄h Khān, foolishly said to the sons of Kh J, "He will some of these days imprison your father." Kh J, on hearing this, shut himself up at home, and when the emperor sent Islam Kān to his house to inquire, he begged the messenger to obtain for him an amān nāma, or letter of safety, as he was hourly expecting the displeasure of his master. Shahj was generous enough to send him the guarantee but though even Āsaf Khān tried to console him, the old suspicions were never forgotten. In fact it would seem that he only feared the more for his safety, and on the night from the 26th to the 27th Safar, 1039, after a stay at court of eight months, he fled from Āgra. When passing the Hatyapul¹ Darwāza, he humbly threw the reins of his horse over his neck, bent his head forward on the saddle, and exclaimed, "O God, thou knowest that I fly for the preservation of my honour; to rebel is not my intention" On the morning before his flight, Āsaf had been informed of his plan, and reported the rumour to the emperor. But Shahj said that he could take no steps to prevent Kh J from rebelling, he had given him the guarantee, and could use no force before the crime had actually been committed

¹ The two large stone elephants which stood upon the gate were taken down by Aurangzib in Rajab 1079 because the Muhammadan law forbids sculpture. Ma'āshir Alamgiri p 77

An outline of Kh J's rebellion may be found in Elphinstone's history, where the main facts are given

When he could no longer hold himself in the Dakhin, he resolved to cut his way to the Panjāb He entered Malwah, pursued by 'Abd^u llāh Khan and Muza'ffar Khān Barha After capturing at Sironj fifty imperial elephants, he entered the territory of the Bundela Rājah But Jagrāj Bikramajit, son of Jhujbar Singh, fell upon his rear (17th Jumāda, II, 1040), defeated it, and killed Daryā Khan (a commander of 4,000) and his son Kh J's best officers (Padishāhn, I, 339, I, b, 296) On arriving in Bhānder,¹ Kh J met Sayyid Muza'ffar, and sending off his baggage engaged him with 1,000 men During the fight Mahmūd Khān, one of Kh J's sons was killed On approaching Kālnjar, he was opposed by Sayyid Ahmad, the commandant of the Fort, and in a fight another of his sons, Hasan Khan was captured Marching farther, he arrived at the tank of Sehōda, where he resolved to die He allowed his men to go away as his cause was hopeless On the 1st Rajab, 1040, he was again attacked by 'Abd^u llāh Khān and S Muza'ffar, and was mortally wounded by Madhu Singh with a spear Before Muza'ffar could come up, the soldiers had cut him and his son 'Aziz to pieces (Padishāhn, J, 351) Their heads were sent to Shāhjahān at Burhānpūr, fixed for some time to the walls of the city, and then buried in the vault of Dawlat Khān, Kh J's father

Kh J had been a commander of 7,000 (Padishāhn, I, b, 293)

Several of Kh J's sons, as Husayn 'Azmat, Mahmud, and Hāsan, had perished during the rebellion of their father Another, Aḡalāt Khan, a commander of 3,000, died during the rebellion at Dawlatābād, and Muza'ffar had left his father and gone to court Farīd and Jān Jabān were captured, ṢĀlam and Ahmad had fled, and went after some time to court. "But none of his sons ever prospered"

The historical work entitled Makhzan-i Afghānī, or some editions of it contain a chapter in praise of Khān Jahān, after whom the book is sometimes called Tārīkh-i Khān Jahān Lodī

310 Shah Muhammad, son of Quraysh Sultān (No 178)

311. Hasan Khan Miyāna

He was at first a servant of Ṣadiq Khān (No 43), but later he received a mansab He died in the Dakhin wars

Of his eight sons, the eldest died young (Tuzuk, p 200) The second is Buhlūl Khān He rose to a mansab of 1,500 under Jāhangīr (l c, pp 184, 200), and received the title of Sarbuland Khān He was remarkable for his courage and his external appearance He served in Gondwāna

At the accession of Shahjahan, B was made a commander of 4,000, 3,000 horse, and jāgirdār of Bālapūr He joined Khān Jahān Lodī on his march from Gondwāna to Bālāghāt When he saw that Khān Jahān did not succeed, he left him, and entered the service of the Nizām Shah

A grandson of Buhlūl, Abū 'l Muhammad, came in the 12th year of Awrangzib's reign to court, was made a commander of 5,000, 4,000, and got the title of Ikhlas Khān (Ma'ās ṢĀlamgīrī, p 81)

For other Miyāna Afghāns, vide Pād.shāhn, I, 241, Ma'ās ṢĀlamgīrī, p 225

312 Tahir Beg, son of the Khan i Kalan (No 16)

313 Kishn Das Tunwar

He was under Akbar and Jahāngīr accountant (mushrif) of the elephant and horse stables In the 7th year of J, he was made a commander of 1,000 A short time before he had received the title of Rājā (Tuzuk, p 110)

314 Man Singh Kachhwaha

The Albarnāma (III, 333, 335) mentions a Man Singh Darl...ī

315 Mīr Gada'ī, son of Mīr Abū Turāb

Abū Turāb belonged to the Salāmi Sayyids of Shīrāz His grandfather, Mīr Ghīyas'ud Dīn, had come to Gujrat during the reign of Qutb'ud Dīn, grandson of Sultān Ahmad (the founder of Ahmadabād), but he soon after returned to Persia The disturbances however, during the reign of Shāh Ismā'īl Ṣafawī obliged him to take again refuge in Gujrat, where he arrived during the reign of Sultān Mahmūd

Bigara¹ He settled with his son Kamāl^u 'd Dīn (Abū Turāb's father) in Champānir Mahmūdābād, and set up as a teacher and writer of school books (darsiya kutāb) Kamāl^u 'd Dīn also was a man renowned for his learning

The family has for a long time been attached to the Silsila-yi Magh-rībyā, or Maghribī (Western) Sect, the "lamp" of which was the saintly Shaykh² Ahmad i Khaṭṭū The name "Salāmi Sayyids" is explained as follows One of the ancestors of the family had visited the tomb of the Prophet. When coming to the sacred spot, he said the customary salām, when a heavenly voice returned his greeting

Abū Turāb was a highly respected man He was the first that paid his respects to Akbar on his march to Gujrat, and distinguished himself by his faithfulness to his new master Thus he was instrumental in preventing Iṣṭimād Khan (No 67) from joining, after Akbar's departure for Kambhāyat, the rebel Ikhṭiyār^u 'l Mulk Later, Akbār sent him to Makkah as Mīr Hajj, in which quality he commanded a large party of courtiers and begams On his return he brought a large stone from Makkah, which bore the footprint of the prophet (qadam i sharīf, or qadam-i mubarak), vide p 207 The "tarīkh" of his return is khayr³ 'l aqdām (A H 987), or "the best of footprints" The stone was said to be the same which Sayyid Jalāl i Bukhārī at the time of Sultān Fīrūz had brought to Dīblī Akbar looked upon the whole as a pious farce, and though the stone was received with great éclat, Abū Turāb was graciously allowed to keep it in his house

When Iṣṭimād was made governor of Gujrāt, Abu Turāb followed him as Amin of the Sūba, accompanied by his sons Mīr Muhibb^u Ush and Mīr Sharīf^u 'd Dīn

Abū Turāb died in 1005 and was buried at Ahmadābād

His third son Mīr Gada², though he held a mansab adopted the saintly

1
 2
 3

Champānir according to B rd is also called Mahmūdābād The Muṣṭafā Las Chsm rsnir Muhammadi bad

² Born A H 738 died at the age of 111 (lunsar) years on the 10th Shawwal 850

Abū Turāb's adoptive father Shaykh Isḥāq i Maghribī (died A H 776) lies east of Nagor mode of life which his ancestors had followed In the 46th year he served in the Dakhn

316 Gasim Khwaja, son of Khwaja 'Abd' 'l Bari Vide No 320

317 Nādi 'Alī Maydām

In MSS he is often wrongly called Yād 'Alī

The word nād' is an Arabic Imperative, meaning "call" It occurs in the following formula used all over the East for amulets

Nād' 'Alīyān mazharā 'l 'Alīyā'ib,

Tajid nū 'arwān fī kull' 'l-masā'ib

Kull' hamm'ā wa ghamm'ā za yanjalī

Bi-mubuwat: k'ā yā Muhammad, bi wilāyat: k'ā yā 'Alī

Yā 'Alī, yā 'Alī yā 'Alī

Call upon 'Alī in whom all mysteries reveal themselves,

Thou wilt find it a help in all afflictions

Every care and every sorrow will surely vanish

Through thy prophetship, O Muhammad, through thy saintliness,

O 'Alī

O 'Alī, O 'Alī, O 'Alī!

The beginning of the amulet suggested the name

In the 26th year Nād' 'Alī served against M Muhammad Hakīm, in 993 (the 30th year) in Kabul, and two years later under Zayn Koka (No 34) against the Tarikis

In the 6th year of Jahangir's reign, he was made a commander of 1,500, chiefly for his services against the Kabul rebel Ahdad In the 10th year he served in Bangash, when he was a commander of 1,500, 1,000 horse He died in the following year (1026), vide Turuk p 172 His sons were provided with mansabs

His son Bizan (or Bizhan) distinguished himself, in the 15th year, in Bangash and was made a commander of 1,000, 500 horse (lc pp 307, 309)

The Padīshahnama (I, b, 322) mentions a Mulammad Zamān, son of Nād' 'Alī Arlāt, who in the 10th year of Shāhjahān was a commander of 500, 350 horse

Nād' 'Alī is not to be confounded with the Hafiz Nād' 'Alī, who served under Jahāngir as Court Hafiz (Turuk, p 155, and its Dīk̄h̄ja, p 19), nor with the Nād' 'Alī who served under Shāhjahān (Padīshāhnā, II 719) as a commander of 500, 200 horse

318 Nūl Kan̄th, Zaminda- of Orīsa

319 Ghīyas Beg of Tīhran [Īstamad' 'd Dawlā]

His real name is Mirza Ghīyas^u 'd Dīn Muhammad. In old European histories his name is often spelled Ayas a corruption of Ghīyās, not of Ayāz (ایاز)

Ghīyās Beg's father was Khwāja Muhammad Sharif, who as poet wrote under the assumed name of Hijrī. He was Vazir to Tātār Sultān, son of Muhammad Khān Sharaf^u 'd Dīn Ughlu Taklū who held the office of Beglar Beg. of Khurasan. After Tatar Sultan's death, the Khwāja was continued in office by his son Qazāq Khān, and on Qazāq's death, he was made by Shāh Tahmāsp Vazir of Yazd¹ Khwāja Muhammad Sharif is said to have died in A H 984. He had two brothers Khwāja Mirza Ahmad, and Khwājagī Khwāja. The son of Kh Mirza Ahmad was the well known Khwāja Amin Razi (ری), i e., of the town of Ray of which he was kalantar, or magistrate) who travelled a good deal and composed the excellent work entitled Haft Iqlīm, A H 1002. Khwājagī Khwāja had a son of the name of Khwāja Shāpūr, who was likewise a literary man.

Ghīyas Beg was married to the daughter of Mirza 'Alā^u 'd Dawlah, son of² Āgha Mulla. After the death of his father in consequence of adverse circumstances, Gh B fled with his two sons and one daughter from Persia. He was plundered on the way, and had only two mules left, upon which the members of the family alternately rode. On his arrival at Qandahar, his wife gave birth to another daughter, who received the name of Mih^u 'n Nīsa ('the Sun of Women') a name which her future title of Nur Jahan has almost brought into oblivion³. In their misfortune, they found a patron in Malik Mas^uud, leader of the caravan, who is said to have been known to Akbar. We are left to infer that it was he who directed Ghīyas Beg to India. After his introduction at Court in Fathpur Sikri⁴ Gh rose, up to the 10th year to a command of 300. In the same year he was made Diwan of Kabul and was in course of time promoted to a mansab of 1000 and appointed Diwān & Buyutāt

Regarding Mihr^u 'n-Nisā's marriage with 'Alī Qulī, vide No 394

In the beginning of Jahāngīr's reign, Ghīyās Beg received the title of Iṣṭimād^u 'd Dawla In the second year, his eldest son, Muḥammad Sharīf,¹ joined a conspiracy to set Khusraw at liberty and murder the emperor, but the plot being discovered, Sharīf was executed, and Iṣṭimād himself was imprisoned After some time he was let off on payment of a fine of two lacs of rupees At the death of Sher Afkan (under 275), Mihr^u 'n Nisā was sent to court as a prisoner "for the murder of Quth^u 'd Dīn", and was handed over to Ruqayya Sultan Begum,² with whom she lived "unnoticed (ba-nākāmī) and rejected" In the 6th year (1020) she no longer slighted the emperor's proposals, and the marriage was celebrated with great pomp She received the title of Nūr Mahall, and a short time afterwards that of *Nūr Jahān*³

Ghīyās, in consequence of the marriage, was made Vakīl-i kul, or prime minister, and a commander of 6,000, 3,000 horse He also received a flag and a drum, and was in the 10th year allowed to beat his drum at court, which was a rare privilege In the 16th year, when J was on his way to Kashmir, Ghīyās fell ill The imperial couple were recalled from a visit to Kāngra Fort, and arrived in time to find him dying Pointing to the emperor, Nūr Jahān asked her father whether he recognized him He quoted as answer a verse from Anwarī -

آنکه نامی مادراد اگر حاضر بود در حسن عالم آرایس ده بسد مهتری

"If one who is blind from birth stood here, he would recognize his majesty by his august forehead"

He died after a few hours The Tuzuk (p 339) mentions the 17th Bahman, 1031 (Rabi^u I, 1031) as the day of his death, and says that he died broken hearted three months and twenty days after his wife, who had died on the 29th Mihr, 1030, 10, 13th Zi Qa^uda, 1030).

Ghīyās Beg was a poet He imitated the old classics, which ruling passion, as we saw, showed itself a few hours before he died He was a clever correspondent, and is said to have written a beautiful Shikasta hand Jahāngīr praises him for his social qualities, and confessed that his society was better than a thousand mufarrīh i *yāquts*⁴ He was generally liked, had no enemies, and was never seen angry "Chains,

¹ Who according to custom had the same name as his grandfather, vide p 497 No 278

² The Tuzuk and the Iqbalnāma have Ruqayya Sultān Begum (p 309) The Ma^udar has Salima Sultan Begum (p 309) The Iqbalnāma (p 56) has wrongly ربه for ربه

³ In accordance with the name of her husband Nūr 'd Dīn Jahāngīr

⁴ As the diamond when reduced to powder was looked upon in the East as a deadly poison so was the cornelian (yāqut) [garnet ?-P] supposed to possess exhilarating properties Mufarrīh means an exhilarative

the whip, and abuse, were not found in his house" He protected the wretched, especially such as had been sentenced to death He never was idle, but wrote a great deal, his official accounts were always in the greatest order But he liked bribes, and showed much boldness in demanding them¹

His mausoleum near Āgra has often been described.

Nūr Jahān's power over Jahāngīr is sufficiently known from the histories The emperor said, "Before I married her, I never knew what marriage really meant," and, "I have conferred the duties of government on her, I shall be satisfied if I have a ser of wine and half a ser of meat per diem" With the exception of the khuyba (prayer for the reigning monarch), she possessed all privileges of royalty Thus her name was invariably mentioned on farmāns, and even on coins The jāgīrs which she held would have conferred on her the title of a commander of 30,000 A great portion of her zamindārīs lay near Rāmśūr, S E of Ajmir (Tuzuk, p 169) She provided for all her relations, even her nurse, Dā,ī Dilārām, enjoyed much influence, and held the post of "Şadr of the Women" (sadr-i anās), and when she conferred lands as suyūrghōls, the grants were confirmed and sealed by the Şadr of the empire Nūr Jahān is said to have particularly taken care of orphan girls, and the number whom she betrothed or gave outfits to is estimated at five hundred She gave the tone to fashion, and is said to have invented the Satr-i jahāngīrī (a peculiar kind of rosewater) She possessed much taste in adorning apartments and arranging feasts For many gold ornaments she laid down new patterns and elegant designs, and her dudāmī for peshuāz (gowns), her pāchtoliya for orhnīs (veils), her lādla (brocade), kinārī (lace), and farsh-i chandanī,² are often mentioned

Her influence ceased with Jahāngīr's death and the capture of Shahryār, fifth son of the emperor, to whom she had given her daughter (by Sher Afkan) Lādli Begum, in marriage She had no children by Jahāngīr Shāhjahān allowed her a pension of two lacs per annum³

She died at Lālor at the age of 72, on the 29th Shawwā! 1055, and lies buried near her husband in a tomb which she herself had built (Pādīshāhn, II, 475)⁴ She composed occasionally Persian poems, and

¹ So the Tuzuk and the Iqbalnāma

² Dudāmī: weighing two dauns, pāchtoliya: weighing five tolas The latter was ood colour highest allowance of Begums
 Vide Padishahn I 96
 Mahall

like Salima Sultān Begum and Zeb^u 'n Nisā Begum wrote under the assumed name of Makhfi

Ghyyās Beg's sons The fate of his eldest son Muhammad Sharif has been alluded to His second son, Mirzā Abū 'l Hasan Āsaf Khān (IV), also called Āsaf-jāh or Āsaf-jāhī, is the father of Muntāz Mahall (Taj Bibi), the favourite wife of Shāhjahān whom European historians occasionally call Nūr Jahān II He received from Shāhjahān the title of Yamīn^u 'd Dayla and Khān Khānān Sipahsālār, and was a commander of 9,000 He died on the 17th Sha'bān, 1051, and was buried at Lāhor, north of Jahāngīr's tomb As commander of 9,000 du aspa and sī-aspa troopers, his salary was 16 krors, 20 lacs of dāms, or 4,050,000 rupees, and besides, he had jagirs yielding a revenue of five millions of rupees His property at his death, which is said to have been more than double that of his father, was valued at 25 millions of rupees, and consisted of 30 lacs of jewels, 42 lacs of rupees in gold muhurs, 25 lacs of rupees in silver, 30 lacs of plate, etc., and 23 lacs of other property His palace in Lāhor which he had built at a cost of 20 lacs, was given to Prince Dāra Shukoh, and 20 lacs of rupees, in cash and valuables, were distributed among his three sons and five daughters The rest escheated to the State

Āsaf Khān was married to a daughter of Mirzā Ghyyās^u 'd Dīn 'Alī Āsaf Khān II (p 398)

His eldest son is the renowned Mirzā Abū Talib Shā'ista Khān, who, as governor of Bengal, is often mentioned in the early history of the E I Company Shā'ista was married to a daughter of Irāj Shāhnavāz Khān (No 255), son of 'Abd^u 'r Rahīm Khān Khānān, by whom he had, however, no children He died at Āgra in 1105, the 38th year of Awrangzīb's reign His eldest son, Abū Talib,¹ had died before him His second son was Abū 'l Fath Khān One of his daughters was married to Rūh^u 'llah (I), and another to Zū 'l Faqār Khān Nusrat jang

Āsaf Khān's second son, Bahmanyar, was in the 20th year of Shāh j a commander of 2,000, 200 horse (Pādīshāh, II, 728)

Ghyyās Beg's third son is Ibrāhīm Khān Fath jang, who was the governor of Bihār (vide note to Kokra under No 328) and Bengal He was killed near his son's tomb during Shāhjahān's rebellion His son had died young and was buried near Rājmahall, on the banks of the Ganges (Turuk, p 383) Ibrāhīm Khān was married to Hājī Hūr Parwar Khānum, Nūr Jahān's maternal aunt (khāla) She lived up to the middle of Awrangzīb's reign, and held Kol Jalālī as ālamghā

¹ Also called Muhammad Talīb Vide Pādīshāh, II, 248

An Ahmad Beg Khān is mentioned in the histories as the son of Nūr Jahān's brother¹. He was with Ibrāhīm Fath jang in Bengal, and retreated after his death to Dhakā, where he handed over to Shāhjahān 500 elephants, and 45 lacs of rupees (Tuzul, p 384). On Shāh j's accession he received a high mansab, was made governor of Thathah and Siwistān, and later of Multan. He then returned to court and received as jāgīr the Parganas of Jais and Amethi, where he died. In the 20th year of Shah j he was a commander of 2,000, 1,500 horse (Pādīshāh, II, 727).

A sister of Nūr Jahān Manija Begum was mentioned under No 282. A fourth sister, Khadija Begum, was married to Hakim Beg, a noble man of Jahangir's court.

The following tree will be found serviceable —

XXI Commanders of Two Hundred and Fifty

323 Abū 'l Fath, son of Muzaffar, the Mughul

324 Beg Muhammad Toqbā'i

He served in the end of the 28th year in Gujrāt and was present in the fight near Maisana, S.E. of Patan, in which Sher Khān Fūlādī was defeated, and also against Muzaffar of Gujrāt (Akbarn, III 423)

¹ It seems therefore that he was the son of Muhammad Sharif

Regarding Toqbāʿī, vide No 129

325 Imam Quli Shighālī

The Akbarnāma (III, 628) mentions an Imam Quli, who, in the 37th year served under Sultan Murād in Malwa

The meaning of Shighālī is unclear to me. A Muhammad Quli Shighālī played a part in Badakhshan history (Akbarn, III, 132, 249)

326 Safdar Beg, son of Haydar Muhammad Kan Akhta Begi (No 66)

A Safdar Khan served, in the 21st year, against Dauda of Bundī (vide under No 96)

327 Khwaja Sulayman of Shīraz

He has been mentioned on p 383 and under No 172

328 Barkhurdar [Mirzā Khan Ālam] son of ʿAbdū ʿr Rahman Dulday (No 186)

Mirza Barkhurdar was in the 40th year of Akbar's reign a commander of 250. His father (No 186) had been killed in a fight with the rebel Dalpat¹. This Bihar Zamindar was afterwards caught and kept in prison till the 44th year, when, on the payment of a heavy peshkash, he was allowed to return to his home. But B wished to avenge the death of his father, and lay in ambush for Dalpat, who, however, managed to escape. Akbar was so annoyed at this breach of peace that he gave orders to hand over B to Dalpat, but at the intercession of several countries B was imprisoned.

As Jahangir was fond of him, he released him after his accession,² and made him Qūshbegī, or superintendent of the aviary.³ In the fourth

¹ Dalpat is called in the Akbarnāma احمد Ujainiya for which the MSS have various readings as احمد احمد etc. Under Shāhjahān Dalpat's successor was Rāja

p 123
² If we can trust the Lucknow edition of the Akbarnāma B could not have been imprisoned for a long time for in the end of the 44th year of Akbar's reign he served again at court (Akbarn III 823)

³ Grand Falconer or superintendent of the qush khāna or mews — P]

of the entrance to Salim : Chishtī's shrine at Fatihpur Sikri, last words of which are — "Said and written by Muhammad 'sūm poetically styled Nāmī, son of Sayyid Safā'ī of Tirmīz, b. at Bhakkar, descended from Sayyid Sher Qalandar, son of Bābā Hasan Abdāl, who was born at Sabzwār and settled at Qandahār" Dowson, in his edition of Elliot's Historians, mentions Kirmān as the residence of Sayyid Šafā'ī, and gives (I, 239) a few particulars from the Tārīkh i Sindh, regarding the saint Baba Hasan Abdal, who lived under Mīrzā Shāhrukh, son of Tīmūr The town of Hasan Abdāl in the Panjab, east of Aṭak, is called after him

M M built also several public edifices especially in Sakhar opposite to Bhakkar and in the midst of the branch of the Indus which flows round Bhakkar he built a dome, to which he gave the name of Satyasur (ستاسر) "It is one of the wonders of the world, and its Tārīkh is contained in the words گسد دریائی," water dome, which gives A H 1007

He was a pious man and exceedingly liberal, he often sent presents to all the people of Bhakkar, great and small But when he retired, he discontinued his presents, and the people even felt for some cause oppressed (mutaazzī) It is especially mentioned of him that on his jagir lands he laid out forests for hunting

His eldest son, for whose instruction he wrote the Tārīkh i Sindh, was Mir Buzurg He was captured in full armour on the day Prince Khusrav's rebellion was suppressed, but he denied having had a share in it Jahangir asked him why he had his armour on "My father," replied he "advised me to dress in full armour when on guard," and as the Chaukīnawīs, or guard writer, proved that he had been on guard that day, he was let off

On the death of his father, Jahangir is said to have left Mir Buzurg in possession of his father's property He was for a long time Bakhshī of Qandahār, but he was haughty and could never agree with the Šubahdārs He spent the 30 or 40 lacs of rupees which he had inherited from his father His contingent was numerous and well mounted He subsequently served in the Dakhīn, but as his jagir did not cover his expenses, he resigned and retired to Bhakkar, contenting himself with the landed property which he had inherited He died in 1044 Some of his children settled in Multan

330 Khwaja Malik 'Alī, Mir Shab

His title of Mir Shab implies that he was in charge of the illuminations and the games and animal fights held at night (p 232)

331 Rāy Ram Dās Diwan Vide No 238

332 Shāh Muḥammad, son of Saʿid Khān, the Gakkhar

For his relations, vide under No 247

333 Rahīm Qulī, son of Khān Jahān (No 24)

334 Sher Beg, Yasāwulbāshī

Karam Beg, son of Sher Beg, is mentioned in the Akbarnāma (III, 623)

XXII Commanders of Two Hundred

335 Iftikhar Beg, son of Bāyazīd Beg (No 299)

He was alive in the end of A H 1007 (Akbarn, III, 804)

336 Pratab Singh, son of Rājā Bhagwan Dās (No 27)

He was mentioned under No 160

337 Husayn Khan Qazwīnī. Vide No 281

338 Yadgar Husayn, son of Qabūl Khān (No 137)

He was mentioned under No 137 In the 31st year he served under Qasim Khān in Kashmīr The Yadgar Husayn mentioned in the Tuzuk (p 146) may be the same He was promoted, in the 10th year of Jahāngīr's reign, to a command of 700, 500 horse for his services in the Dakhn Vide also Padīshahnāma, I, b, p 323, l 2 from below

He is not to be confounded with Khwaja Yadgār, a brother of ʿAbdū ʿlāh Khān Fīruz jang

339 Kamran Beg of Gilan

He served in the 33rd year (996) in Gujrat and Kachh against Fath Khān, the younger son of Amin Khān Ghori and Muzaffar, and in the 36th year against Muzaffar and the Jam Akbarn, III, 553, 621

340 Muhammad Khān Turkman

341 Nizam ʿd Dīn Ahmad, son of Shah Muhammad Khān (No 95)

He is not to be confounded with the author of the Tabaqāt

342 Sakat Singh, son of Rājā Man Singh (No 30)

Vide No 256

343 ʿImad ʿl Mulk.

The Akbarnāma mentions a Qāzī ʿImad ʿl Mulk, who in the end of 984 (21st year) accompanied a party of courtiers to Makkah

344 Sharīf i Sarmadī.

He was a poet Vide below, among the poets of Akbar's reign

345 Qara Bahr, son of Qarataq

Qarataq, whose name in the Akbarnāma is spelled Qarātāq, was killed by Gajpatī in the same fight in which Farhang Khān, son of Farhat Khān (No 145), was slain (No 145)

346 Tatar Beg, son of 'Alī Muḥammad Asp. (No. 258).

347 Khwāja Muhibb 'Alī of Khawāf.

Vide No 159, note.

348 Hakīm [Jalālū 'd-Dīn] Muḥaffar of Ardistān

Ardistān is a Persian town which lies between Kāshān and Iṣfahān. He was at first a doctor at the court of Shāh Ṭahmāsp, and emigrated when young to India, where he was looked upon as a very experienced doctor, though his theoretical reading is said to have been limited. Badā'onī (III, 169) and the Tuzak (p 59) praise the purity of his character and walk of life

He served in 988 (25th year) in Bengal, returned in the end of the 28th year with Mirzā 'Aziz (No 21) to court, and served subsequently under him in Gujrat and Kachh. Akbarn, III, 283, 418 620. Under Jahāngīr he was made a commander of 3,000 1,000 horse (Tuzak, p 37). The emperor was fond of him, as he had been with him in Ilāhābād, when as prince he had rebelled against Akbar. The news of 'the Hakīm's death reached J on the 22nd Jumāda I, 1016. For about twenty years before his death, he had suffered from qarḥa' yī shush, or disease of the lungs, but his uniform mode of living (yaktawarī) prolonged his life. His cheeks and eyes often got quite red and when he got older, his complexion turned bluish. He was accidentally poisoned by his compounder.

349 'Abd' 's Subhan, son of 'Abd' r Rahmān, Dulday (No 186)

He was mentioned under No 328

350 Qāsim Beg of Tabriz

He served in the 36th year under Sultān Murad in Malwa, and died on the 23rd Ābān (end of) 1007, vide Akbarn, III, 628, 803. Vide below under the learned men of Akbar's reign

351 Sharif (Amīr' 'l Umarā), son of Khwāja 'Abd' 's Ṣamad (No 266)

Muhammad Sharif was the school companion of Prince Salīm, who was much attached to him. When the prince had occupied Ilāhābād in rebellion against Akbar, Sharif was sent to him to advise him, but he only widened the breach between the prince and his father, and gained such an ascendancy over Salīm, that he made the rash promise to give him half the kingdom should he obtain the throne. When a reconciliation had been effected between Salīm and Akbar, Sh had to fly for his life, and concealed himself in the hills and jungles. He was reduced to starvation, when he heard of Akbar's death. He went at once to court, and Jahāngir, true to his promise, made him Amīr^u 'l-Umarā, Vakīl, entrusted him with the great seal (ū-ul) and allowed him to select his jāgīr lands. The emperor says in his Memoirs, " He is at once my brother, my friend, my son, my companion. When he came back, I felt as if I had received new life. I am now emperor, but consider no title sufficiently high to reward him for his excellent qualities, though I can do no more than make him Amīr^u 'l-Umarā and a commander of 5,000. My father never did more."

Sharif seems to have advised the emperor to drive all Afghans from India, but the Khān Ḍ Azam (No 21) warned Jahangir against so unwise a step. Though Sh's position at court was higher than that of Mirza Ḍ Aziz, the latter treated him contemptuously as a mean upstart, and Sh recommended the emperor to kill Ḍ Aziz for the part he had played in Khusrāw's rebellion. But Ḍ Aziz was pardoned and advised to make it up with Sharif, and invite him to his house. The Khān Ḍ Azam did so, and invited him and the other Amīrs. At the feast however, he said to him, in the blindest way, " I say, Nawab, you do not seem to be my friend. Now your father Abd^u Ḍ Ḍamad, the Mullā was much attached to me. He was the man that painted the very walls of the room we sit in." Khān Jahān (vide under 309) and Mahabat Khān could not stand this insolent remark, and left the hall, and when Jahangir heard of it he said to Sh, " The Khān cannot bridle his tongue, but don't fall out with him."

In the second year, Sh accompanied the emperor on his tour to Kābul, but fell so ill that he had to be left in Lahor. Āsaf Khān (No 98) being appointed to officiate for him. On his recovery, he was sent to the Dakhīn, but was soon afterwards called to court, as he could not agree with the Khān Khānān (No 29). It is said that illness deprived him of the faculty of memory, and Jahangir was on the point of making him retire, when Khān Jahān interceded on his behalf. He was again sent to the Dakhīn, and died there a natural death.

Like his father, Sh was a good painter. He also made himself known as a poet, and composed a Diwan. His talīq is Fārisī (BadāḌonī, III, 310).

Sh's eldest son, Shāhibzād Khān, died when young. A SaraḌī near Lakhnau, about a kos from the town, bears his name.

His two younger sons, Mirza Gul and Mirza Jar^u 'llāh used to play with Jahāngir at chess and nard, but this ceased at the death of their father. Mirza Jar^u 'llāh was married to Mirza Begam, a daughter of Āsaf Khān (No 98), but from a certain version, the marriage was never consummated. At Āsaf's death, Jahāngir made him divorce his wife, and married her to Mirzā Lashkarī (No 375), son of Mirzā Yūsuf Khān (under No 35)

Both brothers followed Mahābat Khān to Kābul, where they died
352 Taqiyā of Shustar

Taqiyā is the Irānī from for Taqī The Ṭabaqat calls him Taqī Muhammad Badāʿonī (III, 206) has Taqiyā 'd-Dīn and says that he was a good poet and a well educated man At Akbar's order he undertook a prose version of the Shāhnāma He is represented as a "murīd" or disciple of Akbar's Divine Faith

He was still alive in the 3rd year of Jahāngīr's reign (1017) when he received for his attainments the title of Muʿarrīkh Khān (Tuzuk, p 69, where in Sayyid Ahmad's edition we have to read Shushtarī for the meaningless Shamsherī)

Taqiya is not to be confounded with the more illustrious Taqiyā of Balbān (a village near Isfahan), who according to the Mirʿāt 'l ʿAlam, came in the beginning of Jahāngīr's reign to India He is the author of the rare Tarkīra, or Lives of Poets, entitled ʿArafāt o ʿArasāt, and of the Dictionary entitled Surma y: Sulaymānī, which the lexicographer Muhammad Husayn used for his Burhān-i Qātī

353 Khwaja ʿAbd^u 's Samad of Kashān

354 Hakīm Lut^u 'ullāh, son of Mulla ʿAbd^u 'r Razzāq of Gilān

He is the brother of Nos 112 and 205, and arrived in India after his brothers Badāʿonī (III, 169) calls him a very learned doctor

355 Sher Afkan

356 Aman^u 'llah } sons of Sayf Khān Koka (No 38)

Aman^u 'llah died in the 45th year of Akbar's reign at Burhānpūr "He was an excellent young man, but fell a victim to the vice of the age, and died from excessive wine drinking" Akbarnāma, III, 835

357 Salīm Qulī

358 Khahl Qulī } sons of Ismāʿīl Qulī Khān (No 46)

359 Walī Beg, son of Payanda Khān (No 68)

He served under Qasīm Khān (No 59) in the conquest of Kashmir

360 Beg Muhammad Uighur

361 Mīr Khan Yasawul

When Akbar during the first Gujrātī war (p 480, note 2) had left Patan for Chotana (Rajab 980) it was reported that Muzaffar of Gujrat had fled from Eher Khān Fuladī and was concealed in the neighbourhood; vide under No 67 Akbar therefore sent Mīr Khān the Yasawul and Farīd the Qarawul, and afterwards Abū 'l Qasīm Namakīn (No 199) and Karam ʿAlī, in search of him Mīr Khān had not gone far when he found the chatr and sāyabān (p 52) which Muẓaffar had dropped, and soon after captured Muẓaffar himself in a field. Mīr Khān took him to Akbar.

362 Sarmast Khān, son of Dastam Khān (No 79)

363 Sayyid Abū 'l-Hasan, son of Sayyid Muhammad Mīr 'Adl (No 140)

364 Sayyid 'Abd' l-Wāhid, son of the Mīr 'Adl's brother

365 Khwāja Beg Mīrzā, son of Ma'sūm Beg

366 Sakrā, brother of Rānā Pratāb

Sakrā is the son of Rānā Uday Singh, son of Rānā Sānkā (died A H 934)

When his brother Pratāb, also called Rānā Kilā, was attacked by Akbar, he paid his respects at court, and was made a commander of 200

In the 1st year of Jahāngir's reign he got a present of 12,000 rupees, and joined the expedition led by Prince Parwīz against Rānā Amrā, Pratāb's successor. In the end of the same year he served against Dalpat (vide under No 44), and was in the 2nd year made a commander of 2,500, 1,000 horse. He received, in the 11th year, a mansab of 3,000, 2,000 horse.

The Akbarnāma mentions another son of Uday Singh, of the name of Sakat Singh, who in the 12th year of Akbar's reign was at court. The emperor had just returned from the last war with Khān Zamān when he heard that Uday Singh had assisted the rebellious Mīrzas. He therefore resolved to punish the Rānā, and on a hunting tour in Pargana Bārī told Sakat Singh of his intentions, and expressed a hope that he would accompany him. Sakat, however, fled to his father, and told him of Akbar's intentions. This determined the emperor to carry out his plan without delay. Udaypur was invaded, and Chītor surrendered.

367 Shādī Be Uzbek } sons of Nazar Be (No 169)

368 Baqī Be Uzbek }

They have been mentioned above. From the Akbarnāma (III, 628) we see that Nazar Be received a jāgīr in Handia, where he rebelled and perished (36th year).

369 Yunan Beg, brother of Murād Khān (No 54)

Some MSS have Mīrzā Khān for Murād Khān

370 Shaykh Kabīr 'r Chishtī [Shujā'at Khān, Rustam i Zaman] *

The Ma'āzīr calls him "an inhabitant of Mau" He was a relation of Islām Khān 1 Chishtī, and received the title of Shujā'at Khān from Prince Salm who on his accession made him a commander of 1,000 (Tuzuk, p 12) He served under Khan Jahān (vide under No 309) in the Dakhin as harāwal, an office which the Sayyids of Bārḥā claimed as hereditary in their clan Afterwards he went to Bengal and commanded the imperialists in the last war with 'Usmān During the fight he wounded 'U's elephant, when the Afghān chief received a bullet, of which he died the night after the battle The day being lost, Wali Khān, 'Usmān's brother, and Mamrez Khān 'Usmān's son, retreated to a fort with the dead body of their relation, and being hotly pursued by Shaykh Kabir, they submitted with their families and received his promise of protection The 49 elephants which they surrendered were taken by Sh K to Islām Khān in Jahnāgarangar (Dhaka), 6th Safar, 1021 (Tuzuk, p 104)

Jahangir gave him for his bravery the title of Rustam 1 Zamān The Ma'āzīr says that Islām Khān did not approve of the promise of protection which Sh K had given the Afghāns, and sent them prisoners to court On the road they were executed by 'Abd' 'Ilāh Khān at the emperor's orders Sh K annoyed at this breach of faith, left Bengal While on the way he received an appointment as governor of Bihār At his entry in Patna he sat upon a female elephant when another elephant suddenly came up against his Sh K jumped down and broke his neck

The Tuzuk tells the story differently, and says that Islām Khān appointed Sh K to Orisa and that on his way to that province the accident took place Nothing is said about 'Usmān's relations

Note on the death of 'Usmān Lohānī

There are few events in Indian history so confused as the details attending the death of 'Usman Khawaja 'Usman, according to the Makhzan-i Afghānī was the second son of Miyān 'Isa Khān Lohānī, who after the death of Qutlū Khān was the leader of the Afghāns in Orisa and Southern Bengal Qutlu left three sons—Nasib Shah, Lodi Khān Jamal Khān 'Isa Khān left five sons, Khawaja, Sulaymān, 'Usmān, Wali, Ibrahim Stewart makes 'Usman a son of Qutlū (History of Bengal, p 133) Sulaymān "reigned" for a short time He killed in a fight with the imperialists Hummat Singh, son of Rāja Man Singh (vide No 244) held lands near the Brahmaputra, and subjected the Rajas of the adjacent countries 'Usman succeeded him, and received from Man Singh lands in Orisa and Satgāw, and later in Eastern Bengal, with a revenue of 5 to 6 lacs per annum. His residence is described to have been the Kohistān : Dhākā, or "hills of Dhākā" (Tīparah ?), the vilāyat : Dhākā, or District of Dhākā, and Dhākā itself. The fight with ṢUsmān took place on Sunday, 9th Muharram, 1021, or 2nd March, 1612,¹ at a distance of 100 kos from Dhākā. My MS of the Makhzan calls the place of the battle *Nek Ujyāl*². Stewart (p 134) places the battle "on the banks of the Subarnrikha river" in Orisa, which is impossible, as Shujāṣat Khān arrived again in Dhākā on the 6th Safar, or 26 days after the battle. According to the Tuzuk, Islam Khān was in Dhaka when the fight took place, and Wali Khān submitted to Shujāṣat, who had been strengthened by a corps under ṢAbd^u 'e-Salam son of Muṣazzam Khān (No 260), but the Makhzan says that Islam besieged Wali in the Mahalls where ṢUsmān used to live, between the battlefield and Dhākā, and afterwards in the Fort of Dhākā itself. Wali, on his submission, was sent to court with 7 lacs of rupees and 300 elephants taken from ṢUsmān, received a title of jagīr, and was made a commander of 1,000 after which he lived comfortably. According to the Mā'aṣṣir, as said above he was murdered before he came to court. The Tuzuk says nothing about him.

Stewart says (p 136) that he was taken to court by Hoshang Islām Khān's son, but the Tuzuk, p 115, though it has a long passage on the Mugs which he brought with him, does not mention the Afghan prisoners.

The Makhzan also says that ṢUsmān, after receiving his wound at the time when the battle was nearly decided in his favour, was carried off by Wali in a litter and buried on the road. When Shujāṣat came up to the place where he had been buried, he had ṢUsmān's corpse taken out, cut off the head, and sent it to court.

ṢUsmān is said to have been so stout that he was obliged to travel on an elephant. At his death he was forty two years of age.

The Dutch traveller De Laet (p 488, note) has the following interesting passage: Rex (Jahangir) eodem tempore misit Tseriad ghanum Chiech zaden (Shujāṣat Khān Shaykhzada) ad Tzalanghanum (Islam Khān) qui Bengalae praeerat, ut illum in praefecturam Odiae (Orisa) mitteret. Sed Osmanchanus Patanensis, qui jam aliquot annis regionem quae Odiam et Daeck (between Orisa and Dhākā, i.e., the Sunderban) interjacet, tenuerat et limites regni incursaverat, cum potentissimo exercitu advenit, Daeck oppugnaturus. Tzalanchanus autem praemisit adversus ipsum

¹ According to Prinsep's Useful Tables the 9th Muharram was a Monday not a Sunday Tuzuk p 102.

² There are several Ujyāls mentioned below among the Parganas of Sarkār Mahrūdahād (Boanah) and Sarkār Bazūha (Mynensing Bogra).

(Usman) Tzesiad chanum, una cum Mirza Ifftager et Ethaman chano (Iftikhār Khān and Ihtamam Khān¹) et aliis multis Omeraurvis, cum reliquis copis X aut XV cosarum intervallo subsequens, ut suis laborantibus subsideo esset Orto dein certamine inter utrumque exercitum, Efftager et Mierick Zalner (Mirak Jalair—not in the Tuzuk) tam acrem impressionem decerunt ut hostes loco moverent, sed Osman inter haec ferocissimum elephantum in illos emisit, ita ut regni vicissim cedere cogerentur, et Efftager caederetur, Tzesiad gaunus autem et ipse elephantio insidens, ut impetum ferocientis belluae, declinaret, se e suo deiecit, et crus prefregit, ita ut aegre a suis e certamine subduceretur, et regni passim fugam capescerent actumque fuisset de regnis, nisi inopinatus casus proelium restituisset miles quidem saucius humi jacens, casu Osmano qui elephantio vehebatur, oculum globo trajecit, e quo vulnere paulo post exspiravit, cujus morte milites illius ita fuerunt consternati ut statim de fuga cogitarent Regni vero ordinibus sensim restitutis, eventum proeli Tzalanchano perscripsere qui biduo post ad locum venit ubi pugnatum fuerat, et Tzediatgano e vulnere defuncto, magnis itineribus fratrem (Wali Khān) et biduam atque liberos Osmanis assecutus, vivos cepit, eosque cum elephantis et omnibus thesauris defuncti, postquam Daeck Bengalae metropolim est reversus, misit ad regem Anno (the year is left out)

De Laet says that Shuja^c at Khān died from a fall from his elephant during the battle, but the accident took place some time later. The Ma^aāgir says that he was on horseback when Usmān's elephant, whom the Tuzuk calls Gajpatī, and Stewart Bukhta (?), knocked him over, but Sh quickly disentangled himself and stuck his dagger into the animal's trunk.

The Makhzan says that the plunder amounted to 7 lacs of rupees and 300 elephants

371 Mirza Khwaja, son of Mirza Asad^u 'llah Vide No 116

372 Mirza Sharif, son of Mirza 'Ala^u d Dīn

373 Shukr^u llah [Zafar Khan] son of Zayn Khan Koka (No 34)

He was mentioned above on p 369. On the death of his father, he was made a commander of 700, and appears to have received at the end of Akbar's reign, the title of Zafar Khān

¹ The Tuzuk (p 102) mentions Kishwar Khān (p 497) Iftikhār Khān Sayyid Ādam Bīrhā Shaykh Achhe brother a son of Muqarrab Khān Muṣṭamid Khān and Ihtimām Khān, as under Shujā'at's command. Sayyid Ādam (the Tuzuk p 132 l 4 from below has wrongly Sayyid Aḥzam) Iftikhār and Shaykh Achhe were killed. Later 'Abd^u s Salām son of Muqarrab Khān (No 260) joined and pursued Usmān

As his sister was married to Jahāngir (vide under No 37, and note 2, to No 225) Z Kh was rapidly promoted. When the emperor, in the second year of his reign, left Lāhor for Kābul, he halted at Mawza^c Ahro^s I,¹ near Fort Atak, the inhabitants of which complained of the insecurity of the district arising from the predatory habits of the Khatar (p 506, note 2) and Dilahzak (note to No 247). Zafar was appointed to Atak, vice Ahmad Beg Khān (No 191), and was ordered to remove the tribes to Lāhor, keep their chiefs imprisoned, and restore all plunder to the rightful owners. On Jahāngir's return from Kābul, he joined the emperor, and was in the following year promoted to a mansab of 2,000, 1,000 horse. In the 7th year he was made a commander of 3,000, 2,000 horse, and governor of Bihār. In the 10th year he was removed, went back to court, where he received an increase of 500 horse, and then served in Bangash. "Nothing else is known of him." Ma^aāsir

From the Tuzuk (p 343) we see that Zafar Khān died in the beginning of 1031, when Jahāngir made his son Sa^cādat a commander of 800, 400 horse.

Sa^cādat Fhān, his son. He served in Kābul, and was at the end of Jahāngir's reign a commander of 1,500, 700 horse. In the 5th year after Shāhjahān's accession, he was made a commander of 1,500, 1,000 horse, and was promoted up to the 25th year to a full command of 3,000 horse. He again served in Kābul, and under Murād Bak^hsh in Bal^{kh} and Badak^h-shān, was made commandant of Tirmiz and distinguished himself in repelling a formidable night attack made by Subhān Qulī Khān, ruler of Bukhārā (19th year). Later he served in the Qandahār wars, was in the 29th year Fawjdar of Upper and Lower Bangash, and two years later commandant of Fort Kābul.

In 1069, the second year of Awrangzib's reign, he was killed by his son Sherullah Mahābat Khān, Sūbahdār of Kābul, imprisoned the murderer.

374 Mīr ^cAbd^r 'I Mumin, son of Mīr Samarqandī

Mīr Samarqandī was a learned man who came during Bayrām's regency of Āgra. Badā^sonī, III, 149

375 Lashkarī, son of Mīrza Yūsuf Khān (No 35)

Vide above, p 405, and for his wife under No 351.

376 Agha Mulla Qazwīnī. Vide No 278

377 Muhammad ^cAlī of Jam

¹ The Ma^aāsir has اهرولی, the Tuzuk p 48 اهرولی. I cannot find it on the maps. It is described as a green flat spot. The Khatars and Dilahzaks are estimated in the Tuzuk at 7 to 8 000 families.

‘Ali Quli accompanied the prince on his expedition against the Rānā, and received from him the title of Sher Afkar Khān. On his accession, he received Bardwan as tuyūl. His hostile encounter with Shaykh Khūbū (No 275) was related on p 551. The Ma‘āsir says that when he went to meet the Şūbābdar, his mother put a helmet (dubalqha) on his head, and said, “My son make his mother cry, before he makes your mother weep,” then kissed him, and let him go.

‘Ali Q’s daughter, who, like her mother, had the name of Mihr^u’n Nisā, was later married to Prince Shahryar, Jahangir’s fifth son.

Jahangir, in the Tuzuk, expresses his joy at ‘A Q’s death, and hopes that “the blackfaced wretch will for ever remain in hell.” Khafi Khān (I, p 267) mentions an extraordinary circumstance, said to have been related by Nūr Jahān’s mother. According to her, Sher Afkan was not killed by Qutb^u’d Dīn’s men, but, wounded as he was, managed to get to the door of his house, with the intention of killing his wife, whom he did not wish to fall into the emperor’s hands. But her mother would not let him enter, and told him to mind his wounds, especially as Mihr^u’n Nisā had committed suicide by throwing herself into a well. “Having heard the sad news, Sher Afkan went to the heavenly mansions.”

His body was buried in the shrine of the poet Bahram Saqqā (vide below among the poets), the place is pointed out to this day at Bardwan.

A verse is often mentioned by Muhammadans in allusion to four tigers which Nūr Jahān killed with a musket. The tigers had been caught (Tuzuk, p 186) and Nur Jahān requested Jahangir to let her shoot them. She killed two with one ball each, and the other two with two bullets, without missing for which the emperor gave her a present of one thousand Ashrafis. One of the courtiers said on the spur of the moment —

سورجهاں گرچہ صورت رں اشت در صف مرداں رں شرافکں است

“Though Nūr Jahān is a woman she is in the array of men a zan : sher afkan,” i e., either the wife of Sher Afkan, or a woman who throws down (afkan) tigers (sher)

395 Shah Muhammad, son of Masnad : ‘Ali

Vide Nos 306 and 385

396 Sanwaldar Jadon

He accompanied Akbar on his forced march to Patan and Ahmadābād (p 458, note) and served in 989 under Prince Murād in Kābul. In 992 he was assaulted and dangerously wounded by some Bhāṭī. Akbar visited him, as he was given up by the doctors, but he recovered after an illness of three years.

He was the son of Raja Gopal Jadon's brother (vide No 305) and Abū 'l Fazl calls him a personal attendant of the emperor Akbarn, III, 24, 333, 435

397 Khawaja Zahir^a 'd Dīn, son of Shaykh Khālī^u 'llah

He served in the 31st year under Qasim Khan (No 59) in the conquest of Kashmir, and in the 46th year in the Dakhn

His father is also called Shāh Khālī^u 'llah He served in the 10th year against Khān Zaman, and under Mun'im Khan in Bengal and Orisa, and died in 983 at Gaur of fever (p 407)

Father and son are not to be confounded with the more illustrious Mir Khālī^u 'llah of Yazd and his son Mir Zahir^u 'd Dīn, who in the 2nd year of Jahāngīr came as fugitives from Persia to Lahor The history of this noble family is given in the Ma'asir

398 Mir Abu 'l Qasim of Nishapur

399 Haji Muhammad Ardistanī

400 Muhammad Khan, son of Tarson Khan's sister (No 32)

401 Khawaja Muqim, son of Khawaja Miraki

He served under 'Azīz Koka in Bengal and returned with him to court in the 29th year In 993 he served again in Bengal, and was besieged, together with Tabir Sayf^u 'l Muluk (No 201) in Fort Ghoraghat by several Bengal rebels In the end of the 35th year (beginning of 999), he was made Bakhshī Akbarn, III, 418, 470, 610

Vide Dowson's edition of Elliot's Historians, I, pp 248, 251

402 Qadir Quli, foster brother of Mirzā Shahrukh (No 7)

He served in the 36th year in Gujrāt Akbarn, III, 621

403 Firuza, a slave of the emperor Humāyūn

Bada'onī (III, 297) says that he was captured, when a child, by a soldier in one of the wars with India, and was taken to Humāyūn, who brought him up with Mirzā Muhammad Hakim, Akbar's brother He played several musical instruments and composed poems He came to India with Ghāzī Khān : Badakhshī (No 144)

Bada'onī also says that he was a Langā

404 Tāj Khān Khatriya. Vide No 172

405 Zayn^a 'd Dīn 'Alī

He served in the 25th year (end of 988) under Mān Singh against M Muhammad Hakim

406 Mir Sharif of Kolāb

407 Pahār Khān, the Balūch

He served in the 21st year against Daudā, son of Surjan Hāda (No 96), and afterwards in Bengal In 989, the 26th year, he was tuyūldār of Ghazipūr, and hunted down Maʿsūm Khan Farankhūdi, after the latter had plundered Muhammadābād (vide under No 175) In the 28th year he served in Gujrāt, and commanded the centre in the fight at Maisānā, S E of Patan, in which Sher Khān Fulādi was defeated Akbarn, III, 160, 355, 416

Dr Wilton Oldham, C S, states in his "Memoir of the Ghazepoor District" (p 80) that Fawjdār Pahār Khān is still remembered in Ghazipūr, and that his tank and tomb are still objects of local interest

408 Keshu Das, the Rāthor

In the beginning of 993 (end of the 29th year) he served in Gujrat A daughter of his was married to Prince Salim (vide under No 4) From the Akbarnama, III, 623, it appears that he is the son of Ray Ray Singh's brother (No 44) and perished in the 36th year, in a private quarrel

409 Sayyid Laḍ Barha

In 993, Sayyid Laḍ served with the preceding in Gujrāt, and in the 46th year, in the Dakhṇ

410 Nasir Maʿin

Maʿin (مؤنس) or Munj, is the name of a subdivision of Ranghar Rajpūts, chiefly inhabiting Sarhind and the Bahat Duḡab "The only famous man which this tribe has produced is ʿIsa Khan Maʿin He served under Bahadur Shāh and Jahandar Shāh Maʿāʿir

411 Sanga, the Puwar

412 Qabil, son of ʿAtīq

413 Adwand }
414 Sundar } Zamāndars of Orisā

415 Nuram, foster brother of Mirzā Ibrahim

He served in the 31st year against the Afghans on Mount Terah, and in 1000, under Man Singh in the expedition to Orisā Akbarn, III, 532, 642

Mirza Ibrahim was Akbar's youngest brother, who died as an infant

The above list of grantees includes the names of such Mansabdars above the rank of commanders of Five Hundred as were alive and dead in the 40th year of his Majesty's reign, in which this book was completed, but the list of the commanders from Five hundred to Two hundred, only contains such as were alive in that year Of those who hold a lower rank and are now alive, I shall merely give the number There are at present —

of Commanders of 150		53
Do	120	1
Do	100 or Yu.bashis	250
Do	80	91
Do	60	204
Do	50	16
Do	40	260
Do	30 or Tarkashbands	39
Do	20	250
Do	10	224

[Total 1388 Mansabdars below the rank of a Commander of 200]

Scarcely a day passes away on which qualified and zealous men are not appointed to mansabs or promoted to higher dignities. Many Arabians and Persians also come from distant countries and are honoured with commissions in the army whereby they obtain the object of their desires. A large number again both of old and young servants receive their discharge and are rewarded by his Majesty with daily allowances or grants of land that render them independent.

As I have mentioned the Grandees of the state both such as are still alive and such as have gone to their rest I shall also give the names of those who have been employed in the administration of the government and thus confer upon them everlasting renown.

The following have been Vakils or prime ministers¹ —

Bayram Khan (No 10) Mun⁵im Khan (No 11) Atga Khan (No 15) Bahadur Khan (No 22) Khwaja Jahan (No 110) Khan Khanan Mirza Khan (No 29) Khan i A⁵zam Mirza ⁵Koka (No 21)

The following have been Va vrs or ministers of finances —

Mir ⁵Aziz^u Ilah Turbatı Khwaja Jalal^u d Din Mahmud² of Khurasan (No 65) Khwaja Mu⁵in^u d Din Farankhudi (No 128) Khvaja ⁵Abd^u l Majid Asaf Khan (No 49) Vazir Khan (No 41) Muzaffar Khan (No 37) Raja Todar Mal (No 39) Khwaja Shah Mansur of Shivar (No 122) Qulij Khan (No 42) Khwaja Shams^u d Din Khwafi (No 159)

The following have been Bakhshis —

Khwaja Jahan (No 110) Khwaja Tahir of Siyistan (No 111), Mawlana Habı Bihzadı³ Mawlana Darwizh Muhammad of Mashhad

¹ Abu 'l Fazl's list is neither complete nor chronologically arranged.

² The MSS and my text have wrong Mas⁵ud for Mahmud.

³ Some MSS have Ha instead of Habı (an abbreviation for Habı).

Mawlana 'Ishqī Muqim of Khurasan (No 410) Sultan Mahmud of Badakhshan Lashkar Khan (No 90) Shahbaz Khan (No 80) Ray P. rukhotam Shaykh Farid Bukhari (No 99) Qazi 'Ali of Baghad Ja'far Beg 'Asaf Khan (No 98) Khwaja Nizam u d Din Ahmad * Khwaja Fath u llah (No 258)

The following have been *Sadr*s * —

Mir Fath u llah Shaykh Gada'i son of Shaykh Jamal i Kambū Khwaja Muhammad Salih descendant in the third generation from Khwaja 'Abd u llah Marwarid Mawlana 'Abd u l Baqī Shaykh 'Abd u n Nabi Sultan Khwaja (No 108), Sadr Jahan (No 194)

Concluding Note by the Translator of Akbar's Mansabdars

The principal facts which Abu l Fazl's list of Grandees discloses are first that there were very few Hindustani Muslims in the higher ranks of the army and the civil service most of the officers being foreigners especially Persians and Afghans secondly that there was a very fair sprinkling of Hind i Amirs as among the 415 Mansabdars there are 51 Hindus

The Mansabdars who had fallen into disgrace or had rebelled have mostly been excluded Thus we miss the names of Mir Shah Abu l Ma'ali Khwaja Ma'azzam brother of Akbar's mother Baba Khan Qaqshal Ma'sum i Kabuli (p 476 note) 'Arab Bahadur Jabri etc But there are also several left out as Khizr Khwaja (p 391 note 2) Sultan Husayn Jala'ir (vide under No 64) Kamal Khan the Chakhar (vide p 507) Mir Gesu (p 464) Nawrang Khan son of Qutb u d Din Khan (No 2^a) Mirza Quli (p 418) Raja Askaran (under No 171) and others for whose omission it is difficult to assign reasons

Comparing Abu l Fazl's list with that in the Tabaqat or the careful lists of Shahjahan's *grande*s in the Padishahnama we observe that Abu l Fazl has only given the ma'as list not the actual commands which would have shown the strength of the contingents (tabinan) In other words Abu l Fazl has merely given the zati rank (p 251) This will partly account for the discrepancies in rank between his list and that by Nizam u d Din in the Tabaqat which may advantageously be given here Nizam gives only mansabdars of higher rank viz —

He was of (hazri)

'Abd u l Baqī who was Sadr in the fifth

In the Tabaqāt ¹	In Abū 'l Fazl's list
1 Khān Khānān Bayrām Khān .	No. 10 Mansab, 5,000 ²
2 Mirzā Shāhrukh, 5,000	7, 5,000
3 Tardī Beg Khān	12, do
4 Mun'im Khān	11, do
5 Mirzā Rustam, 5,000	9, do
6 Mirzā Khān Khānān	29, do
7. 'Alī Qulī Khān Zamān	13, do
8 Adham Khān	19, do
9 Mirzā Sharaf ^u 'd Dīn Husayn	17, do
10 Shams ^u 'd-Dīn Muhammad Atga Khān	15, do
11. Muhammad 'Aziz Kokultāsh, 5,000	21, do
12 Khizr Khwāja	not in the list; vide p 394
13 Bahādur Khān , 5,000	No 22, 5,000
14 Mir Muhammad Khān Atga	16, do
15 Muhammad Qulī Khān Barlās [*]	31, do
16 Khān Jahān , 5,000	24, do
17 Shihāb ^u 'd Dīn Ahmad Khān , 5,000	26, do
18 Sa'id Khān , 5,000	25, do
19 Pir Muhammad Khān	20, do.
20 Rāja Bihārī Mal ²	23, do
21 Rāja Bhagwān Dās, 5,000	27, do
22 Mān Singh, 5,000	30, do
23 Khvāja 'Abd ^u 'l Majid Āsaf Khān , maintained 20,000 horse ³	49, 3,000
24 Sikandar Khān Uzbek ²	48, 3,000
25 'Abd ^u 'lloh Khān Uzbek	14, 5,000
26 Qiyā Khān Gung ²	33, 5,000
27. Yūsuf Muhammad Khān Koka, 5,000	18; 5,000
28 Zayn Khān Koka, 5,000	34, 4,500
29 Shujā ² 'at Khān , 5,000	51; 3,000

¹ A
²
³ as belonging to the Umarā² 'l Kabār "the great Amirs" probably the commanders of 5,000

In the TabaqātIn Abū 'l Fazl's list

30	Shah Budagh Khān	No	52, 3,000
31	Ibrahīm Khān Uzbek, 4,000	„	64, 2,500
32	Tarsō Muhammad Khān , 5,000	„	32, 5,000
33	Vazir Khan , 5 000	„	41, 4 000
34	Muhammad Murad Khān ¹	„	54, 3,000
35	Ashraf Khān ¹	„	74, 2,000
36	Mahdi Qasim Khan ²	„	36, 4,000
37	Muhammad Qasim Khan	„	40, 4,000
38	Khwāja Sultān 'Alī	„	56, 3,000
39	Raja Todar Mal, 4 000	„	39, 4 000
40	Mirzā Yūsuf Khan Razawī, 4,000	„	35, 4 500
41	Mirza Qulī Khān ¹	not in the Ā ^a in,	vide p 418
42	Muzaffar Khan	No	37, 4,000
43	Haydar Muhammad Khan , 2 000	„	66, 2 500
44	Shaham Khān Jala ^a ir, 2 000	„	97, 2 000
45	Isma ^a il Sultān Dulday	„	72, 2 000
46	Muhammad Khān Jala ^a ir ²	not in the Ā ^a in
47	Khān i 'Ālam, 3,000	No	58, 3,000
48	Qutb ^u 'd Dīn Muhammad Khan , maintained 5,000 horse	„	28, 5 000
49	Muhibb 'Alī Khan , 4,000	„	107, 1,000
50	Qulij Khan , 4,000	„	42, 4 000
51	Muhammad Şadiq Khān , 4,000	„	43, 4,000
52	Mirza Janī Beg, 3 000	„	47, 3,000
53	Ismā'īl Qulī Khān , 3,000 ²	„	46, 3,500
54	I'timād Khān Gujrātī, 4,000	„	67, 2,500
55	Rāja Ray Singh, of Bikānīr and Nagor, 4,000	„	44, 4,000
56	Sharif Muhammad Khān , 3,000	„	63, 3,000
57	Shāh Fakhr ^u 'd Dīn, Naqabāt Khān , 1,000	„	88, 2,000
58	Hābib 'Alī Khān	„	133, 1,000
59	Shāh Qulī Mahram, 1,000	„	45, 3,500

¹ Mentioned in the Tabaqāt as belonging to the Umara' s kubra "the great Amirs" i.e., probably the commanders of 5 000

² He got insane Tabaqāt

³ MS 1 000

In the Tabaqāt	In Abū 'l Fazl's list
60 Muḥibb 'Alī Khān Rahtāsi, 4,000	not in the Ā'in , vide p 466
61 Muḥsin ^u 'ad Dīn Ahmad . . .	No 128, 1,000
62 Iṣṭamad Khān Kh wājasarā . . .	„ 119, 1,000
63 Dastam ¹ Khān . . .	„ 79, 2,000
64 Kamal Khān , the Gakkhar, 5,000 5,000	not in the Ā'in , vide p 507, and under No 247
65 Tāhīr Khān Mīr Farāghat, 2,000	No 94, 2,000
66 Sayyid Ḥamad of Bukhara, 2,000	„ 78, 2,000
67 Sayyid Mahmūd Khān , Bārha, 4,000	„ 75, 2,000
68 Sayyid Ahmad Khān , Bārha, 3,000	„ 91, 2,000
69 Qarā Bahādur Khān , ² 4,000 (?)	„ 179, 700
70 Bāqī Muḥammad Khān Koka, 4,000	„ 60, 3,000
71 Sayyid Muḥammad Mīr 'Adl	„ 140, 1,000
72 Ma'sūm Khān Farankhūdi, 2,000	„ 157, 1,000
73 Nawrang Khān , 4,000	not in the Ā'in , vide p 354
74 Shāh Muḥammad Khān Atga, younger brother of Shams ^u d Dīn Atgah ³	not in the Ā'in
75 Maṭlab Khān , 2,000	No 83, 2,000
76 Shaykh Ibrāhīm, 2,000	„ 82, 2,000
77 'Alī Qulī Khān , 2,000	„ 124, 1,000
78 Tolak Khān Qūchīn, 2,000	„ 158, 1,000
79 Shāh Beg Khān Kabuli, 3,000	„ 57, 3 000
80 Fattū Khān Afghān, 2,000	not in the Ā'in , vide No 385
81 Fath Khān Fīlban, 2 000	not in the Ā'in vide under
82 Samanjī Khān Mughul, 2,000	No 100, 1,500 [No 385
83 Babū Mankhī, 1,000	„ 202, 700
84 Darwish Muḥammad Uzbek, 2 000	„ 81, 2,000
85 Shāhbaz Khān Kambū, 2 000	„ 80, 2,000
86 Kh wāja Jaban Kh urāsānī	„ 110, 1,000

¹ The MSS of the Tabaqāt also have wrongly Rustam Khān

² MS Bahadur Khān

³ This is probably a mistake of the author of the Tabaqāt

In the Tabaqat	In Abu 'l-Fa'is list
87 Majnun Khan Qaqshal kept 5 000 horse	No 50 3 000
88 Muhammad Qasim Khan 3 000	40 4 000
89 Muzaffar Husayn Mirza 1 000	180 700
90 Raja Jagannath 3 000	69 2 500
91 Raja Iskaran 3 000	not in the A ^l in vide No 171
92 Ray Lonkaran 2 000	not in the A ^l in vide No 200
93 Madhu Singh brother of R Man Singh 2 000	No 104 1 500
94 Sayf Khan Koka	38 4 000
95 Ghiyas ^u d Din 'Alī 'Asaf Khan	126 1 000
96 Payanda Khan Mughul 2 000	68 2 500
97 Mubarak Khan the Gakkhar 1 000	171 1 000
98 Baz Bahadur Afghan 2 000	120 1 000
99 Mirak Khan Jinkjank (?)	not in the A ^l in
100 Sayyid Qasim Barha 2 000	No 100 1 500
101 Raja Kangar 2 000	not in the A ^l in vide under No 134
102 Muhammad Husayn Lashkar Khan kept 2 000 horse	No 90 2 000
103 Husayn Khan Tukriyah 2 000	53 3 000
104 Jalal Khan the Gakkhar 1 500	170 1 000
105 Sa'id Khan the Gakkhar 1 500	not in the A ^l in vid 1 508 at 1 under No 117
106 Istibr Khan Funuel 2 000	No 84 2 000
107 Khvajah Tahir Muhammad Tatar Khan	111 1 000
108 Moth Raja 1 500	171 1 000
109 Muhtar Khan Khasa Khayl 2 000	109 1 500
110 Safdar Khan Khasa Khayl 2 000 ¹	not in the A ^l in
111 Bahar Khan Khasa Khayl 2 000	No 87 (?) 2 000

In the TabaqātIn Abū 'l Fazl's list

112 Farhat Khān Khāsa Khayl , 2,000-	No 145, 1,000
113 Rāy Sāl Darbārī, 2,000	„ 106, 1,250
114 Rāy Durgā, 1,500 ¹	„ 103, 1,500
115 Mirak Khān Bahādur, ² 2,000 .	„ 208, 500
116 Shāh Muhammad Qalāti	„ 95, 2,000
117 Maqsūd 'Alī Kor	„ 136, 1,000
118 Ikhlās Khān , the Eunuch, 1,000	„ 86, 2,000
119 Mihr 'Alī Sildoz, 1,500	„ 130, 1,000
120 Khudawand Khān Dakhnī, 1,500	„ 151, 1,000
121 Mir Murtaẓā Dakhnī, 1,000	„ 162, 1,000
122 Hasan Khān , a Batanī Afghan, 1,000	„ 220, 500
123 Nazar Beg, son of Sa'īd, the Ghakkhar, 1,000	„ 247, 500
124 Raja Gopāl, 2,000	not in the Ā ² in , vide under No 305.
125 Qiyā Khān , 1,000	No 184, 700
126 Sayyīd Hāshim Bārha, 2,000	„ 143, 1,000
127 Razawī Khān , 2,000	„ 141, 1,000
128 Rāja Bir Bal, 2 000	„ 85, 2 000
129 Shaykh Farīd i Bukhārī, 1,500	„ 99, 1,500
130 Rāja Surjan, 2 000	„ 96, 2 000
131 Jāfar Beg Āsaf Khān , 2,000	„ 98, 2 000
132 Raja Rūpsī Bairagī, 1,500	„ 118, 1 000
133 Fazl Khān , 1,500	„ 156, 1,000
134 Shāh Qulī Khān Naranjī, 1,000	„ 231, 500
135 Shaykh Muhammad Khān Bukh arī, 2,000	„ 77, 2,000
136 Lāl Khān Badakhshī	„ 209, 500
137 Khanjar Beg Chaghtā ³	not in the Ā ² in
138 Maḥsūs Khān , 2 500	No 70, 2,500
139 Sānī Khān Arlāt	„ 216, 500

¹ MS 1 000² He died in the explosion of a mine before Clutor³ He belongs to the old Amīrs of the present dynasty. He was an accomplished man excelled in music and composed poems. There exists a wālī known Masnawī by him dar bāb-i akhara on the subject of dancing girls. Tabaqat-i Ude Akbarnāma

In the TabaqātIn Abū 'l-Fazl's list

140	Mirzā Husayn Khān	.	No	149 ; 1,000
141	Jagat Singh, 1,500	.	„	160 , 1,000
142	Mirzā Najāt Khān	.	„	142 ; 1,000
143	‘Alī Dost Khān , 1,000 ¹	.	not in the Ā ‘in
144	Sultān Husayn Khān	.	not in the Ā ‘in
145	Khawāja Shāh Mansūr Shirāzi	.	No	122 , 1,000
146	Salim Khān , 1,000	.	„	132 , 1,000
147	Sayyid Chhajhū Bārha	.	„	221 , 500
148	Darbār Khān , 1,000	.	„	185 , 700
149	Hājī Muhammad Sistānī, 1,000 ^(?)	.	„	55 , 3,000
150	Muhammad Zamān ²	.	not in the Ā ‘in
151	Khurram Khān , 2,000 ³	.	not in the Ā ‘in
152	Muhammad Qulī Toqbāy, 1,000	.	No	129 , 1,000
153	Mujāhid Khān , 1,000 ⁴	.	not in the Ā ‘in
154	Sultān Ibrāhīm Awbahi ⁵	.	not in the Ā ‘in
155	Shāh Ghāzi Khān Turkmān	.	not in the Ā ‘in
156	Sheroya, 1,000	.	No	168 , 1,000
157	Kākar ‘Alī Khān , 1,000	.	„	92 , 2,000
158	Naqīb Khān , 1,000	.	„	161 , 1,000
159	Beg Nūrīn Khān , 1,000	.	„	212 , 500
160	Qutlū Qadam Khān , 1,000	.	„	123 , 1,000
161	Jalāl Khān Qurchī, 1,000	.	„	213 ; 500
162	Shumāl Khān Qurchī, 1,000	.	„	154 , 1,000
163	Mirzada ‘Alī Khān	.	„	152 , 1,000
164	Sayyid ‘Abd ^u ‘llāh Khan	.	„	189 , 700
165	Mir Sharif i Āmulī, 1,000	.	No	166 , 1,000
166	Farrukh Khān	.	„	232 , 500
167	Dost Khān ⁶	.	not in the Ā ‘in
168	Ja‘far Khān Turkmān, 1,000	.	No	114 , 1,000

In the Ṭabaqāt		In Abū 'l Fa'l s list
169	Rāy Manohar	No 265, 400
170	Shaykh 'Abd ^u 'r Rahīm of Lakhnau „	197, 700
171	Mirza Abū 'l Muẓaffar „	240, 500
172	Rāj Singh, son of Rāja Āskaran „	174, 1,000
173	Rāy Patr Dās	196, 700
174	Jānish Bahādur	235, 500
175	Muhammaḥ Khān Niyazī „	239, 500
176	Ram Dās Kachhwāha „	238, 500
177	Mir Abu 'l Qasīm „	251, 500
178	Khawāja 'Abd ^u 'l Hay, Mir 'Adl „	230, 500
179	Shams ^u 'd Dīn Husayn, son of A'zam Khān	„ 163, 1,000
180	Khawāja Shams ^u 'd Dīn Khawāfi „	159, 1,000
181	Mir Jamal ^u 'd Dīn Husayn Injū, 1,000	„ 164, 1,000
182	Shaykh 'Abd ^u 'llah Khān, son of Muhammad Ghaws, 1,000	„ 173, 1,000
183	Sayyid Rajū Barha, 1,000 „	165, 1,000
184	Medni Ray Chauhān, 1,000 „	198, 700
185	Mir Tahir Razawī, brother of M Yūsuf Khān	„ 236, 500
186	Tash Beg Kābuli „	„ 172, 1,000
187	Ahmad Beg Kabulī, keeps 700 horse „	„ 191, 700
188	Sher Khawāja	„ 176, 800
189	Muhammad Qulī Turkmān „	203, 600
190	Mirzā 'Alī Alamshāhī ¹	„ 237, 500
191	Wazīr Jamīl	„ 200, 700
192	Rāy Bhoj, 1,000 „	„ 175, 1,000
193	Balhtyār Beg Turkmān	„ 204, 600
194	Mir Šadr Jahan	„ 194, 700
195	Hasan Beg Shaykh 'Umarī „	„ 167, 1,000
196	Shādmān, son of 'Azīz Koka „	„ 233, 500
197	Raja Mukatmān Bhadaurya „	„ 219, 500
198	Baqī Safarchī ² son of Tahir Khān Farāghat	not in the Ā'in, vide No 91

¹ " He is the brother of 'Alamshāh a courageous man skilful in the use of arms " Ṭabaqāt. This remark is scarcely in harmony with the facts recorded under No. 23.
[² Or Sufra-chī *—P]

In the TabaqatIn Abu l Fazl's list

199	Faridun Barlas	No 227	500
200	Bahadur Khan Qurdar a Tarin Afghan	269	400
201	Shaykh Bayazid i Chishti	260	400

In this above list a few grandees are mentioned whom Abu l Fazl classes among the commanders of 400 Nizam however adds the following note to his own list— Let it be known that the title of Amir is given to all such as hold Mansabs from 500 upwards None of those whom I have enumerated holds a less rank

The Historian Bada'om has not given a list of Amirs but has compiled instead a very valuable list of the poets doctors learned men and saints of Akbar's reign together with biographical notices which make up the third volume of the edition printed by the Asiatic Society of Bengal With his usual animus he says (III 1)— I shall not give the names of the Amirs as Nizam has given them in the end of his work and besides most of them have died without having obtained the pardon of God

I have seen none that is faithful in this generation

If thou knowest one give him my blessing

Of the Mansabdars whose names Abu l Fazl has not given because the A'in list refers to the period prior to the 40th year of Akbar's reign the most famous are Mahabat Khan Khan Jahan Lodi (vide under No 309) and 'Abdu llah Khan Firuz jang

We have no complete list of the grandees of Jahangir's reign but the Dutch traveller De Laet in his work on India (p 151) has a valuable note on the numerical strength of Jahangir's Mansabdars which may be compared with the lists in the A'in and the Padishahnama (II 717) Leaving out the princes whose mansabs were above 5 000 we have —

Commanders of	Under Akbar (A'in)	Under Jahangir (De Laet)	Under Shihyahan (Padishahnama)
5 000	30	8	20
4 500	2	9	0
4 000	9	25	20
3 500	2	30	0
3 000	17	36	44
2 500	8	42	11
2 000	7	45	51
1 500	7	51	52
1 250	1	0	0

Commanders of	Under Akbar (A^sin)	Under Jahangir (De Laet)	Under Shāhjahān (Padishāhnāma)
1 000	31	55	97
900	38	0	23
800	2	0	40
700	25	58	61
600	4	0	30
500	46	80	114
	<hr/>	<hr/>	<hr/>
Total	249	439	563
	<hr/>	<hr/>	<hr/>
400	18	73
350	19	58
300	33	72
250	12	85	not specified
200	81	150
	<hr/>	<hr/>
Total	163	438
	<hr/>	<hr/>
150	53	242
120	1	0
100	250	300
80	91	245	not specified
60	204	397
50	16	0
40	260	298
30	39	240
20	250	232
10	224	110
	<hr/>	<hr/>
Total	1 388	2 064
	<hr/>	<hr/>

The number of Ahadis under Jahangir, De Laet fixes as follows —

Chaharaspas	741
Sihaspas	1 322
Duaspas	1,428
Yakaspas	950
	<hr/>
	4 441 Ahadis
	<hr/>

Under Shāhjahān, 17 Grandees were promoted, up to the 20th year of his reign, to mansabs above 5,000 There is no Hindū among them

De Laet has not mentioned how many of the Amīrs were Hindūs But we may compare the lists of the Ā'in and the Pādīshāhnāma

We find under Akbar —

among 252 mansabdars from 5,000 to 500	32 Hindūs
among 163 mansabdars from 400 to 200	25 „

Under Shāhjahān (20th year of his reign), we have —

among 12 mansabdars above 5,000	no Hindūs
among 580 mansabdars from 5,000 to 500	110 Hindūs

The names of commanders below 500 are not given in the Pādīshāhnāma Regarding other facts connected with the relative position of Hindūs and Muhammadans at the Mughul court, I would refer the reader to my "Chapter from Muhammadan History," Calcutta Review, April, 1871

—

Ā'in 30 (continued)

THE LEARNED MEN OF THE TIME

I shall now speak of the sages of the period and classify them according to their knowledge, casting aside all differences of creed His Majesty, who is himself the leader of the material and the ideal worlds, and the sovereign over the external and the internal, honours five classes of sages as worthy of attention And yet all five, according to their light, are struck with his Majesty's perfection, the ornament of the world The first class, in the lustre of their star, perceive the mysteries of the external and the internal, and in their understanding and the breadth of their views, fully comprehend both realms of thought, and acknowledge to have received their spiritual power from the throne of his Majesty The second class pay less attention to the external world, but in the light of their hearts they acquire vast knowledge The third class do not step beyond the arena of observation (na'ar) and possess a certain knowledge of what rests on testimony The fourth class look upon testimony as something filled with the dust of suspicion, and handle nothing without proof The fifth class are bigoted, and cannot pass beyond the narrow sphere of revealed testimony Each class has many subdivisions

I do not wish to set up as a judge and hold forth the faults of people The mere classification was repugnant to my feelings, but truthfulness helps on the pen

First Class—Such as understand the mysteries of both worlds

1 Shaykh Mubarak of Nāgor¹

Vide under No 253 The Tabaqāt also mentions a Shaykh Mubarak of Alwar, and a Sayyid Mubarak of Gwālyār

2 Shaykh Nizam

Abū 'l Fazī either means the renowned Nizam^u 'd Dīn of Amethi, near Lakhrau of the Chishtī sect, who died A H 979 or Nizām^u 'd Dīn of Nārnaul, of the same sect, who died in 997

3 Shaykh Adhan

He also belonged to the Chishtīs, and died at Jaunpūr in 970

4 Miyan Wajih^u 'd Dīn

Died at Almadābād in 938 The Tabaqāt mentions a contemporary, Shaykh Wajih^u 'd Dīn Gujrati, who died in 995

5 Shaykh Rukn^u 'd Dīn

He was the son of Shaykh 'Abī^u 'l Quddūs of Gango Badā'onī saw him at Dihli at the time of Bayrām's fall

6 Shaykh Abd^u 'l Azīz (of Dihli)

7 Shaykh Jalāl^u 'd Dīn

He belongs to Thanesar, and was the pupil and spiritual successor (khalīfa) of 'Abd^u 'l Quddūs of Gango Died 989

8 Shaykh Ilāhdīya

Ilāhdīya is Hindūstānī for the Persian Ilāhdād—“given (diyā) by God,” “Theodore” He lived at Khayrabad and died in 993

9 Mawlana Husām^u 'd Dīn

“Mawlānā Husām^u 'd Dīn Surkh of Lāhor He differed from the learned of Lāhor, and studied theology and philosophy He was very pious” Tabaqāt

10 Suaykh 'Abd^u 'l Ghafūr

He belongs to Aszampur in Sambhal, and was the pupil of 'Abd^u 'l Quddūs Died in 995

11 Shaykh Panjū

He was wrongly called Bechū on p 110, note 3 He died in 969 Badā'onī, II, 53

12 Mawlānā Ismā'il

He was an Arabian, and the friend of Shaykh Husayn, who taught in Humāyūn's Madrasa at Dihli He was a rich man, and was killed by some burglars that had broken into his house

¹ The notes are taken from the Tabaqāt the third volume of Badā'onī and the Mu'tas 'l Alam

13 Madhū Sarsuti	18 Rāmtīrth
14 Madhūsudan	19 Nar Sing
15 Nārāyṇ Aḥram	20 Parmindar
16 Hariṇ Sūr	21 Ādit
17 Damūdar Bhat

Second Class — Such as understand the mysteries of the heart

22 Shaykh Rukn^u 'd Dīn Mahmūd¹ Kamangar (the bow maker)

23 Shaykh Amān^u Ilah

24 Khwāja 'Abd^u 'sh Shahīd

He is the son of Khwājagan Khwāja, son of the renowned Khwāja Ahrar Vide No 17 and No 108 He died in 982, and was buried at Samarqand He had been for twenty years in India, and held a jagir in Pargana حماری, in the Bari Duāb, where he maintained two thousand poor

25 Shaykh Mūsā

He was a smith (āhangar) and performed many miracles He died in the beginning of Akbar's reign, and was buried at Lāhor The elder brother of Shaykh Salīm Chishtī also was called Shaykh Mūsā, vide under No 82 Vide also below, No 102

26 Babā Balas

27 Shaykh 'Alā^u 'd Dīn Majzūb Vide Badā'onī, III, 61

28 Shaykh Yūsuf Harkun

The ṭabaqāt calls him Shaykh Yūsuf Harkun Majzūb of Lāhor

29 Shaykh Burhan

He lived as a recluse in Kālpi, and subsisted on milk and sweetmeats, denying himself water He knew no Arabic, and yet explained the Quran He was a Mahdawī He died in 970 at the age of one hundred years, and was buried in his cell

30 Baba Kipūr

Shaykh Kipūr Majzūb of Gwālyar, a Husaynī Sayyid, was at first a soldier, then turned a bīshkī, and supplied widows and the poor with water He died in 979 from a fall from his gate

31 Shaykh Abū Isḥāq Fīrang Vide Badā'onī, III, 48

32 Shaykh Dā'ūd

He is called Jhanniwāl from Jhannū near Lāhor His ancestors had come from Arabia and settled at Sitpūr in Multān, where Dā'ūd was born Badā'onī (III, p 28) devotes eleven pages to his biography He died in 982

¹ Badā'onī (III p 151) mentions a Zayn' d Dīn Mahmūd Kamangar

33 Shay^{kh} Salīm ḥ Chishtī

He was a descendant of Shay^{kh} Farīd ḥ Shakarganj and lived in Fathpūr Sikrī highly honoured by Akbar Jahangir was called after him Salīm He died in 979 Several of his relations have been mentioned above

34 Shay^h Muhammad Ghaws of Gwalyar

Vide No 173

35 Ram Ehadr

36 Jadrup

*Third Class — Such as know philosophy and theology*¹

37 Mir Fath^u llah of Shiraz

Vide pp 34 110 208 284 His brother was a poet and wrote under the 'akhallus of Farīghī, vide Bada'onī III, 292 His two sons were Mir Taqī and Mir Sharif

38 Mir Murtaza

He is not to be confounded with Mir Murtaza No 162 Mir Murtaza Sharif of Shiraz died in 974 at Dihli and was buried at the side of the poet Khusraw, from where his body was taken to Mashhad He had studied the Hadīs under the renowned Ibn Hajar in Makkah, and then came over the Dakhn to Āgra Vide Albarnāma II, 278, 337

39 Mawlana Sa^ʿid of Turkistan

He came in 968 from Mawara 'n nahr to Āgra Bad, II, 49 He died in Kabul in 970, l c, III, 152

40 Hafiz of Tashkand

He is also called Hafiz Kumakī He came in 977 from Tashkand to India and was looked upon in Mawara 'n nahr as a most learned man He had something of a soldier in him and used to travel about like all Turks with the quiver tied to his waist He went over Gujrat to Makkah and from there to Constantinople where he refused a vazarship After wards he returned to his country, where he died Vide Bada'onī II, 187

41 Mawlana Shah Muhammad

Vide p 112, Bad II, 295 II

42 Mawlana Ala^ʿu 'd Dīn

He came from Laristan, and is hence called Lārī He was the son of Mawlana Kamal^u d Dīn Husayn and studied under Mawlana Jalal Dawwani Shafi^ʿī He was for some time Akbar's teacher Once at a darbar he placed himself before the Khan ḥ Āṣṣam when the Mir Tozak

¹ Masʿūl o manqūl pr that which is based on reason (ʿaql) and traditional testimony (naql) told him to go back. "Why should not a learned man stand in front of fools," said he, and left the hall, and never came again. He got 4,000 bighas as sayūrghāl in Sambhal, where he died.

43 Hakīm Mīrī Vide No 251

44 Mawlānā Shaykh Husayn (of Ajmīr)

He was said to be a descendant of the great Indian saint Muḥsin Chishtī of Ajmīr, was once banished to Makkah, and had to suffer, in common with other learned men whom Akbar despised, various persecutions. Badā'onī, III, 87

45 Mawlānā Mīr Kalān

He died in 981, and was buried at Āgra. He was Jahāngīr's first teacher. Bad, II, 170

46 Ghāzī Khān Vide No 144

47 Mawlānā Ṣadiq

He was born in Samarqand, came to India, and then went to Kābul, where he was for some time the teacher of Mīrzā Muḥammad Hakīm, Akbar's brother. He then went back to his home, where he was alive in 1001. The Tabaqāt calls him Mullā Ṣadiq Halwā'i. Badā'onī (III, 255, where the Ed. Bibl. India has wrongly Halwānī) puts him among the poets.

48 Mawlānā Shah Muḥammad

Vide No 41. This seems to be a mere repetition. Other Histories only mention one Mawlānā of that name.

Fourth Class — Such as know philosophy (ṣaqlī kalām) ¹

49 Mawlānā Pīr Muḥammad Vide No 20

50 Mawlānā Ṣabḥ al-Bayḥ

He was a Ṣadr, vide pp 282, 528 [and Akbarnāma, II, 143]

51 Mīrzā Muḥsin

He was an Uzbek, came from Māwarā'n-nahr to India, and taught for some time in the Jāmi' Mesjid of Muḥsinu'd-Dīn Farankhūdī (vide No 128) at Āgra. He died in Makkah at the age of seventy. Vide Bad, II, 187

52 Mawlānāzāda Shukr

53 Mawlānā Muḥammad

He lived at Lāhor and was in 1004 nearly ninety years old. Badā'onī (III, 154) calls him Mawlānā Muḥammad Muḥṭī

¹ This means chiefly religious testimony based on human reason, not on revelation. Abū l-Faḍl evidently takes it in a wider sense as he includes the doctors in this class.

Abū 'l Fazl, however, means perhaps Mawlanā Muhammad of Yazd, a learned and bigoted Shī'ah, who was well received by Akbar and Abū 'l Fazl, to whose innovations he at first agreed. But he got tired of them and asked for permission to go to Makkah. He was plundered on the road to Sūrat Mir'āt. But Badā'onī tells quite a different story, vide p. 198.

Or it may refer to No. 140, p. 438.

54 Qasim Beg

Vide No. 350 p. 112. The Tabaqāt also says of him that he was distinguished for his acquirements in the Ṣaqlī Sulūm.

55 Mawlā 'l Nūr 'd Dīn Tarkhān

Vide under No. 393. He was a poet and a man of great erudition. Towards the end of his life "he repented" and gave up poetry. He was for a long time Mutawallī of Humayūn's tomb in Dīblī where he died.

The Tabaqāt says that he was a good mathematician and an astronomer. According to the Ma'āshir, he was born in Lam in Khurāsān and was educated in Mashhad. He was introduced to Babar and was a private friend of Humayūn's, who like him was fond of the astrolabe. He went with the emperor to 'Iraq, and remained twenty years in his service. As poet, he wrote under the talīq of 'Nūrī'. He is also called "Nūrī of Safidūn", because he held Safidūn for some time as jāgir. Akbar gave him the title of Khān and later that of Tarkhān and appointed him to Samānāh.

56 Narāyn

61 Bidyanwās

57 Madhūbhat

65 Gorināth

58 Śribhat

66 Gojīnāth

59 Bishn Nath

67 Kishn Pandit

60 Ram Kishn

68 Bhaṭṭachārj

61 Balbhadr Mīr

69 Bhāgirāth Bhaṭṭachārj

62 Bisūdev Mīr

70 Kāshī Nath Bhaṭṭachārj

63 Bamarbhat

Physicians

71 Hakīm Mīrī Vide No. 251

72 Hakīm 'l Muḥ

His name is Shams 'd Dīn and, like several other doctors of Akbar's court, he had come from Gilān on the Caspian to India. He was a very learned man. When the learned were driven from court and the innova-

* The title carried without notice of the press appears to be of this, vide p. 303. The Ma'āshir has some errors made by Nurī on this copy etc.

tions commenced, he asked for permission to go to Makkah (988), where he died

73 Mullā Mīr

The Ṭabaqāt calls him Mullā Mīr Ṭabīb of Hairāt, grandson of Mullā ʿAbd^u 'l Hay Yazdī

74 Hakīm Abū 'l Fath Vide No 112, p 468

75 Hakīm Zanbīl Beg Vide No 150, p 490

76 Hakīm ʿAlī of Gilān Vide No 192, p 519

77 Hakīm Hasan

He also came from Gilān His knowledge, says Badāʿonī (III, 167), was not extensive, but he was an excellent man

78 Hakīm Aristū

79 Hakīm Fath^u 'llāh

He also came from Gilān, knew a great deal of medical literature, and also of astronomy He wrote a Persian Commentary to the Qānūn In the first year of Jahāngīr's reign he was a Commander of 1,000, three hundred horse (Tuzuk, p 34) The Pādūshāhnāma (I, b, 350) says that he afterwards returned to his country, where he committed suicide His grandson, Fath^u 'llāh, was a doctor at Shājahān's court

80 Hakīm Masīh^u 'l Mulk

He came from the Dakhīn where he had gone from Shiraz He was a simple, pious man, and was physician to Sulṭān Murad He died in Mālwhā

81 Hakīm Jalāl^u 'd Dīn Muzaffar Vide No 348, p 582

82 Hakīm Lutf^u 'llāh Vide No 354, p 584

83 Hakīm Sayf^u 'l Mulk Lang

Badāʿonī and the Ṭabaqāt call him Sayf^u 'l Mulk Because he killed his patients, he got the nickname of Sayf^u 'l Hukamā, "the sword of the doctors" He came from Damāwand, and was in Āgra during Bayrām's regency Later he went back to his country He was also a poet and wrote under the taḥallus of "Shujāʿī" He is not to be confounded with No 201, p 528

84 Hakīm Humam Vide No 205, p 529

85 Hakīm ʿAīn^u 'l Mulk Vide No 234, p 480

86 Hakīm Shifāʿī

The Mīrʿāt mentions a Hakīm Shifāʿī who in his poetical writings calls himself Muzaffar ibn ʾi Muḥammad Al husaynī As shifāʿī He was born at Isfahān, and was a friend of Shāh ʿAbbas ʾi Ṣafawī He died in 1037 There is a copy of his Masnawī in the Library of the Asiatic Society of Bengal (No 795)

87. Hakīm Niṣmat^u 'llāh

88 Hakīm Dawā'i

Dawā'i was also the takhallus of No 85

89. Hakīm Talab 'Alī

90 Hakīm 'Abd^u 'r Rahīm

91 Hakīm Rūh^u 'llāh

92 Hakīm Fakhr^u 'd Dīn 'Alī

93 Hakīm Is hāq

94 Shaykh Hasan, and 95 Shaykh Binā

Shaykh Hasan of Panipat, and his son Shaykh Binā were renowned surgeons. Instead of "Binā", the MSS have various readings. The Ma'āshir has Phaniyā, the Tabaqāt Bhanīyā

Shaykh Binā's son is the well known Shaykh Hasan, or Hassū, who under Jahangīr's rose to great honours, and received the title of Muqarrab Khān. Father and son, in the 41st year, succeeded in curing a bad wound which Akbar had received from a buck at a deer fight. Hassū was physician to Prince Saīm, who was much attached to him. After his accession, he was made a commander of 5,000 and governor of Gujrāt, in which capacity he came in contact with the English at Sūrāt. He gave no satisfaction, and was recalled. In the 13th year (1027) he was made governor of Bihār, and in the 16th, governor of Āgra. In the beginning of Shahjahān's reign, he was pensioned off, and received the Pargana of Kayrāna, his birthplace, as jāgīr. He constructed a mausoleum near the tomb of the renowned Saint Sharaf^u 'd Dīn of Panipat, and died at the age of ninety. In Kayrāna, he built many edifices, and laid out a beautiful garden with an immense tank. He obtained excellent fruit trees from all parts of India, and the Kayrāna mangoes, according to the Ma'āshir, have since been famous in Dihlī.

Muqarrab's son, Rīzq^u 'llāh, was a doctor under Shāhjahān, and a commander of 800. Awrangzeb made him a Khān. He died in the 10th year of Awrangzeb.

Muqarrab's adopted son is Masihā 1 Kairanawī. His real name was Sa'ad^u 'llāh. He was a poet, and composed an epic on the story of Sita Rāmchandra's wife.

96 Mahādev

98 Nārāyṇ

97 Bhīm Nāth

99 Sīwajī¹

¹ The Tabaqāt mentions a few other Hindu doctors of distinction who lived during Akbar's reign: viz Bhiraū, Durgā Mal Chandr Sen (an excellent surgeon) and Illi (one MS has Abi)

Fifth Class — Such as understand sciences resting on testimony (naql) ¹

100 Miyān Hatim

He lived at Sambhal The historian Bada^oni, when twelve years old, learned under him in 960 Hatim died in 969

101 Miyān Jamal Khān

He was Mufti of Dihli and died more than ninety years old in 981. He was a Kambū

102 Mawlanā ‘Abd^u ‘l Qadir

He was the pupil of Shaykh Hāmid Qadirī (buried at Hāmidpūr, near Multān), and was at enmity with his own younger brother Shaykh Musī regarding the right of succession ‘Abd^u ‘l Qadir used to say the nafl prayers ² in the audience hall of Fathpūr Sikri and when asked by Akbar to say them at home, he said, “My king this is not your kingdom that you should pass orders” Akbar called him a fool, and cancelled his grant of land, whereupon ‘Abd^u ‘l Qadir went back to Uchh Shaykh Mūsā did better, he joined the army, and became a commander of 500 Vide below, Nos 109, 131

The Mir^{at} mentions a Mawlanā ‘Abd^u ‘l Qadir of Sirhind as one of the most learned of Akbar’s age

103 Shaykh Ahmad

The Tabaqāt mentions a Shaykh Hāji Ahmad of Lāhor, and a Shaykh Ahmad Hāji Pūlādī Majzūb of Sind

104 Makhdūm^u ‘l Mulk Vide p. 172

This is the title of Mawlana ‘Abd^u ‘llāh of Sultānpūr, author of the ‘Asmat & Anbiyā, and a commentary to the Shamā‘il^u ‘n Nabī Humāyūn gave him the titles of Makhdūm^u ‘l Mulk and Shaykh^u ‘l Islam He was a bigoted Sunnī, and looked upon Abū ‘l Fazl from the beginning as a dangerous man He died in 990 in Gujrāt after his return from Makkah

105 Mawlana ‘Abd^u ‘s Salām

The Tabaqāt says, he lived at Lāhor and was a learned man

The Mir^{at} mentions another Mawlanā ‘Abd^u ‘s Salām of Lāhor, who was a great lawyer (faqīh) and wrote a commentary to Baiḏawī He died more than ninety years old in the first year of Shāhjahān’s reign

106 Qāzī Sadr^u ‘d Dīn

Qāzī Sadr^u ‘d Dīn Qurayshī ‘Abbāsī of Jālnḍhar was the pupil of Makhdūm^u ‘l Mulk (No 104) He was proverbial for his memory He was attached to dervishes and held such broad views, that he was looked upon by common people as a heretic When the learned were driven from court, he was sent as Qāzī to Bharōch, where he died. His son, Shaykh Muhammad, succeeded him. His family remained in Gujrāt.

¹ As religious law Hadīth history, etc

² Voluntary prayers

107 Mawlanā Saʿad^u ʿllāh

He lived at Bīyana and was looked upon as the best grammarian of the age. He was simple in his mode of life, but liberal to others. Towards the end of his life he got silent and shut himself out from all intercourse with men, even his own children. He died in 989.

108 Mawlanā Isḥaq

He was the son of Shaykh Kakū, and lived at Lahor. Shaykh Saʿad^u ʿllāh, Shaykh Munawwar, and many others, were his pupils. He died more than a hundred years old in 996.

109 Mīr ʿAbd^u ʿl Latīf Vide No 161, p 496

110 Mīr Nūr^u ʿllāh

He came from Shustar and was introduced to Akbar by Hakīm Abu ʿl Fath. He was a Shiʿah, but practised taqiya among Sunnis, and was even well acquainted with the law of Abū Hanīfa. When Shaykh Muḥsin Qāzī of Lahor retired, he was appointed his successor, and gave every satisfaction. After Jahāngīr's accession, he was recalled. Once he offended the emperor by a hasty word and was executed.

111 Mawlana ʿAbd^u ʿl Qadīr

He was Akbar's teacher (ākhūnd) Vide No 242, p 542

112 Qāzī Abd^u ʿl Samī

He was a Miyanakali¹ and according to Badāʿonī (II, 314) played chess for money and drank wine. Akbar made him in 990, Qāziy^u ʿl Quzat, in place of Qāzī Jalāl^u ʿd Dīn Multānī (No 122) Vide Albarnāma, III, 593.

113 Mawlana Qasīm

The Tabaqāt mentions a Mullā Qāsīm of Qandahār.

114 Qāzī Hasan Vide No 281, p 559

115 Mullā Kamal

The Tabaqāt mentions a Shaykh Kamal of Alwar, the successor and relative of Shaykh Salīm.

116 Shaykh Yaʿqub (of Kashmir) Vide below among the poets

117 Mulla ʿĀlam Vide p 159, note

He died in 991, and wrote a book entitled Fawāʾih ʿl Wīlāyat Bad, II, 337.

118 Shaykh ʿAbd^u ʿn Nabī Vide pp 182, 186, 195, 197, 549, 616, note

He was the son of Shaykh Ahmad, son of Shaykh ʿAbd^u ʿl Quddūs.

¹ Miyanakali is the name of the hill tract between Samarqand and Bukhāra.

of Gango, and was several times in Makkah, where he studied the Hadīḡ. When he held the office of Ṣadr he is said to have been arbitrary, but liberal. The execution of a Brahman, the details of which are related in Bada'onī (III, 80) led to the Shaykh's deposal.

Bada'onī (III, 83) places his death in 991, the Mir'āt in 992. 'Abd' n Nabī's family traced their descent from Abū Hanīfa.

119 Shaykh Bhīk

The Tabaqāt has also 'Bhīk' while Bada'onī (III, 21) has "Bhīkan". Shaykh Bhīk lived in Kakor near Lakhnau. He was as learned as he was pious. He died in 981.

120 Shaykh Abū 'l Fath

Shaykh Abū 'l Fath of Gujrat was the son in law of Mir Sayyid Muhammad of Jaunpur the great Mahdawī. He was in Āgra at the time of Bayram Khan.

121 Shaykh Baha' d Dīn Muftī

He lived at Āgra, and was a learned and pious man.

122 Qaṣī Jalal' d Dīn Multanī. Vide pp 183, 195

He comes from near Bhakkar and was at first a merchant. He then took to law. In 990, he was banished and sent to the Dakhn, from where he went to Makkah. He died there.

123 Shaykh Ziya' d Dīn

It looks as if Shaykh Ziya' llah were intended. vide No 173

124 Shaykh 'Abd' 'l Wahhab

125 Shaykh 'Umar

126 Mir Sayyid Muhammad Mir Adl. Vide No 140, p 485 and No 251 p 548

127 Mawlana Jamal

The Tabaqat has a Mulla Jamal a learned man of Multan. Bada'onī (III 106) mentions a Mawlana Jamal of لاهور which is said to be a Mahalla of Lāhor.

128 Shaykh Ahmadi

Shaykh Ahmadi Fayyaz of Amethī a learned man contemporary of the saint Nizam' d Dīn of Amethī (p 607)

129 Shaykh Abd' 'l-Ghani¹

He was born at Bada'on and lived afterwards in Dihli a retired life. The Khan Khanan visited him in 1003.

130 Shaykh 'Abd' 'l Wahid

¹ Sayyid Ahmad's ed. on of the Tuzuk (p 91 l 11 from below) mentions that Jahangir when a child read the Hadīs under Shaykh 'Abd' 'l-Ghani, whose fate is related in the Ābbānāma. This is a mistake for 'Abd' n Nabī (No 118).

He was born in Bulgrān, and is the author of a commentary to the Nuzhat 'l Aricāh, and several treatises on the technical terms (istilāhāt) of the Sūfis, one of which goes by the name of Sanabīl

131 Sadr Jahan Vide No 194 p 522

132 Mawlana Isma'īl Vide above No 12

The Tabaqat mentions a Mullā Isma'īl Muftī of Lahor, and a Mulla Isma'īl of Awadh

133 Mulla Abū 'l Qādir

This is the historian Bada'onī Abū 'l Faḥl also calls him Mullā in the Akbarnāma

134 Mawlāna Ṣadr Jahan

This seems a repetition of No 131

135 Shaykh Jawhar

136 Shaykh Munawwar

Vide p 112 He was born at Lāhor, and was noted for his memory and learning He is the author of commentaries to the Mashāriq 'l-anwār (Hadīḡ), the Badī' 'l-bayan, the Irshād-i Qā'ī, etc When the learned were banished from court he was imprisoned in Gwahyar, where he died in 1011

His son, Shaykh Kabīr, was also renowned for his learning He died in 1026, in Ahmadabād, and was buried in the mausoleum of the great Ahmadabādi saint Shah 'Ālam Mir'at

137 Qazī Ibrahim

Vide pp 181, 183 198 Bada'onī and the Tabaqat mention a Hajī Ibrāhīm of Āgra, a teacher of the Hadīs

138 Mawlana Jamal Vide above, No 127

139 Bijai Sen Sur

140 Bhān Chand

A* in 30 (continued)

THE POETS OF THE AGE

I have now come to this distinguished class of men and think it right to say a few words about them Poets strike out a road to the inaccessible realm of thought, and divine grace beams forth in their genius But many of them do not recognize the high value of their talent, and barter it away from a wish to possess inferior store they pass their time in praising the mean minded, or soil their language with invectives against the wise If it were not so, the joining of words were wonderful indeed, for by this means lofty ideas are understood

of Gango, and was several times in Makkah, where he studied the Hadīḡ. When he held the office of Ṣadr he is said to have been arbitrary, but liberal. The execution of a Brahman, the details of which are related in Badā'onī (III, 80) led to the Shaykh's deposal.

Badā'onī (III, 83) places his death in 991, the Mir'āt in 992. 'Abd' n Nabī's family traced their descent from Abū Hanīfa.

119 Shaykh Bhīk

The Tabaqāt has also " Bhīk ", while Badā'onī (III, 24) has " Bhikan ". Shaykh Bhīk lived in Kakor near Lakhnau. He was as learned as he was pious. He died in 981.

120 Shaykh Abū 'l Fath

Shaykh Abū 'l Fath of Gujrat was the son-in-law of Mir Sayyid Muhammad of Jaunpur, the great Mahdawī. He was in Āgra at the time of Bayram Khān.

121 Shaykh Baha' d Dīn Muftī

He lived at Āgra, and was a learned and pious man.

122 Qāzi Jalāl' d Dīn Multānī. Vide pp 183, 195

He comes from near Bhakkar and was at first a merchant. He then took to law. In 990, he was banished and sent to the Dakhīn, from where he went to Makkah. He died there.

123 Shaykh Ziyā' d Dīn

It looks as if Shaykh Ziyā' d Dīn were intended, vide No 173

124 Shaykh 'Abd' l Wahhab

125 Shaykh 'Umar

126 Mir Sayyid Muhammad Mir Adl. Vide No 140, p 485 and No 251, p 548

127 Mawlana Jamal

The Tabaqāt has a Mulla Jamal, a learned man of Multan. Badā'onī (III, 106) mentions a Mawlana Jamal of لاهور, which is said to be a Mahalla of Lahor.

128 Shaykh Ahmadi

Shaykh Ahmadi Fayyaz of Amethī, a learned man, contemporary of the saint Nizam' d Dīn of Amethī (p 607)

129 Shaykh Abd' l Ghani¹

He was born at Bada'on and lived afterwards in Dihli a retired life. The Khān Khanan visited him in 1003.

130 Shaykh 'Abd' l Wahid

¹ Sayyid Ahmad's edition of the Tuzuk (p 91 l 11 from below) mentions that Jahangir when a child read the Hadīs under ' Shaykh 'Abd' l Ghani whose fate is related in the Aḡbarnama. This is a mistake for 'Abd' n Nabī (No 118)

He was born in Bilgram, and is the author of a commentary to the Nuzhat 'l Arwāḥ, and several treatises on the technical terms (is'ulāhāt) of the Sufis, one of which goes by the name of Sanābil

131 Sadr i Jahān Vide No 194 p 522

132 Mawlana Isma'īl Vide above No 12

The Tabaqat mentions a Mulla Isma'īl Mufti of Lahor, and a Mulla Isma'īl of Awadh

133 Mulla Abū 'l Qadir

This is the historian Bada'onī Abū 'l Fazl also calls him Mullā in the Akbarnāma

134 Mawlana Sadr Jahān

This seems a repetition of No 131

135 Shaykh Jawhar

136 Shaykh Munawwar

Vide p 112 He was born at Lahor, and was noted for his memory and learning He is the author of commentaries to the Mashāriq 'l-anwār (Hadis), the Badī'at 'l-dayān, the Irshād i Qa'ī, etc When the learned were banished from court he was imprisoned in Gwaliyar, where he died in 1011

His son, Shaykh Kabir, was also renowned for his learning He died in 1026, in Ahmadabad, and was buried in the mausoleum of the great Ahmadabadi saint Shah 'Ālam Mir'āt

137 Qazi Ibrahim

Vide pp 181, 183 198 Baa'at onī and the Tabaqāt mention a Haji Ibrahim of Āgra, a teacher of the Hadis

138 Mawlana Jamal Vide above No 127

139 Bijai Sen Sur

140 Bhan Chand

A'in 30 (continued)

THE POETS OF THE AGE

I have now come to this distinguished class of men and think it right to say a few words about them Poets strike out a road to the inaccessible realm of thought, and divine grace beams forth in their genius But many of them do not recognize the high value of their talent, and barter it away from a wish to possess inferior store they pass their time in praising the mean minded or soil their language with invectives against the wise If it were not so the joining of words were wonderful indeed, for by this means lofty ideas are understood

He who joins words to words, gives away a drop from the blood of his heart ¹

Every one who strings words to words, performs, if no miracle, yet a wonderful action ²

I do not mean a mere external union. Truth and falsehood, wisdom and foolishness, pearls and common shells, though far distant from each other, have a superficial similarity. I mean a spiritual union, and this is only possible in the harmonious, and to recognize it is difficult, and to weigh it still more so.

For this reason his Majesty does not care for poets, he attaches no weight to a handful of imagination. Fools think that he does not care for poetry, and that for this reason he turns his heart from the poets. Notwithstanding this circumstance, thousands of poets are continually at court, and many among them have completed a dīwān, or have written a masnauī. I shall now enumerate the best among them.

1. Shaykh Abū 'l-Fayz-i Fayzī.

(Vide p 548)

He was a man of cheerful disposition, liberal, active, an early riser. He was a disciple of the emperor, and was thus at peace with the whole world. His Majesty understood the value of his genius, and conferred upon him the title of *Malik 'sh shu'arā or king of the poets ³. He wrote for nearly forty years under the name of Fayzī, which he afterwards, under divine inspiration, changed to Fayyūzī, as he himself says in his "Nal Daḡnan" —

Before this, whenever I issued anything,

The writing on my signet was "Fayzī."

But as I am now chastened by spiritual love,

I am the "Fayyāzī" of the Ocean of Superabundance (God's love) ⁴

His excellent manners and habits cast a lustre on his genius. He was

Both crapes

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

"a r

eminently distinguished in several branches. He composed many works in Persian and Arabic. Among others he wrote the Sauāti "ʾilhām" ("rays of inspiration"), which is a commentary to the Qurʾān in Arabic, in which he only employed such letters as have no dots. The words of the Sūrat "ʾilhlās" contain the date of its completion.

He looked upon wealth as the means of engendering poverty,³ and adversity of fortune was in his eyes an ornament to cheerfulness. The door of his house was open to relations and strangers, friends and foes, and the poor were comforted in his dwelling. As he was difficult to please, he gave no publicity to his works, and never put the hand of request to the forehead⁴ of loftiness. He cast no admiring glance on himself. Genius as he was, he did not care much for poetry, and did not frequent the society of wits. He was profound in philosophy, what he had read with his eyes was nourishment for the heart. He studied medicine deeply, and gave poor people advice gratis.

The gems of thought in his poems will never be forgotten. Should leisure permit, and my heart turn to worldly occupations, I would collect some of the excellent writings of this unrivalled author of the age, and gather, with the eye of a jealous critic, yet with the hand of a friend, some of his verses.⁵ But now it is brotherly love—a love which does

* uan etc. and possesses with the words Qul huwa rote the book two years Haydar Muṣammaʿ of

Foot note: ʾilhlās ʾilhlās. See below the 31st poet.

³ i.e. the more he had the more he gave away and thus he became poor or he
on. I feel that riches make a man poor in a spiritual sense.

⁴ Tawal, properly the crown of the head. Putting the hand upon the crown of the head is an old form of the salam. Abi ʾl-Faḡl wishes to say that Faḡl was never mean enough to do so.

leave

At a ʾilhlās

MS.

L. 14. r

f. Ma

ʾilhlās

Faḡl ʾilhlās

Many of the extracts given below are neither found in printed editions nor in MSS of Faḡl's works.

not travel along the road of critical nicety—that commands me to write down some of his verses

—

Extracts from Fayzī's Qasīdas (Odes)

1 O Thou who existest from eternity and abidest for ever, sight cannot bear Thy light praise cannot express Thy perfection

2 Thy light melts the understanding and Thy glory baffles wisdom, to think of Thee destroys reason Thy essence confounds thought

3 Thy holiness pronounces that the blood drops of human meditation are shed in vain in search of Thy knowledge human understanding is but an atom of dust

4 Thy jealousy, the guard of Thy door, stuns human thought by a blow in the face, and gives human ignorance a slap on the nape of the neck

5 Science is like blinding desert sand on the road to Thy perfection, the town of literature is a mere hamlet compared with the world of Thy knowledge

6 My foot has no power to travel on this path which misleads sages, I have no power to bear the odour of this wine it confounds my knowledge

7 The tablet of Thy holiness is too pure for the (black) tricklings of the human pen, the dross of human understanding is unfit to be used as the philosopher's stone

8 Man's so called foresight and guiding reason wander about bewildered in the streets of the city of Thy glory

9 Human knowledge and thought combined can only spell the first letter of the alphabet of Thy love

10 Whatever our tongue can say and our pen can write, of Thy Being is all empty sound and deceiving scribble

11 Mere beginners and such as are far advanced in knowledge are both eager for union with Thee but the beginners are tattlers, and those that are advanced are triflers

12 Each brain is full of the thought of grasping Thee the brow of Plato even burned with the fever heat of this hopeless thought

13 How shall a thoughtless man like me succeed when Thy jealousy strikes down with a fatal blow the thoughts¹ of saints?

14 O that Thy grace would cleanse my brain, for if not my restlessness (qatrub)² will end in madness

¹ Literally strikes a dagger into the livers of thy saints

² My text has frat but several MSS of Fayzī's Qasīdas have qatrub which signifies incipient madness restlessness of thought

15 For him who travels barefooted on the path towards Thy glory, even the mouths of dragons would be as it were a protection for his feet (lit greaves) ¹

16 Compared with Thy favour, the nine metals of earth are but as half a handful of dust, compared with the table of Thy mercies, the seven oceans are a bowl of broth

17 To bow down the head upon the dust of Thy threshold and then to look up is neither correct in faith nor permitted by truth

18 Alas, the stomach of my worldliness takes in impure food like a hungry dog, although Love, the doctor ² bade me abstain from it

1 O man, thou coin bearing the double stamp of body and spirit, I do not know what thy nature is, for thou art higher than heaven and lower than earth

2 Do not be cast down, because thou art a mixture of the four elements, do not be self complacent because thou art the mirror of the seven realms (the earth)

3 Thy frame contains the image of the heavenly and the lower regions be either heavenly or earthly, thou art at liberty to choose

4 Those that veil their faces in Heaven [the angels] love thee thou misguiding the wise, are the fond petted one of the solar system (lit the seven planets)

5 Be attentive, weigh thy coin for thou art a correct balance [i.e., thou hast the power of correctly knowing thyself], sift thy atoms well, for thou art the philosopher's stone (اکسیر اکبری)

6 Learn to understand thy value, for the heaven buys (mushṭarī) ³ thy light, in order to bestow it upon the planets

7 Do not act against thy reason, for it is a trustworthy counsellor, set not thy heart on illusions, for it (the heart) is a lying fool

8 Why art thou an enemy to thyself, that from want of perfection thou shouldst weary thy better nature and cherish thy senses (or tongue) ?

9 The heart of time sheds its blood on thy account [i.e., the world is dissatisfied with thee], for in thy hypocrisy thou art in speech like balm, but in deeds like a lancet

10 Be ashamed of thy appearance, for thou prides thyself on the title of "sum total", and art yet but a marginal note

¹ i.e. the terror of the mouths of dragons is even a protection compared with the difficulties on the road to the understanding of God's glory

² Literally Hippocrates

³ This is a pun. Mushṭarī also means Jupiter one of the planets

11 If such be the charm of thy being, thou hadst better die, for the eye of the world regards thee as an optical illusion (mularrar)

12 O careless man, why art thou so inattentive to thy loss and thy gain, thou sellest thy good luck and bargaineest for misfortune

13 If on this hunting ground thou wouldst but unfold the wing of resolution, thou wouldst be able to catch even the phoenix with sparrow feathers¹

14 Do not be proud (farbîh) because thou art the centre of the body of the world. Dost thou not know that people praise a waist (miyân) when it is thin?²

15 Thou oughtest to be ashamed of thyself when thou seest the doings of such as from zeal wander barefooted on the field of love, since thou ridest upon a swift camel [i.e., as thou hast not yet reached the higher degree of zeal, that is, of walking barefooted] thou shouldst not count thy steps [i.e., thou shouldst not be proud]

16 If thou wishest to understand the secret meaning of the phrase "to prefer the welfare of others to thy own", treat thyself with poison and others with sugar

17 Accept misfortune with a joyful look, if thou art in the service of Him whom people serve

18 Place thy face, with the humble mien of a beggar, upon the threshold of truth, looking with a smile of contempt upon worldly riches,—

19 Not with the (self complacent) smirk which thou assumest³ in private, whilst thy worldliness flies to the east and the west

20 Guard thine eye well, for like a nubile handed thief it takes by force the jewel out of the hand of the jeweller

21 Those who hold in their hand the lamp of guidance often plunder caravans on the high road

22 My dear son, consider how short the time is that the star of good fortune revolves according to thy wish, fate shows no friendship

23⁴ There is no one that understands me for were I understood,

¹ i.e. thou wouldst perform great deeds

² Proud in Persian farbîh i.e. fat. In the East the idea of pride is suggested by stoutness and portliness. The Pun on farbîh and miyân cannot be translated

³ As a hypocrite does

⁴ The next verses are falkriya (boastful). All Persian poets write epigrams on themselves.

I would continually cleave my heart and draw from it the wonderful mirrors of Alexander

24 My heart is the world, and its Hindūstan is initiated in the rites of idolatry and the rules of idol making [i e , my heart contains wonderful things]

25 This [poem] is the masterpiece of the Greece of my mind read it again and again , its strain is not easy

26 Plunged into the wisdom of Greece, it [my mind] rose again from the deep in the land of Hind , be thou as if thou hadst fallen into this deep abyss [of my knowledge, i e , learn from me]

1 The companion of my loneliness is my comprehensive genius the scratching of my pen is harmony for my ear

2 If people would withdraw the veil from the face of my knowledge they would find that what those who are far advanced in knowledge call certainty, is with me (as it were) the faintest dawn of thought

3 If people would take the screen from the eye of my knowledge, they would find that what is revelation (ecstatic knowledge) for the wise is but drunken madness for me

4 If I were to bring forth what is in my mind I wonder whether the spirit of the age could bear it

5 On account of the regulated condition of my mind, I look upon myself as the system of the universe, and heaven and earth are the result of my motion and my rest

6 My vessel does not require the wine of the friendship of time , my own blood is the basis of the wine of my enthusiasm [i e I require no one's assistance]

7 Why should I wish for the adulation of mean people ? My pen bows down its head and performs the ujda in adoration of my knowledge

Extracts from Kay V's Ghazals

1 Rise and ask, in this auspicious moment, a favour at my throne , in noble aspirations I excel any army

2 Expect in my arena the victory of both worlds , the banner of royalty weighs down the shoulder of my love

3 When I cast a favourable glance upon those that sit in the dust, even the ant from my good fortune becomes possessed of the brain of Sulayman †

† The insignificant of the ant is often opposed to the greatness of Sulayman. Once when all at it was brought Solomon the creature presents the ant off red him the leg of a locust as her only treasure

4 The keepers of my door have their swords drawn, where is the desire that dares intrude on my seclusion ?

5 Although I have buried my head in my hood, yet I can see both worlds, it may be that Love has woven my garment from the threads of my contemplation

6 My eye is open and waits for the manifestation of truth, the spirit of the Universe flees before the insignias of my ecstatic bewilderment

7 I am the simple Fayzi, if you do not believe it, look into my heart through the glass of my external form

1 The flame from my broken heart rises upwards, to-day a fiery surge rages in my breast

2 In the beginning of things, each being received the slate of learning [i e, it is the appointed duty of each to learn something], but Love has learned something from looking at me, the duties of a handmaid

3 May the eye of him who betrays a word regarding my broken heart be filled with the blood of his own heart !

4 O Fayzi thou dost not possess what people call gold, but yet the alchemist knows how to extract gold from thy pale cheek

It were better if I melted my heart, and laid the foundation for a new one I have too often patiently patched up my torn heart

1 From the time that love stepped into my heart, nothing has oozed from my veins and my wounds but the beloved ¹

2 The wings of angels have melted in the heat of my wine Woe to the world, if a flash of lightning should some day leap from my jar [i e, the world would come to an end, if the secret of my love were disclosed] !

¹ The beloved has taken entire possession of the poet. He has no blood left in him, for blood is the seat of life and he only lives in the beloved who has taken the place of his blood. The close union of the lover and the beloved is well described in the following couplet by Khushraw —

من تو شدم من من شدم
 من من شدم تو جان شدم
 ما کس نگردد بعد از من
 من دنگرم تو دنگرم

1 Two difficulties have befallen me on the path of love , I am accused of bloodshed, but it is the beloved who is the murderer

2 O travellers on the right road, do not leave me behind ! I see far, and my eye spies the resting place

I walk on a path [the path of love], where every footstep is concealed , I speak in a place where every sigh is concealed ¹

Although life far from thee is an approach to death yet to stand at a distance is a sign of politeness

1 In this world there are sweethearts who mix salt with wine, and yet they are intoxicated

2 The nightingale vainly pretends to be a true lover , the birds on the meadow melt away in love and are yet silent ²

1 My travelling companions say, " O friend, be watchful , for caravans are attacked suddenly "

2 I answer, " I am not careless, but alas ! what help is there against robbers that attack a watchful heart ? "

3 A serene countenance and a vacant mind are required, when thou art stricken by fate with stripes from God's hand ³

1 The cupbearers have laid hold of the goblet of clear wine , they made Khizr thirst for this fiery fountain

2 What wine could it have been that the cupbearer poured into the goblet ? Even Masih and Khizr are envious (of me) and struggle with each other to possess it ⁴

¹ A sigh and cates that a man is in love hence if the sigh is a stranger [i.e. does not appear] the love will remain a secret Eastern poets frequently say that love loses its purity and value if it becomes known The true lover bears the pangs of love and is of providence

⁴ Masih (the "Messianic") and Khizr (Elias) tasted the water of life (dû s kuydi) Wine also is a water of life and the wine given to the poet by the pretty boy who acts as cupbearer is so reviving that even Masih and Khizr would fight for it

Ask not to know the components of the antidote against love they put fragments of diamonds into a deadly poison ¹

For me there is no difference between the ocean (of love) and the shore (of safety), the water of life (love) is for me the same as a dreadful poison

Fayzi have not quite left the caravan of the pilgrims, who go to the Ka'ba indeed, I am a step in advance of them ²

1 How can I complain that my travelling companions have left me behind, since they travel along with Love, the caravan chief ?

2 O that a thousand deserts were full of such unkind friends ! They have cleared the howdah of my heart of its burden ³

1 I am the man in whose ear melodies attain their perfection, in whose mouth wine obtains its proper temper

2 I show no inclination to be beside myself, but what shall I do,
I feel annoyed to be myself

1 Do not ask how lovers have reached the heavens, for they place the foot on the battlement of the heart and leap upwards

2 Call together all in the universe that are anxious to see a sight they have erected triumphal arches with my heart blood in the town of Beauty

1 Those who have not closed the door on existence and non existence reap no advantage from the calm of this world and the world to come

2 Break the spell which guards thy treasures, for men who really know what good luck is have never tried their good fortune with golden chains ⁴

¹ Vide p 573 note 4 Fragments of diamonds when swallowed tear the liver and thus cause death Hence poison mixed with diamond dust is a ro to y ¹¹ This is the case with arava

to console himself
- ill-concealed, for he finds rest in

The bright sun knows the black drops of my pen for I have carried my book (baya) to the white dawn of morn¹

O Fayzı is there anyone in this world that possesses more patience and strength than he who can twice walk down his street?²

Desires are not to be found within my dwelling place when thou comest come with a content heart

Renounce love for love is an affair which cannot be satisfactorily terminated Neither fate nor the beloved will ever submit to thy wishes

1 Come let us turn towards a pulpit of light let us lay the foundation of a new Ka'ba with stones from Mount Sinai¹

2 The wall (hafi'm) of the Ka'ba is broken and the basis of the qibla is gone let us build a faultless fortress on a new foundation¹³

1 Where is Love that we might melt the ham of the door of the Ka'ba in order to make a few idols for the sake of worship

2 We might throw down this Ka'ba which Hajjaj has erected in order to raise a foundation for a (Christian) monastery⁴

1 How long shall I fetter my heart with the coquettishness of beautiful boys? I will burn this heart and make a new another heart

2 O Fayzı thy hand is empty and the way of love lies before thee then pawn the only thing that is left thee thy poems for the sake of obtaining the two worlds

How can I approve of the blame which certain people attach to

¹ Observe the pun in the text on aswad bayd; and masawada

² The street where the lovely boy lives Can anyone walk in the street of love without losing his patience?

³ If the Ka'ba (the temple of Makkah) were pulled down, Islām would be pulled down for Muhammadans would have no qibla left i.e., no place where to turn the face in prayer

⁴ When a man is in love he loses his faith and becomes a kafir. Thus Khusrāw says—Kāfir, ʿaḥqam marā muḥalimāf dār-kār nīst etc. I am in love and have become an infidel—what do I want with Islām? So Fayzı is in love and has turned such an infidel, hat he would make holy furniture into idols or build a cloister on the ground of the holy temple Zulaykha? It would have been well if the backbiting tongues of her slanderers had been cut instead of their hands¹

I cannot show ungratefulness to Love Has he not overwhelmed me with—sadness and sadness?

I cannot understand the juggler trick which love performed it introduced Thy form through an aperture so small as the pupil of my eye into the large space of my heart, and yet my heart cannot contain it

Flee, fate is the raiser of battle fields, the behaviour of the companions is in the spirit of (the proverb) "hold it (the jug) oblique, but do not spill (the contents)"²

My intention is not to leave my comrades behind What shall I do with those whose feet are wounded whilst the caravan travels fast onwards?

This night thou tookest no notice of me, and didst pass by Thou receivedst no blessing from my eyes and didst pass by
The tears, which would have caused thy hyacinths to bloom, Thou didst not accept from my moistened eye, but didst pass by

1 On the field of desire, a man need not fear animals wild or tame in this path thy misfortunes arise from thyself

2 O Love, am I permitted to take the banner of thy grandeur from off the shoulder of heaven, and put it on my own?

1 O Fayzi, I am so high minded that fate finds the arm of my thought leaning against the thigh of the seventh heaven

¹ When Zulaykha wife of Potiphar had fallen in love with Yusuf (Joseph) she became the talk of the whole town To take revenge she invited the women who had spoken ill of her to a feast and laid a sharp knife at the side of each plate While the women were friends they merely give you useless advice

² You may hold (the jug) crooked but do not spill (the contents) is a proverb and expressed that A allows B to do what he wishes to do but adds a condition which B cannot fulfil The friends tell Fayzi that he may fall in love but they will not let him have the boy

2 If other poets [as the ancient Arabians] hung their poems on the door of the temple of Makkah, I will hang my love story on the vault of heaven

1 O cupbearer Time, cease doing battle! Akbar's glorious reign rolls along, bring me a cup of wine

2 Not such wine as drives away wisdom, and makes fools of those who command respect, as is done by fate,

3 Nor the harsh wine which fans in the conceited brain the fire of foolhardiness on the field of battle,

4 Nor that shameless wine which cruelly and haughtily delivers reason over to the Turk of passion,

5 Nor that fiery wine the heat of which, as love-drunken eyes well know, melts the bottles (the hearts of men) —

6 But that unmixed wine the hidden power of which makes Fate repent her juggling tricks (i.e., which makes man so strong, that he vanquishes fate),

7 That clear wine with which those who constantly worship in cloisters sanctify the garb of the heart,

8 That illuminating wine which shows lovers of the world the true path,

9 That pearly wine which cleanses the contemplative mind of fanciful thoughts

In the assembly of the day of resurrection, when past things shall be forgiven, the sins of the Ka'ba will be forgiven for the sake of the dust of Christian churches¹

1 Behold the garb of Fayzi's magnanimity! Angels have mended its hem with pieces of the heaven

2 The most wonderful thing I have seen is Fayzi's heart: it is at once the pearl, the ocean, and the diver

The look of the beloved has done to Fayzi what no mortal enemy would have done

¹ The sins of Islām are as worthless as the dust of Christianity. On the day of resurrection both Muhammadans and Christians will see the vanity of their religious doctrines. Men fight about religion on earth, in heaven they shall find out that there is only one true religion, the worship of God's Spirit

1 The travellers who go in search of love are on reaching it no longer alive in their howdas , unless they die, they never reach the shore of this ocean (love)

2 Walk on, Fayzī, urge on through this desert the camel of zeal , for those who yearn for their homes [earthly goods] never reach the sacred enclosure, the heart

The dusty travellers on the road to poverty seem to have attained nothing , is it perhaps because they have found there [in their poverty] a precious jewel ?

1 In the beginning of eternity some love glances formed mirrors, which reduced my heart and my eye to a molten state [i e , my heart and eye are pure like mirrors]

2 What attractions lie in the curls of idols, that the inhabitants of the two worlds [i e many people] have turned their face [from ideal] to terrestrial love ?

3 If a heart goes astray from the company of lovers, do not inquire after it , for whatever is taken away from this caravan, has always been brought back [i e , the heart for a time did without love, but sooner or later it will come back and love]

It is not patience that keeps back my hand from my collar , but the collar is already so much torn, that you could not tear it more ¹

1 If Laylī ² had had no desire to be with Majnūn, why did she uselessly ride about on a camel ?

2 If anyone prevents me from worshipping idols, why does he circumambulate the gates and walls in the Haram [the temple of Makkah] ? ³

3 Love has robbed Fayzī of his patience, his understanding, and his sense , behold, what this highway robber has done to me the caravan chief !

When Love reaches the emporium of madness, he builds in the desert triumphal arches with the shifting sands

¹ A lover has no patience hence he tears the collar of his coat

² Each man shows in his own peculiar way that he is in love Laylī rode about in a restless way some people show their love in undergoing the fatigues of a pilgrim going to Makkah I worship idols

1 Take the news to the old man of the tavern on the eve of the 'Id,¹ and tell him that I shall settle to night the wrongs² of the last thirty days

2 Take Fayzī's Diwān to bear witness to the wonderful speeches of a free thinker who belongs to a thousand sects

1 I have become dust, but from the odour of my grave people shall know that man rises from uch³ 'ist

2 They may know Fayzī's² end from his beginning without an equal he goes from the world, and without an equal he rises

O Love, do not destroy the Ka'ba, for there the weary travellers of the road sometimes rest for a moment

Extracts from the Rubā'ī

He [Akbar] is a king whom, on account of his wisdom, we call zūf unūn [possessor of the sciences] and our guide on the path of religion

Although kings are the shadow of God on earth, he is the emanation of God's light How then can we call him a shadow?⁴

He is a king who opens at night the door of bliss, who shows the road at night to those who are in darkness

Who even by day once beholds his face, sees at night the sun rising in his dream

If you wish to see the path of guidance as I have done, you will never see it without having seen the king

¹ The 'id¹ is ifitr or feast after the thirty days of fasting in the month Ramaḥān Fayzī like a bad Muhammadan has not fasted and now intends to drink wine (which is forbidden) and thus make up for his neglect

² Done by me by not having fasted.

³ Fayzī means the heart

⁴ A similar verse is ascribed by the author of the Misr 'at L'Ālam to the poet Yahya 'Kashan who during the reign of Shāhjahān was occupied with a poetical paraphrase of the Pādishāhnama

گری شریک حوائص ای ساد دین روایت
 زمین کسے حاصم بدلل و تاپه نسب
 نه سائے عبادتی و اس معمر آفتاب
 روشن بود که هیچ بکے را نور سانه نیست

If I call thee a king of Islām one without equal it is but right
 I require neither proof nor verse for this statement
 Thou art the shadow of God and like daylight,
 It is clear that no one has two shadows

Thy old fashioned prostration is of no advantage to thee—see Akbar, and you see God ¹

O king give me at night the lamp of hope, bestow upon my taper the everlasting ray!

Of the light which illuminates the eye of Thy heart,² give me an atom, by the light of the sun ¹

No friend has ever come from the unseen world, from the caravan of non-existence no voice has ever come

The heaven is the bell from which the seven metals come, and yet no sound has ever come from it notwithstanding its hammers ²

In polite society they are silent, in secret conversation they are screened from the public view

When you come to the thoroughfare of Love do not raise dust, for there they are all surma sellers ⁴

Those are full of the divine who speak joyfully and draw clear wine without goblet and jar

Do not ask them for the ornaments of science and learning, for they are people who have thrown fire on the book ⁵

O Fayzi, go a few steps beyond thyself, go from thyself to the door, and place thy furniture before the door ⁶

Shut upon thyself the folding door of the eye, and then put on it two hundred locks of eyelashes

O Fayzi, the time of old age has come, look where thou settest thy feet If thou putttest thy foot away from thy eyelashes, put it carefully

¹ This is a strong apotheosis and reminds one of similar expressions used by the poets of imperial Rome

² Yar me ma me e' yaf' amed yaf' am' Conf' J. - VII 1 23. U 12. D. 12. 12.

³ Yar me ma me e' yaf' amed yaf' am' Conf' J. - VII 1 23. U 12. D. 12. 12.

⁴ Yar me ma me e' yaf' amed yaf' am' Conf' J. - VII 1 23. U 12. D. 12. 12.

⁵ Yar me ma me e' yaf' amed yaf' am' Conf' J. - VII 1 23. U 12. D. 12. 12.

⁶ Yar me ma me e' yaf' amed yaf' am' Conf' J. - VII 1 23. U 12. D. 12. 12.

A pair of glass spectacles avails nothing, nothing Cut off a piece from thy heart,¹ and put it on thine eye

A sigh is a zephyr from the hyacinth bed of speech, and this zephyr has spread a throne for the lord of speech

I sit upon this throne as the Sulayman of speech, hear me speaking the language of birds²

O Lover, whose desolate heart grief will not leave, the fever heat will not leave the body, as long as the heart remains!

A lover possesses the property of quicksilver, which does not lose its restlessness till it is *kushta*³

O Fayzi, open the ear of the heart and the eye of sense, remove thy eye and ear from worldly affairs

Behold the wonderful change of time, and close thy lip, listen to the enchanter Time and shut thy eye

What harm can befall me, even if the ranks of my enemies attack me? They only strike a blow on the ocean with a handful of dust

I am like a naked sword in the hand of fate he is killed that throws himself on me

To-day I am at once both clear wine and dregs, I am hell paradise, and purgatory

Any thing more wonderful than myself does not exist, for I am at once the ocean, the jewel, and the merchant

Before I and thou were thought of, our free will was taken from our hands

Be without cares, for the maker of both worlds settled our affairs long before I and thou were made

He held the office of a magistrate⁴ and turned to poetry He made himself widely known His manners were simple and pure

¹ For thy heart is pure and transparent

² Solomon understood the language of the birds

³ Kushta pr killed is prepared quicksilver as used for looking glasses The lover must die before he can find rest

⁴ My text has arbāb Arbāb is the plural of rabb and is used in Persian as a singular in the sense of kalāntar or rish-safid the head man of a place Germ. Amtmann, hence arbāb the office of a magistrate

2 Khawaja Husayn Sana'î of Mashhad ¹

1 My speech is the morning of sincere men, my tongue is the sword of the morning of words

2 It is clear from my words that the *Ruh*² 'l-quds is the nurse of the Maryam of my hand [composition] ³

3 It is sufficient that my pen has made my meanings fine, a single dot of my pen is my world

4 In short words exist in this world of brief duration, and my words are taken from them

5 No one on the day of resurrection will get hold of my garment except passion, which numbers among those whom I have slain

When thou goest out to mingle in society at evening the last ray of the sun lingers on thy door and thy walls, in order to see thee

1 In the manner of beauty and coquetry many fine things are to be seen (as for example) cruel ogling and tyrannical flirting

2 If I hold up a mirror to this strange idol his own figure does not appear to his eye as something known to him ³

3 If for example, thou sittest behind a looking glass, a person standing before it would see his own face with the head turned backwards ⁴

4 If, for example an ear of corn was to receive its water according to an agreement made with thee [O miser] no more grain would ever be crushed in the hole of a mill

1 A sorrow which reminds lovers of the conversation of the beloved is for them the same as sweet medicine

¹ The q sh 2 sh n 3 4 5

² روح القدس 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 49 50 51 52 53 54 55 56 57 58 59 60 61 62 63 64 65 66 67 68 69 70 71 72 73 74 75 76 77 78 79 80 81 82 83 84 85 86 87 88 89 90 91 92 93 94 95 96 97 98 99 100

³ This verse is unintelligible to me

2 I exposed the prey of my heart to death, but the huntsman has given me the quarter on account of my leanness and let me run away ¹

3 If lovers slept with the beloved till the morning of resurrection, the morning breeze would cause them to feel the pain of an arrow ²

O sober friends now is the time to tear the collar, but who will raise my hand to my collar? ³

The messenger Desire comes again running saying ⁴

It is incumbent upon lovers to hand over to their hearts those (cruel) words which the beloved (boy) took from his heart and put upon his tongue

When my foot takes me to the Ka'ba expect to find me in an idol temple, for my foot goes backwards, and my goal is an illusion

1 The spheres of the nine heavens cannot contain an atom of the love grief which Sana'î's dust scatters to the winds

2 Like the sun of the heaven thou livest for all ages every eye knows thee as well as it knows what sleep is

3 Huznî of Ispahan

He was an inquiring man of a philosophical turn of mind and well acquainted with ancient poetry and chronology He was free and easy and good hearted, friendliness was stamped upon his forehead ⁵

1 I search my heart all round to look for a quiet place—and gracious God! if I do not find sorrow, I find desires

2 Zulaykhâ stood on the flowerbed, and yet she said in her grief that it reminded her of the prison in which a certain ornament of society [Xusuf] dwelled

3 I am in despair on thy account and yet what shall I do with love? for between me and it (love) stands (unfulfilled) desire

¹ Or we may hun
[Th

note
⁴ The

1
(i
Ha

Gabriel's wing would droop, if he had to fly along the road of love, this message (love) does not travel as if on a zephyr

Whether a man be an Ayāz or a Mahmūd, here (in love) he is a slave; for love ties with the same string the foot of the slave and the freeman¹

1 Last night my moist eye caught fire from the warmth of my heart, the lamp of my heart was burning until morning, to show you the way to me

2 The power of thy beauty became perfectly known to me, when its fire fell on my heart and consumed me unknown to myself

O Huznī I sometimes smile at thy simplicity thou hast become a lover, and yet expectest faithfulness from the beloved

Don't cast loving eyes at me for I am a withered feeble plant, which cannot bear the full radiance of the life consuming sun [of thy beauty]

Alas! when I throw myself on the fire, the obstinate beloved has nothing else to say but "Huznī, what is smoke like?"

I hear, Huznī, that thou art anxious to be freed from love's fetters Heartless wretch, be off, what dost thou know of the value of such a captivity!

To day, like every other day, the simple minded Huznī was content with thy false promises, and had to go

4 Qasim i Kahī²

He is known as Miyan Kali He knew something of the ordinary sciences and lived quiet and content He rarely mixed with people in high position On account of his generous disposition, a few low men had gathered round him for which reason well meaning people who did not know the circumstances, often upbraided him Partly from his

¹ Ayāz was a slave of Mahmūd of Ghāznī and is proverbial in the East for faithfulness
There are several Maqāmāt on this subject

² Kahī " . . . and the ideas . . .
read in the ex . . .
the name of . . .
victed seven . . .
But he was a . . .
and solomites . . .

own love of independence, partly from the indulgence of his Majesty, he counted himself among the disciples and often foretold future events.

A low minded man must be he who can lift up his hand for terrestrial goods in prayer to God's throne

If lovers counted the hours spent in silent grief, their lives would appear to them longer than that of Khizr ¹

Wherever thou goest, I follow thee like a shadow, perhaps, in course of time, thou wilt by degrees cast a kind glance at me ²

1 When I saw even elephants attached to my beloved, I spent the coin of my life on the road of the elephant

.....

where you set the foot, withdraw from society, travel when you are at home He was liberal to a fault and squandered what he got For an ode in praise of Akbar in every

بارخ و ناله مال و ماهی حشمت گفتا قوم از ماه روسته اناسی gives 2nd Rabi' II 978 unless we read قوم for موم Mawlānā Qasim of Bukhāra a pupil of Kāhī expressed the tariqah by the words روسته به نام کاهی

"Mulla Qasim: Kāhī died which gives 988 Vide also Iqbāl-nāma yī Jahāngīrī, p 6, and above p 219

..... M rankāl (vide p 615) is the name of the hills

.....

2 Wherever I go I, like the elephant, throw dust on my head, unless I see my guide above my head

3 The elephant taming king is Jalal^u 'd Din Muhammad Akbar, he who bestows golden elephants upon his poets

1 O friend, whose tongue speaks of knowledge divine, and whose heart ever withdraws the veil from the light of truth,

2 Never cherish a thought of which thou oughtest to be ashamed, never utter a word for which thou wouldst have to ask God a pardon

5 Ghazālī of Mashhad¹

He was unrivalled in depth of understanding and sweetness of language, and was well acquainted with the noble thoughts of the Sūfis

I heard a noise and started from a deep sleep, and stared—the awful night had not yet passed away—I fell again asleep²

Beauty leads to fame, and love to wretchedness Why then do you speak of the cruelties of the sweetheart and the faults of the miserable lover?

Since either acceptance or exclusion awaits all in the world to come, take care not to blame anyone, for this is blameworthy sixteen books contain 4 (XX) verses and 1 (L) ...

¹ Ḥaṣṣat al-Ḥaṣṣa ...

The Ḥaṣṣat ...

² This is to be understood in a mystic sense. Ḥaṣṣat ... (III 171) says that he had not found this verse in Ḥaṣṣat's Diwan.

1 O Ghazali, I shun a friend who pronounces my actions to be good, though they are bad

2 I like a simple friend, who holds my faults like a looking glass before my face

1 In love no rank, no reputation, no science, no wisdom no genealogical tree is required

2 For such a thing as love is, a man must possess something peculiar the sweetheart is jealous—he must possess decorum

1 The king says, "My cash is my treasure" The Sufi says, ' My tattered garment is my woollen stuff "

2 The lover says, "My grief is my old friend" I and my heart alone know what is within my breast

1 If thy heart, whilst in the Ka'ba, wanders after something else, thy worship is wicked, and the Ka'ba is lowered to a cloister

2 And if thy heart rests in God, whilst thou art in a tavern, thou mayest drink wine, and yet be blessed in the life to come

6 'Urfi of Shiraz¹

The forehead of his diction shines with decorum, and possesses a peculiar grace Self admiration led him to vanity, and made him speak lightly of the older classics The bud of his merits withered away before it could develop itself

¹ The MSS. of the Diwan of 'Urfi (No. 537) says that 'Urfi's name was not recognized he therefore went to Fathpur Sikri where Hakim 'Abdu'l-Fath of Gilan (No. 112) took an interest in him When the Hakim died 'Urfi became an attendant on 'Abdu'r-Rahim Khan Khanan and was also introduced at court He died at Lahor in Shawwal A.H. 999 according to the Haft Iqlim and several MSS. of the مرفی جوانہ مرگ سندی

The first edition of his poetical works contained 26

Cling to the hem of a heart which saddens at the plaintive voice of the nightingale, for that heart knows something

If someone cast a doubt on the loftiness of the cypress, I melt away from envy, for loftiness is so desirable that even a doubtful mention of it creates envy

He who is intimate with the morning zephyr, knows that the scent of the Jasmin remains notwithstanding the appearance of chill autumn

My wounded heart cannot endure a healing balm, my turban's fold cannot endure the shadow of a blooming rose

1 It is incumbent on me, when in society, to talk low, for the sensible people in society are stupid, and I speak but Arabic

2 Remain within the boundary of thy ignorance, unless you be a Plato, an intermediate position is mirage and raving thirst

Do not say that those who sing of love are silent, their song is too fine, and the audience have cotton in their ears

The more I exert myself, the more I come into trouble, if I am calm, the ocean's centre is at the shore

There is some hope that people will pardon the strange ways of ṢUrfī for the homeliness of his well known poems his jagir in getting copies made of his verses but yet no one had a copy of them unless if was a present made by ṢUrfī wrong in the dates

There exist several lithographs of ṢUrfī's Odes. The Calcutta printed edition of A.H. 1254 contains a Commentary by Ahmad ibn al-ṢAbdī al-Rahīm (author of the Arabic Dictionary Muntahā al-ʿArab) of Ṣafipur

No one has yet come into the world that can bear the grief of love , for every one has through love lost the colour of his face and turned pale

O ʿUrfī, live with good and wicked men in such a manner, that Muhammadans may wash thee (after thy death) in Zamzam water, and Hindūs may burn thee

If thou wishest to see thy faults clearly, lie for a moment in ambush for thyself, as if thou didst not know thyself

ʿUrfī has done well to stand quietly before a closed door, which no one would open He did not knock at another door

To pine for the arrival of young spring shows narrowness of mind in me , for there are hundreds of pleasures on the heap of rubbish in the backyard, which are not met with in a rose garden

My heart is sinking as the colour on Zalykhā's cheek when she saw herself alone , and my grief has become the talk of the market like the suspicion cast on Yūsuf

1 On the day when all shall give an account of their deeds, and when the virtues of both Shaykh and Brāhman shall be scrutinized,

2 Not a grain shall be taken of that which thou hast reaped, but a harvest shall be demanded of that which thou hast not sown

1 O thou who hast experienced happiness and trouble from good and bad events and who art in consequence full of thanks and sometimes full of complaints,

2 Do not take high ground, so that thy efforts may not be in vain , be rather (yielding) like grass that stands in the way of the wind, or like a bundle of grass which others carry off on their shoulders

1 O ʿUrfī, for what reason is thy heart so joyful ? Is it for the few verses which thou hast left behind ?

2 Alas ! thou lovest even that which thou leavest behind as something once belonging to thee Thou oughtest to have taken it with thee , but hast thou taken it with thee ?

7 Mayh of Hirat

His name was Mirza Qul¹ He was of Turkish extraction and lived in the society of gay people

Since I have become famous through my love, I shun all whom I see, for I am afraid lest my going to anyone might put thee into us thoughts

I die and feel pity for such as remain alive, for thou art accustomed to commit such cruelties as thou hast done to me

1 My heart derived so much pleasure from seeing thee, that fate—God forbid, that it should think of revenge

2 Thou art neither a friend nor a stranger to me, what name is man to give to such a relation?

Thou knowest that love to thee does not pass away with the lives of thy lovers for thou passest by the tombs of those whom thy love slew and yet thou behavest coquettishly

When thou biddest me go cast one glance upon me, for from carefulness people tie a string to the foot of a bird, even if it be so tame as to eat from the hand

My last breath is at hand! O enemy, let me have him (the lovely boy) but for a moment so that with thousands of pangs I may restore him to thee

1 I promised myself that I would be patient and did not go to him (the boy) I had hopes to be content with loneliness

2 But the woe of separation kills me and whispers every moment to me ' This is the punishment of him who puts confidence in his patience

¹ The Nalâkîh

He is much praised for his poetry the author of the Atashkade says that he was one of his favourite poets

1 Thy clients have no cause to ask thee for anything for every one of them has from a beggar become a Cræsus in wealth

2 But thou findest such a pleasure in granting the prayers of beggars that they make requests to thee by way of flattery

8 Ja'far Beg of Qazwīr

He is a man of profound thought has learnt a good deal and describes very well the events of past ages As an accountant he is unrivalled From his knowledge of human nature he leans to mirth and is fond of jokes I've was so fortunate to obtain the title of Āsaf Khan and was admitted as a disciple of his Majesty ¹

I am jealous of the zephyr but I gladden my heart with the thought that this is a rose garden and no one can close the door in the face of the wind

When the town could not contain the sorrows of my heart I thought that the open country was created for my heart

I am prepared for another interview to night for I have patched up my torn torn heart

It is the fault of my love that he [the lovely boy] is an enemy What is love worth if it makes no impression ?

I admire the insight of my heart for its familiarity with beauties whose ways are so strange

He came and made me confused but he did not remain long enough for me to introduce my heart to consolation

As I am entirely at fault do not threaten me with revenge for the pleasure of taking revenge on thee makes me bold my fault defiance

1 Dost thou show me thy face so boldly Happiness ? Wait a moment that I may announce my love-grief

¹ His biography was given above No 98 I do also Iqbalnama-yi Jahangir as may be seen from Abu l Fazl's extracts Sprenger (Catalogue p 444) may belong to the above p 403 and Sprenger loc cit p 120

2 Ja'far came to day so broken hearted to thy house, that the hearts of the stones burnt on seeing his extraordinary condition

1 Whoever has been in thy company for a night, is the companion of my sad fate

2 Ja'far has found the road to the street of the sweetheart so difficult, that he can no more rise to his feet

The morning acphyr, I think, wafts to me the scent of a certain sweetheart, because Jacob keeps his closed eye turned towards a caravan¹

A new rose must have opened out in the garden, for last night the nightingale did not go asleep till the morning

9 Khwāja Husayn of Marw²

He possessed many excellent qualities, and sold his encomiums at a high price. He lived at the Court of Humāyūn, and was also during this reign highly favoured

1 The realms of speech are in my possession, the banker of speech is the jeweller of my pearl strings

2 Creation's preface is a sheet of my book, the secrets of both worlds are in the nib of my pen

10 Hayātī of Gilān³

A stream from the ocean of thought passes by his house, correctness and equity are visible on his forehead. Serenity and truth are in him united, he is free from the bad qualities of poets

¹ Jacob had become blind from weeping over the loss of Joseph. One day he smelled the scent of Joseph's coat, which a messenger was bringing to Egypt. When the coat was

1 Whenever you speak watch yourself repentance follows every word which gladdens no heart

2 You do not require the swift wing of a bird, but since fortune is so borrow the foot of the ant and flee

A love-sick man is so entangled in his grief that even the wish of getting rid of it does him harm

Whatever you see is in some way or other a highway robber I know no man that has not been waylaid

1 This is the thoroughfare of love it is no open market keep your lips closed no talk is required

2 I too have been among the heathens but have seen no waist worthy of the sacred thread

3 Covetous people are from covetousness each others enemies, in friendship alone there are no rivals

1 Let every thorn which people sow in thy road bloom in the lustrance of thy smiles

2 Say nothing and heal the wound of the heart with poisoned arrows

1 My love makes me delay over everything even if it were a scent in the house or a colour in the bazaar

2 Thou knowest what people call me— mad from shame and dejected from baseness

Since everything which I mended has broken again my heart has gone altogether from trying to patch it

1 I suffer thy cruelties and die, perhaps I thus complete my faithfulness.

2 Thou canst not deprive me of the means of union with thee unless thou shuttest the zephyr in a box.¹

This turf and this field have a tinge of madness, insanity and drunken
 1 e have to-day a good omen

¹ Because the zephyr waits the breath of the beloved boy to the poet

1 Love-grief is followed by an increase of sorrow, the desire to meet him is followed by bloody tears

2 Neither the one nor the other, however, is the means of attaining love's perfection, be sound in mind, or else completely mad.

1 I am neither as high as the Pleiades, nor as low as the abyss; I neither cherish the old grief, nor do I possess a new thought

2 If I am not the wailing nightingale, there is yet this excellence left, I am the moth and am pledged to the flame.¹

1 I am the heart-grief of my dark nights, I am the misfortune of the day of my fate

2 Perhaps I may go a step back to myself, it is a long time that I have been waiting for myself

11 Shikebi of Ispahān

He possesses taste and writes well. He is acquainted with chronology and the ordinary sciences, and the purity of his nature led him to philosophical independence.²

I have lived through nights of lonely sorrow, and am still alive; I had no idea of the tenaciousness of my life

ما سغان کشگان معشوقه
بر ساد ر کشگان آوار

The lovers are I and she gave him 18 000 or according to the Haft Iqlis 10 000 rупes as a present. He wrote several other poems in praise of his patron. The Mi'asir-i-Umara mentions a Misnawi on the conquest of Thatta (A. H. 973 1000) for which Jani Beg and 'Abd-ur-Rahim gave him one thousand Ashrafi. I do not know whether this Misnawi is the same as the Misnawi written by Shikebi in the Khusrāw Shurūn etc. [The As. Soc. of Bengal has a Ms. of the Kulliyat-i-Sana'i in Shikebi's hand-writing.—B.]

Grief, not mirth, is my ware Why dost thou wish to know its price ?
I know that thou wilt not buy it, and that I shall not sell it

On account of the jealousy of the watcher I had resolved to stay away from thy feast I was deceived by my bad luck and called it jealousy, and stayed away

O God, bestow upon my wares a market from the unseen world ! I would sell my heart for a single interview, vouchsafe a buyer !

Thou art warm with my love, and in order to keep off bad omens,
I sit over the fire, and burn myself as wild rue ¹

I uprooted my heart from my being, but the burden of my heart did not leave my being I severed my head from my body, but my shoulders did not leave my collar

1 To day, when the cup of union with thee is full to the brim I see Neglect sharpen the sword, in order to kill me

2 Thou dost not dwell in my heart and hast girded thy loins with hatred towards me—ruin upon the house which raises enemies !

1 The plaintive song of my bird [heart] turns the cage to a rosebed, the sigh of the heart in which thou art, turns to a rosebed

2 When thy beauty shines forth covetousness also is love, straw, when going up in flames, turns to a rosebed

1 Happy are we if we come to thee, through thee, like blind men we search for thee, through thee

2 Increase thy cruelties till the tenaciousness of my life takes revenge on me, and thy cold heart on thee

1 The world is a game, the winning of which is a loss, playing cleverly consists in being satisfied with a low throw

2 This earthly life is like a couple of dice—you take them up, in order to throw them down again

¹ Sipand People even nowadays put the seeds of wild rue on heated iron plates
The smoke is said to drive away evil spirits Idem p 146 note 1

12 Anisī Shāmlū.¹

His real name is Yol Quli He is a man of a happy heart and of pure manners, he is brave and sincere

In seeking after thee, a condition is put upon us miserable lovers, viz, that our feet remain unacquainted with the hems of our garments²

It is possible to travel along this road, even when one lightning only flashes We blind lovers are looking for the ray of thy lamp

If I remain restless even after my death, it is no wonder, for toil undergone during the day makes the sleep of the night restless

1 How can the thought of thy love end with my death? for love is not like wine, which flows from the vessel when it is broken

2 The lover would not snatch his life from the hand of death though he could Why should the owner of the harvest take the grain from the ant?

1 The rosebed of time does not contain a songster like me, and yet it is from the corner of my cage that I have continually to sing

2 In order satisfactorily to settle my fortune, I spent a life in hard work, but with all my mastership I have not been able to draw silk from reeds

The nature of love resembles that of the magnet, for love first attracts the shaft in order to wound the heart when it wishes to get rid of the point

1 T
of the Khan^c an i M
Ibrahim

May God preserve all men from falling into my circumstances ! for my sufferings keep the rose from smiling and the nightingale from singing

Love has disposed of me, but I do not yet know who the buyer is, and what the price is

Anis drinks the blood of his heart, and yet the vessel is never empty, it seems as if, at the banquet of love's grief the red wine rises from the bottom of the goblet

1 I am intoxicated with love do not bring me wine throw me into the fire do not bring me water

2 Whether I complain or utter reproaches I address him alone do not answer me !

1 I went away, in order to walk a few steps on the path of destruction, and to tear a few ties that bind me to existence

2 I will spend a few days without companions and will pass a few nights without a lamp till morning make its appearance

1 O heart, beware ! O heart beware ! Thus should it be, the hand of asking ought to be within the sleeve ¹

2 O that I could but once catch a certain object ! the hunter is for ever in the ambush

13 Naziri of Nishapur ²

He possesses poetical talent and the garden of thought has a door open for him Outwardly he is a good man, but he also devises plans for the architecture of the heart

Every place whether nice or not appears pleasant to me I either rejoice in my sweetheart or grieve for him

If thou destroyest the ware of my heart, the loss is for once, whilst to me it would be the loss of world and faith

If thou wilt not put my cage below the rose tree, put it in a place where the meadow hears my plaint

It is from kindness that he [the beautiful boy] favours me, not from love, I can distinguish between friendship and politeness

It is a generation that I have been girding my waist in thy service, and what am I worth? I must have become a Brahman, so often have
I put on the badge (the thread)

Thy blood is worth nothing, Nazirî, be silent! Suffice it that he who slew thee, has no claim against thee

I am costly and there are no buyers, I am a loss to myself, and am yet the ornament of the bazaar

The impression which my sorrow makes upon him consists in depriving his heart of all sympathy, and the peculiar consequence of my reminding him of my love is that he forgets it

Like a watch dog I lie at his threshold, but I gnaw the whole night at my collar and think of chasing him not of watching him

ما بے حسه خالصه شوي همجو نصيري
عربي نصيري نرمانده سخن را

O Sayib what dost thou think? Canst thou become like Nazirî?
Urfî even does not approach Nazirî in genius

The Tarikh of Nazirî mentions a poet of the name of The Hausan of Arabian poet Has markiz : dâ'ira yi
g ves 1021 unless tarikh Daghistan also mentions a poet Sawadi of Gijrat a pious man who was in Nazirî's service. On the death of his master he guarded his tomb and died in A. H. 1031

1 From carelessness of thought I transformed a heart, by the purity of which Ka'ba swore, into a Farangī Church

2 The simoom of the field of love possesses so inebriating a power, that the lame wanderer thinks it sublime transport to travel on such a road

3 The ship of love alone is a true resting place, step out of it, and thou art surrounded by the stormy sea and its monsters

4 Tell me which song makes the greatest impression on thy heart, so that I may utter my plaint in the same melody

14 Darwish Bahram.¹

He is of Turkish extraction and belongs to the Bayat tribe. The prophet Khizr appeared to him, and a divine light filled him. He renounced the world and became a water-carrier

1 I have broken the foundation of austerity, to see what would come of it, I have been sitting in the bazaar of ignominy [love], to see what would come of it

2 I have wickedly spent a lifetime in the street of the hermits, now I am a profligate, a wine bibber, a drunkard, to see that will come of it

3 People have sometimes counted me among the pious, sometimes among the licentious, whatever they call me I am, to see what will come of it

15 Sayrafī [Sarfī] of Kashmir²

His name is Shaykh Ya'qūb. He is well acquainted with all branches of poetry and with various sciences. He knows well the excellent writings of Ibn 'Arab, has travelled a good deal, and has thus become acquainted with many saints. He obtained higher knowledge under Shaykh Husayn of Khwarazm, and received from him permission to guide others

¹ Bahram's takhallus is Sayya i.e. water-carrier. This occupation is often chosen by those who are favoured with a sight of the Prophet Khizr (Elias). Khizr generally appears as an old man dressed in green (in allusion to the meaning of the name in Arabic or to his functions as spring deity).

The Bayat tribe is a Turkish tribe scattered over Āzarbayjān Erivan Tihān Fars and Nishapur.

Bahram is worshipped as a saint. His mausoleum is in Bardwan near Calcutta. Regarding the poet himself and the legends connected with him vide my "Arabic and

17. Mushfiqī of Bukhārā¹

I went to his street, and whilst I was there, a thorn entered deep into the foot of my heart Thanks be to God that I have now a reason for staying in it!

1. Hindūstan is a field of sugar-cane, its parrots are sugar sellers
2. Its flies are like the darlings of the country, wearing the chīra and the *takauchiya*²

18 *Sāhibī*³

His name is Muhammad Mīrak He traces his descent from Nizām⁴ 'I-Mulk of Tūs

Men without feeling tell me to use my hand and catch hold of his garment. If I had a hand [i.e., if I had the opportunity], I would tear my collar to pieces

There are many reasons why I should be dead, and yet I am alive
O grief! thy forbearance has made me quite ashamed of myself

994 (Vāmbéry's Bokhara p. 301)

² This verse is a parody on the well known Ghazal which Hafiz sent from Shirāz to Sulṭān Ghiyās of Bengal (Metre Muzārī)

شکر شکر شکر همه نریمانند
س نالد پارسی که نه ننگاله مبرود

*The parrots of Ind will learn to enjoy sweets,
When this Persian sugar (the poem) reaches Bengal.*

and that his family had always been employed by kings

Sprenger (Catalogue p. 50) calls him wrongly Muhammad Mir Beg. The Āl-i-kāda and the MSS have Muhammad Mīrak; and thus also his name occurs in the Māqāṭir of Rājīmī.

I told him [the beautiful boy] my grief he paid no heed Oh, did you ever see such misery! I wept, he laughed—Oh, did you ever see such contempt!

My life is in his hand It is quite clear, Salih, that even the falcon
Death sits tame on his hand

19 Maḥzarī of Kashmir¹

He made poems from his early youth, and lived long in ṢIrāq From living together with good people he acquired excellent habits

1 I cannot understand the secret of Salma's beauty, for the more you behold it, the greater becomes your desire

2 What friendly look lay in Layl's eyes, that Maḥnūn shut his eyes to friends and strangers?

I admire the looking glass which reflects my sweetheart standing on a flower bed,² although he is inside his house

The good fortune of thy beauty has caused thy affairs to prosper, else thou wouldst not have known how to manage matters successfully

1 Like a tail I follow my own selfish heart Though the road is not bad, I make myself footsore

2 Though I break through a hundred screens I cannot step out of myself, I wander over a hundred stages, and am still at the old place

I am a tulip of Sīnāī and not like the stem born flower I cast flames over the slit of my collar instead of hemming it³

He of whom my eye makes light, appears to heaven dull and heavy

¹ Daghustānī says that in ṢIrāq he was a companion of the poet.

an apple the black ² The hot tears
by flames like a flower

20 Mahwī of Hamadan¹

His name is Mughis. He tries to change the four mud walls of this worldly life into stone walls, and is intoxicated with the scent of freedom

1 Once I did not know burning sorrow, I did not know the sighs of a sad heart

2 Love has now left neither name nor trace of me—I never thought, Love, that thou art so

1 You said that my condition was low from love grief. A cup¹ bring me a cup¹ for my heart is stagnant

2 Be ashamed of thyself, be ashamed¹ Which is the cup and which is the wine that has inebriated the nightingale?²

1 O Mahwī, beckon to a friend and ring the bell of the caravan

2 The stage is yet far and the night is near. O thou who hast fettered thy own foot, lift up thy foot and proceed¹

1 A single lover requires hundreds of experiences, hundreds of wisdoms, and hundreds of understandings

2 Thy luck is excellent, go away. Love is a place where misery is required

1 O Mahwī, do not sing a song of the passion of thy heart, do not knock at the door of a single house in the street

2 Thou hast seen this strange world, beware of speaking of a friend

¹ Mir Mughis according to the Ma'asir-e-Rashidiyya was born in Asadabad (Hamadan) and went when twelve years old to Ardabil where he studied for four years at the "Astana-yi-Safawiya". From youth he was remarkable for his contentment and piety. He spent twenty years at holy places chiefly at Najaf, Mashhad, Karbala and Miraf. Mawliana Shakeri and Anisi (pp. 646-648) looked upon him as their teacher and guide. He held poetical contests (mushā'ara) with Mawliana Sahābi (سحابی). He embarked at town

The Miraf mentions a Mahwī whose name was Mir Mahmūd and says that he was for twenty five years Akbar's Munshi

21 Sarfī of Sāwah¹

He is poor and has few wants, and lives content with his indigence.

My dealer in roses wishes to take his roses to the bazaar, but he ought first to learn to bear the noisy crowd of the buyers

I am shut out from the road that leads to the Ka'ba, else I would gladly wound the sole of my feet with the thorns of its acacias²

I have no eye for the world, should it even lie before my feet; he who takes care of the end, looks behind himself

That which I desire³ is too high to be obtained by stooping down.
O that I could find myself lying before my own feet!

22 Qarārī of Gilān⁴

His name is Nur^u 'd Dīn. He is a man of keen understanding and of lofty thoughts. A curious monomania seized him: he looked upon his elder brother, the doctor Abū 'l Fath, as the personification of the world, and the doctor Humām as the man who represents the life to come, for which reason he kept aloof from them.

¹ The MSS of the A⁴fa call him "Sarfī" but the metre of several verses given in ² The MSS of the A⁴fa call him "Sarfī" but the metre of several verses given in ³ The MSS of the A⁴fa call him "Sarfī" but the metre of several verses given in ⁴ The MSS of the A⁴fa call him "Sarfī" but the metre of several verses given in

The longer the grief of separation lasts, the gladder I am, for like a stranger I can again and again make his acquaintance

I doubt Death's power, but an arrow from thy eye has pierced me, and it is this arrow alone that will kill me, even if I were to live another hundred years

He [the beautiful boy] must have been last night away from home, for I looked at his door and the walls of his house, but had no pleasure from looking

If in that hour, when I tear the hood of my life, I should get hold of, what God forbid, Thy collar, I would tear it to pieces

I envy the fate of those who on the last day, enter hell, for they sit patiently within the fire¹

My madness and ecstasy do not rise from nightly wine, the burning of divine love is to be found in no house

1 O heart! when I am in love, do not vex me with the jealousy of the watchman, thou hast made me lose my faith [Islām] do not speak ill of my Brahmanical thread²

2 To be far from the bliss of non existence seems death to him who has experienced the troubles of existence O Lord I do not vex me up on the day of resurrection from the sleep of non existence

1 If the love of my heart should meet with a buyer, I would do something openly

2 I have spread the carpet of abstinence in such a manner that every thread of the texture ends in a thousand Brahmanical threads

- 1 The drinking of my heart-blood has surfeited me ; like my sweet-heart, I have become an enemy to myself
- 2 I have killed myself, and, from excessive love to him, have cast the crime on my own shoulders ¹

23 ‘Itābi of Najaf ²

He possesses harmony of thought, but his mind is unsettled, and he lives a disorderly life

I am the nightingale of thy flower bed I swear by the pleasure of thy society that the rose has passed away, and I do not know where the garden is

- 1 May all hearts rest peacefully in the black night of thy curls, when I, the miserable, wander restless from thy street!
- 2 I have knocked at the door of the seventy-two sects of Islām, and have come to the door of despair, hopeless of getting help from heathen and Musulmān
- 3 I had come from the land of faithfulness what wonder, if I vanish from the dear memory of the [faithless] fair ?

- 1 I have consumed my sober heart on the rubbish-heap of passion ; I have burnt the Ka‘ba candle at the idol temple’s fate
- 2 The flower bed of a certain beloved has not wafted to me the fragrance of fulfilled desires, and hopelessly do I consume myself in my dismal corner
- 3 No one has ever said the word “ friend ” to me, not even by mistake, though I consume myself before acquaintances and strangers ³

1 O heart, what portion of his wine coloured lip dost thou keep in thy flagon, that thy inside is full of sighs and thy neck full of sobs¹

2 Love has thrown me into oceans of bloody tears, go, go away, that for once thou mayest reach the banks of the stream

I have given thee permission to shed my blood without retaliation I have said so, and give it thee black on white, and stamped with my seal

Sometimes I am drowned in floods sometimes burning in flames
Let no one build a house in my street¹

In the name of God let us go, if you belong to my travelling companions This caravan² has no bell to sound the hour of starting

In a realm where the word 'faithfulness' produces tears, the messenger and the letter he brings³ produce each separately tears

1 Is the killing of a man like me worth a single sign of anger and hatred? Is shedding my blood worth the bending of thy arm (pr thy sl eye)?

2 If thou art resolved to break my heart is it worth while to ill treat thy lovers?

24 Mulla Muhammad Sufi of Mazandaran⁴

He is in affluent circumstances but from virtuous motives he mixes little with the world He seeks retirement by travelling about

Look upon me when standing below the revolving roof of the heavens, as a fump concealed under a cover

1 O heart, thy road is not without thorns and caltrops, nor dost thou walk on the wheel of good fortune

2 If it be possible pull the skin from the body, and see whether thy burden will be a little lighter

1 You asked me How are you Muhammad, after falling in love with him?—long may you live! ' ' I stand " said I, " below the heaven as a murderer under the gibbet

25 Juda¹

His name is Sayyid 'Alī and he is the son of Mir Mansūr He was born and educated in Fabrīz and attained, under the care of his Majesty, the greatest perfection in the art of painting

The beauty of idols is the Ka'ba to which I travel, love is the desert, and the obstinacy of the worthless watchers² the acacia thorns

I am a prey half killed and stretched on the ground far from the street of my beloved I stagger along tumbling down and rising up again till I come near enough to catch a glimpse of him

In the morning the thorn boasts of having been together with the rose and drives a nail through the broken heart of the nightingale

26 Wuqū¹ of Nishapur²

His name is Sharif

Love and the lover have in reality the same object in view Do not believe that I lose by giving thee my life

1. I do not care for health¹ O Lord, let sorrow be my lot, a sorrow which deprives my heart of every hope of recovery¹

2 I am smitten by the eye which looks so coquettishly at me, that it raises, openly and secretly, a hundred wishes in my heart

27 Khusrawī of Qā'in²

He is a relation of [the poet] Mirzā Qāsim of Gūnābād [or Junābād, or Junābid, in Khurāsān] He writes Shikasta well, and is a good hand at shooting with the bow and the matchlock

If the dust of my body were mixed with that of others, you would recognize my ashes by their odour of love

Thy coming has shed a lustre on the ground, and its dust atoms serve as surma for my eyes

The lions of the Haram should not stain their paws with my blood
O friend, give the dogs of the Christian monastery this food as a treat

What do I care for comfort¹ I think myself happy in my misery, for the word "rest" is not used in the language of this realm [love]

28 Shaykh Raha^{1,3}

He traces his descent from Zain^u 'd Dīn Khāfi He pretended to be a Sūfi.

rocks of several thousand mans lying about near my house he exclaimed with a sigh

All these helpless things are only waiting to assume human form Notwithstanding his wicked belief he composed poems in praise of the Imāms, but he may have done so when he was young He was an excellent kaṭīb and letter writer and was well acquainted with history He died in A.H. 1002

¹ Health is the equivalent of indifference to love

ALAN BURLING is quoted as saying that Padarī quotes the same verse as Abu 'l Fazl Padarī says he left a well known diwān In

No one has, in thy love, been more brought up to sorrow than I, and that thou knowest not my sorrow is a new sorrow

I took to travelling in order to allay my grief, not knowing that my road would pass over hundred mountains of grief

29. Wafa¹ of Isfahan¹

He possesses sparks of taste He had been for some time wandering in the desert of retirement, but has now put the mantle of worldliness on his shoulders²

I do not call him a buyer who only wishes to buy a Yūsuf Let a man buy what he does not require^{1 3}

Knock at night at the door of the heart¹ for when it dawns, the doors are opened and the door of the heart is closed

I am secure from the dangers of life no one deprives the street beggar of his bareness

1 The dart of fate comes from the other side of the armour,⁴ why should I uselessly put on an armour?

2 Flash of death, strike first at me! I am no grain that brings an ear to the harvest

Joy and youth are like the fragrance of the rose that chooses the zephyr as a companion

30 Shaykh Saqi^o

He belongs to the Arabians of the Jaza⁴ir He has acquired some knowledge

¹ As to example love grief

⁴ i.e. a place where man is not protected because he does not expect an arrow from that side

1. I became a cloak to ruin, Sāqī, and like the Ka'ba, a place of belief and heresy.

2. I have found no trace of love, much as I have travelled among the hearts of the infidels and the faithful

My heart is still ardent with love, and thou art still indifferent. O sweetheart, speak, before I openly express myself

31 Rafī'ī of Kāshān¹

His name is Ḥaydar. He is well acquainted with the ars poetica and is distinguished as a writer of riddles and tāriḫs

My heart is sensitive, you cruel one; what remedy is there for me? Although a lover, I have the temper of the beloved—what can I do?

1. A recluse does not sin [love] and calls thee a tyrant, I am plunged into crime [love] and think that thou art forgiving

2 He calls thee a tyrant, I call thee forgiving, choose whatever name pleases thee most.

32 Ghayratī of Shīrāz²

His diction is good, and he knows the history of the past

I am smitten by the eyelash of my murderer, who has shed my blood without letting a drop fall to the ground³

1. Rafī'ī of Kāshān. He is well acquainted with the ars poetica and is distinguished as a writer of riddles and tāriḫs.
 2. Ghayratī of Shīrāz.
 3. I am smitten by the eyelash of my murderer, who has shed my blood without letting a drop fall to the ground.

The present age asks God for a mischief maker like thee, who makes the days of the wretched bitterer ¹

I am free from worldliness, for my aspirations do no longer lean against the wall of confidence

I am smitten by the fearless glance of a Christian youth, for whose sake God will pardon, on the day of resurrection, the slaughter of a hundred Musalmans

Even death mourns for those who are killed by the grief of separation from thee

The street of the sweet boy is a beautiful land, for there even heaven's envy is changed to love

I saw the heart of another full of grief and I became jealous, for there is but one cruel tyrant in these regions ²

33 Halati of Turan ³

His name is Yadgar He is a selfish man

Leave me to my grief ¹ I find rest in my grief for him I die, if the thought of the possibility of a cure enters my heart

When my eye caught a glimpse of him my lips quivered and closed Oh that life remained but a moment within me ¹

To whatever side I turn in the night of separation my heart feels pierced by the thought of the arrow of his eyelash

¹ That is my beloved boy causes the greatest mischief among the hearts of men

² No boy is lovelier than the beloved of the poet If the poet therefore sees another man love sick he gets jealous his beloved boy must have bestowed favours on the other man

³ * * * * *

34 Sanjar of Kā'hān¹

He is the son of Mir Haydar, the riddle writer He has a taste for poetry, and lives in good circumstances

I came from the monastery of the Guebres and wear, from shame on account of improprieties, a sacred thread twisted round my waist, and a wailing gong under my arm²

I am jealous and I shall die from the aggressions of fickle lovers I am a fresh plant, but shall die from the heap of rubbish about me

I, too, have at last perished in the century of thy love Alas! none is now left of Majnūn's tribe³

Sorrows rush from every side on my heart without first knocking at the door I cannot help it, my house lies on the highway

35 Jazbī⁴

His name is Pādīshāh Qulī, and he is the son of Shah Qulī Khān Nāranjī of Kurdistān, near Baghdād

See how extremely jealous I am My bewilderment leaves me, if any one alludes to him [the beautiful boy] whose memory causes me bewilderment

¹ Sanjar came in A.H. 1000 from Persia to India and met his father (p. 662 (1)). For some crime to mention which is not proper Akbar imprisoned him. When again set free he was ...

Hakīmī

The Khizāna of Ḥāmīra and Mr T. W. Beale of Agrā the learned author of the Miftāḥ i Tawārīkh give the following verse as ṭarīkh of Sanjar's death (metre Muzdārī)—

انگد بادشاه من سر برآورد

The Ling of Literature has thrown away the royal umbrella of which the words pādīshāh-i sulṭān give 1023, but as the pādīshāh throws away the umbrella we have to subtract 2 or 2, for the figure of the Arabic 2 if inverted looks like an umbrella

² i.e. love has made the poet forget his faith and he has become a heathen or a Christian. The Christians in many eastern countries used gongs because they were not allowed bells

³ The poet only is a true lover. He alone resembled Majnūn.

⁴ The Tazkiras give no details regarding Jazbī. His father has been mentioned above on p. 537 and from the Albarnama (III p. 512) we know that Pādīshāh Qulī served in Kashmir under Qāsim Klān (p. 412). Jazbī means 'attractive', a similar talhāḥ is 'Majzūb', 'one who is attracted by God's love'

Bādā'onī (III 213) ascribes the last verses given by Abu 'J Jazbī to Pādīshāh Qulī's father

1 Sometimes I break my vow of repentance and sometimes the wine bottle once twice incessantly I break my plaintive flute [my heart]

2 O Lord deliver my heart from these bad practices! How often shall I repent and again break my vow of repentance!

36 Tashbihī of Kashan¹

His mind from his youth was unsettled. He belongs to the sect of the Mahmudis but I know nothing of his origin nor of his present condition. The Maṣnawī entitled Zarrak o Khurshid "the Atom and the Sun" is written by him.

Dust of the graveyard rise for once to joy? Thou encloset a corpse like mine slain by his hand and his dagger

Dress in whatever colour thou wilt, I recognize thee when thy figure shines forth

¹ The Atashkade calls him Māṣṣā' al-Kāshānī. The name of the author is given in the title of the Maṣnawī.

Pass some day by the bazaar of the victims of thy love, and behold the retribution that awaits thee, for there they buy up every one of thy crimes at the price of a hundred meritorious actions ¹

O thou that takest the loaf of the sun from this warm oven, thou hast not given Tashbihī a breakfast and he asks thee for an evening meal.²

1 I am that Tashbihī who, from foresight, chooses to dwell in a graveyard

2 I like to dwell in a graveyard, because dwelling in a graveyard lies before our sight

The hands of this world and of the world to come are empty With me is the ring ³—all other hands are empty ³

37 Ashkī of Qum ⁴

He is a Ṭabātībā Sayyid, and is a poet of some talent

Those who are slain by thee be everywhere inebriated on the ground : perhaps the water of thy steel was wine

¹ This verse is an example of a well known rhetorical figure. The word "retribution" leads the reader to expect the opposite of what Tashbihī says. The lovely boy has of course broken many hearts and shed the blood of believers, nevertheless all are ready to transfer the rewards of their meritorious actions to him and thus buy up his crimes.

² The sun looks round like a loaf, the warm oven is the heat of the day.

³ In allusion to a game in which the players secretly pass a ring from one to another and another party has to find where the ring is. "The ring is with Tashbihī" i.e., he has

مئل حیران خشن غلیه اوست
 بسو ومانده حصار دیوانش
 شعر ومانده تو گنده اوست

*Thou hast killed poor Ashkī
 And I wonder at thy crime being hidden
 With thee four Diodes of his remained
 And what remains of thy poems is his*

Dāghistānī says that Ashkī died in Mīr Judā'ī's house and he ascribes the epigram to Gī'azālī, but as he only quotes a hemistich the statement of the contemporary Haft Iqlīs is preferable.

Budd'ouf says that Ashkī's poems are full of thought and that he imitated (تأثر) the poet, Asafī. He died at Āgra.

My body melts in the fire of my madness, when he [the lovely boy] is away, and if you should hang an iron chain to my neck, it would flow (molten) to my feet

Whenever I have to bear the pang of separation from my beloved, no one bears with me but death

Ashkī, I think my tears have turned watchers, for whenever I think of him, they rush into my face¹

38 Asrī of Ray²

His name is Amīr Qazī He is a man of education

The messenger was a watcher in disguise, and I did not see his cunning, The cruel wretch succeeded in putting his contrivance between us

I have pardoned my murderer, because he did not take his hand away from me for as long as life was left within me, his murderous hands were properly employed

His love has so completely filled my breast, that you can hear him breathe in my breath

39 Fahmā of Ray {Tīhrān}³

Give him no wine⁴ who feels no higher pleasure in the juice of grapes, do not even give him water when he lies as dust before the door of the tavern

¹ So do the watchers of the beloved boy rush up against Ashkī when he declares his love

² Asrī was according to Bada'oni: an educated man and the best pupil of Hakīm⁵ I Mulk (p 611) But the climate of India did not agree with him and he did not find much favour with the emperor He therefore returned to Ray his home where he died

Fahmā yī Tīhrānī which appears in fact it looks like because no Tazkira

I have no patience when in love, and have lost in reputation Tell reputation to go, I cannot be patient

40 Qaydī of Shiraz¹

He spent some time in the acquisition of such sciences as are usually studied, but he thinks much of himself

As thou hast never gone from my heart, I wonder how thou couldst have found a place in the hearts of all others

1 Thou drovest me away, and I came back, not from jealousy, but because I wish to confess that I feel ashamed of my love having had jealousy as a companion

2 My tears derive a lustre from the laughter of cruel wretches, else a wound inflicted by thee could never produce such bloody tears

A lover may have many reasons to complain, but it is better not to unburden the heart before the day of judgment

If I desire to accuse thee of shedding, in every look, a hundred torrents of lover's blood, my lot, though hostile enough, would be ready to be my witness

I am gone, my reason is gone! I want a flash of madness to strike my soul, so as to keep it burning [with love] till the day of judgment

1 Last night union [with the sweet boy] raised her lovely form before me and the gloomy desert of my heart shone forth in raptures

2 But the bat had no power to gaze at the sun, else the sun would have revealed what is now behind the screen

¹ Qaydī came from Makkah to India and was well received by Akbar. Once at a court assembly he spoke of the injustice of the Dabī or Michell's Law on which Akbar had set his heart (note p. 252) and fell into disgrace. He wandered about for some time as Faqīr in the Byāna District and returned to Fathpur Sikri suffering from piles. A quack whom he consulted cut open the veins of the anus and Qaydī died. He was an excellent poet. Badā'uni

Dāghatāni says that he was a friend of Q'U'fi and died in A.H. 972

41 Payrawī of Sawah¹

His name is Amīr Beg He was a good painter

Where is the wine of love given to wretches without feeling? Loving idols is a drunkenness let men be careful to whom to give it!

O God! I cannot reach the world of the ideal forgive me if I worship form²

42 Kamī of Sabzwar³

His mind is somewhat unsettled

If I knew that tears could make an impression I would altogether turn to blood and trickle from the eye

Whether I see him [the beautiful boy] or not my heart is in raptures
Have you ever seen such a sight?

I wished I could like a breeze pass away from this base world This is not the street of the sweetheart from which one cannot pass away

My blood dances from mirth in my vein like a flame the look he gave me commences to work and my heart is effectually wounded

43 Payamī⁴

His name is Andā's Salām He is of Arabian extraction and has acquired some knowledge but he is not clear to himself

Payrawī mutated the root ā ā ā ā ā

¹ Badd⁵ also mentions him in his history

Fortune cheats in play, loses and takes back what she paid One cannot play with a companion that is up to such tricks

1 How long do you file down your words and polish them how long do you shoot random arrows at the target ?

2 If you would take one lesson in the science of silence you would laugh loud at your silly conversation

1 I keep a thousand thunderbolts concealed below my lip Go away go away take care not to put your finger on my lip

2 I have come to the public square of the world but I think it were better if my Yusuf were vet in the pit than in the bazaar ¹

Patience in order to console me has again put me off with new subterfuges and has stitched up the book of my happiness the wrong way

1 My heart has overcome the grief of separation and has gone from this land it has tucked the hem up to the waist and has gone

2 My heart saw among the companions no trace of faithfulness hence it smiled hundred times by way of friendship and went away

44 Sayyid Muhammad [Fikrī] ²

He is a cloth weaver from Hirat He generally composes Ruba'is

1 On the day when the lover kindled the fire of love he learnt from his beloved what burning grief is

2 This burning and melting has its origin in the beloved for the moth does not burn till it reaches the candle

1 On the day of judgment when nothing remains of the world but the tale the first sign of Eternity a spring will appear

¹ Yusuf means here life pit non-existence bazaar existence

² Sayyid Muhammad a poet cal name is Fikrī the pensive He came according to the Hafiz in 969 to India and his excellent rubā'is induced people to call him the Khayyām of the age or Mir Rubā'ī He died on his way to Jaunpūr in 973 the tarīkh of his death being Mir Rubā'ī safar namud

2 The beloved will raise like plants their heads from the dust, and I, too shall raise my head in courtship¹

45 Qudsī of Karabala, Mir Husayn²

I am utterly ashamed of the dogs of thy street, for they have made friendship with a man like me

I am in misery, and you would know the sadness of my lot, if you were instead of me to suffer for one night by being separated from him [the beautiful boy]

Who am I that thou shouldst be my enemy, and shouldst care for my being or not being?

46 Haydarī of Tabriz³

He is a merchant and a poet, he works hard and spends his gains liberally

Show no one my black book of sorrows let no one know my crimes [love]

¹ This verse reminds me of a verse by Kalim I think (metre Rajaz) —

روز نامت هر کس دست کرد نامت
من بر حاکم می سوم تصور جان در نعل

Each man on the day of resurrection will see a book (the book of deeds) I too shall be in India let said —

در کسور هند سانی و هم معلوم
اجا دل ساد و جان حرم معلوم
حاجه که بکت رو به تو آدم مجرد
ادم معلوم و مدبر ادم معلوم

O Haydarī, try, like the virtuous, to attain some perfection in this world of sorrow; for to leave this world deficient in anything, is like leaving the bath in a dirty state.

47. Sāmri

He is the son of the preceding. His versification is good.

My disgrace has made me famous, and my shame [love] has rendered me well known; perplexed I ask myself why I remain concealed.

The farmers have committed their seeds to the field, and now hope to receive aid from the flood of my tears

48 Farebī of Ray (?)¹

His name is Shāpūr. He is a good man, but is in bad circumstances. If he is diligent, he may become a good poet

1. I go and heat my brain with the love of a certain sweetheart; I sit in the midst of the flame, and breathe a hot sigh no equal in Āīrāq or Khurāsān. About that time Shah Ṣābbās came to the place to hunt pheasants (kabī). [Kabk is the Chukor partridge of India.—P] It happened that the king's own falcon flew away, and sat down on the house

2 It is not my intention to be in ardours for myself, Shāpūr, my object is to bring a certain sweetheart before the world

I am the thorny shrub without leaves in the desert, no bird takes shelter with me from fear of accidents

1 If the martyr of thy love grief is to have a tomb, let it be the gullets of crows and kites, or the stomachs of wild beasts

2 Until I pass along the torrent of restlessness [love] I cannot plunge into the shoreless ocean

49 Fusunī of Shiraz¹

His name is Maḥmūd Beg He is an excellent accountant, and knows also astronomy well

When the eye has once learned to see [to love] it loses its peaceful sleep, when the heart has once learned to throb, it loses its rest

The passion which I feel for other lovely ones, has made my heart like a bud which has been forced open by blowing upon it

When I wish to kiss his foot, I first wipe it with my wet eye, for the eye feels, more than lip, the sweet sorrow of kissing his foot

Woe me, if my blood is not shed for the crime of my love! To pardon my faults were worse than to take revenge on me

Sole friend of my chamber! I feel jealous of those who stand outside disappointed Sweet companion of my feast! I feel jealous of the spectators

1 If I flee from thy cruelties tell me what dust I am to scatter on my head when far from thee

2 If I sit in the dust of the earth on which I wander, whose victim shall I be when I arise? 2

¹ Abu l Fazl says that Fusunī was from Shiraz Bada'oni and Taqī call him Yazdī, and Daḡustāni and the Āteşkeda says that he came from Tabriz Bada'oni says that

50 Nādīrī of Turshizi¹

I am as if blind and wander about seeking for something I pant after this mirage [love], though I hold a cooling drink in my hand

Nādīrī, I complain of no one; I have myself set fire to this heap of thorns.

51 Nawā'ī of Mashhad²

He is a poet of talent; if sharply spoken to, he writes very well

I am dead, and yet the blisters of my wandering foot do not dry up; neither death nor the life to come can bring the journey towards this stage [love] to a close

No eye is fit to behold my glory; my figure in the looking glass even appears veiled

If that be Mansūr's love, do not grieve, O heart Not every weak-minded man is fit to love³

prince

² Mansūr attained a high degree of pantheistic love, he saw God in everything, and at last proclaimed Ana al haqq "I am God" -- for which he was killed. The poet here accuses Mansūr of weakness because he proclaimed his love, he should have kept it to himself, as is proper for true lovers (vide p. 625 note 1)

Intrinsic beauty cannot be seen, and he who looks into the looking-glass sees, indeed, his figure, but forms no part of the glass itself ¹

Make thyself a heart as large as the orb of heavens, and then ask for an atom Do not be satisfied, Naw⁵i, with a ray of the sun, cherish the lofty aspirations of the little mote ²

52 Babā Ṭālib of Isfahān ³

He is a thoughtful poet, and is experienced in political matters

I would not exchange my lonely corner for a whole world, and I am glad that my intercourse with the people of the world has left me this impression

It is no wonder that my little heart expands into a wide plain, when it is filled with thy love

I cannot raise from weakness, my hands to my collar, and I am sorry that the rent in my collar reaches so late the hem of my garment ⁴

1 In being separated from me thou givest me poison to taste and yet askest ' what does it matter ? ' Thou sheddest my blood, thou drivest me away, and yet askest " What does it matter ? "

2 Thou dost not care for the havoc which the sword of separation has made, sift the dust of my grave and thou wilt know what it matters ⁵

¹ The poet means by the looking glass the beautiful face of the beloved boy. He sees in it his woeful figure but does not become one with him

² Properly half a mote. The dust atoms that play in the sun rays are in love with the sun

³ جلال الدين

⁴ Vide p. 560 note 1

⁵ This Ruba⁵i pleased Jahangir so much that he entered it with his own hand in the Court album. Iqbalnama loc. cit.

53 Sarmadī of Isfahān¹

His name is Sharif He possesses some knowledge, is upright, and zealous in the performance of his duties His rhyme is excellent He understands arithmetic

Fortune has been faithful in my time, I am the memorial tablet of Fate's faithfulness

I was at home, and thou camest to me with drunken eyes and with roses under the arm, the very dust of this house of grief budded forth to see the sight of thy arrival

1 What have I not done to myself in the heat of transgression! What crimes have I not committed whilst trusting to Providence!

2 I and my heart have soared up to a rose bed, and we are jealous of the zephyr's going and coming

3 A lover has hundreds of wishes besides union with him [the beautiful boy], I still want thee, Fortune, for many things

I have in contempt set my foot upon both worlds, neither joy nor sorrow have overpowered my heart

1 I cherish a love which will be talked of on the day of resurrection, I cherish a grief which no tale can relate

2 A grief which can coquet with the grief of others which no thought can comprehend and no pen can describe

54 Dakhlī of Isfahān²

He is a man without selfishness, and of reserved character Though he says but little he is a man of worth

¹ Muhammad Sharif was mentioned above on p 581 No 344 as a commander of Two Hundred. Bada'oni says that he was at first Chauki nawis and is at present (i.e. 1004) with Sharif Amul (p 502) in Bengal He used at first to write under the tajhallus

1. I have burnt the furniture of my strong and wise heart ; I have set fire to the house of my aspirations and burnt it.

2 I have given up heresy and faith, and, half-way between the Ka'ba and the idol temple, I have burnt the sacred thread and the rosary.

1. I know of no plaint that has made impression ; I know of no evening that was followed by a cheerful morn

2 They say that grief is followed by joy, but this is an error ; I know but of sorrows being followed by sorrows.

55 Qāsim Arslān of Mashhad¹

He possesses some talent He works hard in order to collect wealth, and spends it in a genial way.

I am intoxicated with the pleasures of the society of wits : for there the subtleties of expression vanish at a hunt.

Word and thought weep over my circumstances, when without thee I look into the book (of my poems)

My life is half gone—what am I worth now when a single look from thee is valued a hundred lives ?

Thou hast the brilliancy of the rose and the colour of wine. How wonderful, what a freshness !

such influence with Tahmasp that several legacies (awqāf) in Persia belonging to Makkah villag in th

Ir to th

56 Ghayurī of Hisar¹

Manliness shines on his forehead and simplicity is the ornament of his life

When longing directs its way to that door [love] it overthrows all possibility of returning

- 1 The door of Shah Akbar, the victorious is a paradise of rest,
- 2 And if I shave my beard I do so not to beautify myself
- 3 But because beards, like crimes are of a deep black dye and can therefore have no place in a paradise²

57 Qāsīmī of Mazāndaran³

He lives as a Faqīr, and wanders bare footed and bare headed through the world

I do not compare thee in beauty with Yusuf, Yusuf was not so, I do not flatter

1 My sickness has increased to night in consequence of the pain of separation and my wretched condition arises from the hundred excesses of yesterday

2 The wine of desire flows every night freer What shall I to-night do with my unsteady heart?

58 Sherī⁴

He belongs to a Panjabī family of Shaykhīs Under the patronage of his Majesty he has become a good poet

The beloved [boy] came and blotted out my name, nay, he made me quite beside myself

¹ Ghayurī is called in the Akbarnāma Mullā Ghayūrī and Daḡhīstānī calls him Ghayūrī of Kābul This shows that he came from Hisar in Kābul and not from Hisār Fīrūza. The Hoft Iqīm tells us that Ghayūrī was at first in the service of Mirzā Muḥammad Hakīm Akbar's brother and king of Kābul On the death of his patron he entered Akbar's service and was a Yuzbāshī or Commander of One Hundred He was killed in 994 with Bir Bar in the Khaybar Pass catastrophe (under 34 p 36)

² Akbar in 1000 forced his courtiers to shave off the r beards vide p 217

³ Dīgh sīdī mentions a Qāsīmī of Mazāndaran. Qāsīmī seems to be an unknown poet

⁴ Mullā Sherī has been mentioned above pp 11^o 207 21^o 214 He was born in Kokuwal in the Panjāb (Barī Duāb) His father's name was Mawlānā Yahyā. He belonged to a tribe called in Bodā onā "Majī"

Sherī was killed with Bir Bar in 994 in the Khaybar Pass

The beloved has so closely surrounded himself with an array of coquetry, that even Desire found access impossible in this dense crowd

O Zephyr, the beloved has entirely filled the mould of my desire. I am thy devoted servant, but thou art rather too devoted to his street.

1 My heart has polluted itself with revealing its condition Though I am silent, the language of my looks has betrayed me.

2 A little thing [love] offers thousands of difficulties, an object apparently within reach offers hundreds of impossibilities

59 Rahī of Nishāpūr

His name is Khwāja Jān He is a good man.

1 O Rahī, no longer cunningly twist this thread [thy religious belief], give up ideas of future life, beginning, and the purgatory

2 Put the thread into the fire of love, so that the offensive smell of the water of the corpse may not go to hell (?)

* * * * *

The above (59) poets were presented at Court There are, however, many others who were not presented, but who sent from distant places to his Majesty encomiums composed by them, as for example, Qāsim of Gūnābād, Zamīr of Isfahān, Wahshī of Bāfa, Muhtashim of Kāshān; Malīk of Qum, Zubūrī of Shīrāz, Walī Dasht Bayāzī, Nekī, Şabrī; Fīgārī, Hūzūrī, Qāzī Nūrī of Isfahān, Şāfī of Bam, Tawfī of Tabrīz; and Rashkī of Hamadān

A*īn 30 (concluded)

THE IMPERIAL MUSICIANS¹

I cannot sufficiently describe the wonderful power of this talisman of knowledge [music] It sometimes causes the beautiful creatures of the ¹ We have to do with a number of ... play

 and by fam-Dur
 the who he to
 and
 as Ambassador to Akund Leo of Orisā

harem of the heart to shine forth on the tongue, and sometimes appears in solemn strains by means of the hand and the chord. The melodies then enter through the window of the ear and return to their former seat, the heart, bringing with them thousands of presents. The hearers, according to their insight, are moved to sorrow or to joy. Music is thus of use to those who have renounced the world and to such as still cling to it.

His Majesty pays much attention to music, and is the patron of all who practise this enchanting art. There are numerous musicians at court, Hindūs, Irānis, Tūrānis, Kashmīris, both men and women. The court musicians are arranged in seven divisions, one for each day in the week. When his Majesty gives the order, they let the wine of harmony flow, and thus increase intoxication, in some, and sobriety in others.

A detailed description of this class of people would be too difficult, but I shall mention the principal musicians.

- 1 Miyān Tansen,¹ of Gwālyār. A singer like him has not been in India for the last thousand years.
- 2 Bābā Rāmdās,² of Gwālyār, a singer.
- 3 Subhān Khān, of Gwālyār, a singer.
- 4 Srigyān Khān, of Gwālyār, a singer.
- 5 Miyān Chand, of Gwālyār, a singer.
- 6 Bichitr Khān, brother of Subhān Khān, a singer.
- 7 Muhammad Khān, Dhāri,³ sings.
- 8 Bur Mandal Khān, of Gwālyār, plays on the sarmandal.
- 9 Baz Bahādur, ruler of Malwa, a singer without rival (p. 473).
- 10 Shuhāb Khān, of Gwālyār, performs on the bīn.
- 11 Da'ūd Dhāri,³ sings.
- 12 Sarod Khān, of Gwālyār, sings.
- 13 Miyan Lāl,⁴ of Gwālyār, sings.
- 14 Tāntarang Khān, son of Miyān Tansen, sings.
- 15 Mulla Is hāq Dhāri,³ sings.
- 16 Ustā Dost, of Mashhad, plays on the flute (nay).

¹ Regarding Tansen or Tānsain or Tānsin vide p. 445. Rām Chand is said to have once given him one kror of tankas as at present. Ibrahim Sur in vain persuaded Tansen to come to Āgra. Abu l Fazl mentions below his son Tāntarang Khān, and the Padushāh

- 17 Nānak Jarjū, of Gwalyār, a singer
- 18 Purbūn Khān, his son, plays on the bīn
- 19 Sūr Das, son of Babū Rām Das, a singer
- 20 Chānd Khān, of Gwalyār, sings
- 21 Rangsen, of Āgra, sings
- 22 Shaykh Dawan Dhari,¹ performs on the karnā
- 23 Rahmat² 'llah, brother of Mullā Is haq (No 15), a singer
- 24 Mir Sayyid 'Alī, of Mashhad, plays on the ghichak
- 25 Usta Yūsuf, of Hirāt, plays on the tambūra
- 26 Qasim, surnamed Koh bar² He has invented an instrument intermediate between the qubuz and the rubāb
- 27 Tāsh Beg, of Qipchāq, plays on the qubuz
- 28 Sultan Hafiz Husayn, of Mashhad, chants
- 29 Bahrām Qulī, of Hirāt, plays on the ghichak
- 30 Sultān Hāshim, of Mashhad, plays on the tambūra
- 31 Usta Shāh Muhammad, plays on the turnā
- 32 Usta Muhammad Amīn plays on the tambūra
- 33 Hāfiz Khawāja 'Alī, of Mashhad, chants
- 34 Mir 'Abd³ 'llah, brother of Mir 'Abd⁴ 'l Hay, plays the Qānūn
- 35 Pīrzada,³ nephew of Mir Dawām, of Khurasān, sings and chants
- 36 Usta Muhammad Husayn, plays the *tambūra*⁴

¹ Dhari means 'a singer' "a musician

² Koh bar as we know from the Pādshāhnāma (I b p 335) is the name of a Chaghtā'i tribe. The Nafā'is / Ma'asir mentions a poet of the name of Muhammad Qasim Kohbar whose nom de plume was Sabri. Vide Sprenger's Catalogue p 50 (where we have to read Koh bar for Guh-paz)

³ Pīrzada according to Bada'uni (III 318) was from Sabar. He was to be

ADDITIONAL NOTES.

Page 31, note 1

TODAR MAL. For correcter and fuller biographical notes, vide p 376

Page 35, note 2

QULI KHAN The correct year of his death is given on p 381

Page 36, line 20

BĀBĀGHURĪ This word is not in the Dictionaries, but there is no doubt that it means "White Agate" The word is also mentioned in the 4th Book (my Text Edition, II, 60), where it is said that all the weights used at court for weighing jewels were made of "transparent Babaghuri" Ṭahīr Naṣrabadī, in his Ṭazkirah, under Jalal, has the following "When the case came on," he said to Mirzā Taqī, "I have often counted with the point of my penknife the Babaghuri threads (the veins) of your eye—there are seventeen"

در روز دیوان با میرزا تقی مکتب که مکرر سول قلمتراش رنار ناماعورئی چشم شما را
شمرده ام معده رنار دارد !!

Page 46, middle

SALARIES OF THE BEGAMS Under Shahjahan and Awrangzib, the queens and princesses drew much higher salaries Thus Mumtāz Mahal had 10 lakhs per annum, and her eldest daughters 6 lakhs, half in cash and half in lands Awrangzib gave the "Begam Ṣahib" 12 lakhs per annum

Regarding Nur Jahan's pension, vide p 574, note 3

Page 49, note 7

GULBADAN BEGAM From Badaoni, II, 14, we see that she was Akbar's paternal aunt, i.e. she was Humayun's sister She was married to Abdur Ahwaja, vide pp 207, 394

Page 58, line 4, from top

SORO Soro is the correct name of a town and Pargana in Sirkār Kol. It lies east of the town of Kol (Aligarh), near the Ganges

Page 58, line 14, from below

PANHĀN This I believe to be a mistake for "Paṭhan" or "Paṭhānkoṭ" The MSS have پنهان or سپهان, but as the initial sin in MSS. is often written with three dots below it, it is often interchanged with ṣin, and reversely The spelling Paṭhan, for Paṭhan, is common in Muhammadan historians My conjecture is confirmed by the distance mentioned in the text.

Page 69 note 2

KĪLĪS Mr F S Growse C S informs me that gulas is to the present day the Kashmiri term for cherries

Page 75 line 7

MAHUWA This partly confirms Elliot's note under Gulā (Beames Edition, Races of the V N Provinces II p 335) and corrects Shakespeare's Dictionary

Page 77, line 7, from below

PĀN LEAVES In the 3rd Book of the Ā'in (Text p 416 l 20) Abū l Faẓl mentions another kind of pan, called Makhā or Mukhā grown in Bihar

Page 84 line 7

QAYSŪRĪ Col Yule tells me that the correct name is FANŪRĪ According to Marco Polo Fanŭr was a state in Sumātra probably the modern Barus

Page 87 note

ZĪRBĀD This should be ZERRĀD for zer + bad i e under the wind leeward the Persian translation as Col Yule informs me of the Malay Bāwah angin below the wind by which the Malays designate the countries and islands to the east of Sumatra

Khāfi Khān (I p 11) couples Zerbād with Khata over both of which Tulu Khān son of Chingiz Khān ruled

Page 93 note 6

کَرَکَرِی I have since seen the spelling کَرَکَرِی which brings us a step nearer to etymology Faruq means supellex and kerē means for

Page 93 line 2 from below

AHMADĀBAD The comma after Ahmadabad may be wrong Ahmadabad is often called Ahmadabad i Gujrat

Page 94 line 17

CHĪYĀS I NAQSHBĀND We know from the Ta kīra of Tahir Naṣrābādī that Chiyās was born in Yazl The world has not since seen a weaver like him Besides he was a good poet Once he brought a piece of mushajjir brocade on which there was among other figures that of a bear between some trees, to Shah 'Abbas (1582-1629) when a courtier after praising the stuff admired the bear Chiyās said on the spur of the moment

حواحه در حرس یش مسند هر کیسه عش حوش مسند

The gentleman looks chiefly at the bear Each looks at his own likeness

Bears in the East are looked upon as stupid animals A proverb says

حرس در کوه اوسا

A bear on the hill is an Aristocenna i e a fool among bigger fools is a philosopher Nasrābādī quotes some of Chiyās's verses

Page 100, middle

COTTON CLOTHS Of the various cotton cloths mentioned by Abu l Fazl Chautar was woven in Haweli Sahāranpur
Siri Şaf and Bhīrau in Dbaranga on Khandesh
Gangajal in Sirkar Ghoraghat Bengal
Mibrkul in Allahabād and Pachtolhya was mentioned on p 574 in connexion with Nur Jahān

Page 105 note 2

ĀDAM I HAFT HAZARI I find that this expression is much older than Abu l Fazl's time Thus Zia^{ud} Din Barani in his preface to the Tarikh-i Firuzshāhi (p 5 l 6) states that the Khālifa 'Umar lived seven thousand years after Ādam

Page 107 note 8

ASHRAF KHAN A correcter and fuller biography of this grandee was given on p 423 He died in 983 not 973

Page 108, note 3

BHANDĀN The collection of Delhi MSS belonging to the Government of India has a copy of the Tazkirat-i Auliya written by Bhandan in 970 A H and yet the Mir'at-i 'Ālam gives 915 as the year of his death

Page 110 note 3 line 4

BECHŪ Though Bechū is a common Hindustani name there is little doubt that the correct name of the saint is Panchu or Panjū vide p 607 Badaoni (II 54) gives as tarikh of his death the words سبع و تسعون and tells the reader to subtract the middle letter (ب) i e $971 - 2 = 969$ Vide also my Essay on Badaoni and his Works, Journal Asiatic Society of Bengal 1869 p 118

Page 123 line 18

SANGRAM Akbar's favourite gun We know from the Tuzuk (p 20) that Akbar killed with it Jatmall the champion of Chitor

Page 129 lines 27 to p 130 line 2

The reader is requested to substitute the following —

Elephants are found in the following places In the Subah of Āgrah in the jungles of Bajawan and Narwar as far as Barar in the Subah of Hāhābad in the confines of Pannah (Bhath) Glorā, Ratang e Nandanpur Sirgūja, and Bastar in the Subah of Malwah, in Handiah Uchhod Chanderi, Santwar Rajgarh Rāuon Hoshangābād Garha, and Harisagarh in the Subah of Bihār about Rohtas and in Jharkhand and in the Subah of Jengal in Orissā and in Sātgan The elephants from Pannah are the best

Page 179 note 3

Sulayman Kararani reigned in Bengal from 971 to 980

Page 192, note 1

Fīrroz Murad was born on the 3rd Mubarram, 978 Āshrafī II 132 Vide below

Page 203 middle and note

In the Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal for May 1870 (p 146) I have shown that the unclear words in Badloni's text are —

کابلان که خوشگام ایشان اس

the cunabula which is their time of mirth

By cunabula the Jesuits meant the representations of the birth of Christ in wax etc which they used to exhibit in Agra and Lâhor

Page 281 line 8

The Sadr read the khutbah in the name of the new king and thus the julus became a fact Khafî Khan I p 52 l 2 from below

Page 282, middle

MAWLÂNÂ 'ABD' L-BÂQI vide p 596 note 3

Page 321

AKBAR'S WIVES For Raqyah the diminutive form Ruqayyah is to be substituted Regarding Jodh Bai vide next note

Sulta Salima Begum She is the daughter of Gulrukh Begum a daughter of Babar Mirza Nur and Din Muhammad Gulrukh's husband was a Naqshbandi Khwaja Gulr kh Begum must not be confounded with another Gulrukh Begum who was the daughter of Mirza Kamran and wife of Ibrahim Husain Mirza (vide p 516)

Of other women in Akbar's harem I may mention (1) the daughter of Qari 'Isa (p 498) (2) an Armenian woman Tuzul p 394 vide also Keane's Agra Guide p 38 (3) Qumiyah Bînu married by Akbar in the 10th year (Akbarn III 94) (4) a daughter of Shams' d D n Chak (Albarn III 659)

SULTAN MURÂD He was married to a daughter of Mirza 'Aziz Koka (p 343) Their child Sultan Rustam did not live long (Akbarn III 539 552)

SULTAN DANYAL The correct date of his birth seems to be the 2nd Jumada I 979 not the 10th but the MSS continually confounded دوم and دهم His first wife was a daughter of Sultan Khwaja (p 466), by whom he had a daughter of the name of Sa'adat Banu Begum who was born in 1000 (Albarn III 643)

Page 323

JAHÂNGÏR'S WIVES An additional list was given on p 533 note 1 Besides them I may mention (1) a daughter of Mubarak Chak of Kashmir (2) a daughter of Husain Chak of Kashmir (Albarn III 659) (3) another Kashmiri lady mentioned in Albarn III 630

Page 329 middle

DEATH OF MİRZA RUSTAM Thus the date is given in the Urdu Ilmava but from the Padshahnama (II 30) we see that Mirza Rustam died on or a few days before the 1st Rab' I 1000 The author adds a remark that the manners (اخلاق) of the Mirza did not correspond to his noble birth which was perhaps due to the absence of nobility in his mother

Page 329 line 4 from below

QARI QCILÂ TURKS. The correct name is Qaraqolu The Calcutta Chaghtai Dictionary gives Qaraqunlu Vamberv (History of Bokhara p 26. note) ment ons

the Ustajlu Shâmlu Nikallu Baharlu Zu l Qadr Kajar and Afshâr as the principal Turkish tribes that were living in Transcaucasia on the southern shore of the Caspian and in the west of Kburân Qaraqolu means the black sheep tribe

Page 33^o note 1

The correct name of the place where Bayrâm was defeated is Guna hur گوناخور which lies S E of Jalnihar. The word گوناخور which the Bbl Indica F. on of Badaon gives contains Jilaur which lies S W of Gunachur

Page 342 note

I do not think that P'r Mulan mad came from the Sharwân mentioned in this note. It is more likely that he was a Shirwani Afghan.

Page 343 note

This note has been corrected on p 443 line 14 and p 458 note

Page 348 line 6 from below

ZUL QADR is the name of a Turkman tribe vide above

Page 361 last line

GOGANDA Regarding the correct date of the battle vide p 460 note 2

Page 376

TODAR MAL. The Maâshir ul Umara says that Todar Mal was born at Lahor. But it is now certain that Todar Mal was born at Laharpur in Audh vide Proceeding of Asiatic Society Bengal September 1871 p 178

Page 40^o note 2

MIYAN KHAL. The note is to be cancelled. Miyan Khal has been explained on p 615 note

Page 404 line 4

ISZAT KHAN. I regard his death vide Tuzuk p 328. His son 'Izzat Khan is wrongly called in the Bbl Indica Edition of the Pâdishahnâma (I b p 30^o) عزت خان. His name was 'Aziz ul Haq hence his title 'Izzat

Page 412 line 1

QASIM KHAN. I dare say the phrase Chamanara Khurasan merely means that he was Governor of Kâbul

Page 413 line 24

BAQI KHAN. He is often called Bâqî Baqi Khan

Page 423 line 15

MIAN BAKS. The spelling Bakur is now common but in India the word is pronounced "Bakur". The query may be cancelled vide p 488 note 1

Page 433 line 9

DASTAN KHAN. Vambéry spells "Dostum"

Page 454, middle

SHAYKH FARĪD I BUKHĀRĪ That the name of Farīd's father was Sayyid Ahmad i Bukhārī, may be seen from the short inscription on the "Bukhārī Mosque" in the town of Bihār, which was built by Shaykh Lād, at the cost of Farīd i Bukhārī, and bears the date 16th Rajab, 1017

Mr J G Delmerick has sent me the following inscription from Farīd's Jāmi' Masjid in Farīdābad —

شهد شاه نور الدین جهانگیر	شهنشاهِ بدین و داد واحسان
اساس این سای حرم مهتاد	فرید عصر و ملک مہرعلی خان
بر وشوکت و خود سعادت	حلف اس الخاتم ما شاه مردان
رقم حرم القاع از خانه سررد	نبی تاریخ این جاوید سنان

1 In the reign of Shah Nur^u d Din, a king who is pious, just, and liberal,

2 Murtaza Khan, the unique one (Farid) of the age and faith, erected this religious building

3 He is honoured, powerful, generous, and liberal, a worthy descendant of the king of men {Ala}

4 As Tārīkh of this lastinj's ructure the words كَلِمَات i Bīqā^s issued from the pen
This gives 1014 A H

Page 468 middle

ḤAWĀLA TAHRIR MUHAMMAD He is mentioned as a Dīstāni on p 523 among the Bakshishis

Page 476, note 1

MAS'UM KHĀN I KABULI This rebel who gave Akbar trouble had the audacity to assume royal prerogatives in Bengal. The full name, inscription I received through Bābu Rajen Itālāl Mitra from Raja Prāmātha Nath I of Dighaputi Rajshahi. It was found in a ruined mosque at a village called Chatmohor, not very far from Dighaputi.

این مسجد رفیع در زمان سلطان الاعظم عمدة السادات ابو الفتح محمد معصوم خان حیدر الله
ملکه اندا یا رب و ما ناهی ساگرد خان رفیع مکان عالشان خان محمد س بوی محمد خان فاضال
فی سه سع و تناس و سعانه ۱۱

This lofty mosque was built during the time of the great Sultan, the chief of Sultans, Abu l Faith Muhammad كَلِمَات —May I not perpetuate his kingdom for ever O Lord O Thou who remainest by the high and exalted كَلِمَات كَلِمَات Muhammad son of Yus Muhammad كَلِمَات Qirshāl in the year 983

This was therefore nearly two years after the outbreak of the Bengal Military Revolt (9th Zi Hujjah 987) vide p. 486

Page 480 line 7

SAYYID MUHAMMAD Regarding the correct date of his death vide p 548

Page 499, line 27

SURAT There is every fr exhibitv that Borath and not Sūrat, is intended

THE GAKKHARS Vide pp 544 545

The places Pharwala and Dangali (دنگلی not Dangali) mentioned in the note as the principal places in the Gakkhar District are noticed in E Terry's Voyage to East India (London 1655 p 88) Kakares the principal Cities are called Dekalee and Parkola it is a large Province but exceeding mountainous divided it is from Tartaria by the Mountain Caucasus it is the extreme part North under the Mogol's subjection

De Laet also gives the same passage

Page 512 line 1

YARĀQ KHAN The correct name is I believe Boraq Khan vide Vambéry's Bokhara, p 153

Page 552 middle

KŪCH HĀJŪ Regarding Kuch Hajū and Kuch B har and Mukarram Khan vide my article on these countries in Journal Asiatic Society Bengal for 1872 p 54

Page 553 line 5

GHAZNIY KHAN of Jalor

The Pahlunpūr family is of Afghan origin belonging to the Lohani tribe and it is said occupied Bihar in the reign of Humayun They subsequently took service with the king of Dilli and from Akbar Shah in A D 1597 Chaznin Khan the chief obtained the title of Diwan for having successfully repulsed an invasion of Afghan tribes for his services on this occasion he was also rewarded with the government of Lahor In A D 1680 Fath Khan Diwan received the provinces of Jalor Sanchor Pahlunpur, and Dsah from Awrangzib Fath Khan died in 1688 leaving an only son Fir Khan who was supplanted in his rights by his uncle Kamal Khan who subsequently being unable to withstand the increasing power of the Rathors of Marwar was compelled in A D 1698 to quit the country [Jalor] and retire with his family and dependents to Pahlunpur where the family has remained ever since—Selections Bombay Government Records No XXI—New Series p 15

Page 591 line 27

UĞLI QULI BĀG İSTAJLŪ Vambéry spells Ustajlu which is the name of a Turkish tribe vide p 687

ERRATA TO THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE A¹IN I AKBARI

Page	Line	18	from top	for Maulānā Masqūd	read Mvulīnā Maq u l
281	9		bottom	p 2 G note	p 266 note
286	3 n		bottom	vide p 183 note 2	vide p 192, note 3
293	1		top	Qu (p 110)	Qur (p 116)
306	17		bottom	M rzā Shāhur ^{kh}	M rzā Shāhur ^{kh}
333	lines 27 3)		top	Abd ¹ I Fath	Abu I Fath
380	line 18		top	vide p 306	vide p 353
390	14		bottom	Bkakhār	Bhakhār
40 ^o	90		top	Mandī Qas m h ān	Mahd Qās m h ān
40	19		top	p 36 note "	p 344 note 1
408	7		top	h uwajā Sultan 'Al	h uwajā Sultān 'Al
413	6		bottom	p 371 note "	p 40 ^o note 1
449	3		bottom	Bal ā ¹ I D n	Bal ā ¹ I D n
506	1 ^o		top	Jalāla Tārīkī p 441	Jalāla Tārīkī p 44 ^o
507	19		bottom	p 300	p 336
506	18		top	Husām ^o d D n	Husām ^o d D n
53 ^o	11		top	Tagmāl	Jagmāl
534	16		bottom	Murabadad	Muradābad
539	17		top	Dodāvarī	Godavari
54	30		top	'Abu I Qadr	'Ab J ¹ I Qadr
43	7		top	Arjum S ngī	Arjun S gī
543	9		top	216 Sakat S ngh	206 Sakat S n ^o h (r de line 1 p 501)
573	lines 6		bottom	p 300	p 301
61 ^o	line 7		bottom	No 234 p 480	No 234 p 537
614	18		bottom	vide p 17 ^o	vide p 181
610	7		bottom	vide p 159 note	vide p 167 note
64 ^o	5 n		bottom	pp 334 5 ^o 8	pp 334 506
660	6		bottom	Shar f Āmul pp 1 G 45 ^o	Shar f Āmul pp 18 50 ^o
67	18 n		bottom	th lal	s hl l
6 ^o	17		bottom	vide above p 3 3	vide above p 370
68	17 n		bottom	Naz r p 549	Na p 649

INDEX TO THE FIRST VOLUME

OF THE

A^CIN I AKBARI

[The numbers refer to the pages & means footnote When names occur twice or several times on a page they have been entered only once in the Index
The geographical names form a separate Index]

- A D B A K R son of Bahadur K h a n 1
Q r b e g ۳۳۰
Abbas S a f a w S h a h converts people to Sh ۴۱۴ 491 ۵۰۳ 504 673 n
Abdal C h a k ۳۵
Abdala the forty ۹۰6 ۹۰6 n
Abdar K h a n a ۷
Abdi K o r 538
Adi of N h a p u r a k a t b 108
Abdu I S A T a r h a n M r z a 359
Abd I S a m i d e S u l t a n K h w a j a
Abdu I S a z a k a t b 109
Abdu I S A r o f D h l 607
Abdu I B a q S a d r ۵8 506 610
Abdu I B a r K h w a j a ۷1 576
Abdu I C h a f f a r o f D h l 4 4
Abdu I C h a f u r M i r z a 34۰
Abdu I C h a f r S h a y k h 607
Abdu I C h a n S h a y k h 616
Abdu I H a q q o f S a h z a r 10
Abdu I H a v M r A d l 5 ۳۳ ۳36
 (No 210)
Abdu I H a y n a m e o f s e r a l k a t b s
 107 109
Abdu I K a r m a k t b 109
Abdu I I a r m S n h A n r h n ۳ 6
 597
Abdu I K a n q K h a a r ۹۰
Abdu I I S a p o r 107
Abdu I I S a y a f K h w a j a 107
Abdu I I S a f K h a B h a 4 4
Abdu I I S a f K h a n F r u z j a n g ۳ 1 6
 ۵6۰ 6۴ n 7۴
Abdu I I S a f K h a n M u g h l 399 432
 (No 6)
Abdu I I S a f K h a n S a y y i d 309 n 518
 (No 189)
Abdu I I S a f K h a n U s b a k 337 (No 14)
 401 468 518
Abdu I I S a f K h a n L z b a k l i n g o f
B u k h a r a 4 5 9 2
Abdu I I S a f K h w a j a K h w a j a 467
Abdu I I S a f K h w a j a s o n o f K h w a j a
A b d o I L a t f 467 (No 109)
Abdu I I S a f M a r w a r d K h w a j a 596
 6۰۳ n
Abdu I I S a f M r 109 a s i n g r 659
Abdu I I S a f M i r z a S a r d a r K h a n
Abdu I I S a f S a r f a r a K h a n ۳ 1 (No 937)
Abdu I I S a f S h a v k h o n o f M h a m m a d
C l a w e ۳۰۹
Abdu I I S a f s o n o f N z a m M u r t a z a
K h a n 593
Abdu I I S a f s a f S a d K h a n ۳19
Abdu I I S a f S u l t a n o f K a s t a r 339 ۳11
Abdu I I S a f S u l t a n p u r i 614 i d e
M a h d n o f M u l k
Abdu I I S a f M r o f Q a z w n 496 61
Abdu I I S a f M r z 34
Abdu I I S a f s o n o f N a q b K h a n 4 8
Abdu I I S a f M a j d r e f A f K h a n
Abdu I I S a f M a k b n M a r w a n 3
Abdu I I S a f M a t l a b K h a n 441 (No 83)
Abdu I I S a f M u n n M r ۳۰ (No 3 4)
Abdu I I S a f M i t d r 3

- ʿAbd^u l Qadr ʿAbhund 42 61
 ʿAb^l l Q d r Badaon t le Badao
 ʿAb^l l Q d r Ma lana ʿ14
 ʿAbd^u l Q l r S r d 614
 ʿAbd^u l Qa u J lan 440
 ʿAbd^u l Q n Na nak 456 n 3
 (No 109)
 ʿAbd^u l Quddu of Gangō ʿ7 61o
 ʿAbd^u l Sam Qjz 61o
 ʿAbd^u l Wahhab Bukh r Sa d 434
 ʿAbd^u l Wallab Shayk 616
 ʿAbd^u l Wāh d Sayy l 58 (No 364)
 ʿAd^l d^u l Wāl d Shayk 616
 ʿAbd^u l Wāq 3 ʿ
 ʿAbd^u n Nab Sadr 177 18ʳ 186 19
 197 279 281 ʳ8ʳ ʳ83 ʳ84 ʳ49
 61 616
 ʿAbd^u r Rah m t Khalul a kat b 107
 ʿAbd^u r Rah m Khar 4o6 ʳoʳ
 ʿAd^l d^u r Ral n of Khwarzm a kat b
 109
 ʿAbd^u r Rah n of Lakhnau Shaykh
 360 ʳʳ4 (No 197)
 ʿAbd^u r Rah m Mawlana a kat b 109
 ʿAbd^u r Rah n Mrza Kl n Khanan
 t de Klan Kl ān
 ʿAbd^u r Ral m son of Qa^u n Khan 401
 Abd^u r Ral man Duldāy ʳ17 (No 186)
 ʳʳ
 ʿAb^l d^u r Rah na Mrz ʳ17 (No 183)
 ʿAl l r Ral n S r ʳj 416 n
 ʿAl l u r l a l d k f l ar ʳj
 l n
 ʿAl l u r Razrī l S n u l Dawla
 494 n
 ʿA u l a z l M of Glan 468 ʿ
 7
 ʿAxl^u S l j Ma l na 6 4
 Ab^u S l j l ā 6 0
 ʿA l u S l f M Sa a Kh
 ʳʳ
 A l S l a l t l
 A l l S l l l k l j 4ʳ 6 ʳ ʿA l S l l Kh n of Ka f n
 ʳ4 (N 3 3)
 ʿA l u S l l l j a S l j l a n
 114 l (No
 ʿA l u Sh k M l l 1 8
 A l u S l l n l l l S (N 34)
 ʿA l u S u Mrz S
- Al hanj, Klan 3o7 n
 Al or nal raees 41 ʳ0ʳ t le Tr bes
 Al u l l q l ran, Slayk 608
 Al l a l S a y d 486 ʳʳ0 (No 381)
 Al l B qa ʳj
 A l B a q A r Kl ʿ
 Ab l Far l S l f Was t ʳʳ 4ʳ8
 Al u l l a t l l 731 l
 Al u l l a t l G jr Sha Kl ʿl l
 Abu l Fatl Hak m 154 ʳʳ 3ʳ8 440
 468 (No 11ʳ) 469 61ʳ 639 n
 644 n 6o6
 Abu l Fath Khan son of Shaʳīsta Khan
 ʳ76
 Al l l a t l son of Iaz l B ʳg 333 493
 ʳ4ʳ ʳ42 n
 Abu l Fatl son of Muzaffar Mughul
 576 (No 3ʳ3)
 Al u l Fattāh Atal q ʳʿ (ʳʳ4)
 Abu l Fayz Fayz 48 ʳʳ l Fayzī
 Abu l Faql author of the ʳ^e n l 6 177
 178 183 184 196 197 n 03 ʳ04
 213 218 ʳʳ0 4ʳʳ 488 490
 ʳ 3 n
 Abu l l a ʳ l of Kazwun Khat b 549
 Abu l Faql son of the Mr ʿAdl 548
 Abu l Hasan Kh aja 34 t de Āsaf
Khan
 Abu l Hasan Sayy l son of the Mr
 ʿAl 58 (No 383)
 Abu l Hu ay 4 8
 Abu l Khayr Khan ʳ 6 7
 Abu l M^uʿal son of the Mr ʿAl 563
 (No ʳ37) t le Slal Abu l M^uʿal
 Al u l M u l n n a l ʳʳʳ
 Al l M affar Mr 4 4
 Abu l Muzaffar son of Ashraf Klan
 ʳ4 (No 240)
 ʿAl l Q m l otte of ʿAbu l Qadr
ʿAbhund 4 (No ʳ4)
 Ab l Qas m Governor of Gwal yar 330
 Abu l Q s Mr of N shapur ʳ93
 (No 398)
 Abu l Q s m of Werlopa^t 677 n
 6 8 n
 Abu l Q m Sa d son of the Mr
 ʿAdl 48 (No ʳ 1)
 Abu l Waf M ʳ 6
 Al Na r of Farah 43 n
 Al u l a l n q of d, 44

- Abu Sa'īd Mirzā, Sultān, 331, 339
 Abū Sa'īd Ṣawafī Mirzā, son of Sultān
 Husayn Mirzā, 327, 328, 500 (No 271)
 Abu Sa'īd, Sultān of Kāshghar, 512, 513
 Abū Talīb Shā'ista Ḳhān, 570, 576
 Abū Talīb, son of Munis Ḳhān, 459
 Abū Talīb, son of Shā'ista Ḳhān, 575, 576
 Abu Turab, Mir, Gujrātī, 445, 569
 Abwāb-i mal, revenue accounts 270 accounts, how kept, 14, how divided, 270
 Achhe, Shaykh, 583 n
 Ādam Barha Sayyid 427, 588 n
 Ādam, Sultān, Gakkhar, 338, 506, 507,
 508, 544
 Ādam, the first man, called Haft bazār
 103 n
 Adham Ḳhān, son of Mahum Anga, 274,
 349 (No 19)
 Adham, Mir, 486
 Adhan, Shaykh, 607
 Adhela, a coin, 32
 Ādil Ḳhān, son of Shah Muḥammad i Qalātī 478 (No 125)
 Ādil Shah, 520, 520 n
 Ādil guṭka, a coin, 31 admiralty, 289
 admission to court, 160
 advances to officers, 275
 Adwand, of Orisā 594 (No 413)
 Afghans their last stand under Āusman
 Lohani 586 587, their character
 436 583
 Afīatūn Mirzā 372
 Afrasiyab son of Mirzā Muḥammad
 Hakīm 409
 Āfrida 578
 Afshar, 687
 Aftabī 30
 Āftābhīr a royal ensign 52
 Afzal Ḳhān, 674 n
 Afzal Ḳhān Ḳhājwaḳa Sultān Āli, 408
 (No 36)
 agar vide Aloes
 Agate, vide babaghuri
 Āghā Ḳhān Nahawāndī 672 n
 Āghā Muḥammad Na'ī 682 n
 Āghā Muḥammad Tabir Washī, 576
 Āgha Mulla, 537 558, 572 572 n
 Āghā Mulla Dawatdar, 398 451 508
 Āgha Mulla Qazwīnī 589 (No 376)
 Āḡur, or firepot, 50
 Ahadis, 20, 20 n, 170 170 n, 241, 259, under Jahangir, 605
 Ālanchini a metal, 41
 Al dad, 571
 Āli i jama'at 191 n
 Āḡmad Barha Sayyid 300 447 (No 91)
 Āḡmad Beg Kabulī, 501, 518 (No 191), 589
 Āḡmad Beg Ḳhān brother of Nur Jahan, 576
 Āḡmad Beg Mirzā 398
 Āḡmad Bulḡhārī Sayyid, 456
 Āḡmadī Ḳāyḡar Shaykh, 616
 Āḡmad Ḳhān Niyazī 541 n, 542
 Āḡmad Ḳhāṭṭu Shaykh, 570, 570 n
 Āḡmad Lodi 569
 Āḡmad Mir Munshī 486
 Āḡmad Mulla, of Thathah 112, 113, 216
 Āḡmad Qasim Koka 564 (No 307)
 Āḡmad Sayyid 568
 Āḡmad Shah, Raṡṡṡ-i Mulk, of Gujrāt, 419
 Āḡmad, Shaykh 614
 Āḡmad Shaykh a katib, 100
 Āḡmad Shaykh, son of Ābd-i Quddus,
 615
 Āḡmad, Shaykh, son of Salim Chishtī
 Sukrawāl 530 (No 210)
 Āḡmad Sufī 218 219
 Āḡmad Sultān of Gujrāt 569
 Āḡrar Ḳhājwaḳa, 467, 608
 aimg vide aymaq
 Āḡṡā'ī, a tent 56
 Ākas diva, 49 52, 52 n
 Akbar, Emperor when born, 64 n, his miraculous birth, 219, 415, his full name, 195, his mother 332 303,
 304, his nurses, vide Mahum Anaga, Pīcha Jan Anaga Ji Ji Anaga, his attachment to relatives 341, 342
 343, his children, 321, his wives,
 181, 321, 322, 686, his brothers vide
 Muḥammad Hakīm Mirzā and Mirzā Ibrahim, 794, his character and how he spends his time 162 163
 164, abhors cruelty, 141 n, regards

the performance of his duty an act of worship 11 enters into details 254 is a good physiognomist 248 n believes in lucky days 97 n is lucky 254 is musical 53 54 is witty 471 shows himself to the people 164 how he dines 60 61 invents new names 47 61 62 68 69 96 110 135 136 147 n is fond of fruit 68 dislikes meat 64 abstains from it 164 wears woollen stuffs like Sufis 96 likes only certain books 110 is fond of painting 113 114 115 of elephants and trained leopards 138 399 likes to see spiders fight 308 does not hunt on Fridays 300 invents a carriage 98 and a wheel for cleaning guns 192 his favourite gun Sangrām 193 680 invents elephant gear 134 135 in proves his army 242 introduces the brand or the Daq̄h o Mahallā Law 242 243 343 344 660 n improves guns 119 170 his forced march from Āgra to Gujrat 342 438 n 480 n his religion 51 is the spiritual guide of his people 170 performs miracles 174 94 297 is the representative of God 197 is king by Divine Right Preface 3 abolishes the ḡīḡā 198 interdicts beef 207 orders the courtiers to shave off their beards 202 609 n looks upon logs and pgs as clean 903 abolishes the Hijrah 204 lates everything Arabic 20 909 710 dislikes the names Muham mad and Anāl 392 n makes the Wallas rank with 907 572 calls a Zoroastrian priest from Persia 90 keeps Lars feasts 946 discourages circumcision on all the rite of ḡū 916 917 saves a Salt 472 lates the learned and drives them from court 181 900 901 rescues the r grants of land 28 29 90 291 is views on marriage 98 908 arly on educa tion 289 299 fixes the age for marriage 204 worships fire and the sun 51 210 211 212 founds a new sect 174 admits pupils to it by ceremony 212 (title Divine Faith) is opposed for his religious opinions 439 especially by ‘Abdullah of Turan 522 is called a God 632 forces courtiers to prostrate themselves before him vide s jdah his last illness 521 day of his death 222 n is buried at Sikan drah 900

Albarnama Lucknow edition of 481 n 543 n

Akl ar Qulī Sultan 544 545

akhtar meaning of 477 n

Alkh̄tāch s an officer over horses 145

Ālī Muḡaffar a dynasty 494

alacha a stuff vide alcha

Āṣṣa Hazrat a title 358 n

Āṣṣa Kh̄ḡiqin a title 358 n

‘Ālam s royal standard 52

‘Ālam Barha Navy d 427 431 n

Āṣṣam kabūl Mullā 167 n 615

‘Ātam Lodī 569

‘Āla s d Dāwlah Mirza 577

‘Āla s d D n H rat a katib 108

‘Āla s d D n Islam Khan s 586 587

‘Āla s d D n Kh̄l j his cons 18 his army reforms 29 interferes with grants of land 981 396 n 512 n 90 n

‘Āla s d D n Kh̄waf Kh̄waja 464

‘Āla s d D n Lar c 1

‘Āla s d D n Majr 1 608

‘Āla s d D n M 88

‘Āl s d Mulk of I a 670 n

‘Āla s d Mulk Mir of I r n c 379

al ha a mol r 64 a stuff 37 9 n

Al xand r tīc Creat (S kandar) 767 673

‘Āh Mir a katib 108 107

‘Āh Mir Sayy d Judā s of Tabriz a painter and poet 111 600 — a mus an 680 — of Qīm 607

‘Āl Qazī 30

‘Āl tīc Kh̄l fā 10

‘Āl ḡh̄māl tīc cr̄aver 27 28 54 50

‘Āl Akbar Mir 410 (No 6)

‘Āl Akbar Fāḡib h Mir 206 n

‘Āl Aqghar Mir a 434

- ʿAlī Beg Akbarshāhī, Mirzā, 539
 ʿAlī Beg ʿAlamshahī, Mirzā, 538 (237)
 ʿAlī Chaman, a katib, 109
 ʿAlī Dost Khān, 602, 602 n
 Alif Khān Gujrātī, 419
 ʿAlī ibn Hilāl, a calligraphist, 106
 ʿAlī Khān Chāk, 534
 ʿAlī Khān, Raja, of Khāndes 345 356
 ʿAlī Mardān Bahadur, 556 (No 273)
 ʿAlī Muḥammad Asp, 551 (No 358)
 ʿAlī Qulī, vide Khān Zaman
 ʿAlī Qulī Beg Istajlū, Sher Afkān Khān,
 591 (No 394) 689
 ʿAlī Qulī Khān Indarabī, 478 (No 124)
 ʿAlī Ray, of little Tibbat, 323 529, 676
 ʿAlī Sher, Mir, 107 n, 108, 108 n, 360
 ʿAlī Shukr Beg 329 330
Salaherī: a melon, 68
 ʿAlī Yar 448
 Allah Bahāsh Sadr, 482
 Allah Qulī, 544, 543
 Allah Yar Khān, 560
 alms, paid at court, 14, 276, 277 aloes, wood of aloes, 85
aloni, 26 27
 alphabet- 104, 105 n
 Alqas Mirza, Safawī, 328
 Āltun Qulij 561 (No 290)
 Amanʿullāh son of Sayf Khān Koka,
 584 (No 356)
 Amba Alān Chāk Kashmīrī, 529, 529 n, 557
ʿambar, 83
 ʿAmbar, Malik, 359 360, 453
 Amun Khān Ghori, 581
 Amun Razi, Khwājā, 572, 576
 Amunʿd Din Inju Mir, 501
 Amir Beg Payrawī 670
 Amir Chaubān, 331
 Amir Ḥaydar of Belgram, 331 n
 Amir Khān 526 527
 Amir Khān, Sayyid, 494 n
 Amir Khān Muḡhal Beg 404
 Amir Khusrāw Khān, 324, 325, 330
 Amir Khusrāwī Sayyid, 661 n
 Amir Mansur, a katib, 107
 Amir Qazī Asrī, 668
 Amirʿ I umarā, a title, 200, 353
 Amr Singh, or Amra, Rānā, 364, 495, 585
 Amr Singh, of Idar, 353
 Amr Singh Baghela, 446
 Amr Singh Sisodiyā 460
 Amrī, a poet 678 n
 Amrʿullāh Mirzā 361
 amulets 571
 amusements at court 308, 316
 Anand Singh Kachhwaha 461
anaga, or nurse 341
 Anān, 229, 230, 231
 Anīs, a poet, 648, 648 n
 Anīsʿd Din, vide Mihtar Khān
 Anup Singh Baghela, 446
 Anwar Mirza, 345
 ʿAqaʿid : Nāṣafī title of a book, 390 n
 ʿĀqil, Mirza son of Mirza ʿIsa Tarkhān,
 392 n
 ʿĀqil Husavn Mirzā, 513, 514
aptāʿ or jagīr 266 266 n
 ʿArab Bahādūr, 198 377 438 450, 472,
 494 537
 ʿArabshah Mir, 634 n
 ʿArāfat o ʿArāqūt, a Takhira, 584
 Āram Banu Begum, Akbar's daughter, 321
arbab meaning 633 n
Arbabʿullāhawl, household expenses, 270 archers 264
 Ardsher a Zoroastrian priest 220 220 n.
 Ardsher Kabuli, 519
 Arghun, a clan, 389, 391
 Arghun of Kabul a katib, 106
 Arghun Khān, 389
 ʿĀrif Beg Shaykh ʿUmarī 605
 Arjun Singh, 543 (No 244)
 Arlat, a clan, 531 571
 armourers, 119
 armours, kinds of, 117, 118, 119 arms, list of, 116
 army, strength of Akbar's army, 241,
 254, 256, of Shāhshāhān, 255
 Atqūn, ʿAbdʿullāh, a katib, 107 attrack, 74
 arsenal, the imperial, 115
 Arstan, a poet, 678
 Arzani Begum, 324
ʿarż namchās, 273
 Asad Beg son of Khān Dawrān Shāh, 410
 Asad Khān, Shujaʿi Kābulī, 476 n.

Asad Khan, son of Qutlugh Qadam Khān, 478
 Asad Khan Turkman, 415
 'Asad' d Dawla, Mir Jamal' d Din Husayn, 500
 Asad' ilah Khān, of Tabriz 471 (No 116)
 Asad' ilah, Mirza, 538
 Asad' ilah, son of Sher Khawaja, 511
 Asad' ilah Turkman 415, 472
 Āsafī, a poet, 652 n., 667 n., 670 n.
 Āsaf jāh, 575
 Āsaf Khan, Āsaf' d Dawla, Āsaf jāh 398, 399
 Āsaf Khan (I) 'Abd' l Majid 251, 349, 372 395, 396
 Āsaf Khan (II), Ghiyas' d Din 'Alī, 451, 479 (No 126), 575
 Āsaf Khan (III), Ja'far Beg, 219 323, 324, 451 (No 98), 519 583 643
 Āsaf Khan (IV) Yamīn' d Dawla, Mirza Abu 'l Hasan, 575 576
 Aṣalat Khan Lodi, 568
 aṣṣāhar, 25
 Ashki, a poet, 660 n., 667
 Ashraf, a poet, 424
 Ashraf Khan Mir Munshi, Muḥammad Aṣḥar, 107, 107 n., 423 (No 74)
 Ashraf Khawaja, 576 (No 320)
 aṣṣī, a coin, 32
 aṣṣūḥā, a metallic composition 42
 aṣṣūḥā, a coin, 31
 Asun, of Ray, 668
 Askaran Kachhwaha 475, 509 600
 'Askari Mirza, brother of Humāyūn 334, 372, 489
 'Askari Mirza, son of Ja'far Beg, 454
 Aṣl : Jam' : Tumar, 377
 'Asmat : Andiyū, title of a book, 614 aṣrār : maḥmūd, title of a book 638 n assaying, mode of 22 assessment, under Bayrām Khān, 373, under Muḥaffar Khān, 373, under Toḍar Mal, 377, 475, of Kashmir, 370, 452, of Afghanistan, 409
 Aswāti, Mawlanā, 682 n aṣṣūq, an officer, 330 333, 339, 346 351, 354, 355, 357, 371, 383, 383 n., 388, 399, 416, 430 452, 453 aṣṣūqī, master of the horse, 145, 477 n.

Atga Khān Shams' d Din Muḥammad, 274, 337 (No 15), 338
 Atharban, a Sanskrit work, 111, 111 n aṣṣ ḷāmba, a tent, 56
 'Atiq 594
 aṣṣal 229, 230
 Atku Timur, 389
 atma a coin, 29
 'atr, rose water, 574
 aviary, the imperial, 307
 Awj Mulla 663 n
 Awiad Husayn, 535
 aṣṣarāng or throne, 52
 Awrangzeb 358 n., abolishes music, 682 n., 683
 Awans a tribe, 507 n
 awara nava, 261
 'Awarif' l Ma'arif, title of a book, 479
 'Ayar Danish, a book by Abu l Faḥl, 112, 112 n
 Ayas' l Lursi name of a verse in the Qur'an, 177
 Ayas, slave of Mahmūd of Chazni, 636 n
 Ayasas, tenures, 283, 284
 'Āyisha, Muḥammad's wife, 206 n., 213 n
 'Āyn Khan Dakhimi 539
 'Ayshī Mawlana, 109
 A'zam Khan vide Khān : A'zam aṣṣarf' l 'l ḥab, a perfume, 87
 Aḥar, Mawlana, a katib, 108
 Azhdar Khān Dakhimi 539
 'Aziz, son of Khan Jaban Lodi, 568
 'Aziz Kabuli Mirzā 476 n
 'Aziz Hoka, vide Khan : A'zam
 'Aziz' ilah, Mir, 404
 'Aziz' ilah, Mir Turbatī, 595
 'Azmat, Lodi, 568

BĀBĀ Āgha 353

Baba Balas, 608

Baba Beg, 450

baḥāghur, or agate, 36, 683

Baba Hasan Abdal, a saint, 580

Baba Khān Qaqshal 375, 399 n., 400, dies, 377

Bāba Kipūr 608

Baba Quchin, 493

- Babar Emperor, introduces gardening,
93, his Memoirs, 112, 355, 325,
390, 463, 512, 686
- bābaskaykhi*, a kind of melon, 68 590
- Baba Sher Qalandar, a saint, 578
- Baba Talib, a poet, 676
- Baba Zambur, 355, 387
- Babu Mankh, 400, 528 (No 202)
- babul*, wood, 23 n, 25, 73
- Balūs, Mir, 423 (No 73), 488 n, 687
- Badakhshis, their character, 504
- Badan Singh Bhadauriya, 547
- Badaoni, the historian, 110 n, 111 n,
177, 271, 402, 481, 485, 531, 617,
652 n
- badshayan*, 62, 62 n
- badshā'ī bayan*, title of a book, 617
- Badī^{cu} 'z Zamān, Mirza Shahnawaz
Khān, 527 n
- Badī^{cu} 'z Zamān, Mirza, son of Āgha
Mulla, 398, 451
- Badī^{cu} 'z Zaman, Qazwini, 451
- Badī^{cu} 'z Zaman, son of Mirza Shahrukh
Badakhshi, 326
- Badī^{cu} 'z Zaman Mirza, son of Sultan
Husain Mirza, 389, 390
- badla* (brocade) 574
- Badr i 'Ālam, Mir, 522
- Badr, Sayyid, 458
- Bad Singh Bhaduriya, 547 n
- baḡhī*, a dirham, 37
- Bahadur*, conferred as title, 360
- Bahadur Dhanturi, 591
- Bahadur Gohlot 564 (No 308)
- Bahadur Khān (No 87), vide Muḥammad Asghar and Pahār Khān
- Bahadur Khān, Muhammad Sa'īd Shaybani, 347, 349, 395, 397, 413 414
- Bahādūr Khān Gilani, 556
- Bahadur Khān Qurdar, 555 (No 269)
- Bahādūr, Sultān, of Gujrat, 372 680 n
- Bahar Begam, daughter of Jahangir, 322
- Baharlū tribe, 329, 387, 687
- Baha^{cu} 'd Dīn Kambu, 535
- Bahā^{cu} 'd Dīn Mufti, 616
- Baha^{cu} 'd Dīn Zakariya, of Multan, 436
- Bahā^{cu} 'd Dīn Mīrūb, of Badā'on, 449
- bahā*, 15, 15 n
- Bahmanyar, 575 576
- Bahram, son of Shamsi 499
- Bahrām Mirza, Safawī 328
- Bahram Quli, a musician 682
- I ahram Saqqa a poet, 651, 651 n
- Bairi 'Sal brother of Gajpati of Bihar,
558 n
- Bairawī a Qoran commentator, 614
- Bakhshi Banu Begum, 339
- Bakhshis, of Akbar's reign 595
- Bakhshu, a singer, 680 n
- Bakhtiar a clan of Jalesar 469
- Bakhtyar Beg Gurd 529 (No 204)
- Bakhya Anaga 475
- Baland Akhtar, 324
- Balbhadr Rathor 563 (No 296)
- Laldhadr, Ray of Lakhimpur, 360
- Balinas, the philosopher, 622 n
- Balju Qulij 562
- Baltu Khān, 530 (No 207)
- Baluchis 385 388, 434
- bamboo price of, 234
- ban*, 19, 20
- banais*, 262
- Banda 'Alī Maydani, 560 (No 284)
- Banda 'Alī Qurbegī 560
- banduqci*: vide match lock bearer
- Bankā Kachwahā, 555 (No 270)
- ban-kulis*, 262
- banowari*, 19
- Baqā^{cu}, a poet, 664 n
- Baqi Be Uzbek, 585 (No 368)
- Baqi Billah, 488
- Baqi Khān, 413 (No 60), 414, 687
- Baqi Khān son of Tahir Khān, 448
- Baqi Safarchi 603
- Baqi Sultan Uzbek, 327
- Baqi Tarḡhan, Mirzā 463
- Baqur, Mawlana a katib, 100
- Bāqur Ansari 563 (No 298)
- Baqur Bulḡhari Sayyid, 435
- barah* or a community of twelve vil'ages, 429
- barat*, or cheque, 272
- Barawardi*, soliers, 241
- bari nay* a kind of melon, 68
- barḡah*, audience tent 55 56
- barḡur*, a kind of horse, 140 142, 147, 224, 273
- Bārha Sayyids, 425 to 432
- Barī of Hirat, a katib, 108
- Barḡhurdār, Khwaḡa, 578

- Barkhurdār Mirza Khan Ā'lam 577
 (No 328)
 Barlas a clan 364 n 303
 Basakhwāns a sect 666 n
 Basawan the painter 114
 Basu Raja of Mau 369 495 508
 Batani an Afghan tribe 532 n
 Bayasanghar son of Prince Dānyal 322
 Bayasanghar Mirza, 324 325
 Bayat a Turkish tribe 651
 Bāyazīd son of Sulayman of Bengal
 390
 Bayaz d Barha 427 562 (No 295)
 Bayazīd Beg Turkman 563 (No 299)
 Bayazīd Mu'azzam Khān 552 (No 260)
 Bayram Beg father of Mun'im Khān, 333
 Bayrām Khān Khān Khānan 322 329
 (No 10) 352 373 his assessment
 373 379 399 405 482 484 681 n
 Bayrām Oghlan 517
 Bayrām Qulij 562
 Baytar or horse-doctor 146
 Baz Bahādur son of Sharif Klān, 416
 518 (No 189)
 Baz Bahadur of Malwa 337 341 473
 (No 120) 681
 bdellium 87
 Be a title for Beg 506 bear a stupid animal 684
 Bechu Slavkh 607
 Bedar Bakht Prince 527
 beef interdicted by Akbar 202
 beer manufacture of 563
 Beg Baba Kolabi 488
 Beg Muhammad Toqba^{ti} 576 (No 324)
 Beg Muhammad Uignūr 584 (No 360)
 Beg Nurin Khān Quchin 331 (No 212)
 Beg Oghlu 464
 Begam Shāhib 683
 Begams their salaries 693
 Beglar Beg a title 354
 Deglar Khān 499
 Bengal Military Revolt 688
 Beni Das Bundela, 546
 betel leaf cultivation of 77
 betel nut, 76
 betting at court 228 300
 Bhadauriya clan 341 547
 Bhagwan Das Bundela, 546
 Bhagwan Das Kachhwāha (Bhagwant
 Das) 208 323 353 (No 27)
 Bhakar Sayyid 458
 bhāngar a metallic composition 42
 Bhā o Singh Kachhwāha 363 543
 Bhīrat Chand Bundelā 546
 bhēlā a nut 54 n
 Bhuk or Bhikan Shaykh, 616
 Bhī Khān Sal mshahī 366
 Bhim Raja Dawlatshāhi 359
 Bhim Rawul of Jaisalmer, 533 (No 225)
 Bhim Singh Kachhwāha 461, 543
 bhīrān a stuff 100 685
 Bhoj Bhaderiya, 547
 Bhoj Hadā 449
 Bhoj Raj Shaykhawat 462
 bhōlān a fruit 75
 Bhugyals a Gakkhar tribe 544
 Bibi Safiya 489
 Bibi Sarwā Salī 489
 Bichitr Khān a singer 681
 Biḡara meaning of 570 n
 Biharī Mal Kachhwāha 322 347 (No 23)
 Bihruz Raja 491 n
 Bihzad a painter 113 113 n
 Bijli Khān Afghān 399
 Bikramajit 423 vide Patr Das
 Bikramajit of Gwaljar 680 n
 Bikramajit Baghela 446
 Bikramajit Bhadauriya 547
 Bikramajit Bundela 546
 Bilas son of Tansen 682 n bin a musical instrument 681 682
 Bina Shavkh 613
 binsat a coin 30
 bir meaning of 554 n
 Bir Bar Raja 184 192 198, 202 207
 209 214 218 219 349 368 442
 (No 80) 443 444 446 469
 Bir Bhadr Baghela 446
 Bir Mandal Khān a musician 681
 Bir Sah of Gondwanah 397
 Bir Singh De o Bundela 509 594 545
 546, 546 n
 biryan, a dish 63
 Biswas Rao, 499
 Bizan (Bizhan) 571
 blood of enemies drunk 472
 borax 27

- boy's love, 335, 375, 387, 626 n. 627 n., 639 n., vide immorality
- branding horses, 147, 147 n., 148, introduced by Akbar, 213 265
- brass, how made, 42
- bread how prepared 64
- bricks, price of, 233
- Bud Singh Bhadauriya, 547 n
- Budi (Badhi) Chand of Nagarkot, 349, 369, 443
- buffalo hunts, 304
- bughra*, a dish, 63
- bugrawati*, 25
- bulbūli*, a coin, 32
- Bahlul khān in Mirāns, 569
- buildings, 232, estimates of, 236
- bukhar* (gas) 40, 41, 42, 43
- Bulāqi (Dawar Bahsh), 324
- Bulāqi Begum 323
- Bundela Rajputs, of Ūdha, genealogy, 546
- burd*, or drawn (a game), 310
- Burhan, Shaykh, 608
- Burhan, Mir, 424
- Burj 'Alī, 336
- Buzurg, Mir, of Bhakkar, 560
- cereals, prices of 65
- chalakswar*, an officer over horses, 145
- chahargho'ha*, a coin, 30 n., 31
- chaharnahrī*, a canal 550 n
- chak*, a Kashmir family, 534
- Chāima Rīg rōdē Khān 'Alām*
- Chāman*, title of a historical work, 372
- Champat Bundela, 546
- Chand Bibi, 357 n
- Chand Khan and Chand Mivan, two singers, 681, 682
- Chanda Rao Sisodia, 460
- chandaī mandal*, a play, 316
- Chandar Sen, son of Maldeo, of Jodhpūr (Marwar), 349, 384, 461, 531
- Chandr Man Bundela, 546
- Chandrawat 459
- Changiz Khan Gujrāti, 337, 340 419, 514, 515
- character, of Kashmiris, 436, of the Gakkhars, 545, of Gujrātis 421, of Badakhshis, 505, of the women of Persia, Tūran, Khurāsān, and India 346, of Afghāns, 436, of Kambūs, 436, of Dakhnis, 490, of Turks, 609
- charāh*, 311
- charn*, a coin, 32
- Chāshingiz, a mint officer, 24
- Chatbanuris, a clan 426, 426 n. 430
- chatr*, or umbrella, 52
- Chatr khān, a musician, 692 n
- Chatr Sal Kachiwaha, 461
- Chatrauris a clan, 426, 430
- chatrmandal*, a method of hunting, invented by Akbar, 279
- chatroī* a royal standard, 52
- chawpā*, or hockey, 309, 310
- chawli*, or guard, 267
- chawpar*, a game, 315, 374
- chautar*, a stuff, 100, 693
- chelas* or slaves, 263, 263 n., 264, definition of the term "slave", 263 264
- cheque, or bardī, 272
- cherry tree, 239
- Chetr Bhoj 352
- chāchāhīyā*, 26
- Chhajhū Bācha, 532 (No 221)
- Chibbs, a tribe, 507 n
- chikāf*, a dish, 62
- CALIGRAPHISTS of fame, 107
caligraphy, 105
- camels, the imperial 151, different kinds of, 151; their food, 152, harness, 152, 153, are shorn, 151, have oil injected into the nose, 154, 155 how trained, 155, how mustered, 225
- camphor, 83 84, causes importance, 419
- camps, 47
- canals, 353, 550 n
- cannons, 119, 122
- cards, 318
- carpets, 57
- carriages, or balals, 285. English carriages, 285 n., for trained leopards, 299, kinds of, 158
- cash payments, 141 n.
- cattle, 157, good in Bengal and the Dakhin, bad in Dihil, 157, their food, 158, how mustered, 226.

Chun Quli 35 n (where wrong Husayn Quli) 561 (No 293) 502
 Chngz Khan h s descendants 389 511 511 n 512 h s law (batorah) 50
 Chngiz Khan Nizamshah 490
 Chirkis i Rumi 416
chirwa 262
 Christianity taught the Imperial princes 191 192
 Christians exhibit crosses and representations in wax of the birth of Christ 203 203 n vide cunabula
chubin a kind of tent 47
chub n ra ofi a kind of tent 47 48 50 chugal a coin 30 30 n chuna a scent 86
 civet vide zabad
 coco nut 75
 coins list of Akbars coins 28 vide currency collectors of revenue their salary 260 colours nature of 102 contingents of the Mansabdars 201 202 254 250 207 conversions to Christianity 560 to Islam 447 n 446 460 494 n 510 512 577 n to Shi'ism 494 654 n copper 41 42
 cornelian its exhilarating properties 573 n cotton stuff 100 680 court ceremonies 46 165 166 167 168 169 276 277 vide Chngiz Khan s law cows the imperial 157 cowdung how used 21 crews of ships 980
cunabula 686 vide Christians currency changes in 33

DABISTAN ul Mazahib a work on religious sects 919 219 n 290 290 n 502 n 503

Dafar 2 0 2 0 n
dah o mahall system 907 202 n 265 400 440 401 660 n vide brant g d g a warm mantle 304 34 n
Daheri tax 98
 Dai D lar m 74
 Dairan of Chiragrah 446

dakhila soldiers 241 264 265
 Dakhini Mirza 27 n
 Dakhinis noted for stly duty 400
dakhil a kind of poetry 108 n 392
 Dakili a poet 677
 D k Mewras 262 n
 Dalap Dav Kachwaha 540
 Dalpat son of Rav Rav Singh 385, 380 n 396 517 548 (No 202)
 Dalpat Ujjain 577 577 n dam a coin 32 33 34 35 da nama a musical instrument 52 da nanai a kind of gun 10 dampulit a dist 63
dansi a coin 32
da g a weight 37
 Danyal Sultan Akbar s son born and died 329 480 n his children 35 n, 49 322 393 307 467 500
 Danyal i Chahst Shaykh 322
 Dara Shikoh Prince 329 534
 Darab Khan Mirza Darab 359 361
darb a coin 32
darbans or porters 261
 Darbar Khan 517 (No 185)
darsan 160 darsani 217
 Darwish Bahram Saqqa 651 651 n
 Darwish Kh istraw Qazwin 503
 Darwish Mawlana 107 107 n
 Darwish Muhammad Mawlana of Mashhad 690
 Darwish Muhammad Uzbak 440 (No 81)
 Darwish Sayyid son of Shams i Bukhari 590 (No 380)
 Darya Khan Rohla 567 568
dasi a coin 37
 Dastam Khan 430 (No 79) 687
 Daswanth a painter 114
 Da'ud a singer 681 681 n
 Da'ud king of Bengal 334 350 351, 404 404 n 407 411
 Da'ud Jhannawal Shaykh 608
 Daudi Rao Soodiya 460
 Dauda Halil 437 449 400
 Daw Kha 517 512 n
 Dawai 577 613
dawer a class of letters 109 109 n
 Dawam Mer of Kh ras n 680
 Dewan Shauki a seaman 682
 Davar Bukhari Prince 34 340

Dawlat, Sayyid, 493
 Dawlat Bahāvar, Shāykh 563 (No 300)
 Dawlat Khān, son of Amin Khān Ghori, 344
 Dawlat Khān Lodi, 355, 356 357, 546 (No 309)
 Dawlat Nisa Begum, 533 n
 Dawlat Shad Bibi, 322
 Dawri, a k̄atib and poet, 109, 109 n
 Dawwani, 537, 670 n
 days of fast, at court, 64, 65
 Deb Chand Raja Manjholā, 184
 Debī Singh, 546
 deer, 301, 302, deer fights, 228
 De Laët, 587, 604, 605, 606, 689
 Devī Das, of Mūrthā, 340, 531
 dhān, a coin, 31
 dhār, "a singer," "a musician," 681 n, 682 n
 Dharmidhar Ujjainiya, 577 n
 Dharū, son of Todar Mal, 378, 518 (No 190)
 Dholā Ray, founder of Amber, 348
 Dhūnds, a tribe, 507 n
 dialect, of Qandahar, 448 diamonds, 536 n. — powder, a poison, 573 n diary, kept at court, 268, 269
 Dilabzāk, a tribe, 545 n, 589, 589 n
 Dīlir Khān Barha, 427
 Dilras Banu Begum, 527
 dinār, 38
 Dīn Muḥammad Sultan, 327
 Dirang Khān, a singer, 632 n dirham, 36, 37, 38
 distilling, mode of, 74
 Divine Era, established 205
 Divine Faith, Akbar's religion, 174, a mission of novices, 174 175, ordinances of 175, 176. vide Akbar
 Diwālī, a Hindu festival, kept at court, 228
Divan : Sa'ādāt, an officer, 273 278
 Diwans, their insignia, 453 n doctors, of Akbar's reign, 611 dogs, esteemed at court 204, imported, 301, Akbar's, 517, 640 n donations 276
 donjar, meaning of 554 n
 Dost Mir, of Kābul an engraver 53

Dost Khān, 602
 Dost Mirza, 412
 Dost Muḥammad, 418
 Dost Muḥammad, son of Baba Dost, 591 (No 391)
 Dost Muḥammad, son of Šādiq Khān 561 (No 287)
 Dost Muḥammad Kabuli, 468 533 n dress different articles of, 94 95 drinking, excessive, at court and among the grantees 340, 360 369, 391, 392 410, 446 453, 470 496, 516 522, 524 543 551 584, 614 do-āshiyāna manzil, a tent, 56 duashpa shaspa, 251, 252
duūtusha, or brandy, 74
 dudāmī a stuff 574
dud : chiragh a melon 68
dubul a drum, 53
dukhan (vapour), 40 41, 42, 43
 Duldav, name of a Barlas tribe, 422 duyyadar, a title, 453 n
dupiyāna, a dish, 63
 Durgawati, queen of Gondwanah, 397, 397 n, 473
 Durjodhan of Bandhū, 446
 Durjun, Sāl of Kokra 536 n
dusdibryān, a dish 62
 Dwārka Das Bakhsī, 457

EATING houses, for the poor, 210, 211, 285, 286 education, Akbar's rule, 288, 289 elephants, where numerous in India, 685, imperial, 123, 124, prices of, 124, 125, kinds of 125, gestation, 125, white elephant, 124 n, marks of, 127, when most 127, classification made by Hindus, 129, their cunning, 130, Akbar's classification, 131, food of, 131, servants in charge of, 132, harness, 134, fights 139, 139, 520, how mustered, 223, divided into seven classes, 246, how hunted, 295, 411, elephant stables, 579 emigration, forcible, 559 encampments, 47
 engravers, 22, 23.
 epidemic, 407

Era of the Hijrah abolished 204
vide Divine Era
 eunuchs 307 32 n
 expenses of the Imperial Household 12 export of horses forbidden 24 eyes blue are hostile to the Prophet 180

FĀHĪM *M*ian 360

Falī: name of several poets 668
 668 n

fālīr ja a term applied to poets 621

Fālīr Jalālī *l*cgū 333

Fālīr^a n *N*usa Begum 339

fāl n weight 37

falcons 304 300 306

famine 217

Fan^a: a poet 471

fancy b. zāra 213, 286 287

fān^a rī (wrongly called qayṣūrī) a kind of camphor 84

Fāraḡhat *M*r de Ṭāhūr khān

*l*arḡbī a poet 673

fargul a kind of goat from Europe 90

Farhang: Jahāng rī a Persian dictionary
 501 501 n

Farhang Khān 437 489 581

Farḡat khān Mīhtar Saka: 437 488
 (No 145), 489 581

Far d Lodi 568

Farid Quarawal 584

Farid: Bullārī Murtazā Khān 437 474
 (No 99) 48, 638

Far d ī Sīakkarganj the saint 343 609

Far d n barlas *M*rza 364 534 (No 227)

Faridun khān 477

Fārīdī, a poet 583

farmān °°° — bayāzī: 275 — sabī 270 farmānchā 209

Farrāsh khāna, 55

Farrūḡh Husayn Khān 480 (No 127)

Farrūḡh khān 339 537 (No 232)

farāḡ: chāndāsī: 574

farzand or son a title, 328 361 397

Fāṭḡ Dawlat, 442

Fāṭḡ khān Afghān 564

Fāṭḡ khān son of Amin Khān Ghorī, 531

Fāṭḡ khān Bahādur 590

Fāṭḡ khān Batnī, 466

Fāṭḡ khān Ch tabbān 590 (No 385)

Fāṭḡ khān Ṭīban 590 599

Fāṭḡ khān of Jalor 689

Fāṭḡ khān son of Malik Āmbar 566

Fāṭḡ khān Tughlīq 518 590

Fāṭḡ^a ḡllāh son of Ḥakīm Abu l Fāṭḡ 469

Fāṭḡ^a ḡllāh *kh*vājā 516

Fāṭḡ^a ḡllāh *Kh*vājag of Kashan 386
 560 (No 280)

Fāṭḡ^a ḡllāh *M*r (Sīal) of Shiraz 34
 110 200 80 282 284 375 609

Fāṭḡ^a ḡllāh *M*rza 392 n

Fāṭḡ^a ḡllāh son of Muḥammad Wafā
 504 (No 64)

Fāṭḡ^a ḡllāh son of Naṣr^a ḡllāh 558

Fāṭḡ^a ḡllāh son of Sa'īd khān 519

Fāṭḡ Z ya 469

fāṭil a weight 37

Fattu Khān Afghān 396 564 599

Fattu *Kh*asā *Kh*ayl 432

Fawāṭish l *W*alayāt title of a book 615

Fayyāzī vide Fayzī

Fayzī of Sarhind 331 n

Fayz Shavḡh Abu l Fayz 28 29 34 n
 117 113 218 548 (No 253) 549

618 618 n

Fāzā^aḡl Beg vide Faz l Beg

Fāz l Beg brother of Mun^aim Khān 333
 493 547 n

Fāzīl khān 339 491 (No 156)

Fāz l khān D wan 567

Fāzīl of *Kh*ujand 37

Fāzīl l Haqq of Qazwin a kātīb 107

feasts kept at court 286 fees customary at court 150

Felis caracal 301 n ferries 292

fever at Gaur 407

Fīdā^aḡl, a poet 379

fights of animals at court 228 520

Fīkrī a poet 671 671 n

fre ordeal between Christians and Muḥammadans 200

fre-worsh p, 51 193

Fīringī 345, 391

Fīrishta, the historian 500

Fīruz of Jalor 533

Fīruz khān servant of the Khān
khānān 360

Fīruz Shāh khiljī 302 353 570 652 n

Firūza, 593 (No 403)
 flavours, nature, 78 fleet, the imperial, 289, 290 flowers, of India, 81, 82, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92
 frauds in the army, 252, 265, in grants of land, 279
 frogs, trained to catch sparrows, 308 fruits, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74
 Fūlad Beg Barlas, 216
 Fusūnī, a poet, 674, 674 n
 futa, worn by repenting Amīr, 386

GADĀ'I Kambū, Shaykh, 282, 342, 596

Gadā'i, Mir, 569 (No 315)
 gairī, a kind of oxen, 158
 gayālā, a kind of gun, 119
 Gajpati of Bihar 437, 466, 558, 581
 Gakkhar Shah 506 n
 games, 309, 315
 Gangadhar, a Sanskrit work, 110 gangajāl, a kind of cloth, 100
 gaura, a perfume, 85
 Genealogies, of the Raos of Rampur (Islampūr), Chitor, 460 of the Gakkhars 544, of the Ūdcha
 Bundelas, 546, of Nur Jahan's family, 576, of Abu 'l Qasim Namakin of Bhakkar, 526, of the kings of Kashghar, 512, of the rebellious Mirzas, 513, of the Sayyids of Barha, 427
 Gesu, Mir, Bakawal begi 464 465
 Ghakkhars, a tribe, 333 338, 506, 506 n,
 507, 543 544, 546
 Ghani Khān son of Mun'im Khān 333,
 334 493, 542
 Gharbah Khayl tribe, 434
 Gharjas a Badakhshi tribe 413 n
 Ghayrat Khān 538
 Ghayrat Khān Barha, 428
 Ghayratī, of Shiraz, a poet, 663
 Ghayurī, Mulla, a poet 679, 679 n
 Ghazalī a poet, 638 638 n
 Chazanfar Koka 372 372 n
 Ghazi Beg Tarikhān Mirza 392, 392 n
 Ghazi Khān of Badakhshan 195, 467
 (No 144), 593, 610
 Ghazi Khān Chak, 90, 513

Ghāzi Khān Sur, 418
 Ghāzi Khān Tannurī, 396
 Ghāzi Khān Wajhiya, 388
 Ghaznawī, a poet 339
 Ghaznawī Khān, vide Ghaznīn Khān
 Ghaznīn [Ghaznī] Khān, of Jalor, 553
 (No 261) 689
 Ghaznīn Khān, Mirza Shāh Muḥammad, 410 ghichālā, a musical instrument, 76, 682
 Ghiyaṣ, Sultan of Bengal, 653 n
 Ghiyaṣ Beg, I'timād d Dawla, 571
 (No 319), 576
 Ghiyaṣa, 557
 Ghiyaṣ i Naqshband the weaver 94
 Ghiyaṣ d Dīn, the gilder 109
 Ghiyaṣ d Dīn [Alī Khān Asaf Khān
 II], 479 (No 126)
 Ghiyaṣ d Dīn Alī Naqīb Khān 496
 Ghiyaṣ d Dīn i Jamī Qazī, 415
 Ghiyaṣ d Dīn Malik 395
 Ghiyaṣ d Dīn Mansūr, of Shiraz 208
 Ghiyaṣ d Dīn Tarikhān Mir 518
 Ghorus an Afghan tribe, 368 ghushar a kind of writing 106 ghungcha, 16 n
 gilas vide kilas
 gird a coin 30 n, 31
 Girdhar son of Ray Sal Shaykhawat, 462
 Girdhar Raja, son of Kesu Das, 563 gladiators 262
 glass price of 235
 gold freencas of 19 20 21, 41, 42, importation of 38 gold washings, 38
 Gopal Raja, 483 601
 Gopal Jado Raja 564 593
 Gopal Singh Kachhwaha, 422
 Gopal Singh Sisodiya 460
 Gosala Shaykhzāda of Panara 218 219
 Grandees 200 320, their contingents 410 their wealth, 575, their flatteries 618 n, their duplicity, 360, 565 have Hindu Vakils 352, oppose Akbar fr his religious innovations, 439 their property lapses to the state 388 450 hatred
 among them 408 415, 417,
 Chaghatai grandees hated at court,
 335, 337, 352, how punished 415,

- 416 446 483 500 540 543, when
repenting 386 their wickedness
562 vide immorality
- grant's vide sanads grapes, 69
guards mounting 267
Gujar Klan 304
Gujar Khan son of Qutb^u d Din hhan
522 (No 103)
Gujar Khan Afghan 411
Gujar Āgha a wife of Babar 489
Gujratis their character 421
Gul Ālirzā 583
gul afshan title of a poem 637 n
gulāl bar a wooden screen, 47 57
Gul^āzar Begam 489
Gulbadan Begam 49 507 394 n 489 683
Gulrukh Begam (name of two princesses)
321 515 516 686 gu bhī a fruit 70
guns 119 120 121 122 123
gunamu idar a title 682 n
gurgan meaning of 512 n
Gurjās (Georgians) favoured by some Persian kings 221
gul or gu it a kind of pony 140
- HABBA a weight 3ⁿ
Habī Bihzādī Mawlana 595
Habī Yasawul 591 (No 389)
Habīb ^{Alī} Klan 466 482 (No 133)
Halā Rajpits 140 449
Halz Kumakī 609
Halz Khwaja ^{Alī} 68ⁿ
Halz Nazr a musician 682 n
Halz of Tasil kand 609
Halz ak a musician 68ⁿ n
Halz Iql n a work 572 5ⁿ 6 halz j sh a metallic composition 42
Haydar of Kashan 663
Haydar son of Shaykh Yaqub 530
Haydar ^{Alī} <sup>Arab 508 (No 2ⁿ 9)
Haydar Dost 591 (No 396)
Haydar Gandahnawis a katib 106
Haydar Gurgani Mirza 512 512 n
Haydar Mirza Safawī 328
Haydar Mu^āmma^ā 619 n
Haydar Muhammad hhan Akhta Begī,
418 (No 66) 542
Haydar Qas m Koh bar 333</sup>
- Haydar Sultan Uzbak, 335
Haydarī of Tabriz a poet, 672 672 n
Hayratī a poet, 196
Haji Begam 463, 489, 518
Haji Hur Parwar Begam, 575
Haji Khan Sher Shahī 335 347, 379,
387 n
Haji Muhammad Khan Sistani 394, 397,
400 (No 10)
Haji Yusuf Khan 532 (No 224)
Hajjāj 37
Haji the Kuch leader 552 n
Hakim ^{Abd} ^l Wahhīb, 521
Hakim ^{Abd} ^r Rahim, 613
Hakim Abu l Fath of Gilan vide Abū
l Fath
Hakim ^{Alī} of Gilan 440, 519 (No 192), 612
Hakim Arīstū 612
Hakim ^{Ayn} ^l Mulik 337 445, 537
(No 234) 612
Hakim Beg Jahangiri 576
Hakim Dawa^ā 613
Hakim Gakhr d Din ^{Alī} 613
Hakim Fath^u Ilah 612
Hakim Haraq 530
Hakim Humam 529 (No 200) 612, 656
606 n 637 n
Hakim Is l aq 613
Hakim Khush al 530
Hakim Lutf^u illah 584 (No 354) 612
Hakim Masih^u l Mulik 612
Hakim Mīr 500 (No 254) 610 611
Hakim Muzaffar Ardistantī 582 (No 348)
612
Hakim ^{Nisnat} ^{Ilāh} 613
Hakim Rīzq^u Ilah 613
Hakim Ruh^u Ilah 613
Hakim Say^ā l Mīlik Lang 612
Hakim Shavhī Hīsan 612 613
Hakim Sh ^ā 612
Hakim Talab ^{Alī} 613
Hakim^u l Mulik Shams^u d Din of
Gilan 448 521 n 611 668 n
Hakim Zambil Beg 490 (No 150) 612
Hakim Ziya^ā d Din of Kashan 507
halālkhur or sweeper 147 147 n Halatī of Turan a poet 664
halim a dish 63
Halimī a poet 391

- halwa*, 62
Halwa'i, 610
 Hamdam Koka, 410
 Hamdami, a poet, 411
 Hamid Khān Habshī, 566
 Hāmid Qadrī, Shaykh, 614
 Hāmid : Bukhārī, Sayyid, 433 (No 78), 461
Hamzah, 104, 104 n
 Hamza, a musician, 682 n
 Hamza Beg Zul Qadr, 327, 328
 Hamza Beg Ghatrāghali, 557 (No 277)
 529
 Haqiqat : Hindustān, title of a work,
 500 n
 Hara or Hada Rajpūts, train horses, 145, 449
 harem, the imperial, 45, private, 389
 Haribās, a Sanskrit work, 112.
 Harid Rām Kachhwaha, 505
harisa a dish 34 n., 63
 harness, of elephants 134, of horses,
 143, of camels, 152, of mules, 161
 Hasan, son of Mirza Rustam Safawi, 329
 Hasan 'Alī, of Mash had a katib, 109
 Hasan 'Alī Khān Barha, 428
 Hasan 'Alī, Kotwal, 482
 Hasan 'Alī, Turkmān, 552
 Hasan 'Arab 452
 Hasan Beg Shaykh 'Umari, 370, 504
 (No 167)
 Hasan Khan Barha, 428
 Hasan Khan Batani, 214, 532 (220)
 Hasan Khan son of Khan Jahan Lodi, 068
 Hasan Khan Khazanchi, 474
 Hasan Khan of Mewat, 354 n
 Hasan Khan Miya, 569 (No 311)
 Hasan Khan Sur, father of Sher Shah, 462
 Hasan, Mirza, 463
 Hasan, son of Mirza Shahrukh Bada'ushhi, 326
 Hasan, Qazi 183 509 (281), 615
 Hasan Shaykh, 613
 Hashim Barha, Sayyid, 408 427 447,
 461, 487 (No 143)
 Hashim Beg, son of Qasim Khan, 533
 (No 226)
 Hashim Khan son of Mir Murad, 559
 Hashim Khwaja, 511
 Hashim, Mir of Nishapūr, 470
 Hashim : Sanjar, Mir, 663 n
 Hashimī, of Kirman, 637
 Hassu, Shaykh, 613
 Hatim, son of Babu Mankh, 528
 Hatim Sambhalī 614
 Hattī Singh 'Isodiya, 460
 hawkz, 304, 305
hawz, or subterranean reservoir, of Hakim 'Alī, 520
 Hayat Khān, 523
 Hayatī, of Gilan, a poet, 644
 Hazaras, a tribe, 448, 514
 Haziq, a poet, 530
 Hemū, 335, 387, 397 n, 394
 heretics, 185 503, 661 n
 Hidayat' Allah, 523
 Hijaz Khan, 363
 Hijranī, Mawlana, 108
 Hilal Khwajazaras, 352
 Himmat Khan Barha, 427
 Hummat Singh, son of Man Singh, 363,
 543, 586
 Hindal Mirza, 321, 448, does 532
 Hindus, 94 n, are good painters, 114,
 their months, 215, are influential at court, 214 215, their customs adopted by Akbar, 193, build mosques, 353, learn Persian, 377,
 378, are employed by Mughal
 madans as vakils 352, are often ill treated, 403 562 (vide jazya), hold offices under Akbar, 596, also under Shah Jahān, 606, list of learned Hindūs, 608 609, 611, 617, their doctors, 614, 614 n, their mythology, poetically treated by
 Muhammadan poets, 613.
 History of Kashmir, by Shah Muhammad, 112
 Huzabr Khan Barha, 427, 431 n
 hockey, 309
 Nadal Rao, Bundela, 546
hom a sacrifice, 193
 Horal Deo, 382
 horses imperial, 140, imported into India, 140, favourable laws for horse-dealers, 141, rarks, 141,
 fodder, 142, 143, get boiled grain,

- 416 446 485 505 540 543, when
repenting 386 their wickedness
562 vide immorality
- rants, vide sanads
- rapes, 69
- wards mounting 267
- ujar Khan 374
- ujar hhan son of Qitb^u d Dīn hhan
522 (No 193)
- ujar Khan Afghan 411
- ujjar Āgha a wife of Babar 489
- ujjarat^u their character 421
- Gul Mirza 583
- gul afshan* title of a poem 637 n
- gulul bar* a wooden screen 47 57
- Gul^uizar Begam 489
- Gulbadan Begam 49 207 394 n 489 683
- Gulrukh Begam (name of two princesses)
321 515 516 686
- gu ibhi a fruit 75
- guns 119 120 121 122 123
- gusamandar a title 682 n
- gurgan meaning of 512 n
- Gu jys (Georgians) favoured by some
Persian kings 221
- gut or gunt a kind of pony 140
- HABBA a weight 37
- Habi Bhzad: Mawlana 595
- Habi Yarawul 591 (No 389)
- Habib ^uAli Khan 466 482 (No 133)
- Hala Rajputs 145 449
- Hafz Kumaki 609
- Hafiz Khwaja ^uAli 687
- Hafz Nazir a musician 687 n
- Hafz of Tasikand 609
- Hafizak a musician 682 n
- Hafiz Iqim* a work 572 576
- hafiz sh* a metallic composition 42
- Haydar of Kashan 663
- Haydar son of Shaykh Ya^uqub 735
- Haydar ^uAli ^uArab 528 (No 279)
- Haydar Dost 591 (No 390)
- Haydar Gandahnavis a k^utib 106
- Haydar Gurgani Mirza 512 513 n
- Haydar Mirza Safawi 328
- Haydar Mu^uamma^u 619 n
- Haydar Muhammad hhan Akh^uta Begi
418 (No 66) 542
- Haydar Qasim Koh bar 733
- Haydar Sultan Uzbek, 335
- Haydari, of Tabriz a poet 672, 672 n
- Hayrati a poet, 196
- Haji Begam, 463 489, 518
- Haji Hur Parwar Begam 575
- Haji Khan Sher Shahi 335 347 379
387 n
- Haji Muhammad Khan Sistani, 394, 397,
405 (No 5)
- Haji Yusuf hhan 532 (No 224)
- Hajja 37
- Haju the Kuch leader 552 n
- Hakim ^uAbd^u l Wahhab, 521
- Hakim ^uAbd^u r Rahim, 613
- Hakim Abu l Fath of Gilan vide Ab
l Fath
- Hakim ^uAli of Gilan, 440 519 (No 192)
612
- Hakim Aristu 612
- Hakim ^uAyn^u l Mulk 337, 445 537
(No 234) 612
- Hakim Beg Jahangiri 576
- Hakim Dawa^u 613
- Hakim Fakh^u d Din ^uAli 613
- Hakim Fath^u Ilah 612
- Hakim Hariq 530
- Hakim Humam 529 (No 205), 612, 656
656 n 657 n
- Hakim Is^ulaq 613
- Hakim Khush^u Al 530
- Hakim Lutf^u ullah 584 (No 354) 612
- Hakim Masih^u l Mulk 612
- Hakim Mirza 50 (No 254), 610 611
- Hakim Muzaffar Ardistani 582 (No 348)
612
- Hakim Nasihat^u Ilah 613
- Hakim Il^uaq Ilah 613
- Hakim Ruh^u Il^uh 613
- Hakim Sayf^u l Mulk Lan, 612
- Hakim Shaykh Husan 617 613
- Hakim Shifa^u 612
- Hakim Talab ^uAli 613
- Hakim^u l Mulk Shams^u d Din of Gilan 448 591 n 611 668 n
- Hakim Zanbil Beg 490 (No 150) 612
- Hakim Ziya^u d Din of Kashan 557
- halal^uhkur*, or sweeper 147 147 n
- Halal of Turan a poet 664
- halim a dish 63
- Halimi a poet 391

Ashū, 62
 Halwa⁴I, 610
 Hamdam Koka, 410
 Hamdami, a poet, 411
 Hāmid Khān Habshī, 566
 Hāmid Qādirī, Shaykh, 614
 Hāmid i Bukhārī, Sayyid, 433 (No 78), 461 hamzā, 104, 104 n
 Hamza, a musician, 682 n
 Hamza Beg, Zul Qadr, 327, 328
 Hamza Beg Ghatrāghālī, 507 (No 277),
 529
 Haqiqat i Hindustān, title of a work,
 50 n
 Harā or Hāda, Rajpūts, train horses, 145, 449
 harem the imperial, 45, private, 389
 Haribūsa, a Sanskrit work, 112
 Haridī Ram Kachhwaha, 555
harisa, a dish 34 n, 63
 harness, of elephants, 134, of horses,
 143, of camels, 152, of mules, 161
 Hasan, son of Mirza Rustam Safawī, 329
 Hasan ⁴Ali of Mashhad, a katib, 109
 Hasan ⁴Ali Khān Barha, 428
 Hasan ⁴Ali, Kotwal 482
 Hasan ⁴Ali Turkmān, 552
 Hasan ⁴Arab, 452
 Hasan Beg Shaykh ⁴Umarī, 370 504
 (No 107)
 Hasan Khān Barha 428
 Hasan Khān Bitānī 214, 532 (220)
 Hasan Khān son of Khān Jahan Lodi, 508
 Hasan Khān Khazanchī 474
 Hasan Khān of Mawat 354 n
 Hasan Khān Miyānā 569 (No 311)
 Hasan Khān Sur, father of Sher Shāh, 462
 Hasan, Mirzā 463
 Hasan, son of Mirza Shāhrukh Badakhshī, 326
 Hasan, Qazī 183 539 (281), 615
 Hasan, Shaykh, 613
 Hashim Barha Sayyid, 403, 427, 447,
 461, 487 (No 143)
 Hashim Beg, son of Qasim Khān 533
 (No 226)
 Hashim Khān son of Mir Murad, 559

Hāshim Khawāja, 511.
 Hāshim, Mir of Nishāpūr, 470
 Hāshim i Sanjar, Mir, 683 n
 Hāshimi, of Kirmān, 637.
 Hassū, Shaykh, 613
 Hātim, son of Babū Mankli, 528
 Hātim Sambhali, 614
 Hattī Singh ⁴Sodiya, 460
 hawks, 304, 305
hawz, or subterranean reservoir, of Hakim ⁴Ali, 520
 Hayat Khān, 523
 Hayatī, of Gilan, a poet, 644
 Hazaras, a tribe, 448, 514
 Haqiq, a poet, 530
 Hemu 335, 387, 387 n, 394.
 heretics, 185, 503, 661 n
 Hidāyat⁴ 'Ilah, 523
 Hijāz Khān, 363
 Hijranī, Mawlana, 108
 Hīlal, Khawajasaras 352
 Himmat Khān Barha, 427
 Hirumat Singh, son of Mān Singh, 363,
 543 586
 Hindal Mirza 321, 448, dies, 532
 Hindus, 94 n, are good painters, 114,
 their months, 215, are influential
 at court, 214, 215, their customs adopted by Akbar, 193, build
 mosques, 353, learn Persian, 377,
 378, are employed by Muham-
 madans as vakils, 352, are often ill
 treated, 403 562 (vide jazya), hold offices under Akbar, 596, also under Shah Jahan, 606, list of learned Hindus, 608, 609 611, 617,
 their doctors 614 614 n, their mythology, poetically treated by
 Muhammadan poets, 613
 History of Kashmir, by Shāh Muhammad, 112
 Huzabr Khān Barha, 427, 431 n
 hockey, 309
 Hadal Ra o Bundela, 546
hom, a sacrifice, 193
 Horal Deo, 382
 horses imperial, 140, imported into India, 140, favourable laws for horse-dealers, 141, rarks, 141,
 fodder, 142, 143, get boiled grain,

gh; and sugar 142 143 harness
 143 shod twice a year 145 officers and servants in charge of 145 how branded 147 how mustered 224 are taxed when imported 225 when dead how replaced 260 how branded 243 244 265

horticulture 93 403 vide Babar
 Hoshang son of Islam Khan 552 n 587
 Hoshang son of Prince Danyal 322
 Hoshmand Bānu Begum 322 323
 Household Imperial expenses of 12
 Humam Hakim 184 vide Hak m
 Humayun Emperor his flight from Ind a
 334 375 347 304 459 488 488 n
 his tomb 518 611
 Humayun Garmul 377
 Humayun Quli 529
*h*un a Dakhin coin 18 38
 hunt ng 292 303 307
 Husam^o d Din son of Abu l Qasim
 Namakin 526 527
 Husam^o d D n Badakhshī 488
 Husam^o d Din Inju Mir 501
 Husam^o d Din Shab 33^o
 Husam^o d Din Surkh 607
 Husayn Khwaja, of Marw 644 644 n
 Husayn, Mr Sayyid Kh ng Suwar 497
 Husayn Quds Mir 672
 Husayn shaykh of Khwarazm 487 651
 Husayn 'Alī Barha 428
 Husayn Beg, 486 53^o (No 219)
 Husayn Khān Barha 428
 Husayn Khān Mīrza 486 (No 149) 490
 Husayn Khān Qazw n 531 (No 317)
 Husayn Khan Shamlu of Harat 392
 409
 Husayn Khān Takrīva 373 402 (No 53)
 Husayn Lod 568
 Husayn Mīrza, son of Shahrukh Mīrza
 Badakhsh 376 377 413 n
 Husayn Mīrza Safawī 377
 Husayn Mīrza Sultan 389 480 514
 Husayn Paklīwal 504 563 (No 301)
 Husayn Quli Beg (Khan) vide Khan
 Jahan
 Husayn 'anā'ī a poet 634
 Husayn i Kulankī a katib 109
 Husaynī Mīr 424

*H*um o Adz a Masnawī 579
 Huzni of Ispahān a poet 635
 Huzuri a poet 667 n
 hydrostatic balance, 43

IBACCHI or closet, 48
 'Ibadatmand 510
 Ibn Hajar 609 644 n, 651 n
 Ibn i Bawwab a katib 106
 Ibn i Muqlah 106
 Ibrahim Afghan 351
 Ibrahim Beg Jabuq 351
 Ibrahim Fathpurī Shaykh, 441
 Ibrāhīm Hājī of Sarhind 111 180 183
 199 617
 Ibrahim Husayn Mīrza 349 303 380
 403 513 514
 Ibrāhīm i Badakhshī, Khwaja 491
 (No 131)
 Ibrahim Khan Baluchī 388
 Ibrahim Khan Fath-Jang son of I't mad^o d Dawla 501 536 n,
 570 576
 Ibrahim Khan i Shaybani 416 (No 64)
 Ibrahim Khan Sur 418
 Ibrahim Lohani 586
 Ibrahim Mīrza 374 (No 6)
 Ibrahim Mīrza Akbar a brother 594
 Ibrahim Mīrza of Ispahān 109
 Ibrahim of Astarabad a katib 107
 Ibrahim of Yazd an engraver 55
 Ibrahim Qazī 617
 Ibrahim Quli, son of Ismā'īl Quli Khan
 576 (No 322)
 Ibrahim son of Mīrza Rustam Şafawī
 3 9
 Ibrahim Sultan son of Mīrza Shahrukh 107 ice used at court 28

Pharao Adam a pand bear moon
 Idr a katib 105 107
 'Iffat Banu Begum 537 n
 Iftikhar Beg 581 (No 335)
 Iftikhar Khan 519 598 588 n
 Ighur (Uighur) a Chaghtai tribe 493
 Ihtimam Khan 588 588 n

- Ih̄lās Khān 569
Ih̄lās Khān I'tibār the Eunuch 444
 (No 86)
Ih̄tishāq Khān Barha, 427, 498
Ih̄tīyār Khwaja 107
Ih̄tīyār i Mulk Gujrātī, 343 515 570
Ilāhdād of Amroha 212
Ilāhdād Fayzī, of Sarhind 331 n
Ilāhīya, Shaykh 607
Ilāhīya, son of Kishwar Khān 557
ilā, a coin 30
ilā Vird: Khān 670 n
ilām ilāh Kambu, 440
 illuminations at court, 50
Ilfat Khān 399
Il'yās Khān Langah, 407
Imād a kātib 109 n
Imād of Lārīstan 549
Imād i Mulk 581 (No 343)
Imam Māhd 113 n 178 198 199 n
 vīde Šāhib-i Zaman
Imām Qul Shāh 577 (No 375)
Imāmi, a poet 646 n immortality of the Grandees 209 335
 374 399 393 570 n., 531 663 n
 664 n importation of horses, 225 244
in'am grants 281
Inayat Khān 494 n
Inayat ilāh Darbār Ḥhān 517
Inavat ilāh Ḥhān 560
Ināvat ilāh Mirzā, 392 n
Indarman Bundelā 546
infantry 261 264
insgn a. of Dīwān 453 n vīde Akbar inventions 42
in'wān a kind of horse 147
Irj (Irish), Fāhnawāz Khān 360 500
 (No 253) 575.
irwā money 260
iron 43, 140
Irakād i Qūzī, title of a work 617
Irā. Qāzī, 493, 656
Irā, Zamīndār 351 363 365, 365 n., 439.
Irā Ḥhān of Orīsh, 377; vīde Irā
 Zamīndār and Irān Irā.
Irā Ḥhān Mā'm. 394
Irā Ḥhān vīde Irān 208
Irām d Dīn Ibrahim Mawlānā, 487
 644 n
Irā Turkhān Mirzā 399 392 n 463, 465
Irāndīyār Khān 505
Irāḥ Mawlāna 615
Irāḥ Mulla a singer 691
Irāḥ bā vīde p geon fly ng
Irāḥ i Faruq Shaykh of Bhakkar
 579
Irāḥ i Magrī bī Shaykh 570 n
Irāḥ Mawlāna, 596
Irāḥ Beg Badakhshī, 531 (No 211)
Irāḥ Khān Uzbek Ḥhān Ḥhān Ḥhān
 364 394 (No 48) 414
Irāḥ a cal graphical term 109 n
Islam Khān Ch shī 57 502 n., 586 587
Islam Shah 690 n 681 n vīde Salīm
 Shah
Isma'īl Mulla and Mawlāna, 607 617
Isma'īl Shāh of Persia 187 591
Isma'īl Kambu Hājū, 436
Isma'īl Khān (Qul Beg) Duldar 492
 (No 72)
Isma'īl Khān Shāybānī, 417
Isma'īl vīde Safawī 378
Isma'īl Qul Ḥhān 355 (No 46) 446, 4 0
Istajlū (Ustajlū) a tribe 687 ist alā i a rīetor cal figure 670 n
Itābī of Najaf a poet 603
I'tibār Khān a eunuch of Jahangīr 479
I'tibār Khān the Eunuch 442
I'timād Khān the Eunuch 473 (No. 119)
 418 (No. 67), 419 570
I'timād d Dāwla Ḥyāz Beg 571 (No.
 319) 576
I'timād i Mulk Gujrātī, 419
I'timād, Mirzā, 372
I'timād Bahādūr 486
Izzat Mirzā, 494 n
Izzat Khān son of Ibrāhīm Ḥhān, 404
 687
Izzat ilān, 561 (No. 299)
JABĀRI Qāqshāī 377 379 499
Jabbār Qulī Cakkhār 545
Jackfruit 74
Jāfar a poet, 613, 613 n
Jāfar Mirzā, a poet, 453
Jāfar of Tabriz a kātib 107 108.

- Ja'far Beg i Āsaf Khan, 113, vide Āsaf Khan (III)
 Ja'far Bukhari Sayyid 458
 Ja'far Khan Taklu, 470 (No 114)
 Jagannath, son of Bihārī Mal, 421
 Jagat Gosāvinī, mother of Shāhjahān, 323
 Jagat Singh, Kachhwaha, 323, 363, 490 (No 160), 510 jagirs, 252, 271, 330
 Jagmal 340
 Jagmal Kachhwaha, 483 (No 134)
 Jagmal Puwar, 532 (No 218)
 Jagnāth, a singer, 682 n
 Jagneris a clan 420
 Jagraj Bikramajit, 568
 Jahan afroz, Prince, 551
 Jahan Āra Begum 375
 Jahandar, Sultān, 324
 Janangir, Emperor [Prince Salim] his birth and death, 322, his wives and children, 323, 533 n, 686, his weight, 277 n, day of accession, 223 n, makes vows, 300, his love to Nur Jahan, 572 n, 474, 353 369 385, 508, 510, 639 n, 644 n
 Jahangir Barha, Sayyid 427
 Jahangirdad, a musician, 682 n
 Jahangir Quli Beg Humayūn, 351
 Jahangir Quli Khān Lāla Beg 490, 562
 Jahangir Quli Khān Mirza Shamsi, 346, 499 (No 163)
 Jai Chand, of Nagarkot 340, 443
 Jay Mal, of Mirtha 398, vide Jatmal
 Jaymal son of Rupsi, 472, 475
 Jalā, a tribe, 450
 Jalal Bārha Sayyid 470
 jalala a rupee 34, its meaning 248 n
 Jalala Tariki or Rawshani, 368, 369, 388, 434, 442 452, 506
 jaldi, a coin 30
 Jalal i Bukhari, Sayyid, a saint, 570
 Jalal Kashmiri, 484
 Jalal Khan, vide Salim Shah
 Jalal Khān Baqā'i 664 n
 Jalal Khan Gakkhar, 506 508 544
 Jalal Khan Qurchi, 531 (No 213)
 Jalāl 'd Dīn Maḥmūd Bujūq, 417 (No 65)
 Jalāl 'd Dīn Mas'ūd, 417, 417 n
 Jalāl 'd Dīn Multani, Qazī 183, 195, 616
 Jalāl 'd Dīn, of Sistān, 328
 Jalāl 'd Dīn, Shaykh, 607
 Jalāl 'd Dīn Sur, 400
 jalā a kind of writing 106, 106 n
 Jam Nanda, 390
 Jam of Kachh, 344, 461 jama hasil i kal, vide assessment
 jamā raqmī, vide assessment
 Jamal Bakhtiyār, Shaykh, of Jalesar, 200 469 (No 113), 470, 524
 Jamāl Kambu Shaykh, 596
 Jamal Khan Afghan, 481
 Jamal Khan Kambū, 614
 Jamal Khan of Mewat, 354
 Jamal Khan, son of Qutlu, 586
 Jamal Mulla and Mawlana, 616
 Jamal 'd Dīn, a katib, 107
 Jamal 'd Dīn Barha 447, 532 (No 217)
 Jamal 'd Dīn Husayn a katib, 107
 Jamal 'd Dīn Husayn Inju, Mir, 499 (No 164), 500
 Jami, the poet, 636 n
 Jamil Beg son of Taj Khan, 508
 Jamshed, Mawlana, 109
 Jan Khwaja, 680
 Janan Begum, 322
 Jan Babā Mirzā, 390, 392, 392 n
 jangla a kind of horse, 243, 244 245
 Jani Beg Mirza, of Sindh, 203, 219, 356, 389 (No 47) 390, 646 n
 Jani Bahādur 368 537 (No 235)
 Jān Jahan Lodi, 568
 Janjuas, a tribe 507 n
 Jan Nigar Khan, 567
 Jan Quli 061 (No 291), 562
 Jar' ilah, Mirzā, 583
 jast, a metal, 41
 Jaswant Singh, 534
 Jaswant Singh Bundelā, 546
 Jat Mal, of Mirtha, 563, of Chitor, 685, vide Jai Mal jat, a weight, 37
 Jawhar, Shaykh 617
 Jazbi, a poet, 537, 685
 jazya (properly jazya) or tax on infidels, abolished by Akbar, 198, 247 n jealousy, of the Grandees, 415

jetal, a coin, 32
jewels, 15.
Jhanda, the Indian flag, 52
Jhanyyah, a caste in Gujrat, 296 n
Jharokha, or inspecting window, 56
 358 n., 682 n., vide darshan
Jhujhar Khan Afghan, 482
Jhujhar Khan Gujrati, 419, 510
Jhujhar Singh Bundela, 546 547, 567
 6, 8
Ji Ji Anaga, Akbar's nurse, 338 343 dies, 340
Jilawana, 150 150 n
Jilawdars, or runners, 146, 150 n
Jodh Bai, 686
Jodras, a tribe, 507 n
Jodh Rai, or court astrologer, 442 n
Juda²L, a poet, 114 n., 660 667 n
Jujak Begum, 551
Jumlat² I Mulk, a title 374
Junsyd i Kararani, 300 133 437, 466
Junayd Murul, 590 (No 393)

KAB Gakkhar, 506 n
Kab Rai, or Poet Laureate 442
Kalab a dish 63
Kadir Chishti, Shaykh 580 (No 370)
 586
Kabir, Shaykh, 580 n
Kabir Shaykh, son of Shaykh Munawwar
 617
Kachhwaha Rajas madness of the r family, 323 303 430 510 vide
Bahari Mal Bhagwan Das Min
Singh Pajawat and Shaykhawat
 467
Kafiyeh title of an Aral ic grammar 790 n
Kahi, a poet, 636
Kail, a name for gold in Panjal i languag 26
Kajar, a Turkish tribe 607
Kakar Ali Khan i Chishti 447 (No 92)
Kakars a tribe 409
Kaku Shaykh 610
Kalr a coin 31 32
Kali Jal ar 400 400 n
Kalan Beg Khwaja 513
Kalawari or Kalawari a singer 681 n
Kalilik Shamsah an Arabic work, 112
Kalim, a poet, 672 n

Kalimat² 'ah Shu'ara, a work on Persian literature, 263 n
Ka'la Kachhwaha 590 (No 381)
Kalla son of Rav Ram, of Jodhpur, 437, 331
Kalvan, of Jaisalmir, 533
Kaljan Mal Pathor, of Bikanir, 331
 384 448 (No 93)
Kalvan Singh, son of Man Singh, 543
Kamal Bukhari Savid, 434
Kamal Khan of Jalor 689
Kamal Khan Gakkhar 338, 400 506, 507, 541
Kamal Mulla 615
Kamal² d Din father of Abu Turab, 570
Kamal² d Din Husayn Mawlana, 609
Kamal² d Din Khawafi, 494 n
Kambhu, a tribe 436, 440
Kami, author of the Nafisat² i Ma'asir,
 496 n
Kami, of Sabwar a poet 670
Kamil Khan i Alamgir, 548
Kamil Khan Mirza Khurram, 316, 511
 (No 177)
Kamran Mirza 320 410, 411 412 423, 410 606
Kengar Kachhwaha, 483 600
Kisu a metallic composition 42
Karam Ali 584
Karam Beg, son of Shir Beg 581
Karam² Ilah son of Ali Marlan 506
Karam² Ilah Kamlu, 440 477
Karan Rathor 396 410
Karim Dad Afzalin 301
Karm Chau i Kachhwaha 422 n
Karna a trumpet 3
Karoy 13
Kasbi a di 1 63
Kashmiri, Mirza 26 27
Kashmiri their character 412 436
Kathis, a tribe in Sorath 300
Katibs or calligraphists, 107
Katis a tribe 479
Katipite a metallic composition, 42
Kawkab Qazwini 543
Kawtaba a royal ensign 79
Kay Qilab, son of Mirza Muhammad
 Hakim 408
Keshu Das Pathor 323, 394 (No. 408)
Keshu Das, son of Jai Mal 563 (No. 302)

- Kesu Dās Maru 563
 Kewal Ram 497 n
 Khabta, a rebel 383 383 n 463
 Khabja Begum 576
khaf a kind of writing 106
 Khafi Khan 366 n 494 n khak : khakas 91 94 38
khāk-shoy 97
 Khalid bin 'Abdūlah Qasrī 37
 Khalīl bin Ahmad 100
 Khalīl Qutb 584 (No 308)
 Khalīlīyah Shaykh (Shah) 408 593
 Khalīlīyah Yazd M'r 593
 Khan 'Ālam Chalma Beg 410 (No 58)
 Khan 'Ālam Iskandar Khan 394
 Khan 'Ālam M'rza Barkurdār 577
 (No 398)
 Khan A'zam M'rza 'Aziz Koka 178
 917 219 310-11 393-4 343
 (No 21) 434 500 679 n
Khān Baba a title 330
 Khān Dawran Shahbeg Khan Arghun
 408 (No 57)
 Khan Dawran Shahjahan 404
 Khan Jahan a title 300
 Khan Jahan Barha 48 430
 Khan Jahan Husayn Qul 181 914 48
 Khan Jahan Lod 357 de next name
 Khan Jahan Lod governor of Orissa
 395 n
 Khan Jahan Lodi Prus son of Dawlat
 Khān Lod 565
 Khan Kalān M'r Muhammad 338
 (No 16)
 Khān Khānān a title 330 name
 330 title Barān Khān Munc'm
 Khān and next name
 Khan Khānān M'rza 'Abd'r Rahm son of Bayram Khān 915 399 329
 354 (No 99) 391 501 565 639 n
 644 n 646 n 648 n 649 n 655 n
 663 n 668 n 670 n 679 n. 63 n
 65 n 678 n 689 n
 Khan M'rza 394 395 n
 Khan Muhammad Q qshāl 688
 Khan Zān 'Al Q l Sha ban 335
 (No 13 390 514 54 638 n
 Khānazād Khān 519 57 503
 Khāndan a title 108 683
 Khāngar of Kachh 461
 Khanjar Beg Chaghta 601
 Khanj Malik of Jalor 5. 3
 Khanzadas of Mewat 354 n 426
khanzad 23 96 27
kharch n a kind of gold 41 49
khardal a weight 37
khargah a tent 5
 Khatars a tribe 507 n 545 n 589
 589 n
 Khāwand Dost 466
kh 9r 69
 Kh dmat yja a class of servants at court
 961 269 969 n the r chief
 Kh dmat Rā 96 47
 Kh ng Suwar 497
 Kh zr (Ilas) the Poph t 69 625 n
 637 n 601
 Kh zr Khwaja Khān 304 394 n 395
 400 423 489 491 597 683
 Kh zr Sultan Gakhar 54
 Klokaran a tribe 0
 Khubu Shaykh 96 (No 97)
 Khudawand Kha Dakh n 490 (No 101)
 498
 Kh da Yār Khan Lat 91 n
 Kh rram B g'm 32 326
 Kh rramdad a m'can 689 n
 Kh ram Khān 609
 Khurram M'rza de Kam l Khan
 Khurram Prince 508 308 n de Shahjahan
Khushkā a dish 69
Khushkur 996 87
 Khus aw of Dehl a poet 108 n 609
 609
 Khus aw of Qa^t n 661
 Khusrav Khan Ch rgs 99
 Kh srav Prince son of Jahangir 33
 391 34 346 45 456 n 479 04
 505 50
kh 9r read by princes 194
 Khwaja Ahrār a saint 339
 Khwaja 'Arab 214
 Khwaja B qī Khān 511
 Khwaja Beg M'rza 58 (No 36)
 Khwān a Hasan n le of Zān Khān
 Koka 33 367
 Khwaja Ham l aashband 339
 Khwaja Jahān An na of H rāt 467
 (No 110)

- Khwaja Jahan Dost Muhammad, 533 n
Khwāja Halan (hhwajagan hhwaja) 339
Khwaja Sulayman Afghan 362.
Khwaja 'Usman Afghan vide 'Usman
Khawajagan Khwaja 467 603 vide
Khwaja Kalan
Khawajagi Khwaja Tahran 572, 576
Khawajagi Muhammad Husayn 534 542
 (No 241)
Khawanaja Mir 518
Khawand Mahmud 339
Khak Begum 339
Kujak Khwaja 533 (No 67) 534
Kika Rana (Rana Partab) 361 460
 491 n
Kilas (y las) ch rries 69 n king of a mals forb lder 909 968
kmara (lace) 574
Kirat Raja of Kalajar 690 n
Kishn Das Tunwar 569 (No 713)
Kishn Singh Bhada riva 47
Kishinjoshi a Sanskrit work 110
Kishwar Khan 57
Kitcher the imperat 59
Kolbar a tribe 689
Kola or Kul lash or foster brother 340
kokar 578
Kor Hamza 377
Korn a kind of salutat on 167
Kuchak 'Ali Khan Kolabi 484 (No 138)
Kufic letters 106
Kul rs or p. lki bearers 264
Kulna 93
Kujak (Kuchak) Yasawul 533
Kulrah 24 25
Kumal a class of troops 949
Kandwal a clan 496 431
kushla prepared qu cks lter 633 633 n
Kuvarga a musical instrument 59
- LAC 236 237
Lachmi Narā² n of Kuch Bhar
 36, 363 vide Lakhni
Lachmi Narā² in 'Shafiq & Persian wr ter
 500 n
Lad Shykh 689
Lad Larha, Savy d 574 (No 409)
lada a perfume 83
Ladli Begum 574
- Lahauri Mirza 562
Lakhm Rāy of Kokra, 536 n vide
Lachhmi
lakra 969
la's Jalal a coin 30 36
Lal Kalawant (Mizan Lal) 681 631 n
Lal Kh n a singer 682 n
La'si Lahar Kalabi 530 (No 909)
Lala son of Bar Bar 444 590 (No 387).
lalla, mean n^o of 470 4 0 n
Lamas of Tibet 11
land revenue 13
Langahs a clan 390
Lardli Begum vid Lardli
lar a kind of silver 23 39
Lashkar Khan 'Abd² Hasan 221
Lashkar Khan Barha 423
Lashkar Khan Muhammad Hasayn
 446 (No 90)
Lashkari Gakkhar 508
Lashari, Mirza son of Mirza Yusuf Khan
 371 567 584 589 (No 35) vide
 'afshkan Khan
Lashkar hikan Khan 361
Lati Khwaja 206
Lavl 630 n
lead 41 49
learned men exchanged for horses
 900-1 ban s'ed, 196 198 199
 00 1st of them during Akbar's reign 606 where placed in battle
 656 n 657 n
leopards for hunt ng 996 997 298 999 590 leopard carriage 158 letters 104
library the imperial 109
Lilawati title of a Sanskrit work 112 line price of 233
Lusani a poet 673 n
Lusani l al y² title of a book 673 n.
Lusani, a poet 687 n
Lodi Khan son of Qutlu 586
Lohani Afghans 689
Lohar Chak 535
Lon Karan, Ray 443, 534 600
lubb a perfume 87
Lubb d-lanurikh title of a historical work 496 n
Lut ilah, son of Abduraw Lahan 392.
Lut ilah, son of Sa'id Khan 319

MA^{ASIR}-I RAHIMI a historical work, 360 360 n., 672 n

Ma^{sum} Beg Safawi 471

Ma^{sum} Khan Iran Khūdi, 365, 376-7 437 438 451 491 (No 107)

Ma^{sum} Khan Kābuli, 198 364 366, 376 377 438, 476 n 494 497 n

Ma^{sum} Mir of Bhakkar 578 (3⁹)

Ma^{sun} Mir of Kabul 340

Ma^{sun} Mir of Kashan 663 n

madad : ma^{sa}ah vide stuyurghal

Ma^{dan} = loftār Maghāwī 579

maddat a class of letters 109 n

Madhu Singh 568

Madhū Singh Kachhwāha, 460 (No 104)

Madhu Singh of Kokra, 438 536 n

Madhu Singh Shaykhawat, 462

Madhukar Bundela of Udchha 38⁹ 424 470 502 509 545, 546

Madrasas 289 Humāyun sat D hli, 607

magh ḥ a dirham 37

Maghribiya, a class of sa nts 570

Mah Banū Begum 347 355 357

Mah Jujak Begum 333 339

Maha Singh grandson of Man Singh Ko bhwāha 363 496

Maha Singh Bhadauria 547

Mahabat Khan 358 359 360 361 371 402, 455

Mahābat Khan Ālamgur 589

Mahābhārat 110 111 n 220

Mahapater the singer 689 n

Mahdaw a sect 549

Mahd Khwaja 483

Mahd Qas m Khan 37⁹ (No 36) 40⁹ 403 537

Mahes Das Rathor 386

Mah and an Afgān tribe 368, 434

Mah nud so of Abu Mansi 5⁹⁸

Mah nud of Parha sa v d 4⁹⁴ (No 70)

Mahn ul of Basakh an 186 50

Mahn ul B gārā, Sul an of Gujrat 569-570

Mahn ul son of Dawlat Khan Lod 564

Vahmud of Chazni 506 n

Mah mud Is hāq a kāt b 109

Mahn d Khan son of Khan Jaban Lod 568

Mahmud Mal k of S tan 3 8

Mahmul M Mahul 600 n

Mahmul Mir Munsh y I Sfamāl k 498

Mahmud Mirzā Gurgāni 513

Mahmul Iakliwāl 563

Mahnūd ḥ va ush a kāt b 107

Mahnūd Sultan of Bhakkar 390 463 464 465

Mahn ud Sultan (II) k ng of Gujrāt 418 419

Mahmud Sultan Mirzā 513 514

Mahmud yya a sect 50⁹

Mahūb 48

Māhum Anagah 331 310 341 347 352 413

maḥk cō tree 75 684

Mal wī Hamadān a poet 60

Maⁱⁿ o Munj a Rājput clan 594

Maji a tribe 679 n

Majma^{at} = Alīd a work 640 n

Majnun Khā Qāqahāl 344 397 399 (No 50)

Mākhān Bārha 428

Makh^{edum} = I Mulk Abd = Ilāh of Sultānpur 177 181 183 186 193, 197 198 403 614 (No 104)

Makhf the nom de plume of two Imperial princesses 32, 570

Makh^{us} Khan 4⁹² No 70)

Makhū a mus an 682 n

Makhzan = Afghāni a history 569

mal or Gujrat wrestlers 5⁹⁹ 263

malāy a perfume 87

Malays 694

Maldeo Raja of Jodhpur 330 331 474 475

malghūba a dial 64

mal l a title 399 n

Mal k Ahmad Dakhli, a poet 677 n 678

Mal k Al Khwaja 580 (No 330)

Mal k Ambar 5 0 560 566

Mal k B 507

Mal k Kalan 507

Mal k h d 506 517

Mal k Mas^{at} d 5 2

Mal k Mawlana a kāt b 10⁹

Mal k P^l 506

Mal k^{at} sh Shu^{arā} 549 618 618 n

Mal ku Sā of Kuch B hār 350

Malī Qad r Khan 473

- Mamrez hhan son of 'Ugman Lohānī 586
- man, a coin 31
- Mān Tunwar of Gwaljār 680
- mandal a tent, 56 83
- Mangarals a tribe 507 n
- mangoes 72 73 613
- Manija Begum 559 576
- manīl meaning of 400 400 n 528
- Manchar son of Lākaran 554 (No 265)
- Manrup Kachhwāha 422.
- Ma ṣabdar 241 247 248 249 must r one fourth or one-fifth of the r contingents 254 255 salaries 250 251 252 256 below the rank of commanders of Two Hundred 594 — under Jaha g r and Shah jahān 604 605 de grand 58
- Man Singh Darbar 569
- Man Singh Kachhwaha 569 (No 314)
- Mān Singh Kachhwaha Raja 215 361
(No 30) 460 460 n
- Maṣūr Mr 660
- Maṣūl a kind of writing 105 106
- Maṣūd hhwaja of H rat the engraver 28 54 5.
- Maṣūd son of Maḥmūd hid 400
- Maṣūl 'Alī Kōr 484 (No 136)
- Maṣūd 'Alī, of Werhōpā 67 n
- markaz a calligraphical term 109 n
- Marka = Lal ur title of a work
619 n
- marrage laws of different sects 189
183 Akbar's laws regarding 7 taxes on 88 age fixed for 94 913
- Maṣr f Mawlan a katb 107
- Maṣr f Sadr Shāyḥ 50
- Marjam Malan title of Akbar's mother 49 40 n 6. 506
- Maḥa qūlan ur a ork 617
- Maḥh (the Messah) 6 n
- Maḥḥa Kōr na a poet 613
- Maṣād 'Alī 564 590
- Maṣād Huvayn Mirza 349 513 514
515
- Matal an Arabic work 390 n
- matchlocks 120 — bearers 193 961 264
- Mathura Das Khatri 590 (No 378)
- Mawar du L-kulam title of a book 619 n
- Maw's an aboriginal race employed by Akbar 269
- Mawlanāzada Shukr 610
- Maydanī Afghan 560
- Mayli, of H rat 649
- Maḥbar of Kashmīr a poet 654
- measures 93 n 235 936 237 939 of Kashmīr 370
- Medni Ray Clauban 594 (No 198)
- melons different kinds of 69 500
- metals origin of 40 composition 49
- Meṣas runners 962 96 n
- mid a perfume 85
- Mīr 'Alī Barlas 364
- Mīr 'Alī hhan S ldoz 481 (No 130)
- Mīr 'Alī Kolab 376 380 516
- mīhrab a coin 31 31 n
- mīhrakul a kind of cloth 101 685
- Mīhrunnasāde Nur Jahan
- Mīhtar Jawhar 488 n
- Mīhtar hhan An sū d D n 459 (No 109)
- Mīhtar Sa'adat 5 8
- Mīhtar Bakā, 488
- mīll ul sayurg'ul
n lloenn m 113 n 178 n 01 908 503
nerals 40
- Mīnt Inperial 16 18 n Akbar's n nt towns 3
- Mīr 'Adī 78
- Mīr 'Arz a officer 67 69 3
- Mīr htaḥ a title 94
- Mīr Bakawal or master of the title
9 6 61
- Mīr Kāl Mawlān 610
- Mīr halī fa 463
- Mīr hīn 4 c
- Mīr hīlan Yasawul 84 (No 361)
- Mīr haw f hīw jū 494 n
- Mīr hī j son of S lā hīw jū, 46
- Mīr hī j or q arte a tr 49
- Mīr hī lāḥ a t c 671 n
- Mīr hī n a title 417
- Mīr hīn 80
- n race to events 381 title Akbar
- Mīrak lāb d r Arḡ n 30 (No 209)
- Mīrak lā 98
- Mīrak hīlan 495
- Mīrak hīn Bah l r 601

- Mīrak, Khawāja, Chingiz Khan, 490
 Mīrakī Khawāja 593
 Mīrak Mīrzā, Razawī Khān 485
 Mīran Bukhārī Sayyid 433
 Mīrar Mubarak Shāh, of Khandes, 322
 Mīran Muhammad Shah, of Khandes, 313
 Mīrān Sadr Jahan, 522
 Mīr^{ād} 'l Kaynāt, title of a book, 638 n mīrdāhā a non commissioned officer, 123 123 n, 261, 264
 Mīrza Ahmad Khawāja, 572, 576
 Mīrzā Beg Shahrī 468
 Mīrza Khan or Mīrzā Khān Khānān, vide Khan Khānān Mīrza 'Abd' r Rāshim
 Mīrza Khan Nīshapūri 563 (No 303)
 Mīrza Khawāja, son of Mīrzā 'Asad' llah, 588 (No 371)
 Mīrza Qulī Khan 408, 418, 598
 Mīrza Qulī Maylī, 642
 Mīrzā Raja vide Man Singh
 Mīrza Shahrī, 154
 Mīrza Sultān, son of Mīrzā Shāhrukh Badakhshī, 327
 Mīrzāda 'Alī Khān 491 (No 102)
 Mīrzas, their genealogy and revolt, 513, 514, vide rebellion mīsqāl, a weight, 37 38
 Mīrī Begam, 583
 mīstar of copyists, 55 n
 Mīyan Chand a singer, 681
 Mīyan 'Isā Khān Lohani father of 'Usmā, 786
 Mīyan Job, 401
 Mīyan Khān Ghori 344
 Mīyan Lal vide Lal Kalawant
 Mīyān Tansen vide Tansen
 Mīyān Wajih' d Dīn, 607
 Mīyāna Afghāns, 507 509
 Mohan Das Ray, 524
 Mohan Kachhwaḥs 435
 Mōlesh Mahānand, a Sanskrit work, 110 money, Persian, Hindustani, and Turāni equivalents 544 monopolies, imperial 535 moon, in dreams signifies luck 337 moth, its love to the candle, 646 n Moth Raja vide Udai Singh mu^ṣallaq 312
 Mu^ṣayyid Khān, 552, 588 n
 Mu^ṣayyid Khawāja, 395 n., 448, 591
 Mubārak i Bukhārī, of Gujrāt, 419, 433, 434
 Mubārak Kashmirī, Sayyid, 535
 Mubārak Khān, Gakkhar, 506 (No 171), 508, 544
 Mubārak Khān, vazir of Sultān Maḥmūd of Ithakkar, 464
 Mubārak, Mulla, 204
 Mubarak of Nagor, Shaykh, father of Abū l Faḥl, 177, 178, 195, 196, 207, 219 548, 607, 640 n
 Mubarak, Sayyid, of Gwālyār, 607
 Mubarak, Shaykh of Alwar, 607
 Mubarak Shahrī, a kātib, 106
 Mubārīz Khan 'Adli, 507
 Muṣ'ab bin Zubayr, 37
 Muṣāhib Khan 602 n
 Mustafā Chilī, 513 (No 248)
 Muffis Mīrzā, 610
 Mufrūdāt i Ma^ṣūmī, title of a book, 579
 Mughlī Mīr, Maḥwī, 655, 655 n
 Mughl Mīrzā, Badakhshī, 327
 Mughl Khān son of Zayn Khān, 309
 Mughuls, look upon "nine" as a sacred number, 383 n
 Muhammad, vide Prophet
 Muhammad Akbar, Prince 545
 Muhammad 'Alī, of Jām, 583 (No. 377)
 Muhammad Amin a kātib, 109
 Muhammad Amin Diwana, 355
 Muhammad Amin Hāfīz, 194
 Muhammad Ardistanī Hājī, 593 (No 390)
 Muhammad Aḡhar vide Ashraf Khān
 Muhammad Aḡhar Bahār Khan, 444 (No 87)
 Muhammad Aḡzam Hājī 651 n
 Muhammad Bakhtiyār of Jalesar, 460
 Muhammad Baqī Khān Koka, vide Baqī Khan
 Muhammad Bāqir, Harawī, 382
 Muhammad Baqī Tarḡhān, 390
 Muhammad ' Rukhārī, Shaykh, 432 (No 77)
 Muhammad Fikrī Sayyid, 671
 Muhammad Ghaws, Shaykh of Gwālyār, 396, 609

- Muḥammad Haj of Klāhushan 675 n
 Muḥammad Hak m Hafiz a kat b 107
 Muḥammad Hak m Mīrza Akbar s brother king of Kabul 35 h s daughter 325 h s s ter 498 h s mother 333 336 338 36 408
 519 5^o3 5^o 6 9 n
 Muḥammad Husayn of Kasbm r a kat b 109
 Muḥammad Husayn Khwaja s kat b
 107
 Muḥammad Husayn Khwajag 633-4
 54^o (No 241)
 Muḥammad Husayn Lashkar Klan
 446 (No 90)
 Muḥammad Husayn M rza 343 513 515
 Muḥammad Husayn M rza Safaw 327
 Muḥammad Husayn Nag r 649 649 n
 Muḥammad Husayn of Tabriz s kat b 109
 Muḥammad ʿIṣā Tarkhan 390
 Muḥammad ʿItabī 608 658 n
 Muḥammad Khan 593 (No 400)
 Muḥammad Khan son of Dawlat Khan
 Lool 56
 Muḥammad Khan Dhar a s nger 681
 Muḥammad Klan Gakkhar 506 544
 Muḥammad Khan Jala r 401
 Muḥammad Khan N yaz 340 (No 239)
 Muḥammad Klan Sharaf^a d D n Oghlu
 Taklu 4 0 57^o
 Muḥammad Kha Turkn a 381 (No 340)
 Muḥammad Mas^odud son of Ah ad Beg
 Kalul 519
 Muḥammad Mawlana 610
 Muḥammad M r Sayy d the Mahdawi
 616
 Muḥammad M ak Sal h 653
 Muḥammad mal M z 3 (No 2.9)
 Muḥammad M r Safaw Sul an 4 0
 Muḥammad Mulla of Awbah a kat b 108
 Muḥammad Mul of K ng 3 9
 Muḥammad n ad M l of Tla ba 409 56^o
 Muḥammad n ad Mulla of Yazd 184 191
 198
 Muḥammad Mum n Hāfi ak 68 n
 Muḥammad Payanda de Iayanda han
 Muḥammad Qaqshāl Mīrza 399
 Muḥammad Qas m Khan Mīr Āt sh, 534
 Muḥammad Qas m Khan of Nishāpur
 379 (No 40)
 Muḥammad Qas m Kohbar 68^o n
 Muḥammad Qas m Shad Shāh 108
 Muḥammad of Qazw n a kat b 107
 Muḥammad Qul Afshar 45^o
 Muḥammad Qul Khan Ba las 364
 (No 31) 39
 Muḥammad Qul Khan Turkwān 528
 (No 903)
 Muḥammad Qul Toqba 480 (No 129)
 Muḥammad R za Naw^o 675 n
 Muḥammad Sa^o d 458 508
 Muḥammad Sal h 454
 Muḥammad Sal h Khwajag 596
 Muḥammad Sal h M rza 392 n
 Muḥammad Salih Sadr 28^o
 Muḥammad Sayyid, 466
 Muḥammad Sayyid M r ʿAdl 485
 (No 140) 48
 Muḥammad Sayy d of Rohtas 437
 Muḥammad Shāh of D hli, 43^o
 Muḥammad Shar f Khwaja 572, 576
 Muḥammad Shar f Khwaja 57^o 576
 Muḥammad Shar f M r 497
 Muḥammad Sharif Nawa^o M r 672 n
 Muḥammad ʿIar f Sarmad 581 582
 677 n
 Muḥammad Shar f son of I^ot mad^o
 d Da la 479 573 573 576 576 n
 Muḥammad Shar f Wuqu^o 660 660 n
 Muḥammad ʿIay^hh of Bharoch 615
 — a kat b 109
 Muḥammad Suf of Mazandaran 609
 Muḥammad Sult n M rza 313 314
 Muḥammad Tab b M rza of Sabzwar
 490
 Muḥammad Tal^o b t de Abu Tal b son of Sla^o t^h h n 575 573 n
 Muḥammad Wafa 304
 M l sn n ad Yar Uzbak 414
 Muḥammad Zah d of Bal^hh 180
 Muḥammad Zaman 71 60^o
 Muḥammad Zam M rza Bad^hsh
 3 6
 Muḥammad adans nter marr w tl H ndus
 3 3 4
 muḥayyiq a k nd of wr t ng 106.

Muhi of Shraz a kat b 107
 Muhibb 'Ali Khan son of Mr hhal fa
 463 (No 107) 464 465
 Muhibb 'Ali hhan Rahtas 468 599
 Muhibb 'Ali hhōwaf hhwaja 58°
 (No 347)
 Muhibb' ilah Mr 570
 Muhtam Singh Rao S'sod ya 460 mud a con 30 31
 Mubn hhān 408
 Muhtaram Beg 491
 Muhtaram hhānum (Begum) 3° 3° 6
 Muhtash m hhan 552
 mu' a a con 31
 Mu' n a Chalif of Ajmir 43° 610
 Mu'in Qāz 615
 Mu' n d D n author of Tajfur s Ma'dani
 590
 Mu'in d D n of Farāh a kat b 107
 Mu'in d D n Ahmad hhan Faran
hhu 480 (No 1° 9) 610
 Mu n d D n Tanura, a kat b, 10
 M' r z Hir of Nā hān a kat b 109
 Mu' r z I Mulk Mir 198 414 (No 61)
 M jāh d hh n 415 464 46 53 60
 Mu' r m' I I ul'ān, a wo k on geography 11° mukyana a kind of horse 147 443
 741 Muj al d 195 196
 Mukammal hhān 11° 58; n
 M kanl zamindār of Fathābad
 (Bengal) 405
 Mukarram hhan 648 °
 Mukarram hhan Mirza Safawi 7° 9
 Mukatn an Fha'aur a i (No 19)
 mukl a panical 691
 Mukhl s h n °
 Mukhl s' Lal hhān 519
 M htar leg so of Vghl Mullā ° 5
 (No ° 8)
 Mukunl Deo I Or ° 50 n mul a mper al 160 wī rē lred 15
 muprt l 161 th r food 161
 Lam° 161 low mu ered ° 6
 Mull Mr ° 1°
 M. a' t h n °
 M m n h'awāf hhwaja, 49
 M m n M w rī hhwaja l 10°
 Mumtaz Mahall 328, a l n ° 6

Munawwar Shaykh an author 112 198
 617
 Mun° m Khan Khan Khanān 274 33°
 333 (No 11) 355 401 417 471 487
 M nis Khan 459
 Munj a Rajput clan 594
 mūny a kind of grass 471
 Munk r and Val two angels 562
 munah yāf or letters of Abu l Fath
 Gilani 469 n
 Mun° f hhan 53° (No 2° 9)
 Muqarrab Khan (Akbarshāh) 403 muqāsa ° 3
 Muqbl hhān 448
 Muq m 'Arab r de Shujā'at hhan
 Muq m, Harawī, 463 464
 Muqim hhan son of Shujā'at hhan
 590 (No 386)
 Muq m hhwaja son of Miraki 93
 (No 401)
 Muq m Mirzā son of Mrzi Zu l Nun
 463
 Muq m Naqshband 470
 Muq m Shakhjalāni 404
 muq ° or jag rd ° 66 n
 Murād Bahhal Prince 5 6 534
 Murad Juwayn Mr ° 9 (No 28°)
 Murād hhān 404 (No 4)
 Murād Mr Kolab 590 (No 380)
 Murad P nce Akbar's son born an f ded 3° 6° h s complexion
 3° 50 149 149 n call i Pahlīf 19° n 3 s instructed n Christ a ty 19° 3 6 416 61°
 614 n
 Murzī Q li Sultān 544 545
 Mu ad Safaw son of Mrza Rustam 3 9
 Murtazā hh n d Far l Bukh r Murta hh n Husam° l l n Inju
 a l 6
 Mu tazā hhān Mr 498 (No 16) 499
 609
 Murtaza Mirzā 34
 Mu tazā 7 n S l th 3. 7 498
 M rtazā Mirzā l az Mir 4 9 609
 M i s y hh 611
 Mu a Shaykh Fātil i 441
 Muā Sha k Lal o l 608
 mukā'ala r al an ya to B ers ° 70.
 mukā'ala a l l 63

Mūsawī Saʿrī 414 538
 Muḥṣī qī of Bukhāra a poet 633 musc at court 53 640 681 schools of 633 abolished by Awrangzib
 680 n
 Muṣṭafā Ḥān 494 n 500
 Muṣṭafā Mīlā of Jaunpur 561
 musc (ib mean g of 478
 Muṣṭam d Ḥān 74 58 n
 Muṣṭam id Ḥān Bakī 11 474
 Muṣṭam d Ḥān Muḥammad 1 ʿalī 494 n muṣṭammas a di h 63 64
 Muzaḥḥir brother of Ḥān ʿAlīam 503
 (No 304)
 Muzaḥḥir Husayn Mirza 380 513 (No
 180) 315 316
 Muzaḥḥir Husayn Mirzā Safawī, 327
 (No 8) 3 8 300
 Muzaḥḥir Ḥān Bārha 402 430 468
 Muzaḥḥir Ḥān Maʿmūrī 507
 Muzaḥḥir Ḥānī Turbat Ḥawāja
 Muzaḥḥir ʿAlī 350 3 3 (No 37) 374
 397 495 486
 Muzaḥḥir k ng of Gujrāt 344 3 354
 35. 416 419 420 484 48. vide
 Nathū
 Muzaḥḥir Lodi 568
 Muzaḥḥir Mirzā son of Sultān Husayn
 Mirzā, 390
 Muzaḥḥir Muḥḥul 576

NĀDI ʿAlī Hān 571
 Nād ʿAlī Arlāt 571
 Nāds ʿAlī Maydānī 571 (No 317)
 Nād r Shāh 391 n
 Nād r name of several poets 6 3 6 5 n
 Nād r 1 Mulk 660 n
 Nāfāʿ a 1 Maʿas r a work on literature
 496 n
 naf r a trumpet 53
 Nāl d Beg m 463
 Nāʿ k Bakḥshu a a nger 680 n
 Najabat Ḥān n Mirza Shujāʿ Badakhshī
 326
 Najāt Ḥān Mirza 400 486 (No 140)
 Najāha Anaga 430
 Najn a d D n ʿAlī Ḥān Bārha 408
 Najn a d D n Muḥammad Kāhī 637 n
 nāḥḥudu or ch p capt n 290 291

Nāl Daman, a poem 110 113 113 n
 618 619 n
 Naman Das Kachhwaha 54
 name of grandfather given to a child 58 nam-g ru or awn ng 48
 Nāml a poet 59
 Nanak Jarju a s ger 680
 naphṭā 41
 Napoleon I 600 g
 Naqabat Ḥān 44
 naqān a drum 3 — Ḥān 49
 Naqb Ḥān 110 111 n 113 113 n,
 496 (No 161)
 naq a weight 37
 naqābandī ts mean ng 466 466 n
 Nārāʿ n Dās Rathor of Idar 4 3
 Narnāl a k nī of gun 110
 n ḥpat a melon 64
 Nā ḥ Shāl son of Qutlu 86
 Nār Maʿ n 594 (No 410)
 Nār rā 416
 Nār r Ḥān raw 199 009
 Nār rā 11 n Iakhwal Sultān 504
 Nār rā 1 Mulk i d I r Muḥammad
 Ḥān
 Nār rā 11ḥ son of Muḥṭ r Beg 8
 Nār rā 11ḥ Suf 10
 nārāḥ a k nī of w r ng 100
 nārāḥḥ a k nī of crī ng 108 109
 Nathu of Gujrāt M zaḥḥir Shāl 419
 e de Muzaḥḥir Shāl
 Nā 54 i le Muḥammad Sharīf
 Nawāzī Ḥān Saʿd 11ḥ 390 392 n
 Nawāzī a poet 6 6 n 6 6
 Nawrang Ḥān 304 310 596 599 640
 nawruz or New Year a la 19 86 n
 Nawruz Beg Qaqshāl 483
 Nazār Bāḥadur 404
 Nazār Be Uzbek 506 (No 160)
 Nāzā Ḥān Gakkḥar 443 (No 247)
 Nāz r the poet 643 649 n 680 n
 Nār Muḥammad Ḥān of Bakḥ 538
 New Year a day 197 86
 news w r ters 068 360
 nichoʿ uḥā 27
 N kāl a Turk l tr be 687
 Nī Kanṭh of Orīs 71 (No 318)
 n m su a an or half troopers 064
 N ʿmat 11ḥ Bāwāl a kāt b 100

Puran Mal Kachhwaha 348
 Purb n Khan a musician 682
 Purukhotam Rāy a Brahman 169 596

Q ABIL son of 'Atiq 594 (No 412)
 Qabul Khan 484 (137) 581 qabul a dish 62
 qadam : shar f or qadam : mubārak or f o'prints of the prophet 207 570 Qadir Khan Mallu vide Mallu (Qad r Khan)
 Qadir Qul 593 (No 402)
 Qa'im Khan 401 401 n
 qawwal a kind of tent 48 57
 qal m a dish 64
 Qamar Khan 497 542 (No 243)
 on narghā, a kind of hurting 294
 Qanbar Be 506
 Qandahar Mahall 328
 Qasun a medical work 791
 Qaqsha a clan 399 399 n
 Qara Bahādur 511 (No 179)
 Qara Bah r 584 (No 345)
 Qara Beg Farrasbbegī 327
 Qara Kha Turkman 382
 Qara Tu ls 402 n
 Qara Yusuf 329
 Qaracha Khan 423
 Qaraqulū Turks 329
 Qararī Nur^a d D : of Gilan, a poet 184 6 6
 qarar nāma 73
 Qarataq Klān 437 581
 qarawa's or hunters 292 300
 Qarluqha a tribe 504 583
 Qāsim 'Alī Khan 518 (No 187)
 Qasim Arsalan Nur^a Iah a poet 109
 67F
 Qasim [Khan] Barha Sayyid 357 357 n
 427 447 461 (No. 105)
 Qasim Beg 112 582 (No 350) 611
 Qasim Beg Khan 410
 Qas mī of Mazandaran a poet 679
 Qas m Junabadi Mirzā 661
 Qas m : habī a poet, 219 636
 Qasim Khan son of Mir Murād, 559
 Qas m Klān Kasu 491
 Qas m Khan Mir Bah r 412 (No 59)
 431 687
 Qas m Khan : Sistani 486

Qāsim Khwaja 571 (No 316)
 Qasim Koh bar a musician 682
 Qasim Koka 463
 Qasim Muhtashim Khan Shaykh, 552
 Qasim Mulla and Mawlāna 615
 Qasim Badakhshi Mir 560 (No 283)
 Qawim Khan 401
 Qaydi of Shiraz a poet 669
 qayzurī a kind of camphor vide
fansurī 84 84 n
 Qazaq Khan Taklu 470 471 572
 Qazī 278 general charac er o' Qazis 279
 Qazī 'Alī 457 596
 ~

qāma palao a dish 62 qāma shurba 63 qirāt a weight 37
 qirāzk a title, 429 n
 Qasmiya Bānu 686
 qisraq a mast^a 143
 qitmir a weight 37
 Q ya Khan son of Sah b Khan 517
 (No 184)
 Q va Khan Gung 366 (No 33) 484 517
 Qiyam Khan son of Shah Mahammad :
 Qalati 478
oubuc a musical instrument 682
 Quch Beg Humayuni 505
 Qudsi of Karabala a poet 672 672 n quccas liver 10 habitually eaten 439 wh n called kushta 673 633 n
 qulj meaning of 381 n 561
 Qulj Khan 35 32^a 380 (No 42) 381
 381 n 382
 Qulj^a Iah 562
 qullata m 212
 Qunduc Khān 57 (No 181)
 Qunduz Khan 478, 517
 qar or collection of weapons royal flags etc 52 52 n., 116 993
 Qarayah Sultan of Kesbghar 511
 qurs kub 24
 qusab a dish 63
 Qutb^a d D n Khan : Ch shtī Shaykh,
 506 (No 275)
 Qutb^a d D n Muhammad Khan 197
 201 353 (No 28)
 Qutb^a d D n Shaykh, of Jalcsar 900

Qutb 'd Din, Sultan of Gujrāt, 569
 Qutlū Khān Lohani, 344, 366 380, 383, 390 n, 487, his sons 586
Qutluḡh, meaning of, 477
 Qutluḡh Qadam Khān, 477 (No 123)

RABI, a coin 31, 31 n
 Rafi'ī [Rafi'ī 'd Dīn Haydar], of Kāshān, a poet, 663, 663 n

Rafiqī, 663 n
 Rafi'ī 'd Dīn Ṣafawī, Mīrza, 590
 Raha'ī Shaykh a poet, 661, 661 n
rahas, a coin, 29
 Rabi, of Nishāpur, a poet, 680
 Rahim Qulī 581 (No 333)
 Rahman Dad Mīrza 361
 Rahmat Khān son of Masnad i 'Alī, 557,
 564 (No 306).

Rahmat 'llah, a singer, 682
 Rai Man, 262 n
 Raibarī, a class of Hindus who train camels, 155
 Raja 'Alī of Khandesh, 516, vide 'Alī
Khān

Rajawat, 462
 Rajputa, Januha, 354 n, Kachhwāha, vide Biharī Mall, Hadās, 449,
 Ranghar, 594, Rithors, 384 510,
vide Man, Munj
 Rajsingh, Raja, Kachhwāha, 509 (No
 174)
 Raju, Sayyid, of Barha, 501 (No 165), 502

raḡhī, a Hindu custom, 193
 Ram Chand Bundela, 533 n, 545 (No 248)
 Ram Chand Chauhan, 555
 Ram Chand Kachhwāha, 555 (No 268)
 Ram Chand Kachhwāha, son of Jagan
 nāth, 422
 Rāmchand Baghela, 385, 396, 399 445
 (No 80), 445 n, 446, 681 n
 Ram Chandr Rāja of Khurda, 548 (No
 250) 677 n

Ram Das, the singer, 680 n, 681 n, 682
 Ram Das Dīwan Ray, 580 (No 331)
 Rām Das Kachhwāha [Raja Karan]
 539 (No 539), 540
 Ram Sah Bundela 382, 545
 Rāmsah, Raja of Gwaljar, 362, 366

Rānas of Maiwar, 421, 422, vide Partab
 Singh, Udaī Singh

Ranbaz Khān Hambū, 440, 440 n
 Ranghar Rājputa, vide Rajputs
 Rangsen of Āgra, a musician, 682
Rashahat 'l hayat, title of a book, 638 n rasi, an acid 24

Ratan Rathor, 386
 Ratan Singh Sisodiya, 460
 Rathors vide Rajputs
rati, a weight, 16 n
Rawshanīyyahs 35 n, 362, 368, 383

Rāy Bhoj Hāda, 510 (No 175)
 Rāy Durga Sisodiya, 459 (No 103)
rayhani, a kind of writing 100, 106
 Rāy Mal Shaykhawat 462
 Ray Ray Singh, 323, 384 (No 44) 516, 594

Ray Sal Darbarī Shaykhawat, 462 (No 106)

Raza Qulī, 536 (No 274)
 Raza'ī, a poet 520 n
Razawi, 538, — Sayyids, 414, — Khān,
 a title, 486 vide Musawī

Razawī Khān Mīrza Mīrak 485 (No 141)
 Raziy' 1 Muḡk, 419

rebellion of the Mīrzas, 340, 349, 351, 352, 404, 406, 419, 432, 433, 443, dates,
 480 n

refining of gold, 21, of silver, 23 religious views of the Emperor Akbar, vide Akbar

reporters, 268, vide waḡī'ā nawīs revenue, how paid, 13 revolt, military, in Bengal, 340, 375, 376, 377, 476

rice, best kinds, 60
riḡā', a kind of writing, 106, 107 risala-dar, an officer, 269
risas a metal, 42
 river tolls, 292
Riyaz 's Salatin, title of a historical work, 472 n

Rizq' 'llah Khān, vide Hakim Rizq' 'llah
 Roz afzun Paja, 494 n
rubab, a musical instrument, 682 ruby, a large one, 456
ruḡhānī a kind of writing, 105 ruḡ i tuliyā, a metal, 41-2
 Ruḡ' 'llah (I), 575

- runed towns, 554
 Rukn^a 'd Din a poet, 658 n
 Rukn^a 'd Din, Maḥmūd Kamangar, Shaykh, 608
 Rukn^a 'd Din, Shaykh, 607
 Rumi Khān, Ustad Jalabi, 489 (No 146) runners, 146
 Rūp, a servant of Akbar, 470
 Rup Mukund Sisodiya, 460
 Rūp Singh Sisodiya, 460
 rupee, raised from 35 to 40 dāms, 243, counted, 40 dāms¹ in salaries, 32, — of Sber Khān, 32, of Akbar, 32, 34
 Rūpmati, the beautiful dancing girl, 473
 Rūpsi Bairāgi Kachhwaha, 472 (No 118)
 Ruqayyah Begum, daughter of Mirzā Hindāl, Akbar's wife 321, 573
 Rustam Khan Dakhuri, 534
 Rustam, Prince, 686
 Rustam Ṣafawī, Mirzā, 328 (No 9), 329, 392 n, 578, 686
 Rustam : Zamān, Shaykh Kabīr, 585, 586
 Ruswa^a 'i, 664 n
 rūy, a metallic composition, 42
 ru^ayat, 205
 Ryayat, son of Peshraw Khān, 558
- ṢA'ĀDAT 'Alī Khān, of Badakhshan, 472 (No 117)
 Ṣa'adat Banu Begum, 686
 Ṣa'adat Khān, 533, 533 n
 Ṣa'adat Khān, son of Zafar Khān, 589
 Ṣa'adat Mirzā, 491 (No 153)
 Ṣa'ad^a 'llah, Masīhā : Kairānawī, 613
 Ṣa'd^a 'llah Nawāzish Khān, 392, 392 n
 Ṣa'ad^a 'llah, Shaykh, 615
 Sabal Singh, 543 (No 245)
 Ṣabbāk, 22
 Ṣabdal Khān, 485 (No 139)
 Ṣabri, a poet, 682 n
 Ṣabuḥ, a poet, 652, 652 n
 Ṣadiq, Mawlana, 610
 Ṣādiq, Muḥammad Khān, 382 (No 43)
 Ṣadr i 'Iraqi, a kاتب, 107
- Ṣadr Jahan Mufti, 195, 218, 219, 222 n, 281 282, 622 (No 194)
 Ṣadrs, of Akbar's reign, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 596, 686, Ṣadr of women, 574
 Ṣadr^a 'd Din, Qāri, 614
 Ṣa'd^a 'd Din, of Khaf, 661 n
 Ṣafā^a 'i, Sayyid, 578, 580
 Ṣafar Agha Khudawand Khān Gujrati, 381
 Ṣafdar Beg son of Haydar Muḥammad Khān, 577 (No 326)
 Ṣafdar Khān, 577
 saffron (za'farān), 89, 452, 535
 safidrū a metallic composition, 42
 Ṣafshikan Khān Mirzā Lashkari, 371 (formerly Ṣafdar Khān) Ṣafshikan Mirzā Ṣafawī, 329 sag, 62
 sālsāh, 28
 Ṣāhib Qirān, a title, 358 n
 Ṣāhib : Zamān, 198, vide Imām Maḥdi sālsāh, a money bag, 14
 Sāhū Bhōnsla, 547
 Ṣāḥw^a 'i Lisān, title of a book, 673 n
 Ṣa'īd : Badakhshi, 450
 Ṣa'īd Khān Bahadur Zafar jang, 519
 Ṣa'īd Khān : Chaghtā^a : 351 (No 25), 362 n, 392, 515
 Ṣa'īd Khān Gakkhar, 507, 508, 533 n, 600
 Ṣa'īd Mawlana, of Turkistan, 609
 Ṣa'īd : Toqba^a 'i, 486 sailors, 290
 Sajawal Khān Sor [Shoja'at Khān], 473
 Sakat Singh, 543, 551 (No 256), 581 (No 342)
 Sakat Singh, son of Uday Singh, 585
 Sakina Bānu Begum, 481, 498
 Sakrā of Maiwar, 685 (No 366)
 Ṣalābat Khān, 494 n
 Ṣalabat Khān Barha, 427, 446.
 Ṣalabat Khān Chirga, 490
 Ṣalabat Khān Lodi, 565
 Ṣalah^a 'd Din Sarfi 656 n
 Ṣalām^a 'llah, 220, 221 salaries, of women, 46, 683, of pensioners, 501, of ship-captains, 291, now paid, 272 273 275, 251, 257, 259, 260, 261, 574, 575

- Salih Dhwāna, 535
 Sālīhā Bānū, 401
 Ṣālīhī, a poet, 653
 Salim; Chishtī, of Fathpur Sikrī, 178, 277 n., 322, 441, 530, 552 556, 580, 608, 609, 615
 Salim Khan Afghan, 456
 Salim, Khān Kakar, 482 (No 132)
 Salim Khan Sirmur, 482
 Salim, Prince, vide Jahangir
 Salim Quli, 584 (No 357)
 Salim Shah, 332, 351, 507, vide Islam Shāh
 Salima Khānum, 489
 Salima Sultān Begum, 207, 321, 331, 345, 489
 salimī, a coin 31
 Salman of Sawah, a poet, 107 n saloni, 21, 26, 27, 39
 salt, manufacture of, 525, 525 n., an antidote against drunkenness, 625 n Saltan Deoda of Sarohi, 384, 385 385 n., 461 saltpetre, 58
 salutations, at court, 167
 Samanji Khān, 458 (No 100)
 Samānjī Khān Qurghujī, 489 (No 147)
 Samarqandi Mir, 589
 Samī'a Begam 464
 samrī, a poet, 673, 673 n
 Ṣamṣam' d Dawla 494 n
 Ṣamṣam' d Dawla, son of Mīr Husam Inju, 501 Sanībāl, title of a Look, 617
 sanads, or grants, 269, 270, how sealed, 273
 Sana'ī, 619 n., 634
 sanbusa a dish, 63
 sand for str-wing on paper, 107 sandalī, 318, 319, 358 n
 sandalwood, 87
 Sandahas, a family of Amarkot, 361
 Sanga, the Puwar, 594 (No 411)
 Sangrām, of Kharakpūr, 362, 494, 494 f., 536 n
 Sangrām, Akbar's favourite gun, 123
 Ṣanī Khān, of Hurāt, 521 (No 210) sang, or cymbal, 53
 Sanjar, of Kāshān, 665, 665 n
 Sanjar, Mirza son of Khizr Khān Hazārā, 533 n
 Sanjar Ṣafawī, Mīrzā, son of Sultan Husayn Mirza, 327, 555 (No 272)
 Sanka, Rana, 475
 Sanskrit, translations from 110, 112, 209, names of the sun 210, 212
 sanujī, (satujī), a kind of horse, 140, 140 n
 Sawal Singh Bundela, 546
 Sanwaldas Jādon, 592 (No 396)
 saqānāma, 260
 Saqi, Shaykh, 662, 662 n., 663
 saqīnāma, a class of poems, by Sana'ī, 634 n. by Shikebī, 646 n. by Muḥammad Sufī 659 n Saqqa a poet, 601 n
 sarāparda, 57
 Sarbuland Khān, 569
 Sardar Khān, Mirza 'Abd'illah, 346 523, 551
 Sarfaraz Khān, 551 (No 257)
 Sarfī (Sayrafi), a poet, 651. a Sāwah, 606, 656 n sar khat, 259, 271, 273
 Sarkhusb the poet 263 n
 Sarmadī Afghan 364
 Sarmadī of Iṣfahān, 677, 677 n
 sarmandal, a musical instrument, 681
 Sarmast Khān, 585 (No 362)
 Sarod Khān of Gwalyar, a singer, 681
 Satr Sal Bundela, 546
 Satr Sal Kachhwaha 461
 Satr Sal Raṭhor, 386
 Sattis, a tribe 507 n
 Saturn or Zubāl, 211 n
 Sawadī a poet, 650 n
 Sawdāsh, a historical work, 331 n., 460 n
 Sawdīp'ī 'l ilām, title of a book, 619 sayā ban, a royal ensign, 52
 Sayf 'Alī Beg 330
 Sayf Khān Bārha, 427, 455
 Sayf Khān Koka, 375 (No 38), 376
 Sayf' d Dīn Husayn 'Alī Khān Bārha, 428
 Sayf' d Dīn i Ṣafawī, 329
 Sayf' 'llāh, Mīrzā, son of Qulij Khān, 35 n., 561 (No 292).
 Sayf' 'l Maluk, Shāh Muḥammad, 528
 Sāyib, a poet, 650 n

- Şayrafî, a mint officer, 18
 Şayrafî a poet, 652 n. , vide Şarfî
 Şayurghâl, or rent free land, 271, 278, 280, 281
 Sayyids of Amrohab, 426, ṠArabshāhî, 423, of Bārha, 357, 425, of Bukharā, 454, 457, of Gulistāna, 637 n. of Inju, 499, of Itawa, 510, of Mānikpūr 426, of Mūsawî, 414, of Raḡawî, 414, 538, Salāmi, of Shīrāz, 569, 570, Ṡabātībā, 663 n. , of Tirmizî, 578 science, how divided, 289 n sealing wax, how made, 274 seals, imperial, 46, 54 sects, vide Khwayas, Maghrīyā, Mahdawīs, Mahmūdīs, Nuḡṡawīs, Rawshānis, ḡumanīs, Umanā, Wahīdīs
 Shād Khān, 538
 Shād Khān, Mirza Shādman, 345, 346, 637 (No 233)
 Shādī Be, 506
 Shādī Be Uzbak, 685 (No 367)
 Shādī Beg Shujaʿat Khān, 538
 Shādī Khān Afghān, 335
 Shādī Khān Shādī Beg 506
 Shādī Shah vide Muḡammad Qāsim
 Shadman Pakhīswāl, 563
 Shafī, Mirzā, 453
 Shafiq, name of a writer, 550 n
 Shāh a title, 358, 358 n
 Shāh Abu Turab 207
 Shāh Abū 'l Maʿālî, Mir, 325, 339, 395 n. , 488
 Shāh ʿĀlam Ahmadabād , 617
 Shāh ʿAlî Nīzam Shāh 357
 Shah Beg Arghun (under Babar) 325
 Shah Beg Arghūn, son of Zu 'l Nur Arghūn, 390
 Shāh Beg Khān vide Khān Dawra
 Shah Beg Khān Arghun, 328
 Shāh Beg Khān Badakhshî, 490 (No 148)
 Shah Budagh Khān 402 (No 52), 414
 Shāh Fanaʿî, son of Mir Najafî 471 (No 115)
 Shāh Fakhr u Dīn Musawî Naqabat Khān, 445 (No 88)
 Shāh Fathu Bah, 603 n
 Shah Chizir Khān 491 (No 155) 492
 Shah Husayn Arghun Mirza 390 465
 Shāh Jahāngīr, vide Hāshraf
 Shāh Khālîl, vide Khālîl, Shāh
 Shah Mahmūd, of Nīshāpūr, a kātib, 109
 Shah Malik, Mir, 517
 Shah Mansūr, Khawāja, of Shīrāz, 35 n. , 355, 475 (No 122)
 Shāh, Mawlanā, of Mashhad, a kātib, 107
 Shāh Mirzā, 343, 513, 514
 Shāh Muḡammad, son of Masnad : ʿAll, 592 (No 395)
 Shāh Muḡammad, son of Quraysh Sultān, 511, 569 (No 310)
 Shāh Muḡammad Gakkhar, 581 (No 332)
 Shāh Muḡammad Khān Qalati, 448 (No 95) 449
 Shāh Muḡammad, Mawlanā, 112, 609, 610
 Shah Muḡammad, Mirzā, vide Ghaznīn Khān, 410
 Shāh Muḡammad, Mulla, 218
 Shāh Qulî Khān Naraynî, 536 (No 231), 665
 Shah Qul' Maḡram : Bahārîlû, 387 (No 45)
 Shāh Qulî Şalābat Khān, 498
 Shah Sultan, Mirzā, 488 n
 shāshāls (cherries), 69, vide gilas
 Shaham Aḡhā, 489
 Shaha-n Beg 335
 Shāhajn Khān Jalālî, 450 (No 97)
 Shahamat Khān Barha, 428
 Shahīz Khān, son of Sharif Amir 'l Umara, 583
 Shahīz Khān : kambū 197 252, 314, 347 365, 383, 436 (No 80), 466
 shāshî, a kind of silver 23, 39
 Shahjahan [Prince Khurram] 323, 324, 328, 329, 358, 358 n. , 359, abolishes the prostration, 223 n
 Shahnawaz Khān, Mirzā Irch, 360, 361, 575
 Shahnawāz Khān : Şafawî, 361, 527, 527 n
 Shahrî, a poet, 468
 Shahrokh Dantūrî, 591 (No 392)
 Shābrokh Mirzā, son of Mirza Ibrahim Badakhshî, 321, 326 (No 7), his children, 326 327, 413, 413 n. , 593

- Shahrokh, son of Mirza Pustam Safaw 320
 Shahryar Prince 324 574
 Shahu Khayl Afghan 564
 Shahzada Khanum, Akbar's daughter 321
 Sha^hista Khan Mirza Abu Talib 5 5 576
 Shajawal Khan Sur 473
 Shama^h n-^hab title of a work, 614
 Shamlu a tribe of Turkmans 648 n shansa an ensign 5 5 n shansherbaz, "6"
 Shams-i Bukhari 500
 Shamsi, Mirza vide Jahangir Qul Khan
 Shams^h d Din Buvassanghur a kat b 10"
 Shams^h d D n Chak, 686
 Shams^h d Din Hakim^h 1 Mulk 611
 Shan^h d Din Khafi Khwaja 40^o 46 493 (No 159) 494 550
 Shams^h d Din Khata^h a kat o 10"
 Shams^h d Din of Kirna a kat b 100
 shamyana an awning ?
 Shankal Beg Tarshan 359
 Shapur Khwaja, 577 6
 Sharaz, o Nuhapur a musician 680 n
 Sharaf of Yazd an engraver 5
 Sharaf Beg, of Sharaz, 576 (No 371)
 Sharaf^h d D n Husain Mirza 339 (No 17), 340 348, 3 377
 Sharif^h d D n Mir 570
 Sharif^h d D n Shaykh, Musair a saint 50
 Sharif, Amir^h 1 Umara son of Khwaja Abd^h g Samad 5^o (No 301)
 Sharif^h Aminul Mir 180 219 50^o (No 166) 50^o n 503 504 660 n
 Sharif Khan 415 (No 63)
 Sha^h f, Mir of Kolab 593 (No 406)
 Sharif Mir son of Mir Fat^h lah 609
 Sharif Mirza, son of Mirza 'Alid^h d Din 588 (No 370)
 Sharif Sarasad 581 (No 344) 660 n, 6 6 n
 Sharif Wuqu^h a poet 660 660 n shazal 713
 shawls 96 97
 Shavba, a tribe 335 34
 Shaiban Khan Uzbek, 38 390
 Shaykh Husayn Mawlana, 610
 Shaykh Mir 494 n
 Shaykhawat Ka^hhhwahab 504
 Shaykhzadey Suhrawardi, 106
 Sher Afkan son of Sayf Hoka, 584 (No 305)
 Sher Afkan Khan Humayuni 500
 Sher Afkan Khan Istaj u first husband of Nur Jahan 507 591
 Sher 'Al Hamran 423
 Sher Beg Yasawulbashi, 581 (No 334).
 Sher Khan, son of Ist mad Khan Gujrat^h, 490
 Sher Khan Fuladi, 343 419 490 433 447 510
 Sher Khan Mughal 554 (No 963)
 Sher Khwaja, 510 (No 1 6)
 Sher Muhammad 591 (No 393)
 Sher Muhammad Diwana 33^o 373 441 591
 Sher Shah son of 'Adli Mubarriz Khan 450
 Sher Shah Sur called by Mughul Historians Sher Khan 347 n his army reforms 57 confers lands 960 n 281 362, 466 473 507 564 566
 Sher Zaman Barha 493 430
 Sherzad son of 'Abd^h 1 Majlab Khan 442
 Sherzad Khan Bahadur 5 8
 Sber^h, a poet 112, 907 910 914 679 6 9 n
 Shermiya Khan 50 (No 168)
 Sherullah, 589
 Sh^hab 360 how treated by Sunnis 479 may abuse that relig on side taq yyy
 Shaf^h a writer 610
 Shabab-i Badakhsh 439
 Shabab Khan o Cwal ar a singer 601
 Shabab Khan Haja, 491
 Shaha^h d D n Ahmad Khan or Shabab Khan 30^o (No 90, 473 660 n
 Shauk Mulla a poet 306 n, 646, 646 n
 Sha^h n Khan Che 491 (No 104), 531 sh^hpa, 59 90 991
 sh^hro may v
 Sh^hrani Afghans 63
 sh^hl a calligraphical term, 17 r

Shujā Beg Arghun vide Shāh Beg
 Shuja', Mirza Najātat Khan Badakhshī
 326
 Shuja'at Khān vide 'Abd' ilah Khan
 Uzbek
 Shujā'at Khan Muqumī 'Arab, 400
 (No 51) 401
 Shuja'at Khan Shādī Beg 538
 Shuja'at Khan 'Shaykh Kabir 585
 585 n 586 587 588
 Shuja'at Khan Sur 473 473 n
 Shujā'ī a poet 612
 Shuja'ī 'Abulī Asad Khan 476 n
 Shujavāl Khān Afghān 496
 Shukr' ilah (Zafar Khān) son of Zayn
Khan Koka, 369 368 (No 373) 589
 Shukr' n Nisa Begum Akbar's daughter 321 shullā, a d sh 6°
 sijda or prostration 167 190 201 488
 continued by Jahangir 222 n abolished by Shahjahan 223 n
 sijra 25 n
 Sikandar Duttālī, 567
 Sikandar Khan Sur 330, 394 n 395
 395 n Sikandar Mirza, 513 514
 sikkāh 22
 silaras (storax) 87
 silāz a Chaghā'ī class 481
 silād. hachhwāhā 505 (No 267) silver 23 26 27 3° 38 39 43 44 45 sim : suhtā a metall. composition 42
 siṅg a brass horn 53
 Singrām vide Sangram
 Sipahdar Khān 566
 sipand, wild rue 146 n 647 n
 sirāj of Isfahān a poet 639 n
 Sirā'ī a kind of cloth 100
 Siratro. used in medicine 464
 sirā'ī, 21
 sitting, modes of 163 n 169
 Surrat a Hindū festival 210
 Swā Rām 538.
 Saydā-pōsh 301
 Sojā hachwāhā, 349 soldiers the r pa 258, 261 374 n fixed, 275
 sounds nature of 103
 Sox o Guddā, a Maḡnawī 675 n

spec fic gravity 42 o' woods 237 spices 67
 Srigan Khan a singer 681
 Sri Ram son of Gajpatī of Bihar 437,
 466
 Stewart's History of Bengal 310 398 n
 400 n 437 n
 stitch different kinds of 95 n storax vide silaras stuffs 96 97 685
 subas two officers appointed to each 466
 Subhan Khan a singer 681
 Subhan Qalī Khān of Bukhara 589
 Subhan Qulī Turk 415
 Subhan Singh Bundela 546
 Sufi sahib meaning of 659 n suhyānā fast days at court 61 64 sugawdh gugalā (bellium) 87 sugarcane cultivation of 73
 Subayī Khan Habshī 356
 Suhk Dev Bundela 546
 Suhrab Khan 454
 Suhrab Turkmān 516
 suks a coin 32
 Sulaimān (Solomon) king of the Jews
 319 623 623 n 633 633 n
 Sulaymān Karan king of Bengal 179
 179 n 334 358 n 395 471 472
 564 his death 472 472 n 685
 Sulaymān Khawāja 503
 Sulaymān Lohan Khawāja 586
 Sulaymān Mankhī 400
 Sulaymān Mirza son of Khan Mirza
 324 (No 5) 320 326, 338
 Sulaymān Shirāzī Khawāja, 383 57
 (No 327)
 Sulaymān Sultan of Badakhshan 487 suht : suht or toleration 497 n sulphur 26, 41
 sule a kind of writing 106
 Sulṭān noz de plume of several poets
 337
 Sultan Ādam Gakkhar vide Ādam
 Sultan 'Alī Khawāja vide Afzal Khan
 Sulṭān 'Alī, of Mashhad a katib 108
 108 n
 Sultan 'Alī, o' Qayin a kstib 108
 Sulṭān Begum 439
 Sulṭān Decrah. vide Sulṭān Dooda.
 Sulṭān Hāfīz Husayn, a musician 682

- Sultān Hāshim, a musician, 682
 Sultān Husayn Jalāir, 332, 417, 451
 Sultān Husayn, of Khujand, 107
 Sultān Husayn Mirzā, 311
 Sultān Ibrāhīm, of Awba, 482, 602
 Sultān Khānum, Akbar's daughter, 516
 Sultān Khwāja, 'Abd' 'l 'Azīm, 214, 219, 220, 279, 282, 284, 466 (No 108), 467, 686
 Sultān Mahmūd, of Badakhshān, 324, 593
 Sultān Mahmūd Mirzā, 324
 Sultān Muḥammad Khandān, 108
 Sultān Muḥammad, Muḥsif Khān, 532
 Sultān Muḥammad Nūr, a kاتب, 108
 Sultān Sarang Gakkhar, of Thanesar, 110-11
 Sultān, Shaykh, of Thanesar, 507
 Sultān Tatār Gakkhar, 507
 Sultān n Niṣā Begum, 323
 sumanī, a sect in Sindh, 188, 188 n sumnī, a coin 31
 sun, worshipped by Akbar, 209, 210, 211, honoured by Jahāngir, 222 n.
 Sundar, of Orisā, 594 (No 414)
 Sūr Dās, a singer, 681 n. 682
 Sūr Dās Kachhwāha, 433
 Sūr Singh Rāthor, 380
 sūryakrāntī, a stone, 50
Surat, Ma'āni (Form and Idea), title of a Maḥnawī, 670 n Surjan Hādā, Rāv, 449 (No 96), 462
 surkl, a weight, 16, 16 n surmayi Sulaymānī, a Persian dictionary, 584 surrā, a trumpet, 53
 sultees, 363, 675 n., 681 n swelling, a disease peculiar to Bhakkar, 464
TABĀNCHA, a fighting elephant, 520.
 Tabaqāt-i Akbarī, chronology of, 460 n tabnādī, 252
 tabri a dirham, 37
 Tafsīr 'l 'Imārāt, title of a work, 378
 Tafsīr i Ma'ānī, 590
 Tāhur Beg, son of Khān i Kalān, 569 (No 312).
 Tāhur Khān, Mīr Farāghat, 448 (No 94), 603
 Tābīr Muḥammad-Khwāja, 468 688
 Tahir i Mūsawī Mīr, 538 (No 236)
 Tahir, son of Sayf' 'l Mulūk, 328 (No 201), 693
 Tahmās Mirzā Ṣafawī, 328
 Tahmāsp, Shah, of Persia, 448, 449, 468, dies, 187
 Tannuras, son of Prince Dānyāl, 322, 323.
 Tahwīldār, an officer, 46
 ta'natīyon, 252
 Tāj Bibī, vide Mumtaz Mahal
 Tāj Khān, 508
 Tāj Khān Ghori, 344
 Tāj Khān Khatriya, 593 (No 404)
 Tāj i Salīmīnī, a kاتب, 107
 Tājak, a work on Astronomy, 112
 Tāj' d Din, Shaykh, of Dihil, 190
 Takaltu Khān, 517
 takwāliya, a kind of coat, 94, 653, 653 n
 Takhta Beg i Kābuli, 523 (No 185)
 talhī, 205
 Talūā, a Quzilbāsh tribe, 470
 talwin, 205
 talwa namā, 57
 talwī, a kind of writing, 107.
 talwīq, 259, 265, 269, 271, 272
 tāliqūn, a metallic composition, 42.
 tamāha, 198
 Tamsin, an engraver 55, — a wrong reading for Namakin, vide Abul Qāsim Namakin.
 tangr, 27
 tanghan, a pony, 140
 tanā, a weight, 16, 16 n
 Tansen, the singer [Tansin, Tānzin], 445, 531, 681, 682 n.
 Tantarang Khān, a singer, 681
 Taql, or Taqiyā, Mullā, of Shurtar, 218, 219, 584 (No 352)
 Taql Mīr, son of Mīr Fatḥ' 'līh, 600.
 Taql Muḥammad, 584
 Taqiyā, of Balhān, 584
 taqyya, practised by Shi'ahs, 360
 tarsūdār, 300, 300 n
 Tarbiyat Khān, 401.
 Tardī Beg Khān, 334 (No 17), 335, 400.
 Tardī Khān, son of Qiyā Khān, 367, 458 (No. 101)
 tārī, or toddy, 75
 Tārīk-i Aḥl, 113, 115 n., 498.

Tariḡh : Ilāhī, or Akbar's Divine Era 20
 Tariḡh : Khān Jahān Lodī, 569
 Tariḡh : Mas'ūmī 464 n 465 n 548
 Tārīḡh : Rashīd a historical work 511 612 n
 Tariḡh : Sindh (Mas'ūmī), 579
 Tārīḡs a tribe, 522
 Tārīqī a poet 667 n
 Tarkhān a title 393 conferred by Akbar 611
 Tarkhān Dīwana 377
 tarkul a see 75
 tarri a unit 75
 Tarsan Mullā, of Badakhshān 220
 Tarsan Khān 304 (No 32) 365
 Tāsh Beg of Qipclaq a musician 682
 Taah Beg Khān Mughul 508 (No 172)
 Taahbinī of Kashan a poet, 53ⁿ 666 taahshā, 2 9
 taahim a kind of salutation 166, 16ⁿ
 taahuj a weight 37
 Tatar Gakkhar Sultan 507
 Tātar Khān of Khurasān 468 (No 111)
 Tatar Sultan of Persia 572
 Tatars worship the sun 2^o
 Tauḡid : Ilāhī name of Akbar's religion 211 tauḡish army accounts 270
 tauḡiḡ a kind of writing 106 107 taxes 285 475 on marriages 288 on horses imported 225
 tāv a kind of horse 243
 Tawḡid^{at} / Umora^{at} a historical work 49ⁿ n
 ten aer tax, 285
 Terry's Voyage to East India 689
 tūāna meaning of 369 n tūhī 62
 tiger hunting 293
 Tūānpurī a clan 426 428 4^o
 Tiluks Kachhwāha, 435
 tīlūa, 262
 timber kinds of 233 237
 Timur 389 390 512
 Timur and Napoleon I 636 n
 Timur : Bakhshī 531
 Timu Khān Yakka 531 (No 215)
 Timuride 513
 tin, 43 43 n

titles 200 251 267 323 350 35ⁿ 358, 358 n 361 393 398 398 n 399 n, 422 453 n 494 n 565 611, of Ajghāns 564 vide Tarkhān Shāh
 Sultan Farzand Mir Samār Mir Shāh Mir Manzil Mir Ruba^{at} Today Mal Khattī Rājā 33 3 3 364, 373 376 (No 39) 377 407 414 414 n 477 his birthplace 687
 toddy vide tārī
 Tolak Khān Quchin 492 (No 158) 493 toleration 407 n
 tolls river tolls 29^o
 Toḡdā^{at} a Chaghā^{at} clan 480 translated one from Sanskrit into Persian, 110 111 209 transmigration of souls 188 n
 Treasures 12 14 15
 Tribes vide Afrīd Afshar 'Arghūn
 Arlat Awan Bahārū Bakhtyar
 Barlas Batani Būdaurīā
 Bhalgal Gakkhar Chibī Dhund
 Dilshazak, Duldai, Gakkhar Gharbah
 Khāvi Ciarjah Gurja, Hazarah Ighur Uigur) Jalair Tanju^{at} Jharīah Jodrah Kājar Kakar
 Kathi Khānzadab Khātars Koh
 tars Kohbar Lohani Malmend
 Māji, Maidani Main Mangaral
 Maḡ Miyanah Nihallu Nāzi
 Qarāqonlu Qar'ygh Sandaha
 Sait Shahī Shāyī Shohān
 Siamlu Shirwāni Sīdoz Takl
 Tānīl Talar Toḡba Turbatī Turk
 Usajī Uzbek Yusuzai, Zilqadr
 vide Rājputis
 Tuḡ Mīhammad Qoqshal 689
 Tuḡ^{at} begī an office 288
 Tulū Das Jadn 564 (No 365)
 tumanloq a royal standard 2^o tuḡuz or nine a favourite number of the Mughals 293 n
 Turbat name of a tribe 373
 turat a kind of horse 243 244
 Turks the character 609
 UCHLĀ Kachhwāha 133 436
^{ud} vide alocs
 Udaī Singh son of Jaymal 472

Ūdai Singh, Moth Raja, of Jodhpur, 323,
 474 (No 121), 475
 Ūdai Singh, Ranā of Mewar, 349, 379,
 398, 585
 Ugar Śin Kachhwaha, 461
 Uigur, vide Ighur
 Ujjainī, a Raja, of Bihar, 577 n
 Ulfatī, a poet 35 n, 381 n
 Ulugh Beg, son of Mirza Sultan, 334
 Ulugh Khān Hāshī 485 (No 135)
 Ulugh Mirzā, 513 514
 Umana, a sect, 502, 502 n
 Ūmar bin Hibaīrah, 37
 Ūmar, the Khawāī 36 37
 Ūmar Shāhī Mī zā, son of Timur, 311, 513, 616
 umara* libar, 250
 Umm Kulūm Begam, 489
 upīc, or cow dung, 21
 Urdu-beoī: armed women, 47
 Ūrdū language, 378
 Ūrfī of Shiraz, the poet, 469, 639, 639 n,
 650 n
 Ūsmān, son of Bahādur Khān Qūrbegī,
 555
 Ūsman Lohānī Khwāja, 362, 363, 586, 587, 588
 Ūstā Dost, a singer, 681
 Ūstā Muḡammad Amīn, 682
 Ūstā Muḡammad Husayn, 682
 Ūstā Shāh Muḡammad, 682
 Ūstā Yus f, 692
 Ūstād Jalālī, vide Rāmī Khān
 Ūstād Mirzā Ūlī Fāthagī, a singer,
 682 n
 Ūstālu, a tribe, 687
 Ūways, Sultān, 325
 Ūmay (army), 402 n., 413 n
 Ūstaks 327
 ūuk, an imperial seal, 54

YAKILS of Akbar's reign, 595
 Yaqrī, a poet, 392
 Yazir Khān Harawī, 379 (No 41), 395
 Yazirs, of Akbar's reign, 595 vegetables, 66
 voracity, 526
 vowel-signs of the Arabic language, 103

WAPĀ'Ī, of Isfahān a poet, 662 wages of labourers, 235, of sailors, 291
 Waḡdat Ūlī Rawshānī, 452
 Wabādiyyā, a sect, 502
 Waisī, Khwāja, Dīwān, 479, 516
 Wa,ih* d Dīn, Shāykh, of Gujrāt, 457, 499 509 607
 Wakīl vide Vakīl
 Wala jāh, Prince, 527 n
 Wālī Beg 584 (No 359)
 Wālī Beg Zu 'l Qadr, 348
 Wālī Dasht Bayarī, a poet, 646 n
 Wālī Khān Lohānī, 586, 587, 588
 Wālī Mirzā, 323
 Wālīhī a poet, 664 n
 Waqarī, vide Vaqarī
 waqīcā nāwīcā, or news writer, 268 268 n
 Wāqīcāt: Babarī, History of Babar's reign, 355
 wardrobe the imperial, 93, 97
 Wāshī a poet, 576
 water, drunk at court, 57, 58, — of life, 57, 625 n
 waterfowl, 307
 wax representation of the birth of Christ 203 686
 wazīfa, or allowances 278
 Wazīr Beg Jamīl, 527 (No 200), vide
 Yazir weapons, list of, 117
 weavers, 57, 94
 weighing of the king, etc. 276, 277;
 — of distinguished men, 682 n
 weights, 16 n, 37, vide bābāghūrī, 93,
 — of Kashmir, 90, 570
 wine, drunk at court, 207, vide drinking women, how many a Muḡammad may marry, 182, 45, armed 47 (vide
 Urdu begī), perfect, 49, of Persia
 India, and Transoxania, compared,
 346, how treated in the harem,
 349, — literary, vide Makhī wood, price of, 233
 wrestlers, 263
 writing, art of, 102
 Wuqū'ī, of Nishāpur, a poet, 660

YĀBU, a horse, 243
 yād-dāshī, 259, 260

Yādgār 'Alī Sultan Talish, 578
 Yādgār Halālī, a poet, 664, 664 n
 Yādgār Husayn, 484, 591 (No 338)
 Yādgār, Khawaja, 551
 Yādgār Razawī, 370, 371
 Yāhyā, of Kashan, a poet, 631 n
 Yāhyā, Khawaja, of Sabzwār, 670 n
 Yāhyā, Mir, a katib, 106
 Yāhyā Qazwīnī, Mir, 49C
yak hāth, 202
yakhū, a dish, 63
yamanī, a dirham, 37
 Yamīn^u 'd Dawla Āsaf Jah, 575, vide
 Āsaf Khān (IV)
 Ya'qūb Beg son of Shah Beg Khān
 Daurān, 410
 Ya'qūb Beg Chaghtā¹, 351
 Ya'qūb Bukhārī Sayyīd, 435
 Ya'qūb Chak, 535
 Ya'qūb, Qazī, 183
 Ya'qūb Sarfī Shaykh of Kashmir, 191, 330, 615, 651
yaqūt, a stone, 673 n
 Yaqūt invents the naṣṣḥ writing, 106
 Yār Beg, 564
 Yār Muḥammad Mir, of Ghazni, 337
 Yār Muḥammad, son of Ṣadiq Khān, 561
 (No 288)
 Yaraq Khān [Burāq Khān], 512, 689
yasāl, 169
 Yatun Bahādur, 524
 Yazīd, 37
 Yol Qulī Anīsī, a poet, 648, 648 n
yalma, a dish, 63
 Yūnān Beg, 585 (No 369)
 Yusuf, son of 'Umar, 37
 Yusuf (Joseph) 628 n, 644 n
 Yusuf Beg Chaghtā¹, 351
 Yusuf Haikun, Snaykh, 608
 Yusuf i Kashmirī, 591 (No 389)
 Yusuf Khān, son of Husayn hān
 Tukriya, 403, 687
 Yusuf Khān Chak, of Kashmir, 534 (No 228)
 Yusuf Khān Razawī Mirza, of Mashhad,
 309 (No 35), 370, 498, 675 n
 Yusuf Miṭṭī, 466
 Yusuf Muḥammad Khān, son of Atga
Khān, 340 (No 18)

Yūsuf Shāh, of Mashhad, a kātīb, 106
 Yusuf zā a, 214, 353, 367, 368

ZABĀD (civet), 84, 80
 Zafar Khān, Shukr^u 'Ilāh, 588, 589
 Zāhid, son of Sadiq Khān, 561 (No 286)
 Zāhid Khān-Koka, 453
 Zahir^u d Dīn 'Abd^u 'Ilāh Imāmī, 646 n.
 Zahir^u d Dīn, Khawaja, 593 (No 397)
 Zahir^u 'd Dīn Yazd Mir, 593
 Zaid^u 'Ilāh, Mir, 526
 Zaim^u 'd Dīn Khāfi, 661, 661 r
 Zakariya, Shaykh of Ajodhan, 190
 Zakī Mir 538
 Zaman Snaykh of Panipat, 190
zamin-doz, a tent, 56
zara [zarra] a coin, 31, a weight, 37
zard bursaj, a dish, 61
 Zarrab 22, 39
Zarrab o Khurshid, a Naṣrawī, 366
Zarrin qalam, title of katibs, 10C, 109
zat, "brevet," 251
 Zayn Khān Koka, 214, 346, 367 (No 31),
 367 n, 368, 369, 533 n, 662 n
 Zayn Shah Gakkhar, 506 n
 Zayn^u d Dīn, a katib, 108
 Zayn^u 'd Dīn, Abu Bakr i Taybādi, a saint, 395
 Zayn^u 'd Dīn 'Alī 593 (No 100)
 Zayn^u d Dīn Mahmud Kamaṅgar, 608 n
 Zayn^u 'l 'Ābidīn, Mirza, son of Āsaf
Khān (III), 453, 643 n
 Zayn^u 'l 'Ābidīn, Sultan of Kashmir,
 506, 680 n
 Zeb^a 'n Nisa Begum daugh'er of Awrangzeb, 322
 Ziya^u 'd Dīn, Shaykh 616
 Ziya^u 'd Dīn Yūsuf Khān, 526, 527
 Ziya^u 'Ilāh, son of Muḥammad Ghaws
 509
 Ziyā^u 'l Mulk of Kāshān, 557 (No 276)
 Zoroastrians, 193, 220
 Zubav, 36
 Zuhāl, or Sa'urn, 211 n
 Zulaykhā, wife of Potipha^r, 628, 628 n
 Zulf 'Alī Yazdī, 466
 Zu 'l Faqr Khān Nusrat Jang, 575
 Zū 'l Nun Beg Arghūn, Mir, 389, 390
 Zu 'l Qadr, a Turkish tribe 687

INDEX
OF
GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES
IN THE FIRST VOLUME
OF THE
A^S-IN I AKBARI

- A B I Ghorband 493
 Ābu Mount de Abugarh
 Abugarh 380 381
 Āchin 80 86 291
 Afghan stan 31 n 108 n
 Āgra 3 35 n 57 58 58 n 93 129
 184 208 277 n., 300 n 309 n.,
 310 n 379 331 333 341 363 366
 375 376, 388, 394 441 454 455
 480 480 n 496 501 509 530 537
 540 549 560 562, 566 587 574
 575 578 579 590 609 610 637 n., 646 n 650 n., 667 n 691 n (fort
 of) 412, 5 9
 Āg Mahall 300 450 490 518
 Ahmadābād 3° 93 343 346, 352, 355
 371 372 375, 378 380 401 419
 470 432, 457 457 n., 474 480 n.,
 515 516 569 5 0 570 n., 607 617
 638 649 n., 650 n 656 n., 659 n.,
 678 n 684
 Ahmadnagar 149 n., 306 307 358, 383
 416 439 498, 499 500 550 566
 Ahro^s L 589
 Ajmir 3° 4° 101 197 300 n., 372, 339
 346 347 348 349 363, 379 384
 430 435 43 439 461 497 498,
 500 506 516 517 610 678 n
 Ajodhan rude Lak Patan
 Akbarnagar or Akjāmahall 362, 575
 Alāpur 797
 Āl Masjūd 461 506 n
 Alāhābād or Ilāhābās or Ilāhābād, 32,
 290 374 379 416, 452, 453 578 582,
 685 rude L 549
 Alwar 32, 347 n., 401 497 617 615
 Amarkot 304 334, 361
 Amber 347 348 n., 361
 A c̄hi 5 6 607 616
 Amner 541 n
 Amroha, 712, 494 455
 Amrasnāy n 297
 Ārāul 185 199
 Andajān (Farghāna), 350, 413
 Aqābīn Mount, 412
 Arāul (Jalālābād), 470
 Arbudā Achal 385 n
 Ard stān 582
 Arhang in Padakj shān 69
 Arracan 431 n
 Arrah (B hār), 415, 437 489 489 n
 Ārvi 541 n
 Asadābād (Hamadān), 655 n
 Āshī, 356, 541 541 n
 Āsir Fort, 359 602, 609
 Astrābād 668 n
 Atak, or Atak Banāra, 32, 160 n., 404 n., 493, 495 n., 589
 Āthgah, 341 n
 Audh, province 344 364 390 393, 416,
 494 518 — (town), 37 395 434,
 498, 492, 617
 Awankārī, 507 n
 Awah (near Il rāi), 104, 492
 Āwis 422
 Aurangābād (or Kharkī), 500 n
 A^sampūr 516 607
 Āzarbāyjan 379 4 6.
- B Bāhā al-shān 403
 Bādāshān 64, 69 n., 110, 167 n., 180 374 320, 378, 379 330, 300
 413, 413 n 418, 423, 444 447 277

Yādgār 'Alī Sultan Tāi sh 578
 Yādgār Halālī a poet 664 664 n
 Yādgār Husayn 484 581 (No 338)
 Yād^gā *Kh*wājā, 551
 Yādgār Razawī 370 371
 Yāhya of Kashan a poet 631 n
 Yāhyā, *Kh*wājā, of Sabzwār 670 n
 Yāhyā Mir a kat b 106
 Yāhya Qazwīn Mir 49C
 yāh Alī 262
 yāh^ā a dish 63
 yaman a dirham 37
 Yam n^o d Dawla Āṣaf jah 57^o vide
 Āṣaf *Kh*ān (IV)
 Ya'qūb Beg son of Shah Beg *Kh*ān
 Daurān 410
 Ya'qūb Beg Chaghtā' 351
 Ya'q b Bukhārī Sayyid 435
 Ya'qub Chak 535
 Ya'qub Qāzī, 183
 Ya'qub Ṣāfi Shaykh of Kashmir 191
 35 615 651
 yāqūt, a stone 573 n
 Yāq t invents the naakh wr t ng 106
 Yār Beg 564
 Yār b ḥammad Mir of Chazni 337
 Yar Muḥammad son of Sād q *Kh*ān 561
 (No 288)
 Yārāq *Kh*ān (Burāq *Kh*ān ?) 512 680
 yāraf 169
 Yalim Bahādur 5 4
 Yazid 37
 Yal Quī Anīf a poet, 648 648 n
 yalwa a dish, 63
 Yūnān Beg, 585 (No 369)
 Yūsuf son of 'Umar 37
 Yūsuf (Joseph), 678 n 644 n
 Yūsuf Beg Chaghtā' 351
 Yūsuf Harkun Snaykh, 608
 Yūsufī Kashmirī 591 (No 389)
 Yusuf *Kh*ān son of Husayn *Kh*ān
 Tukriya, 403 68
 Yusuf *Kh*ān Chak of Kashmir 534 (No 285)
 Yusuf *Kh*ān Razawī Mirzā, of Mashhad
 379 (No 35) 370 498, 675 n
 Yūsuf M (ii), 466
 Yūsuf Muḥammad *Kh*ān son of Atga
*Kh*ān 340 (No 18).

Yusuf Shah of Mashhad a kat b 106
 Yusuf za s 214 353 367 368

ZABĀD (c vet) 84 80
 Zafar *Kh*ān Shukr^o Ilāh, 588 589
 Zahid son of Sād q *Kh*ān 561 (No 286)
 Zah d *Kh*ān Koka 453
 Zah^o d D n 'Abd^o Ilāh Imam 648 n
 Zah^o d D *Kh*wājā 593 (No 397)
 Zah^o d D n Yazd M r 393
 Za d^o Ilāh Mir 526
 Zan^o d D n *Kh*āfi 661 661 n
 Zakariya Shaykh of Ajodhan 190
 Zak M r 538
 Zamān Snaykh of Panpat 190
 zam ndoz a ten 56
 zara [zarra] a coin 31 a weight 37
 zard b ny a dish 61
 Zarrab ^o 39
 Zarrāh o *Kh*urshīd a Maṣraw 566
 Zarrān qalam t title of kut bs 100 109
 zat brevet 251
 Zayn *Kh*ān Koka 214 346 367 (No 34)
 367 n 368 369 533 n 66^o n
 Zayn Shah Gakkhar 506 n
 Zayn^o d D n a kat b 108
 Zayn^o d D n Abū Bakrī Taybadī a sa nt 395
 Zayn^o d D n 'Alī 593 (No 100)
 Zayn^o d D n Mahmūd Kamāngar 608 n
 Zayn^o i 'Ab d n M'rzā son of Āṣaf
*Kh*ān (III) 453 643 n
 Zayn^o i 'Ab d n Sulṭān of Kashm r
 506 680 n
 Zob^o n 'a sa Begum daughter of Awrangzeb 322
 Z yā^o d D n Shaykh 616
 Z yā^o d D n Yusuf *Kh*ān 576 527
 Z yā^o Ilāh son of Muḥammad Ghawṣ
 509
 Z yā^o i M'ruk of Kashān 557 (No 276)
 Zoroastrians 103 20
 Zubayr 36
 Zubal or Sa urn 211 n
 Zulaykhā, wife of Pot pha. 628 628 n
 Zulf 'Alī Yazdī, 466
 Zu i Faqār *Kh*ān Nuṣrat-jang 575
 Zu i Nūn Beg Arghūn Mir 389 390
 Zū i Qadr a Turkish tribe 687

INDEX
OF
GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES
IN THE FIRST VOLUME
OF THE
A*IN-I AKBARI

- A B-I Ghorband 493
 Abu Mount v de Abugarh.
 Abugarh, 38, 38, 1
 Achin 8, 88 291
 Afghanistan 31 n., 108 n.
 Agra 3 35 n., 57 58 58 n., 93 179
 184 208 277 n., 300 n., 309 n.,
 310 n 379 331 333, 341 363, 366
 375 376 388, 394 441 454 455
 480 480 n., 496 501 509 530 537
 540 549 560 567 568 567 574
 575 578 579 590 609 610 637 n., 646 n., 6. n., 667 n., 681 n (fort
 of) 412, 59
 Ag Mahall 3, 0 4, 0 490 518
 Ahmadabad, 3, 93 343 346 35, 355,
 371 372, 375 376 380, 401 419
 470 432, 457 457 n., 474 480 n.,
 515 516 569 570 570 n., 607 611
 638 649 n 6, 0 n., 6, 6 n., 659 n.,
 678 n., 644
 Ahmadnagar 149 n., 356 3, 358, 383,
 416 439 494 499 507 550 566.
 Ahro², 589
 Ajmir 32, 4, 1, 1 19, 300 n 322 339
 346 347 348, 349 363, 379 3, 4
 43, 435 43, 439 461 49, 493,
 50, 516 517 610 68 n
 Ajmihan v de Lak Pitan
 Akbarnagar or Ajmahall 362, 5 3
 Alāpur 797
 All Mahajid 461 468 n
 Allahabad or Ilahāda, or Ilahābād 32,
 70, 3, 1 379 416, 432, 4, 5, 5 542,
 645 v de 1 1, 1
 Alwar 32, 347 n., 401 49, 607 613.
 Amarkot 3, 4 334, 361
- Amber 347 348 n., 361
 A eth 5 6 607 618
 An ner 541 n
 Amroha, 712, 4, 4 485
 Amraamāyān 797
 Am 1 185 199
 Andajan (Farghana), 390 413
 Aqābin Mount, 41*
 Ara 1 (Jalālābād), 470
 Arbūdā Achal 385 n
 Ard stān 582.
 Arhang in Padakshāhān 69
 Arracan 431 n
 Arrah (B hār), 415, 437 489 489 n
 Arvi 541 n
 Asadābād (Hamadān), 655 n
 Ashl, 356, 541 541 n
 Ashr Fort, 359 502, 509
 Astrābād, 668 n.
 Atak or Atak Banāras 32, 160 n., 404 n., 493, 495 n., 589
 Athgah, 341 n
 Audh, province 344 364 380, 393, 416,
 4, 6 518 — (town), 32, 393, 434,
 483, 4, 6 617
 Awānkārī, 507 n
 Awbah (near Il rāi), 108, 482.
 Awa 432.
 Aurangābād (or Kharkāi), 5, 0 n
 A'samjār 514 607
 Azarhāvjān 379 4 6.
- B Bābā 1, 1, 1, 1 492.
 Bahābād 64, 67 n., 169, 16, n., 169, 2 4 32, 37, 37, 397, 397,
 412, 413 n., 414, 422, 454 457 5

Badalgarh 412 n
 Bada^oon 32 110 110 n 111 n 449
 506 557 618
 Baghdad 107 536
 Bagh i Dahra, 560
 Bagh Mirza Kamran (Lahore) 3 3
 458 n 505
 Bagh i Nūr Ma zil 560
 Bagh i Šafā 512 n
 Bagh i Serdar Khan 523
 Bagiana, 340 440 474 516 561
 Bahat Du'ab 594
 Bahat R ver 370 505 544
 Bahrab 3^o 233 382 525
 Bahra ch (Bhara j) 60 451 49^o 501
 Bahrapara 490
 Bahrayan 87
 Bahroch (Broach) 353 354 356 416
 419 480 n 493 515 615
 Bajor (Bjur) 367 383 388 443 469 525
 Bajwarsl 140
 Baksar (Buxar) 485 532
 Baktarapur 365 438
 Bālaghat 35 3 8 371 400 565 566
 569
 Baland or Gurewa Balandr 368
 Balandshahr 4^o
 Bālap 358 361 371 384 569
 Balawal 345
 Balban 584
 Bāl (or Malin) 661 n
 Balkh 185 315 325 330 418 493 495 n
 589
 Baluchistan 388
 Bām yan 49^o
 Banaras 32 77 561 637 n
 Banas R ver 436 n
 Bandel 560 n
 Bāndhu 385 396, 396 n 446 523
 Bangash 328 440 519 540 544 589 591
 Bānpur (Pan pur) 540 540 n
 Bārahmūla 356 535 535 n
 Barar 129 344 358 383 490 490 n
 498 499 541 550
 Bardwān 363 383 406 407 n 557 59^o
 601 n
 Bareh 432 537
 Barha, 425 403
 Barhanpur 330 (where wrong Barbām pur) 343 357 3 8 359 371 391

453 474 500 551 560 566 567
 568 5 8 584 644 n 648 n 675 n
 Bar 294 297 585
 Baroda (Gujrat) 354 4^o 480 n
 Basachwan 186 199 50^o n
 Basantpur Kama, on 403
 Basawar 271 n
 Basrah 87 105 n
 Bastar 129 129 1
 Bayāwan 129
 Baybaq 559
 Bazuba 537 n
 Bengal 32 30 n 72 130 157 179 179 n
 199 215 264 28 290 3 6 329 344
 350 351 302 n 361 362 363 364
 374 375 376 380 39 406 406 n
 459 468 471 47^o 475 482 485
 486 487 496 497 523 537 552
 55^o n 553 5 558 5 9 560 566
 570 586
 Betwa R ver 508 n
 Bhadawar 547
 Bhadrak 363 404 407 496
 Bhagalpur 350
 Bha ns 432
 Bha ronwal on the Bah 430 n 435
 455 4 6 456 n 505 505 n ear
 the Cha ab 505 n
 Bhakkar 3 68 199 200 201 8^o 351
 360 388 390 391 391 n 463 464
 464 n 465 473 485 525 538 548
 578 579 580 616
 Bhakra pass 544
 Bhakrala, 544
 Bhander 568
 Bhasran (Sasseram) 5 7 n
 Bhath Ghorā 129 38 396 445 446
 685
 Bhat 300 350 n 362 365 365 n 383
 438 476 n 482
 Bhat nda 151 297
 Bhatnūr 101 297
 Bh lsa 356
 Bh mbar 484 660 n
 Bhojpur (B har) 577 n
 Bhowāl 365
 B daul 4^o 6, 429 431
 B gram 434 488 n
 B har 88 3 9 344 345 351 353 362
 374 375 376 377 380 383 390 n,

437, 438, 452, 466 491, 494, 494 n., 499, 500, 502, 519, 523, 556, 558,
575, 577, 577 n., 589, 613, 635, 688

Bharī (Buzaffanagar), 420

Bihishtābād, vide Sikandrah

Bijāgarh, 129, 343, 474

Bijāpūr, 34 n., 318, 322, 334, 359, 496,
501, 520, 537, 665 n.,

Bijnor, 432

Bikānir, 151, 323, 331, 384 385, 448

Bilāspūr, 430, 431

Bilgrām, 331 n., 425, 617

Bīr, 371, 510, 526

Birbhūm, 432, 496, 554 n

Bistām, 559

Biyāh River, 332

Biyāna, 342, 418, 514, 615

Bounlee, 435 n., 436 n., 539 n

Brahmaputra River, 366, 440, 540, 566

Brouch, vide Bahrōch

Bojhārā, 103 n., 315, 389, 474, 466 n., 653, 653 n., 673 n

Bullāna, 440 n

Būndī, 450, 472, 577

Burbhānābād, 439

Būshanj, 493

Bust, 539

CAMBAY, vide Kambhāyat
Caspian Sea, 57 n., 184

Chamārī, 467, 608

Chāmpānir, 86, 334, 420, 515, 570, 570 n

Chanāb River, 58, 456 505, 508 n

Chandaurī Chaudaura, 431

Chanderī, 129, 542

Chāndor, Fort, 356

Chāndpūr, 432

Chārīkān, 423

Chatorah, 429, 430

Chatmohor, 648

Chaurāgadh, 397, 445

Chausā, 374, 392, 450, 472, 506

Chhach valley, 545 n

Chhatbāndrā, 429

Chhānawāllā, 509 n

China, 83, 87

Chinese Tartary, 99

Cross (Q'ala), 83

Croice 329 369, 398, 4 8, 467, 449, 491,
518, 548, 585, 635

Chittok, 406, 407

Chotāna, 584

Chunar (Chanādh), Fort, 396, 432, 450, 481

Cyprus (Q'ibrus), 83.

DAHNĀSARĪ (Tenasserim), 86, 291.
Daigūr, Fort, 437

Dakhin, 88, 101, 157, 264, 357, 523

Dalaman, 523

Dāman i Koh, 482

Damāwand, 612

Dāndee, vide Khāndesh

Dandoqa, 434

Dāngall, 506 n., 509 n., 649

Dantūr, vide Dhantūr

Darwāshābād 661 n

Dasthārā River, 392

Dāwar (Zamīn Dāwar), 327, 328, 329,
334, 347, 422, 449, 449

Dawlatābād, or Dhārāgarh, or De, ogfir,
478, 539, 547, 550 n., 565, 568

Davnūr, 319

De, ogarh, vide Untgir

De ogfir, vide Dawlatābād

Deoli Nijārī, 397 n

Deosa, 345

Dihāllā, 576 580, 587

Dhamerī, 545

Dhamūnī, 454

Dhantūr (Dhantāwar), 563, 591

Dhanūrl, 591

Dharangān, 645

Dhārāgarh, vide Dawlatābād

Dhārūr, 372

Dhārūr, 429

Dholpūr, 344, 527 n

Dholqah, 376, 431

Diklaputi, 648

Dih Qāsiyān, 533

Doh, 32, 157, 190, 318, 323, 342, 349,
352, 379, 390, 394, 396, 431 442, 454
456, 458 n., 457, 463, 464 518, 542,
607, 609, 611, 613, 646 n., 668 n.

Dih-ālir, 322 n

D'p'd'p'dr (Māllāll), 185, 322, 422, 654;
(Panjāb), 342

Dhah, 649

Dra, 315, 372

Dre River, 291 n.

Dunāra 437 437 n
 Dungaṛ ur 419 443 1 3 554 554 :
 Dwarka 344

EDAR de Idar
 Europe 95 98 99 100 101 101 n
 103 109 289 301 n

FADAK °06
 Fa ṣ r (n Sumatra) 84 n 684
 Faras S j star 43 n 3°8 448
 Faranked near Samarqand 480 n
 Far dabad near Dhl 4 7 688
 Fathābad (Panjab) 456 473 : Kḥark
 50 n
 Fathahād Sarka Bogla (Bengal) 404 40
 Fathp r v llage near Kaṣah 337
 Fathpur Hanswah 380 425 n 507
 Fathpur Jhunjhanu 29
 Fathpur S'krī 57 55 93 184 192 n
 212 233 322 343 344 376 401
 403 441 467 497 55° 555 556
 557 579 580 669 n
 Fayṣ Nabr canal 303
 Firuzabad 336

GAKKHAR Distr ct 544 689
 Ganga (Godāvar) 510
 Ganges 33 n 39 58, 334 336 378 381
 396
 Gango 607 616
 Ganjāba Fort (Ganjawa) 484
 Gaṛha (Gadha) or Gaṛha Katanga (Jabal
 pur) 129 344 372 373 382 396
 396 n 397 403 413 447 450 451
 473 500 537 558 602 n
 Gaṛh (Bengal) 344 350 356 361 374
 400 n
 Garmar 327 417 448
 Gaur 184 334 406 407 450 593
 Gāw l Fort 499
 Gaya 497 n
 Ghandak R ver 383 411
 Ghanwali 309 n
 Charjstan 364 413 n 5°8
 Chatrāghāl 557
 Chazipur 218, 327 336 415 451 49°
 518 594

Clazr n (yha n 337 303 409 415
 416 417 476 n 506
 Ghoraglat 1°9 n 363 365 399 n 400
 421 438 48° 5°8 593 685

Chuyduwan 561
 G dhor 536 n
 Gla 184 186 468 497 529 611 612
 644 644 n
 Go,æ 3 l
 Goganly 561 437 battles of wher fought 460 460 n 536
 Golah : d Kant o Golah
 Gondwanah 397 569
 Gora,ḥpur 3 395 339 400
 Goshkan or Joshuaqan 57 298 °98 n
 Gujan 509
 Gu ar Khan 506 n
 Gujrat town in the Panjab 93 456 n
 56
 Gujrat (province) 24 33 n 35 n 7° 81
 80 88 98 99 149 n 15 15 81
 193 215 263 296 n 330 331 334
 34° 343 344 346 352 354 355 359
 371 3 6 379 380 388 416 418 420
 4°1 40 456 457 457 n 458 n
 461 474 479 480 n 499 500 515
 516 524 534 566 566 570 579 58°
 613 678 n 680 n
 Gulpa gan 658 n
 Gunabad (Jūnab d) 661
 Gunachur near Jahndhar 332 n 687
 Gura or Kurar 545 n
 Gwāl yar 32 60 129 n 235 330 346
 362, 366 366 n 412 424 484 507
 509 527 551 607 608 609 617
 658 n 680 n 681 68°

HĀDAUTĪ 449
 Hasbatpur vide Pat Ha batpur
 Halan (Panjab) 387 508 n vide H'la
 Hajpur 215 °18 334 344 351 374 383
 403 450 468 49°
 Haldpur 560 n
 Hamadan 191 329 655 605 n
 Hamidpur 614
 Handiyah 129 129 n 537 58
 Hardwar or Har dwar 32 58 3 8
 Haripur or Harpur 406
 Haryāgarh, 1°9 129 n
 Hasan Abdal 469 580

Hashimpur 431
 Hatkânth 341 341 n 424 547
 Hatya 544
 Hatyapul 540 567
 Hazara 301
 Hilalabâd, 352
 Hila, vide Ha la
 Hindu Kush 326
 Hirapur 370
 Hirat 98 99 100 108 108 n 111 n
 315 371 382 392 395 471 493
 578 642 661 n 672 n 682
 Hirmand R ver 327
 Hîşar (Kabul) 386 481 679
 Hîşâr Firuza 32 60 338
 Hoshangabad 129
 Hugli 406 n 487 560 560 n
 Hurmuz (Ormuz) 668 n

IDAR (Edar) 343 353 447 479 536
 556

Ilahabâs or Ilahabad vide Allahabad
 Ilchpur 344 499 566
 Inch (Kashmir) 540
 Indarab 478
 Indus River 39 49 n 506 507 540
 Iran 14 23 57 68 93 104 105 169
 506 n 579
 Iraq 23 37 140 161 329 330
 Irich 524
 Isfahan 57 n 98, 109 406 579 582 612
 630 639 n 646 646 n 662 662 n., 676 677
 Ishtaghar 387
 Islampur (Râmpur) 459 460
 Istalîf 423 n
 Itkwa 347 415 510
 Itimâdpur near Agra 473 473 n

JAGDESPÛR 437 438 558
 Jahânbâd 406 n., 407 n

Jaspur 348 n 462 462 n
 Jâis 576
 Jalsalmîr 151 297 533
 Jaitâran 424 424 n
 Jaldara, 367
 Jalâlâbâd 325 333
 Jalâlâbâs 4°0
 Jalâlpûr vide Kharwah.

Jalandhar 3 332 332 n 338 432 507,
 614
 Jaldpur 451
 Jalesar (Orisâ) 404 407 near Dihli
 469
 Jalnapur in Barar 392 371 371 n
 Jalor 42 384 553 689
 Jam 335 390 n 590 611
 Jammû 369 507 n., 519
 Jamna River (Jamuna) 58 412 521
 Jânsath 426 429 430
 Jarun Bandar 655 n
 Jaunpûr 32 198 278 334 335 336 337
 351 356 360 371 381 382 397
 415 416 438 450 451 462 468
 476 485 499 499 561 607 616
 638 n 671 n
 Jazâ'ir 662 662 n
 Jessore Jasar 329 384
 Jhannî 608
 Jhansi 509 n
 Jharkhand 130 362 395 536 534
 Jhelam River 508 n
 Jhinjhon vide Fatipur
 Jhos 329 470
 Jhujhar 331 403 429
 Jodhpur 161 297 349 384 437 474
 Joli-Jansath, 429 430 431
 Jon (Sindh) 330
 Joshagân vide Goshkan
 Junabud 635 n., 661 vide Gunabad
 Junâgarh 344 346 354 355 376 433
 499 516 470 n
 Junîr 566
 Jurbaqân 608 n
 Juwayn 559

KABUL, 32 35 n 57 69 69 99 225
 301 325 396 332 333 335 333
 359 362, 408 409 410 412 478
 487 492 495 495 n., 509 508 523
 533 538 589

Kachh 140 151 344 461 477 477 n., 579 581 582.
 Kâhan River 544
 Kâharmâtri River 526.
 Kailâ, odha, 431
 Kâkâpur 540.
 Kâkor 616
 Kakrauli, 431

Kalal 348
 Kalamur 32 330 457 578
 Kālapan 540
 Kal n̄j̄r 399 444 446 568 680 n
 Kalp 32 337 308 389 442 518 545
 608
 Kalyanpur 451
 Kama on 403 482 60° n
 Kambhajat (Cambay) °91 340 343 493
 515
 Kamraj 90 370
 Kangrah 361 406 407 544 573
 Kant t 470
 Kant o Golah 403
 Karabala 672 672 n
 Karah (Karah Mān kpur) 202 338 396
 607
 Karanj 541 n
 Karharā Fort 382
 Karī n Gujrāt 420
 Kambhān 57 n 98 98 n 0j 100 196 r
 08° 663 663 n 660 666
 Kashghar 325 339 394 n 511 512
 512 n
 Kashm r 32 34 n 60 68 69 69 n 79
 80 90 90 n 98 109 112 140 157
 160 n 189 216 290 300 307 309 n
 302 370 371 378 conquest of 412 484 491 504 506 507 513
 18 519 °9 533 534 30 539
 540 54° 651 676, 676 n 680 n
 Katak 334 404 n 406 407
 Katang 306 n vide Garha
 Kā hīwār 420
 Kayrana 613
 Kāzarān 549
 Khabushān 670 n
 Khachrod 634
 Khāl or Khawāf 493 494 494 n 661 n
 Kha bar less 443 n 679 r
 Khalgaw (Colgong) 350 n 400 n
 Khalukh 98 n
 Khandār () 46 n
 Khānī si (D nī si) 34 n 30 2 343
 ° ° ° °

Kha i 431

Kharsarā 494

Khark vide Aura gabad
 Kharwa Jalalpūr 430
 Khataul 430 431
 Khatora 431
 Khaṭṭu 570
 Khawaf vide Khaf
 Khayrabād (Panjab) 303 (Audh) 395
 414 425 n 441 447 477 48° 518
 523 607
 Khizrābad 353
 Kh rpur 365
 Khurasan 23 57 n 98 108 n 3°7 3°8
 346 38° 389 390
 Khurda (Orissā) 548 5 2 677 n
 Khushal 338 408 409 525
 Kh z stan 07 07 n
 Khwāja Awash 493
 Khwāja Sayyaran 493
 Khwarazm its n u° 5° 109 651
 Kungr 579
 Kurman 57 603 n
 Koch v de Kūch
 Koh Sulayman 466
 Kokra 438 536 536 n
 Kolāb 484
 Kol Jalālī 366
 Komalna r or Kobhalm r 437 60° n
 Korra 489
 Koṭ Khachwa 477 477 n
 Kotha 449
 Kotla Fort 349
 Kuch B hār 140 329 350 362 365 400
 482 552 n
 Kuch Hāju 502 552 n 680
 Kuhpaya 678 n
 Kuhuta 506 n
 Kundl 429
 Kurar 544
 Kurd etān 3 9

LADLAI 441
 Laharl Bander 291 391 vide
 Loharl
 Laharpur (Audh) 687
 Lāhor 3° 33 n 67 72 93 98 99 101
 °16 290 3 4 326 330 331 353
 3 4 3 9 37 373 378 394 n 395
 407 4 4 6 n 407 488 488 n
 490 00 514 519 009 56° 574

575 589 60° n 607 608, 610 614
615 616 617 639 n., 678 n 682 n
686 687 689

Lakh Fort 3, 6, 541
Lakh n pur 369
Lakhnau 33 373 390 403 403 n 432
468 5° 3 5° 4 583 691 n
Lakhnor (Sambhal) 330
Lalang Fort 516
Lamghanat 367
Laristan 549 609 368 n 670 n
Lohari 465 5° 6 1 de Lahari
Lohgadh 539
Ludh yāna 333 4 0
Luhāwar 341 n
Luni (Baunli ?) 435 539

MACHHIWARA 330 423
Madaran 406 406 n 407 n

Madinah ° 84 n 3° 6
Mahda Fort 494 n
Mal ndra R ver 343 515
Mahkr 499 539
Mahmudabad 570 n
Ma nian 43°
Ma rtha (Mirath) 340 397 398 472 483
31 5, 3 n
Ma ana, 543 5 9 594
Ma war (Mewar) 3 9 4 1 4 9
Majhara (Majhera) 4 6 4° 0 431
3°

Makkah (Mecca) 99 181 18 187 191
197 199 ° 07 217 ° 17 n ° 83 ° 84
284 r 3° 6 3 8 330 331 340 345
373 374 388 408, 411 511 6, 6 n
678 n

Mala ca 291
Maler 591
Mal'bar (Malabar), ° 90
Mal gadh 559
Mālin 661 n
Malwah, ° 1 72, 88 1° 9 185 3° 6, 330
337 341 343 34 352, 353 354
364 398 401 40° 403, 404 406
416 440, 440 n 471 4 3 474 513
515 531 67 568
Mandalgorh 501
Manilla, 396 n
Mandla Ir 41° n

Mandu or Mandu 33 358, 401 40° 404
406 513 554 567 579
Mangalkot 487 491
Man kpur 336, 397 399 415
Mānkot 330 3, 5 338, 341 447 369
394 n 395 n 403 416 n 507

Manoharpur 5, 4 n
Manšura 46, 3
Mansurpur 430
Mararaj 90 370
Margala 544 545 545 n
Marw 644
Mārwar 347 531
Mash had 57 n 99 106, 108 33° 369
371 414 414 n 609 534 634 n
638 66° n., 675 675 n., 678 680 n., 681 682.

Matha Fort 464 463
Mathu a 291 391 504 534 546
Mau (Nurpur State) 369 586
Mā wara n nahr 198 346
Mazandaran 659 679 679 n
Medni pur 364 406 n 407 536
Megna R ver 36, n
Mewar r de Ma wār
Mewat 140 ° 62, 331 334 349 354
354 n 55°

Mshi (Champaran) 492
M' anpur 431
M' jan Kāl (Samarqand) 40° n 615
615 n 636 637 n

Moha (And) ° 0°
Moh nL, 402, 415
Molher 561
Mol Ma oharnagar 534
Morna, 431
Mughulnari 497 407 n
Mubammadābad, 4, 1 402.
Mub bb Al pur 466
Munn pore (Assam) 309 n
Mulkapur ° 65

Multan 32, 193, 3° 9 345 34° 351 356
361 379 383 390, 391 39° 436,
465 5° 0, 5, 3 5 6 580 614
Munra r n Dībar 50
Mungarwāl () 337
Mung 377
Mu adalid 334
Murah dābād 363 496
Muzaffarnagar 423 4° 7 bu lt 430 431.

NADĪNAH (Sambhal), 415 n , vide
 Nāginah
 Nadot, 355, 384
 Nagarchin, 310 n
 Nagarkot, 349, 369, 443, 471, 515
 Nagina, 432 , vide Nadinah
 Nagor, 33, 101, 151, 175, 331, 364, 379
 384, 397, 405, 422, 480 n , 548 553 n
 Nahr : Shihab Canal, 353
 Nahrwalah, vide Paṭan (Gujrat)
 Najaf, 639 n
 Namaksar, 525 525 n
 Nandanpur, 129
 Narbaddah River, 343, 354, 359, 404, 474
 Narhan, 451
 Narnaul, 335, 347, 388, 399, 607
 Narwar 129, 129 n , 542
 Nāsik, 385, 459
 Nausari, in Gujrat, 193
 Naushād, in Turkestan, 98 n
 Nawābganj (Singror), 336
 Nawshahra, 484
 Nazar, 672 n , 673 n
 Nazrbar, 354, 516
 Nek Ujyal, 587
 Nūlab River, 326, 507
 Nimlah, 60
 Nishapur, 108, 108 n , 337, 352, 379, 493, 559, 649, 660, 680
 Nizāmabad, 278 n

ODGIR, in the Dakhin, 369, 556
 Oorcha, vide Ūndchah
 Orisā, 130 318, 344, 359, 382, 362 n ,
 364, 365 n , 366, 375, 376 380, 383,
 395, 395 n , 400, 400 n , 404, 404 n ,
 405, 406, 474 n , 501, 527, 532, 533,
 534, 548, 552, 571, 586, 587, 594
 Ormuz, vide Hurmuz

PAJKORA River, 368
 Pahlunpūr, 689
 Pāk Paṭan (or Paṭan : Panjāb, or Ajodhan), 32, 190, 297, 343, 653 n
 Pakhali, 160, 504, 535, 563
 Pakka, 544
 Palāman, 494 n , 577 n
 Panbān (?) 58, 693
 Pānīpat, 190, 333, 431, 613

Panīpūr (Kashmīr), 540 n , vide Banpūr and Panpūr
 Panjāb, 23 n , 26, 31 n , 35 n , 58, 68, 72,
 140, 158, 182, 326, 330, 331, 338,
 333, 353 385 387, 394, 394 n , 403
 451, 456 471, 495, 506 n , 507, 508, 519
 Pannah, 129, 470, 685
 Panpur (Panīpūr), in Kashmīr, 90 , vide
 Panīpūr
 Paraspur, in Kashmīr, 90
 Parenda 454, 494 n
 Parsaror, 373
 Paṭan, or Paṭan : Panjāb, vide Pak
 Paṭan
 Patan (Gujrat), 326, 332, 339, 343, 354,
 355, 365, 402, 420 , battle of, 432,
 433 , 445, 447, 458, 458 n , 461,
 480 n , 490, 499, 500, 515
 Paṭan (on the Godavari), 510, 539
 Pathan (Paithan), 329, 456, 495, 508
 Pathri 556
 Patī Haybatpur, 140
 Patiyala, 429
 Patna, 32, 334, 376, 377, 383, 411, 471, 518
 Patyāh, 402
 Paunār, 541 n
 Pāwangarh, 334
 Pegu, 291
 Persia, 18, 31 n , 69 n , 70, 99, 141, 181,
 184, 326, 328, 330, 347, 471
 Peshāwar, 368, 381, 408, 434, 519, 523
 Phārūla 506 n , 689
 Phullaur, 687
 Pihān, 522, 522 n , 523
 Pīnd Dādan Khān, 507 n
 Pīndī Gheb, 507 n
 Pīnjar, 535
 Piyag (vide Allāhābād), 397
 Portugal, 101, 291
 Poṭhwār, 544, 545 n
 Pur Mandal, 437
 Pūrī, 362, 395 n , 400 n
 Pūrnia, 432, 482

QASIN (Persia), 108 n , 661, 661 n
 Qalat, 329 347, 448, 506
 Qanawj, 33, 330, 333, 338, 341 n , 358
 415, 516, 522, 532

Qandahār 69 376 327 328 329 330
334 335 347 358 367 373 389 390
391 394 n 408 409 410 417 448
449 491 n 495 n., 513 566 572
578 580 615

Qarabagh 367
Qazwin 107 109 219 496 643

Qibrus ride Cyprus

Qipchaq 689

Q rghiz 140

Q ryat i Khudawand Khan 490 n

Q sus or Q stus ride Chaos

Qum 578 667

Qunduz, 330

RĀHUTARA 539

Rajawat 347

Rajmahall ride Albarnagar

Rajor in Kashmir 322, 513

Rajori, 60

Rājputra, 305

Rājputana 365

Rajshahi 688

Rampur (Islampur) 459 460

Rāmsir 574

Rankatta 352

Rantanbhūr 33 199 340 349 373 421

430 435 n 436 436 n., 449 459

482 489 519 540

Rasht 644 n

Rasulpur on the Jhelum 387

Ratanpur 129 129 n 446

Rāwāl Pindī 507 n 544

Ray (Khurasan), 668 668 n

Ray Bareli 336

Raya n 129 329 344 500

Red Sea 87

Rewā, 446

Rohankhera 490 490 n

Rohtas (in Bhar) 129 129 n 363 374

376 437 466, 472 470 n., 537 564

(in the Panjab) 504 500 544

Rudkhana yī Nashcb 339

SĀBHAR 322 348 392 n

Sabzwar 57 57 n 423 559 670

670 n., 672 n., 682 n

Safdu 353 611

Saharanpur 33

Sahrind ride Sarh nd

Sahwan 306 356 n ride Srwastan

Sajawalpur 473

Sakit 336 341 n 481

Sakrawal 337

Salumabad 487

Salimgadh 456

Sal mnagar 362

Salt Range 507 n 520

Samanx 591

Samarqand 69 103 n 196, 315 467

608 610 670 n

Sambalhara 426 470 430 431

Sambhal 33 30 n 328 330 335 339

351 406 514 534 537 539 610 614

Samogar 473 n 534

Sanchor 503 n 689

San lclah 417

Sandha oli 431

Sanganir 348 480 n

Sanjan 494

Santur 534

Santwas 199 403

Sarangpur 33 341 374 379 401 407

449 471 474 474 n 489

Sary Jagu 577 n

Sarharpur 416 416 n

Sarlind or Sirbind or Sarh nd 33 111

379 331 n 330 394 488 n 594

614

Sarkich near Ahmadabad 305 461

570 n 639 n 672 n

Sarnal 303 384 437 447 467 510

Sarohi 339 384 380 380 n 461

Saronj 33 424 507 568

Saror 333

Saru River 414 n

Sarwar 414

Satgāw 130 291 300 300 n., 364 405

597

Satwas (Santwas) 199 403

Sawad and B jor 439 469 509 520

Sawah 606 606 n 667 670

Scl⁷ la 068

Sewa Fort 390

Shah bul 117 218 219 446

Shahp r 304 344 on the Chanāb 457 n

Shahr i Naw 439

Shaj⁷atpur r dr Shuja⁷atpur

Shan c. l. 1 407

- Sharfaba l 363
 Shaykhawal 347 387 46°
 Shergaph (Qanawj) 376 435 n 437
 Sherpur 435 n 4° 436 n — 'Ata
 367 496 Murcha 362 483
 Shraz 34 n 107 199 271 85 n 3 6
 330 479 537 639 663 669 674
 Shrwān 34 n 140 186 187 342 n
 Sh ur (Sooree) 496
 Shor 409 n
 Shuja'atp r 4 3 473 n
 Shu tar 57 n 61 675 n
 S hin 06
 S hīatj ur 3 1
 S j stān 43
 S kandarabad 30°
 S kan lrah (B h shtabad) 2 0 °77 n
 3 ° n 372
 S krī ade lathpur s kr
 S lhat 3 n
 S mawal °97
 S nd l l 188 n 370 356 306 n 3 9
 3 8 791 791 39° 79 n 614
 S nd 'a ar Du ab 506 n 5° n
 S ngror (Nawabganj) 336
 S rawand 494
 S rdha a (M ath) 430
 S rdhaol 430 430 n
 S rguja 1°9 68
 S rh nd rade Sarh nd
 S stan 3 4 448
 S pūr 60b
 S wa a Fort 384 437 437 n 31
 S wāstan o Sahwan 356 n 391 391 n
 5°6 ° 48 576 579
 S yah ab R er 418
 S yalkoṭ 33 30 670 n
 Sodhara 408 n
 Sohan R er 545 n
 Somnat 344 340
 Soobanreeka R ver 407
 Soratl 344 499 n 554 n
 Sorun 58 683
 Srinagar (Garhwal) 334 (Kashm r)
 3 0 41°
 S rkkhar 5°5 580
 S leanpur 181 371 614 — B lkari
 478 43 548 — Gakkhar D str ct
 506 n
 Sul ā pus l ver 45
 Sumatra 8 654
 Sun tarban 360 n
 Sun ān 297
 Sunnargaw 365 438
 Supa 306
 Surat 32 35 n 330 313 37 380 380
 4 0 433 480 n 499 515 116 118
 613
 Surkhal R er 418

TABARHINDA 33
 Tabr z 107 108 187 283 503 558
 79 660 67° 680 680 n
 Tajp r 30 48°
 Takaro 406 411 447 478 485 118
 Takht Sula man 34 n
 Talamba 349
 Tal ga 541 n
 Tal ngana 359 490 506
 Tanda 3° 334 350 351 364 175 400
 48°
 Tandra 431
 Tapt R r 3 9
 Taqa 3 6
 Tarfān 511
 Tashkand 609
 Tattah (Thathah) 11° 1 1 °18 °90 329
 233 351 356 391 391 n 393 409
 463 465 101 508 511 106 538 576
 646 n
 Taybad 390
 Tenasser m ade Dahnasari
 Terah Mount 383 388 525
 Thālner 566
 Thana Langar 461
 Thanesar 111 111 n 607
 Thori 435 n
 T bbat or Tibet 38 96 140 107 211
 309 n 323 360 n 506 n 5°9 676 n
 Tihanpūr 429
 Thāra, 140 140 n 432
 T hrān (Teheran) 571 668
 T la, 544
 T lpat 457
 T iwāra on the B yāh 332
 T ranbōk 533
 T rm z 339
 T sang 431 (where wrong Tang)
 T s ha, 431

Toda, 294
 Tons River (Benares), 316
 Tulapur, 431
 Turan, 14 23, 24, 35, 57, 68, 69 93, 105, 140, 169, 326, 327
 Turkey, 110 140, 289
 Tushar 675
 Tus, 678 n

UCHH, 614
 Udapur, 384, 386, 437, 452, 511,
 59
 Ujjain, 32, 32b, 33, 404, 445, 474 534,
 577 n
 Unkul (Uchhol) 129, 129 n, 687
 Undchha 382 483 509, 509 n, 545, 546
 Ushah or Undchha
 Utgur (Udantgur), or Ootgur, or Deogurh
 412

VAZIRĀBĀD (Panjab), 456 n
 Valna, 430

WĀSIT, 425
 Werkopā¹, 677 n

YĀMAN, 87
 Yazd, 98 99, 673 n, 684

ZĀBULISTĀN, 33, 362, 367, 368, 388 469, 470
 Zafarnagar 565
 Zakhak (Zahak Bamiyān) 492, 506
 Zamāniyā, founded, 337, 415, 471
 Zanzibar, 289
 Zirbad [Zirabad], east of Sumatra, 87,
 87 n, 681